Tips for parents to protect their children from pedophiles and other shady characters

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE Self-proclaimed pedophile Jack McClellan isn't the only shady character parents should be concerned about.

On any given day there are anywhere between 65 and 70 registered sex offenders in Santa Monica, with only 39 appearing on a Web site set up under Megan's Law to help parents find out if a child molester or rapist is living in their neighborhood, law enforcement officials said.

While McClellan, who was arrested at UCLA last week for violating a restraining order preventing him from being within 10 yards of a child, has been on the radar of law enforcement agencies and the focus of several news stories, both local and national, police and child safety experts are warning parents to not forget about the neighbor across the street, the coach at school or the volunteer at summer camp.

In that same vein, parents shouldn't get wrapped up in sexual offender registries available online. While the convicts featured committed crimes that were serious enough to be forced to register and have their pictures and addresses posted on the Internet along with their aliases, tattoos and other information, they aren't the only ones who may be dangerous.

When it comes to crimes against children, the majority are committed by some-

Lawmakers face host of leftover issues

BY STEVE LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO Like vacationers returning to face a host of home repairs and an overdrawn checking account, California legislators return to the Capitol Monday to deal with hundreds of leftover issues, particularly the lack of a state budget.

The Assembly approved a $145 billion budget in the pre-dawn hours of July 20 before leaving town for a four-week summer recess.

But the spending plan for the fiscal year that started July 1 failed twice in the Senate, most recently on Aug. 1, as most Republicans refused to approve it.

They argue that another $700 million in spending cuts are needed to balance the budget. Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger says he'll use his veto pen to cut that much after the budget is approved.

But Republicans also want legislation to prevent the attorney general from forcing cities and counties to compensate for the greenhouse gases caused by local growth and are demanding a greater say in how bond funds are spent on transportation and other infrastructure projects.

Unless it's resolved quickly, the budget deadlock threatens to sidetrack hundreds of other issues lawmakers hope to deal with before they wrap up their 2007 session in mid-September.

Senate President Pro Tem Don Perata, D-Oakland, announced that the Senate won't take up any other legislation until the budget is approved.

Assembly Speaker Fabian Nunez, D-Los Angeles, said he won't impose the same restrictions on legislation in the Assembly. "But all it takes is one house" to hold things up, he added.

The deadlock could stretch deep into September and "we end up having a bad legislative year where we don't get anything done," he said.

If that happens, Nunez predicts voters would support a constitutional amendment taking away the minority party's power to hold up budgets by allowing them to be approved by less than the two-thirds majorities required now.

Senate Minority Leader Dick Ackerman, R-Tustin, said he was hopeful lawmakers would approve a budget by now.

Prime-time TV is putting the softer side of men on display

BY JANICE RHOSHALLE LITTLEJOHN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Michael Vartan considers himself a guy's guy — just as much as the next guy's guy. He swears like a sailor, likes fast cars and enjoys a good high-testosterone action flick. "I can't wait to see the next Jet Li movie!" he says.

And yet, says Vartan, "I'm a lot more sensitive than anyone would really know, and it's definitely interesting to portray that in a character."

As the star of ABC's hourlong fall dramedy, "Big Shots," the former "Alias" secret agent is just one of a number of actors playing complex, emotionally evolved, heterosexual alpha males putting their softer side on display in prime time.

In the late 1990s, "Sex and the City" ushered in a new portrait of single women with their frank discussions of their sexual exploits, desires, fantasies and beliefs about men. Of late, however, it's the less-fair sex going sensitive.

In a number of broadcast ensembles premiering this fall, men are opening up about issues beyond sports, money, power and sexual conquests. They're expressing their feelings — often to other men — on fatherhood, intimacy and love.

One such series is ABC's "Carpoolers," which centers on commuter pals who commiserate about everything from their jobs and their wives ("If we don't provide for our women, do they really need us?" queries one character) to their personal secrets (one confesses to losing his virginity to Air Supply's syrupy '80s ballad, "All Out of Love.")

"The whole idea behind the car pool is that anything can be said," says co-star T.J. Miller. "It's almost like the huddle before they go into the football game that is life. Then they go back into the huddle because there's another game at home. So it's guys trying to figure stuff out and wanting to get the perspective of other guys."

Other series featuring men bonding include HBO's popular comedy, "Entourage," just renewed for a fifth season and CBS' returning "Rules of Engagement," highlighting the friendship of three men: one married, one engaged and one happily playing the field. Then there's the new ABC sitcom, "Cavemen," which follows a group of modern-day Cro-Magnon men who are far

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Aircraft just aren't funny

Editor:
I'm sorry but I don't consider the steady stream of heli-copters buzzing the beach and planes polluting the atmosphere with noise and exhaust a "laughing matter" ("Earplugs needed for day at beach," Aug. 3). I live in Ocean Park near the beach and my auditory space is being increasingly invaded on a daily basis, especially on the weekends. It's not a "day at the beach" for me. It's the privacy of my home and I wish someone would do something about the noisy playground in the sky around here. The Santa Monica Airport seems helpless about mitigating this community problem.

What about healthy pets?

Editor:
Thanks to greedy breeders who lobbied shamelessly to kill the California Healthy Pets Act, the proposed bill, AB 1634, has been shelved. Thoughtless people like Paris Hilton and Britney Spears continue plunking down their credit cards for puppy mill pups sold at pet stores. All the while, young, healthy, and friendly animals continue to die in California's animal shelters simply for lack of homes. The proposed bill wouldn't have stopped breeders from bringing more animals into this overpopulated world; it only required a fee for a breeding permit – a fee that would have likely been covered by far less than half the selling price of one puppy!
That's why PETA has sponsored a giant billboard on Sunset Boulevard in Los Angeles reminding everyone that breeders kill shelter dogs' chances. Most breeders comfortably remove themselves from the gruesome life-and-death reality of animal shelters, but that doesn't change the fact that every time someone buys a puppy or kitten from a breeder or pet store, an animal in a shelter loses her chance at a home and will be killed.
Each year, more than 400,000 animals are killed in California's shelters; nationwide the number is nearly four million. Ending this killing is as simple as A-B-C: Animal Birth Control. Have your animals spayed or neutered and adopt animals from shelters instead of buying them from breeders or pet stores. To learn more, visit www.HelpingAnimals.com.

