Providence Saint John's helps fulfill a mother's dying wish to see her daughter married

MARRIED: Staff at the local hospital helped a family pull off a wedding in the chapel.

PATRICIA AIDEM
Special to the Daily Press

It only took 24 hours and the help of staff at Providence Saint John's Health Center to grant Nina Heard's dying wish: to witness her daughter Noel walk down the aisle.

In October 2019, Nina was diagnosed with metastatic breast cancer, also known as stage 4 breast cancer. She has been fighting the disease for nearly two years and recently was hospitalized for treatment at Saint John's.

As Nina's condition worsened, her family shared that her last wish was to see her daughter Noel married. So Noel and her fiancé Jacques Arzu decided to bring their wedding to Nina at the hospital.

On Wednesday, Aug. 18, Saint John's caregivers got to work transforming the hospital's chapel and board room for a wedding ceremony and reception venue. From valet attendants to the nursing team, everyone worked together to make the moment special for the bride and groom and their family.

One nurse created a bridal bouquet and boutonnieres for family members, while others helped Nina get ready before the

With 15% of classes in person, SMC takes a safety-above-all approach to reopening

SMC: Most SMC classes will remain online when students return.

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

As students rush back to campuses across the nation, the return to Santa Monica College this fall will be more of a drip than a flood.

Only around 4,000 of the college's 25,000 students will be taking classes in-person, and in order to do so they must prove vaccination status or a valid health or religious exception.

While some general lecture courses will take place on campus, the majority of in-person offerings are classes that benefit most from hands-on learning such as science labs, PE and the arts. Athletic teams

Recall confusion

MATTHEW HALL & TODD JAMES
SMDP Staff

California's recall election for Governor Gavin Newsom is underway but many voters are confused about what is happening, how to vote and what could happen as a result of the election.

The ballot appears simple with just two items to consider: Should Newsom be recalled? If he is, who should his replacement be?

If 50% or more vote NO on the first item, Newsom remains in office to serve out his term.

If less than 50% vote NO, Newsom will be removed from office and replaced by one of the 46 candidates listed in the second item of the ballot. The winning candidate only needs to have the most votes, not a majority.

Confusingly, at the end of the candidate list is a blank space that seems to beg for a write-in candidate, but the list of certified write-in candidates won't be available until Sept. 3 and Newsom won't be one of them.

Compounding voter confusion is Newsom's request that voters ignore

Parents Remain Concerned about Safety of In-Person Instruction – Survey

A gap remains between white parents and Black and Hispanic parents in their preferences for in-person schooling, but it has narrowed since May. The RAND Corporation survey, funded by The Rockefeller Foundation, details parents' responses concerning school hesitancy and preferences for COVID-19 safety practices in U.S. schools in fall 2021.

RAND fielded the survey July 16-29 as the delta variant had greatly increased the national number of COVID-19 cases. It is a follow-up to a similar RAND survey fielded in May.

The portion of parents who planned to send their children to school in-person this fall rose from 84% in May to 89% in July. Yet while 94% of white parents planned to send their children back to school in-person as of July, only 82% of Black and 83% of Hispanic parents planned to do the same.

"To feel safe sending their children to school in-person, most parents – especially those still unsure about in-person schooling – want classroom ventilation, teachers to be vaccinated, and social distancing in schools, in that order," said Heather Schwartz, co-author of the report and director of the Pre-K to 12 educational systems program at RAND, a nonprofit research organization. "School principals are the source that the greatest number of parents trust for information about school safety practices."

Other key findings:

Parents whose children were under 12 years old (and thus too young to be vaccinated for COVID-19) were as likely to plan to send them to school in person as were parents with children over 12.