Walking shouldn't be allowed on path

WELL THE END OF SUMMER IS HERE and I'm about to take off for my first jet skiing trip to the Colorado River. It will be three days of manly men eating like the cheeseburglar, burning fossil fuels and being free of my cell phone. For three days we will be tourists in the state of Arizona. We'll do touristy things like go to an Indian casino, buy a tank top, see the London Bridge and generally escape the pressures of regular life. I like being a tourist, I prefer it when I can be a good tourist because my hosts have made it easy for me to fit in.

I love being on the road, I love traveling and I love other travelers, I enjoy striking up conversations with tourists from around the world who flock to the wonderful southern California weather and attractions. I enjoy sharing my knowledge of the local scene with people who are looking for a fabulous Italian restaurant for really good pasta, or the local hole in the wall Thai restaurant.

It's wonderful to share the wealth of our city with the world.

The good side of having tourists is that they bring with them additional wealth to pour into our businesses, and that keeps the local economy running along nicely. Think of how many bike rental shops, restaurants, gift shops and clothing stores are kept alive by the constant stream of Germans, Japanese and Kiwis, and you'll realize how important it is for us to be good hosts.

Part of being a good host however is gently letting your guests know the rules of your home. This is something that we don't necessarily do so well, and by "we" I mean the City Council.

We have a problem with the tourists in this city, not with anything major, but with a consistently present problem that no one seems to want to address.

Now we've done a good job of letting the Germans know that they cannot smoke their cigarettes in the parks, and we've kept the French and Spanish women from going topless on the beach, but there is one topic that we have failed miserably at informing our international guests about.

It is the fact that the bike path, is to be used by people on wheels.

On the one hand I could fault the numerous tourists and get angry at them every time they block my way on the bike path. I could yell and scream at them, I could buy an airhorn and scare the bejeezus out of some French frolicker, but that doesn't really do any good, and just makes me look like an ass.

The problem is that with all of the educational campaigns we have in this city, and all the controversy over "saving the trees" or "protecting the homeless" and "eradicate the homeless" we don't deal with the issues that are front and center each and every day and are causing people to be sent to emergency rooms and opening the city up to lawsuits.

Almost every time that I am on the bike path, during the day, I nearly run someone over, get knocked off of my bike, have to make a short stop, all because of people who are walking on the bike path. I understand that people want to walk along the beach. That's why we have a boardwalk.

There are two, mostly separate, solid surfaces for people to use. The one is for people to walk on, and the other is for people to ride on.

I probably wouldn't mind as much, if there was equal enforcement of the laws. But there isn't. The police in our fair burg are very diligent about enforcing the no bikes on the boardwalk ordinances, which means that I can be assured if I ride when I am not supposed to, I will be paying a hefty fine. I'm okay with that.

What I'm not okay with, is that the law also states that the bike path is for bikes and that pedestrians are prohibited. That law is not enforced. At all. Ever.

THE PROBLEM IS THAT WITH ALL OF THE
EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGNS
WE HAVE IN THIS CITY, AND
ALL THE CONTROVERSY
OVER 'SAVING THE TREES' OR 'PROTECTING THE HOMELESS' ... WE DON'T
DEAL WITH THE ISSUES THAT ARE FRONT AND CENTER EACH AND EVERY DAY AND ARE CAUSING PEOPLE TO BE SENT TO EMERGENCY ROOMS AND
OPENING THE CITY UP TO LAWSUITS.

If the Chief of Police can produce one, just one, ticket that was issued to anyone this summer for walking on the bike path, I'll give away 200 donuts. The ticket must have been issued prior to this article being published.

I have lots of friends in this town, and most of them have a story about being on the bike path and the dangers that are present when people are walking on it. Our City Council should actually ride a bike on the path and see how dangerous it is. Rather than argue about the wisdom of replacing trees, with trees, they should actually do something valuable.

We need to inform our guests that walking on the bike path is prohibited, and dangerous. It's part of being a good host and helping our guests to fit in.

When The Beatles were like living gods

"I declare that the Beatles are mutants, prototypes of evolutionary agents sent by God, endowed with a mysterious power to create a new human species."

— Dr. Timothy Leary

THE SIXTIES WERE MUCH MORE THAN A time of hippies, music, drugs and free love. In fact, there were three distinct cultural streams that flavored the 1960s — the Kennedy years, the Beatles and the Vietnam era — each of which insisted on the primacy of youth.

The Kennedys moved into the White House in 1961, full of youthful energy. Suddenly, the idea that older people had to listen to younger ones was in the air. "The Kennedys represented youth in a transitional way," writes author Mary Gordon. "They were young, but they didn't threaten their elders."

But in 1964, respectable grownups and intellectuals were also listening to the Beatles. The "boys from Liverpool" — John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr — did indeed seem like boys instead of men. They were exuberant, full of fun and were not seen as a threat.

The playfulness of those years led to the hippie movement and, ultimately, to an abdication of adulthood. There was a sense that there was no need to grow up anymore. But, as Gordon notes, "the flower child's sense of well being gradually disintegrated as Vietnam became more central to consciousness."

All these cultural streams converged in the Beatles' 1967 masterpiece album, Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. When the album was released 40 years ago on June 1, it was a major cultural event. "It was the soundtrack to summer, and winter for that matter," notes author Barry Miles. "You could not get away from it." Indeed, young and old alike were entranced.

A religious awe surrounded Sgt. Pepper. The LSD evangelist Timothy Leary, after listening to the album, reputedly said in a mystical voice, "My work is finished. Now, it's out." Leary actually believed he could hear the voice of God in the music of the Beatles.

David Crosby of the Byrds, a popular rock band, brought a tape of the album to their hotel room and "played it all night in the lobby with a hundred young fans listening quietly on the stairs, as if rapt by a spiritual experience." Paul Kantner of the acid rock band Jefferson Airplane said, "Something enveloped the whole world at that time and it just exploded into a renaissance." And as one musicologist observed: "The closest Western Civilization has come to unity since the Congress of Vienna in 1815 was the week the Sgt. Pepper album was released. For a brief while the irreparable fragmented consciousness of the West was unified, at least in the minds of the young."

Sgt. Pepper had such an amazing impact because it simultaneously mirrored its times and offered a solution to the social and political upheavals of the time. The solution offered by the Beatles was a return to spirituality and love for our fellow human beings.

Although the album begins as a light farce, it moves to a sobering awakening. The songs are somewhat bizarre and sometimes ghoulish, but, at heart, Sgt. Pepper was a spiritual experience for an increasingly secular world. George Harrison's "Within You, Without You" quotes from the Bible and is a warning not to get lost in materialism or we will lose our souls. And if we cannot regain our sense of spirituality and love for one another, then we face a foreboding future. In fact, the album's final song, John Lennon's "A Day in the Life," points to the horrors of existence if humanity does not abstain from its destructive tendencies.

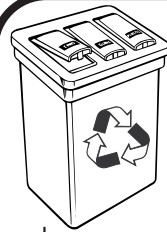

From Sgt. Pepper on, rock music was considered an art form. The summer of love followed. Optimism was in the air. There was hope that peace would eventually prevail and the destructiveness of humanity would end. Armed with "flower power," young people took to the streets and demonstrated en masse against the Vietnam War.

But soon the color of the times faded to stark black and white. By 1968, student rebels around the world had adopted more militant tactics.

The Beatles too were disbanding. They were not gods, after all, and the love that once united them grew cold. Thus, by the end of 1968, it was obvious that neither the Beatles nor love would save the world.

But the music of the Beatles is still with us — full of hope that we can live in a peaceful world. The lesson is that evil does not have to triumph but that good can prevail. However, we have to work for it.

Don't take me out to the ball game

Our sporting heroes don't seem to be made of the same stuff they used to be. Nowadays, they are either accused of abusing man's best friend (Michael Vick), suspected of cheating (Barry Bonds), or fixing games (NBA referee Tim Donaghy).

So this week's Q-Line question asks:

Which current sports debacle do you feel is the most damaging to our favorite pastimes?

Is 'liar, liar, pants on fire' a legit excuse?

LAS VEGAS So the other day I heard a horrible scream come from my baby. You know the kind. The really bad kind.

I ran into the TV room, where my two girls had been sitting side by side, contentedly watching "Curious George."

The baby was hysterical and holding her hand.

I look at her wrist and see a deep imprint of teeth. It's so defined, a dentist would be impressed.

"Did you bite her?" I ask my toddler.

"She bit herself."

"Addie, tell me the truth. Did you bite her?"

I can see the wheels turning in her little head.

I know for sure the baby didn't bite herself. She is missing a front tooth and the person who made this imprint definitely had all their teeth.

Addie: "Well, am I going to get in trouble if I tell you the truth?"

"Um, you're going to get in more trouble if you don't tell the truth."

She still won't fess up.

Tales from the crib

Angie Wagner

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

An hour later, the truth comes out.

I send her to her room.

This is her first lie. Should I mark it down in her baby book? Should I scrapbook the incident and detail the lie?

It's pretty amazing how their little minds work, and how she knew she was going to get in trouble for what she did.

I wait until evening before I give the talk about why it's not good to lie or bite. Biting will get you kicked out of school! How would you like it if the baby bit you? It hurts! You have to always tell the truth.

I try quickly to think of all the good phrases I heard while I was growing up.

Should I throw in the "liar, liar pants on fire" bit? Nope, too soon for that.

I'm not even sure she knows what the word "lie" means, but she definitely knows she made up a story so she wouldn't get in trouble.

So my friend tells me that when something like that happens, I can't punish her for the lying AND for the biting. I have to choose which is the most serious and go with that one.

These are the times I wish there was a parenting hot line where parents could call a 1-800 number and get immediate, helpful advice from a super nanny or pediatrician and not dumb remarks like, "Well, just bite her back."

Believe me, I've heard that one.

A few days later, it happens again -- the biting and the lying. Apparently, they go together.

And as usual, my 20-month-old is the victim of the biting.

This time, Addie bit the baby's finger because she didn't want her taking her toy.

The baby screamed a painful scream and Addie ignored it.

Before I even asked, Addie offered this: "She just hurt herself!"

Wow! Hurt herself!

Me: "Then why is she holding her finger?"

Addie: "Well..." (This is one of her favorite words, and she uses it to prolong something, like explaining why she shouldn't take a nap or why she didn't bite her sister.)

Me: "Tell me the truth. NOW!"

Addie: "Am I going to be in trouble?"

Here we go again.

"Yep. You are. But you need to tell me the truth."

She fesses up.

Another time, she went under a table and colored on her legs with a marker, then emerged and told me Aubrey did it.

Never mind that Aubrey was in her crib napping.