- COVID-19-related health concerns remained the top reasons for parents not sending their children to school in person this fall, more than academics, racial discrimination, bullying or concerns about schools teaching critical race theory. Two-thirds or more of Black, Hispanic and Asian parents needed each of the following practices in place to feel safe sending their children to school in person: ventilation in classrooms; teachers vaccinated; social distancing; mandatory masking; and regular COVID-19 testing. Fewer white parents needed these practices in place to feel safe. Parents who were unsure about sending their children to school in-person especially wanted these safety practices, and more.
- The survey found 61% of parents wished to know more about which COVID-19 safety measures their child's school is enacting for the fall. Only 27% said they already knew in detail which specific COVID-19 safety measures their child's school will have in place. Sixty-one percent selected a school staff member – most commonly the principal – as the most trusted source about school safety measures.
- The survey found 51% of parents supported voluntary, free weekly COVID-19 testing at school, which was similar to the percentage in May; 75% supported COVID-19 testing if their child showed COVID-19 symptoms. The most common reason parents did not support COVID-19 testing at schools was a concern that the test was physically uncomfortable for children.
- The survey found 57% of parents planned to get their child vaccinated for COVID-19 as of July 2021; 79% of vaccinated parents planned to do so, compared with 10% of unvaccinated parents.

The survey was designed in part by members of the State & Territory Alliance for Testing (STAT) who expressed a need for concrete data on parents' current sentiments toward in-person learning. The Rockefeller Foundation's funding for the report is part of its efforts to provide educators and policymakers with the tools to help facilitate school reopening.

Other authors of the report, "Will Students Come Back? A July 2021 Parent Survey About School Hesitancy and Parental Preferences for COVID-19 Safety Practices in Schools," are Melissa Kay Diliberti and David Grant.

RAND Education and Labor is dedicated to improving education and expanding economic opportunities for all through research and analysis. Its researchers address key policy issues in U.S. and international education systems and labor markets, from pre-kindergarten to retirement planning.

SMC Emeritus Gallery to Host Online Opening Reception for Group Exhibition September 9

The Santa Monica College (SMC) Emeritus Art Gallery is pleased to present a group exhibition of works by three brilliant Emeritus painters – Cynthia Cottam, Young-He Keh, and Denise Peak – shown alongside paintings by professional watercolorist Judy Benson. The exhibition will be presented online at smc.edu/emeritusgallery and features creative pieces that share a common interest in classic forms of representational imagery, with styles ranging from photo-realistic rendering and natural palettes to near abstraction and explosive color.

A free, live Zoom Virtual Launch Event will be held online from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, September 9. A link at smc.edu/emeritusgallery takes guests directly to the exhibition's opening reception.

The opening reception will be hosted by Dean of Noncredit and External Programs Dr. Scott Silverman and Emeritus Art Gallery Curator Jesse Benson. The event includes a live scroll through the exhibition, a discussion between Benson and the artists about selected works, and a Q&A offering guests the chance to ask the artists questions.

To see the artwork online at any time after 5 p.m. on September 9, viewers may go to smc.edu/emeritusgallery and click the exhibition link, available 24 hours a day. The link takes viewers directly to the exhibition album on a Facebook page that is open to public viewing (Facebook account not necessary).

"In the rare instances that Emeritus Gallery exhibitions have combined student work with that of outside professionals, the selected student artists have been of the highest caliber," said Benson. "This particular event is close to my heart, as it showcases the mastery of three beloved and remarkably skilled Emeritus students and the creative expertise of a professional watercolorist who qualifies as the most influential artist in my life, my mom Judy Benson."

"The Emeritus online art exhibition allows us to enjoy fantastic work created by amazing and active people" said Silverman. "And this time, we get to witness some additional magic both from our current students and from work produced by the woman who has inspired our art curator to get into this work, his own mother. The intergenerational magic around this exhibition will be a real treat."

SMC's widely praised Emeritus program – founded by Santa Monica College in 1975 as a noncredit program to serve the lifelong learning interests of older adults – offers more than 120 noncredit adult education classes and special programs that serve more than 3,000 students each year.

SMC's Drescher Planetarium Continues Free, Live Virtual Shows in September

Santa Monica College's John Drescher Planetarium continues its Friday evening events in September 2021 with free, live virtual shows presented online at smc.edu/planetarium. The friendly presentations will highlight how to use binoculars to explore the night sky, and explain what solstices and equinoxes are.

The Friday evening shows are at 8 p.m. and are preceded by a streamlined, virtual digest of the popular Night Sky Show at 7 p.m., offering the latest news in astronomy and space exploration. The shows include the chance to chat with the planetarium lecturers and ask questions related to astronomy and space exploration.