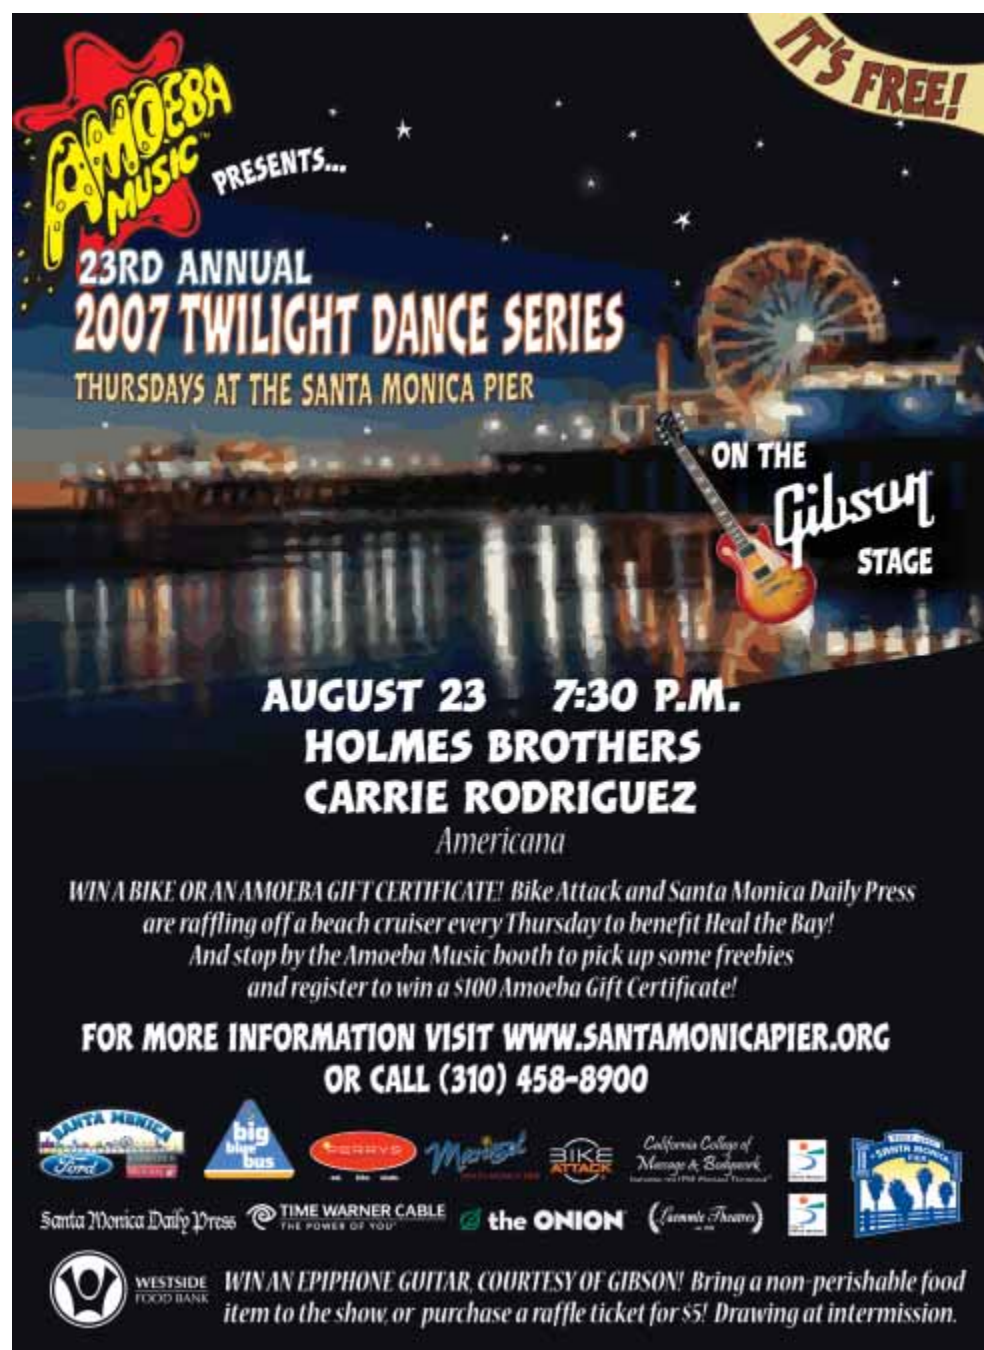

I explained to her that there is no way her sister could have done that. She agreed finally that her sister played no part in the mischief.

I hope this isn't becoming a pattern.

Isn't this what teenagers do?

She's not even 4 yet.

To assess child-safety risks, learn, listen to your instincts

BY MELISSA RAYWORTH
Associated Press Writer

Erin Street's 15-month-old, Nate, finds fresh opportunities for exploration — and injury — each day.

"Before, you could just put him in one area and he'd pretty much stay there," says Street, of Hoover, Ala. "Suddenly, he was running across the house ... he's just in the thick of getting into everything."

So, like many parents, she began buying childproofing products. "We started with a couple of gates and closing up electrical outlets," she says, "but there's so much more out there."

Some she has resisted buying. "Nothing is going to keep kids 100 percent safe, unless you put them in a bubble. And that's not how I want my child to grow up," she says. "It's a tough line, because of course you want to wrap them in your arms and never let them down."

In an age when professional services will come to your home and childproof the stairs, fireplace, cabinets, bookcases and other possible risks, many parents are struggling to decide where to draw that line.

The market for childproofing products has grown considerably, according to Amy Miles, project manager for One Step Ahead, which offers the basics (drawer locks, door-knob covers, bed rails, etc.) and some less obvious items, such as knee pads and helmets for fledgling walkers (Miles says they're "actually a huge, huge seller").

Today's parents are "really into protecting their child," she says. "People generally start out with what they remember or what they've seen in someone's house — the toilet lock for the lid, a gate or two. Then, it's really funny because if you track that customer, you see them coming back with, 'I need that, and I need that, too...'"

So how can safety-conscious parents cut through the hype to decide what's really necessary?

- Get educated. Talk with parents you trust, and your pediatrician.

U.S. GOVERNMENT COIN MINTING SHUT-OFF NOTIFICATION

Sealed vault tubes of President coins go to public for $28

SHUT OFF: Here's some of the last dozen stacks of Golden Washington Presidential Dollars that are no longer being minted and are extremely uncommon because they're actually carved with edge lettering.

Public gets hoard of last golden Presidential coins free

By SHAWN OYLER
UNIVERSAL MEDIA SYNDICATE

(UMS) - Starting at precisely 7:45 a.m. today, some of the last Presidential Coins ever to be minted by the U.S. Government are being handed out free to the public.

They are getting them free with every single vault tube they claim.

The U.S. Government barely got started minting these new Washington coins and by law were required to stop production forever. There will never be any more.

So, who's to thank for this massive giveaway effort? Well, it's not the government. It's the World Reserve Monetary Exchange.

And we'll even give you the direct Hotline to call so you can be among the first to get yours free right now.

People everywhere will be trying to get their hands on the last of these magnificent stacks of golden coins with the never-before-seen edge markings. But only those who get in before the 3-day deadline are being handed one of the remaining brand new never-circulated Washington Presidential Dollar Coins free with every single $28 sealed vault tube.

Officials at the World Reserve are bracing for the explosion of calls. But, don't give up calling if you don't get through the first time. Keep trying.

"It's a miracle we were able to set up special Hotlines in three Regional Distribution Zones in an effort to maintain order across the country. We feared the flood of calls could bring us to our knees but we are now equipped to handle everyone who is trying to get through to get our last coins," said Stephen Speakman, Director of Hotline Operations for the World Reserve Monetary Exchange.

All this is happening because the World Reserve has revealed it will release the last of its secretly located hoard of $13 million worth of never-circulated Presidential Coins in vault sealed tubes to prevent them from ever being introduced into commerce. It's the only way to maintain their value as never-circulated coins.

"This is what everyone wants but so few will actually have. So many will be left out in the cold or with ordinary circulated coins if they can even find them in their bank change. That's why we are so widely advertising our plans to give away some of the last never-circulated Presidential Coins free," said Speakman.

Those who do beat the order deadline will get one of the last Presidential Dollar Coins free so they can handle it, show it off and still keep the valuable vault tube sealed and perfectly intact.

The U.S. Government is required to honor each President with a single Presidential $1 Coin, with a different President appearing every ninety days. That's why everyone is still trying to get the last of the Washington dollar coins now that minting has been shut off and since it is the first Presidential Dollar to be released.

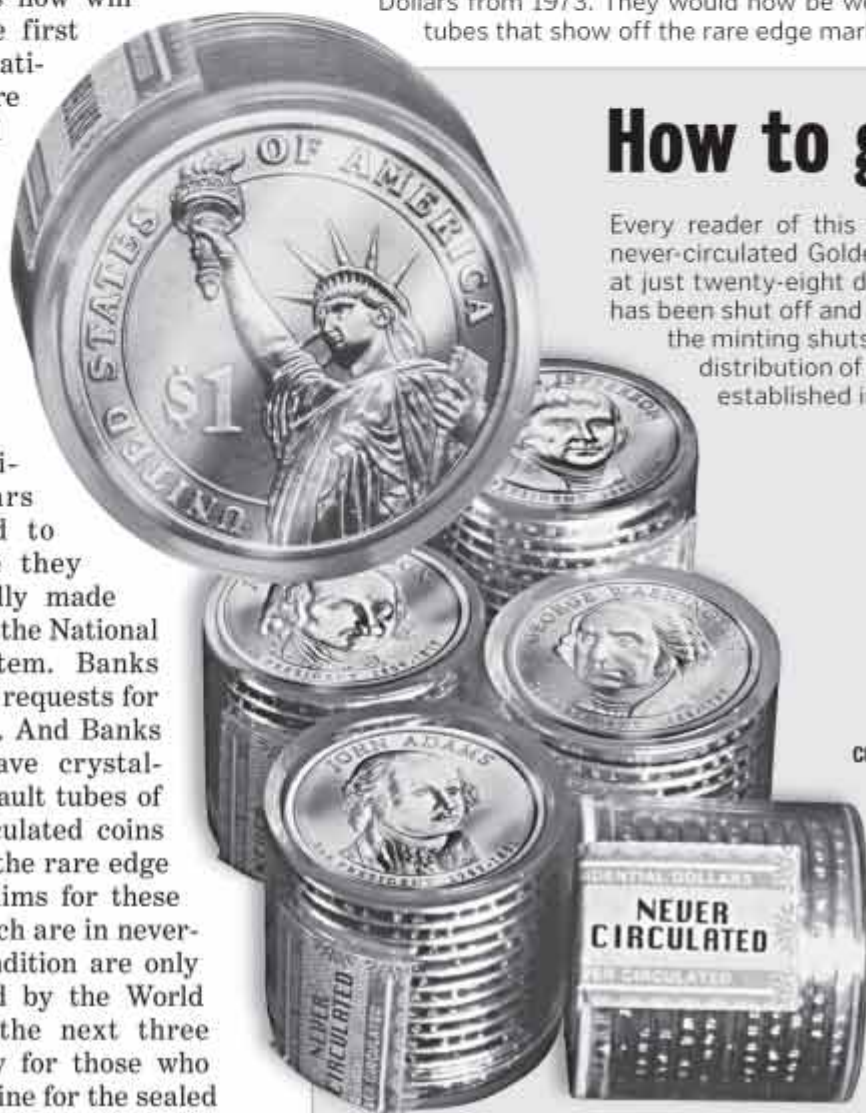

"There will be forty sealed vault tubes in all, each containing twelve never-circulated Presidential Coins. That's 480 coins. But with all forty of the free coins everybody is getting, it becomes a spectacular collection of 520 never-circulated coins in all, loaded into two separate heavy vault boxes. Only those lucky enough to get in on this now will be among the first to be automatically taken care of with all of the new Presidential Dollars to ever be minted for the next ten years," explained Speakman.

The Presidential Dollars may be hard to find because they have not really made their way into the National Banking System. Banks will not honor requests for the free coins. And Banks will never have crystal-clear sealed vault tubes of the never-circulated coins that show off the rare edge markings. Claims for these free coins which are in never-circulated condition are only being honored by the World Reserve for the next three days and only for those who beat the deadline for the sealed vault tubes.

"Just look at that stack of coins. When Americans get their hands on those, they are really going to do a double take," Speakman said. ■

■ JACKPOT: These two massive vault boxes contain the sealed vault tubes for the complete collection of forty Golden Presidential Dollars, 480 coins in all. Values fluctuate, but just think if you had saved 2 vault boxes of uncirculated Eisenhower Dollars from 1973. They would now be worth $6,912.00. It's a real steal at just $28 for these crystal clear sealed vault tubes that show off the rare edge markings and protect the coin's never-circulated value.

How to get free Presidential Coins

Every reader of this newspaper who beats the order deadline will still get one of the last never-circulated Golden Washington Presidential Dollar Coins free with each sealed vault tube at just twenty-eight dollars plus shipping. Rations of these coins are uncertain because minting has been shut off and there can never be anymore. Once they're gone, they're gone. By law, once the minting shuts off, they will never be minted again. So, in an effort to maintain an orderly distribution of the World Reserve's remaining private hoard of coins, claim lines have been established in three Regional Distribution Zones.

More than 19 million toys recalled in past two weeks

BY MELODY HANATANI | Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE Concerned whether any of her 17-month-old son's toys contained lead paint, Erin Buckhantz decided to play detective.

The Venice resident headed to the local hardware store and purchased a lead testing kit for $6.50. Though her son's inventory of toys were not among the 19 million toys recalled recently by Mattel for lead paint and loose magnets, Buckhantz decided there was no point in taking risks.

The mom lined up a few of the toys she considered to be suspect, slathering them with some solution. After about 30 seconds, if the solution turned pink or red, the paint contained lead.

The results were negative.

"It's so easy to do," Buckhantz said on Monday. "It made me feel a lot better about the toys I was concerned about."

One of the biggest toymakers in the world put parents on edge when it began recalling some of its most popular lines of toys two weeks ago, starting with an announcement on Aug. 2 that it was instructing retailers to pull Fisher Price's Sesame Street and Dora the Explorer products.

Since then, the company has come out with a slew of announcements recalling Barbie dolls, Batman action figures and Polly Pocket toys for risks associated with lead paint and magnets that could come loose and be swallowed by children.

There have been no reports of injury.

The affected products, which includes the Disney movie "Cars" series, were all made in China, as are approximately 60 percent of Mattel products.

"We are unique in the toy industry in that we have operations in other countries, like Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand and Mexico," Mattel spokeswoman Jules Andres said on Monday. About 80 percent of the world's toys are produced in China, she said.