The planetarium is currently using the Zoom platform to present its shows while the Santa Monica College (SMC) campuses are closed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. To attend the shows, the Zoom software version 5.0 or higher must be installed on the viewer's computer. A free download is available at zoom.com.

The September 2021 shows are:

• Friday, September 10 & 24, at 8 p.m. (following The Night Sky Show at 7 p.m.): "Binocular Highlights of the Autumn Sky" – Senior Lecturer Jim Mahon. Show will explain how to use binoculars to enjoy the highlights of the autumn sky at a convenient hour, help guests get oriented in the skies of a Southern California, demystify what the numbers printed on binoculars mean, and call attention to some interesting targets to look at and help friends and neighbors aim at with their own binoculars. If weather permits, guests will be ready to stroll outside for a little binocular observing after the program. Free. Zoom at smc.edu/planetarium.

• Friday, September 17, at 8 p.m. (following The Night Sky Show at 7 p.m.): "TILT! Equinoxes and Solstices Explained" – Assistant Lecturer Sarah Vincent. With the Autumnal Equinox approaching on September 20, most city dwellers are only vaguely aware of what the equinoxes and solstices actually are. The show will try to remedy this disconnect from the natural world, as well as dispel some myths, like the egg-standing-on-end story. Free. Zoom at smc.edu/planetarium.

More information is available online at smc.edu/planetarium or by calling 310-434-3005. All shows subject to change or cancellation without notice.

Reps Lieu and Huffman Announce Launch of California Coastal Caucus

Congressman Ted W. Lieu (D-Los Angeles County) and Congressman Jared Huffman (CA-02) have announced the launch of the Congressional California Coastal Caucus at The Marine Mammal Center in Sausalito. The caucus will bring together members of the California House delegation to share and discuss federal policy to address matters of importance to the 840-mile California coast, including issues relating to the environment and economy. Congressman Lieu and Congresswoman Julia Brownley (CA-26) will serve as co-chairs of the caucus. Additional members of the caucus include U.S. Representatives Eric Swalwell, Nanette Barragan, Alan Lowenthal, Jimmy Panetta, Jared Huffman, Mike Levin, Ro Khanna, Jackie Speier, Salud Carbajal, Barbara Lee, and Anna Eshoo.

Congressmembers Lieu and Huffman participated in a tour of The Marine Mammal Center, followed by a roundtable discussion moderated by Carol Costello with Dr. Jeff Boehm, Chief Executive Officer of The Marine Mammal Center, and Dr. Cara Field, Medical Director of The Marine Mammal Center, on the importance of the ocean in the fight against climate change.

"I am thrilled to announce the launch of the California Coastal Caucus, and grateful to The Marine Mammal Center for hosting us today to discuss the importance of our oceans and marine life," said Co-Chair Rep. Lieu. "California is home to 840 miles of Pacific coastline and has the highest coastal population in the nation with over 26 million people living in coastal counties. The ocean is critically important to the people I represent in CA-33, as it provides work, food, and enjoyment to my constituents. Tragically, our oceans, marine life, beaches, and coastlines are in grave danger due to the existential threat of climate change. Now is the time for bold action. I'm pleased to join my co-chair, Representative Brownley, and Representative Huffman today to announce the formation of the California Coastal Caucus and look forward to working together to develop policies to effectively address a host of coastal issues and support our oceans."

Cedars-Sinai Support Strengthens Safety Net Organizations in Cedars-Sinai Marina del Rey Hospital Area

Cedars-Sinai has again increased its financial support for programs serving vulnerable residents in the communities surrounding Cedars-Sinai Marina del Rey Hospital, providing almost $4.1 million in grants during the last fiscal year to nearly 40 organizations that address access to care, housing stability, food security and health equity.

"We are committed to improving the health and wellbeing of the communities that Cedars-Sinai Marina del Rey Hospital serves," said Joanne Laguna-Kennedy, MSN, RN, CENP, vice president and chief operating officer of Cedars-Sinai Marina del Rey Hospital. "Cedars-Sinai is fulfilling that commitment by investing in organizations and agencies that truly drive change. These grants help our partners grow and transform the lives of vulnerable residents."