The recall has made parents more cautious about what's in and on their children's toys. Retailers in Santa Monica like the Third Street Promenade's Puzzle Zoo and Montana

Fabian Lewkowicz fabianl@smdp.com

COAST IS CLEAR: Puzzle Zoo on The Third Street Promenade reports that many parents have expressed concerns about the recall.

Avenue's JennyBec's are reporting that many customers have asked more questions about the store's merchandise, even if they didn't carry any of the affected toys.

"Most customers ask if anything is affected by the recall," said Jenny Mullennix, owner of JennyBec's on Montana Avenue. "We try to use smaller manufacturers who don't have outsourcing to China."

WE TRY TO USE SMALLER MANUFACTURERS WHO DON'T HAVE OUTSOURCING TO CHINA."

Jenny Mullennix
Owner of JennyBec's

JennyBec's does carry several Mattel brand toys but none that were affected by the recall.

The questions extend to doctors.

The pediatric division at Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center and Orthopedic Hospital has received many questions from parents about lead poisoning. Dr. Dennis Wood, the chief of pediatrics, has conducted several lead poisoning tests following the recall but none of the results have come back positive.

There aren't too many signs of lead poisoning unless there has been a high amount of exposure to the child, Woo said.

"What you worry about is developing neurological issues," he said. "In low levels of intoxication, you don't see anything clinically."

Following Mattel's announcement, Alexa Stone checked through her 14-month-old son's stock of toys to see if any were included in the recall. They were not.

Since her son Mackenzie is at the age where he likes stuffing objects in his mouth, Stone said she is especially cautious to be sure his toys don't contain small parts that could come loose.

Stone is the vice president in charge of membership for the Moms Club of Santa Monica South, a support group for local mothers.

"(The recall) made me a bit concerned of what other things could be lurking out there that we just don't consider as parents," Stone said on Monday. "I want to know who is supposed to protect us. Do I need to get a biology degree to make sure the household is safe for kids?"

Mattel officials are currently conducting an investigation of the product lines and there is still a possibility that more toys will be recalled.

"If we find anything that does not meet our high standards, we will voluntarily recall — and we will do it quickly and communicate openly with parents," Andres said. "We believe that is in the best interest of consumers."

Parents should trust their guts

one the child knows and with whom they have established a relationship. For women, many sexual assaults are considered "confidence rapes," in that the offender knows the victim and has used that familiarity to gain access to her, law enforcement officials said.

"By spending so much time focusing on the person living up the street, parents often overlook the person living across the street," said Pattie Fitzgerald, a Santa Monica mom and the founder of Safely Ever After, Inc. (www.safelyeverafter.com), which provides prevention education workshops and seminars for parents and children at homes, schools, PTA events and community gatherings.

"Megan's Law is a great awareness tool, but you can't be lulled into a false sense of security," said Fitzgerald, who will be teaching parents the essentials at the "Family Fun and Safety Day" on Sept. 8 at the Shalom Institute in Malibu.

"It is only part of the solution," Fitzgerald added. "It only tells you if someone's been caught and convicted and have relocated into the community. It doesn't tell you about the people who haven't been caught."

By law, people convicted of specified sex crimes are required to register as sex offenders with a local law enforcement agency. Prior to release from prison, jail, a mental hospital, or on probation, sex offenders are notified in writing of their duty to register, and a copy of the notification is forwarded to the California Department of Justice, which is responsible for maintaining the registry.

Registered sex offenders are required to update their information annually, within five working days of their birthday. Some sex offenders must update more often: Transients must update every 30 days, and sexually violent predators, every 90 days.

When registrants change their address or become homeless, they are required to update their registration information within five days with a local agency, which is responsible for forwarding that information to the Department of Justice.

Failing to do so can be a misdemeanor or a felony depending on the level of the sex crime committed.

For Santa Monica, staying on top of who's registered and who has not is challenging given the large number of homeless people — around 2,200 — who move in and out of the city frequently, said Santa Monica Police Sgt. Doug Theus, who oversees the department's sex crimes unit.

"With the system we have in place, we actually track them very well, but as you know, people come in and out of the city and that makes it a little bit more difficult," Theus said. "Many people also come here to register because registering in L.A. is very time consuming. We make sure that everything is done right."

Theus said he and the other sex crimes detectives are looking at ways to make the process more efficient and effective.

"Instead of just coming through the front office to register, we are having registrants come to the detectives here so that we can see them before they sign the (offender) book," Theus said.

The SMPD checks the Megan's Law Web site frequently to see if new information has been added. In the end, it is up to local law enforcement agencies to make sure the latest information is made available to the public.

Fitzgerald praised the SMPD for releasing the information bulletin on McClellan even though some have criticized the department for doing so because McClellan has never been convicted of a sex crime against a child.

"I think (the SMPD) does a good job of keeping track of offenders here, but there is some stuff I'd like to talk about with parents that police departments just don't have the time to do," Fitzgerald said.

One of those things is helping parents talk with their children about their "uh-oh feeling."

Fitzgerald said parents are often reluctant to talk to their children about safety because they do not want to scare their children. But a way to make them more aware of their surroundings without instilling fear is to talk about the child's "uh-oh" feeling, which is something all children experience when they are being told to do something that goes against what their parents have taught them.

By listening to their "uh-oh" feeling, kids can potentially avoid a dangerous situation.

Instead of talking to kids about strangers, parents should focus more on talking to their children about tricky people, Fitzgerald said. Kids do not understand that concept of strangers as easily as adults and this kind of teaching could prevent children from talking with a police officer, bus driver, or some other stranger that could help them.

Also, parents should tell their children to never go with an adult who says they need help finding their car or a lost dog. Adults look to other adults for help, Fitzgerald said.

"Parents need to stop worrying about scaring their children and start talking about prevention," Fitzgerald said. "We believe it is important to teach them about how to be safe crossing the street, we teach them how to be safe by not touching a hot stove, but this is a safety issue that we shy away from out of fear. We don't talk about it and that does a disservice to the kids."

SMPD officers said the most important thing a parent can do is be involved in their kids' lives, which means meeting your child's friend's parents, building a close relationship with their teachers and counselors.

"We always want to remind our parents to know where their kids are at all times," said SMPD Lt. Alex Padilla, spokesman for the department.

"It is important to also be actively involved in the schools, which provide information to the families themselves and are a critical part of the process," Padilla said. "It is really more than the police department. It takes a combination of all stakeholders — parents, schools, service groups — working together to make sure our children are safe."

Seeing the softer side of men

more enlightened than their counterparts in the days before fire.

"There's a bit of an evolution, the idea of male bonding, which has always been around in entertainment, but in the past it was done with a little more machismo," says Nicole Vecchiarelli, entertainment director of Details, a men's fashion and lifestyle magazine. "But in the post metrosexual era guys bonding isn't necessarily about guns and action and high testosterone activity. They're exposing their more sensitive side because that's a reflection of the typical urban male."

Although the idea of the metrosexual man focused on outward appearances, where men were as conscious about the way they looked — and smelled — as women, "now it seems they can, on the inside, feel a little bit more like girls and that's still OK," adds Vecchiarelli.

The men in "Big Shots" are very in touch with their feminine sides. Vartan, Dylan McDermott, Joshua Malina and Christopher Titus play high-powered Manhattan CEOs with everything in the world they could want, except for stable relationships at home. In the pilot, the men groan so much about their dysfunctional marriages, their need for intimacy and fidelity, McDermott's character declares: "Men. We're the new women."

Series creator and executive producer Jon Harmon Feldman believes that men are now having "to deal with female issues."

Alicia Barlow remembers a childhood of playing in her friend's tree fort that was full of rotting wood and rusty nails. No one ever gave the septic setting a second thought when it came to playtime.

Now a mother of two, she half-jokingly talks about inspecting her children's pristine swing set before play dates to ensure that she won't get sued.

"My childhood was very different, much more easy-going," said Barlow, of Ridgefield, Conn., who has a 7-year-old daughter and a 3-year-old son.

The recent recall of nearly 19 million toys made by Mattel offers a stark reminder that we no longer live in those carefree days of unlocked doors and children romping through neighborhoods unwatched for hours on end.

These days the thought of letting one's child spontaneously hop on a bicycle and race off is frightening. Riding one requires donning what amounts to body armor — helmet, elbow pads, knee pads. And you don't just belt a kid into the car anymore — an advanced degree is needed to navigate the car-seat rules for weight and age.

The pitfalls of parenting are ever increasing, and so is frustration. The toy recall, serious though it may be, adds just another thread to a growing tapestry of anxiety, some parents say. And it's yet another sign of how different their kids' lives are from their own.

"Whether it would be sexual predators or abductions or lead-based paint in toy cars it just seems like there is always one other mounting thing," said Greg Swanson, 41, of Davenport, Iowa, and father of four boys ages 2 to 8. "You would think that we would evolve as a society where things would become less of a problem, but they become more of a problem with each passing day with kids."

Watching your child closely on the playground, buying organic foods, over-scheduling structured activities: These are the things that have supplanted the last generation's laissez-faire approach to child rearing. Parents today find themselves spending almost double for a gallon of organic milk and sacrificing precious free time to be diligent protectors.

Much of the added parenting pressure comes from greater awareness. The Internet has given everyone an outlet for expressing opinions and sharing information. With all the alerts, scientific studies and know-it-all bloggers are we becoming victims of our own connectedness?

For Parker Sessions, a 45-year-old mother of twin girls who will be 4 in November, the toy recall doesn't rate as a major concern (not that she didn't check her toy box, mind you). She already tests her children for lead yearly because she lives in an older house. She says you have to draw the line somewhere.

"I'm going to worry about the bigger things — are my children eating a balanced diet?" Sessions said. "I try to feed them organic. I live in Atlanta and the air quality is horrible. I'm more worried about that frankly. ... They both have asthma and allergies and when the air quality is bad I don't let them go out midday because we get smog alerts and ozone alerts."

But many parents see toys as a safe haven, spending extra to buy from trusted companies. Still, the boxes are covered with warning labels and age recommendations. Message boards are inundated with reviews.

YOU WOULD THINK THAT WE WOULD EVOLVE AS A SOCIETY WHERE THINGS WOULD BECOME LESS OF A PROBLEM, BUT THEY BECOME MORE OF A PROBLEM WITH EACH PASSING DAY WITH KIDS."

Greg Swanson

Father of four boys ages 2 to 8 in Davenport, Iowa

"What's very unfortunate about this is this is one place you don't think you need to worry," said Sheri Gurock, the mother of two girls, 3 and 5, and the owner of Magic Beans, a kids gear and toy store in Brookline, Mass. "I think you feel like you go into any reputable store in the United States and you should feel like if you're purchasing something that's for your child that it has already passed all the necessary safety tests."

"To some degree this is a real violation of trust for parents," she added.

On the day the second Mattel recall made news, Barlow and several friends gathered for a preplanned "ladies night out" in New York City. Free of parental responsibility for a few hours and the campy new Broadway show "Xanadu" on the agenda, the pretheater dinner conversation still turned to toys. The consensus: throw all the toys out.

It's just one more step, one more layer that separates us from our own childhoods.

Anna Nicole Smith's daughter, Dannielynn, will celebrate first birthday at lavish party

ANNA NICOLE SMITH'S daughter, Dannielynn, will celebrate her first birthday next month at a party in Louisville.

The party will be held at the home of Tricia Barnstable Brown, who hosts an annual Kentucky Derby-eve party packed with celebrities. Smith and Dannielynn's father, Larry Birkhead, met at the 2003 party.

Brown said Birkhead, a Louisville native, asked her to host the party.

"They met at my Derby party here at my home," Brown said Saturday. "Now Larry is bringing Dannielynn in from L.A. to celebrate her first birthday party."

Brown said she expects about 200 people, including family and friends. She said Howard K. Stern, who had been in a custody battle with Birkhead over Dannielynn, will also attend.

The catered party will have elaborate decorations and hot-air balloons, Brown said.

Smith gave birth to Dannielynn in the Bahamas on Sept. 7.

Trouble on Tom's film

Several extras were injured when they fell out of a truck during the filming of "Valkyrie," which stars TOM CRUISE as Germany's most famous anti-Hitler plotter.

The accident happened Sunday evening while scenes were being shot around the Finance Ministry in Berlin, which was once the Nazis' aviation ministry.

United Artists said 10 extras briefly required medical attention after falling off the truck, which the studio said was traveling at less than 10 mph when wooden slats gave way – sending them off the side.

"No one suffered anything more serious than cuts and bruises, though one of the extras was kept in the hospital overnight for observation," said a statement Monday from United Artists.

Police said a bolt on a side panel of the truck apparently came loose as the vehicle turned a corner.

"Tom Cruise was not there and the film director also wasn't there," said Berlin police spokesman Martin Grosse. He put the total number of injured extras at 11.

Studio officials weren't immediately available for further comment.

United Artists said the movie's main production unit, which includes director Bryan Singer and Cruise himself, wasn't filming at the time of the accident – and "it is not expected to have any impact on the production schedule."

Police opened an investigation of persons unknown on suspicion of negligent bodily harm, Grosse said.

PETE DOHERTY IS ARRESTED

Police arrested PETE DOHERTY on Monday in east London on suspicion of drug possession.

A police spokesman confirmed a 28-year-old man was arrested on suspicion of possession of drugs and was in custody at an east London police station. Because of police force rules, he could not name the suspect.

Earlier this month, a judge warned Doherty, lead singer of Babyshambles, that he must prove his desire to quit drugs or face a jail sentence for other drug offenses.

Doherty, 28, has admitted possessing crack cocaine, heroin, cannabis and ketamine, as well as to two driving offenses.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★ Dynamic ★★★★★ Positive ★★★ Average ★★ So-So ★ Difficult

Happy Birthday!

This year you have the creativity and drive to create a better platform, be it professionally or personally. You might often opt for brainstorming sessions and choose to work in situations with a diversity of opinions and ideas. Understanding differences can be used positively rather than negatively. Strengthen the issue at hand by integrating and understanding differences. If you are single, during 2007-2008 you could meet someone very important. If you are attached, focus on the creativity and energy that lie between you.

Break your pattern, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★★ Obstacles might appear, but the true Ram will just jump over them, seeing no problem or not allowing the problem to impact his or her life. That attitude separates you from the majority and promotes success. Act on your assets. Tonight: Break precedent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★★ You work with others and make headway. Allow greater fluidity within your situation. Your ability to move into a new realm might surprise you. Listen and think more carefully about what needs to happen. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ You might want to defer to others, as you might get better responses if you opt to play a passive role. Others will knock their socks off for you. You will like the end results. Tonight: Decide where you would most like to be.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Recognize what might be impossible for many. Your abilities to discipline yourself and make strong decisions earmark your work and daily life. Others admire and respect those qualities. Tonight: Easy does it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★★ You have enthusiasm and get-up-and-go. You might wonder where to begin to gain control of a situation. Perhaps the problem starts with the word "control." Let go and allow more ideas to bubble forth. Tonight: Fun and games.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Build better foundations and make your life run more smoothly. You might not always be as serious as you are right now, but use this trait to energize yourself to create stricter guidelines for your day-to-day life. Tonight: Happy at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ Deal with a situation in a positive manner. How you see the situation could change radically if you ask for others' opinions. Someone in your life might appear hard and unrelenting. Do your best to clear out extra calls and errands. Tonight: Loving hanging out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Curb an innate possessive streak and try to get to the root of it. You might want to change directions or do something very differently as a result. Give up being insecure, and you'll greet stability. Look to building a stronger core. Tonight: Pay bills first; play later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★★ Know that you are on target, even if others don't agree with your assessment. You are able to understand the implications of key facts and can make strong decisions. Understanding helps draw results. Tonight: As you like.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ Understand what might be going on behind the scenes before judging a situation. You might hear a lot of negativity from a key partner. Make that OK. Your creativity will surge if you look within for answers. Tonight: Take your time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★★ Friendship means a great deal, and you get to express that special Aquarian sense of camaraderie. Though you might not be able to make sense of changes, you will make an imprint because of your unique caring. Tonight: Where your friends are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You might want to take a stronger stand or handle a situation differently. Work on your mental position as if there is no tomorrow. You might not have all the answers available to you, but you do have a lot. Tonight: Claim your power, and others will respond.

Janric Classic Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from Bronze (easiest) to Silver to Gold (hardest).

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Crime Time in Wilmington, Del.: (1) Jesse Dale, 42, was arrested and charged with cocaine possession in Wilmington in June during a routine traffic stop after he attempted to throw his stash out the passenger window as the officer approached. (However, the window was up, and the package bounced back into the seat in "plain sight" for the officer to base an arrest on.) (2) Also in June, according to police, Branden Tingey, 28, was arrested after closing hours in the manager's office at Wilmington's Polidoro Italian Grill, trying to open the safe. It appeared that Tingey was using a computer displaying a Web page on safecracking.

■ Undignified Deaths: (1) A 21-year-old man fell to his death in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, in April when he leaned a little too far over on a hillside rock in order to write his girlfriend's name on an available space on the surface. (Her name is Kaylee and not, unfortunately, just Kay.) (2) A 43-year-old man suffered a fatal heart attack in 2006 during sex with an exotic dancer in Pacifica, Calif., and homicide was ruled out because the death was captured on the video camera the man had set up to record their session. (On the other hand, the woman's drug use was also on the video, and she was sentenced in May 2007 to a year in jail.)

You have 30 CALENDAR DAYS after this summons and legal papers are served on you to file a written response at this court and have a copy served on the plaintiff. A letter or phone call will not protect you. Your written response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. There may be a court form that you can use for your response. You can find these court forms and more information at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), your county law library, or the court-house nearest you. If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the court clerk for a fee waiver form. If you do not file your response on time, you may lose the case by default, and your wages, money and property may be taken without further warning from the court. There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may want to call an attorney referral service. If you cannot afford an attorney, you may be eligible for free legal services from a nonprofit legal services program. You can locate these nonprofit groups at the California Legal Tiene 30 DIAS DE CALENDARIO despues de que le entreguen esta citacion y papeles legales para presentar una respuesta por escrito en esta corte y hacer que se entregue una copia al demandante. Una carta o una llamada telefonica no lo protegen. Su respuesta por escrito tiene que estar en formato legal correcto si desea que procesen su caso en la corte. Es posible que haya un formulario que usted pueda usar para su respuesta. Puede encontrar estos formularios de la corte y mas informacion en el Centro de Ayuda de las Cortes de California (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp/espanol/), en la biblioteca de leyes de su condado o en la corte que le quede mas cerca. Si no puede pagar la cuota de presentacion, pida al secretario de la corte que le de un formulario de exencion de pago de cuotas. Si no presenta su respuesta a tiempo, puede perder el caso por incumplimiento y la corte le podra quitar su sueldo, dinero y bienes sin mas advertencia.

Hay otros requisitos legales Es recomendable que llame a un abogado inmediatamente. Si no conoce a un abogado, pueda llamar a un servicio de remision a abogados.