The grants provided more than $1.4 million to organizations that offer crucial access to medical care services. The Venice Family Clinic received $1 million to support its homeless outreach mobile medical unit and $70,000 to improve patient experience by addressing any underlying racial biases that could lead to structural racism at the nonprofit organization. Didi Hirsch Mental Health Services in Culver City received $75,000 for efforts to reduce healthcare disparities in communities that lack access to care.

Cedars-Sinai's grant-making reflects its continued commitment to supporting the needs of the local homeless population. The Venice Community Housing Corporation received $350,000 for Marian Place Home, a permanent housing pilot project with supportive services for resident women and children. Meanwhile, The People Concern received $150,000 to continue a navigator program that connects patients experiencing homelessness at Marina del Rey Hospital with community resources and services.

Food insecurity, another identified area of need, has affected many neighborhoods and populations across the Marina del Rey Hospital community throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. The Westside Food Bank and Meals on Wheels West each received $25,000 to support programs providing hunger relief and meals, which have been expanded in the wake of the pandemic.

"Our work toward improving the health of our community intentionally extends beyond the walls of our hospitals, and we have been gaining a deeper understanding of the needs of individuals in the area surrounding Cedars-Sinai Marina del Rey Hospital," said Erin Jackson-Ward, MPH, director of the Community Benefit Giving Office at Cedars-Sinai. "Grant-making gives us the unique opportunity to improve access to care and address health-related social needs of the most vulnerable in our community, and we're grateful that we have the ability to support our partner organizations through this funding."

Among other grant recipients in Marina del Rey, Santa Monica, Venice, Culver City, Mar Vista and Del Rey:

The Mar Vista Family Center received $50,000 to support its health and wellness program for low-income families.

The Boys & Girls Club of Santa Monica received $25,000 for programs promoting social-emotional learning; diversity, equity and inclusion; and healthy lifestyles for underserved youth.

The Culver-Palms Family YMCA received $100,000 for a pilot program supporting the social and emotional wellbeing of underserved families.

Safe Place for Youth in Venice, the only homeless youth services organization on the Westside, received $25,000 to advance equity and racial justice among youth experiencing homelessness.

ceremony. The Food and Nutrition Services department also catered the wedding, providing hors d'oeuvres, fruit, champagne and even a wedding cake.

Shortly before the afternoon ceremony, Nina's nurses brought her to the chapel in her hospital bed. She and her husband Terry Heard held hands and smiled as they watched Noel and Jacques say, "I do."

Several Saint John's caregivers attended the wedding as well, looking on with joy and cheering as the couple were pronounced husband and wife.

will practice and compete in-person, but all arts and music performances will be virtual.

In total, in-person classes will constitute around 15 percent of courses on offer. This is much lower than the 50 percent in-person offerings at community colleges such as Pasadena City College and Cerritos College.

According to SMC Vice President of Academic Affairs Bradley Lane, this limited in-person approach was taken in light of the school's priority to maximize safety, its strong record of teaching online courses and students' desires for online opportunities.

"I'm cautiously optimistic for the fall as we're coming back to campus with a minimal number of on ground classes," said Lane. "We were being really conservative when we were doing our planning. I think that's paid off because the Delta variant has made us pivot a lot of what we were thinking."

The minority of students who do return to campus can expect stringent safety measures including daily symptom screenings, mandatory masking, appointment-only access to certain buildings and sanitization of desk areas after each class.

"Our goal here has always been to create a safety culture, because that means everybody is participating and involved in it," said Daniel Philips, director of safety and risk management. "Safety just becomes part of what you do."

Philips gave seatbelt wearing as an example of a developed safety culture; people initially found the practice uncomfortable but are now so adjusted that the absence of a seatbelt generates discomfort. To create a Covid-19 safety culture, all staff have undergone a five hour training and ample signage and daily safety requirements should serve as ongoing reinforcements.

According to Lane, SMC plans to roughly double in-person offerings in the spring semester and move close to a new normal next summer. Lane also expects increased online opportunities to become a permanent feature of SMC.

"One of the things that we know about our students is that their lives are full and complex," said Lane. "The average community college student is probably a working adult and trying to balance jobs and often families, alongside finishing their higher education, so the flexibility that online learning offers is really valuable."

SMC was offering roughly 20 percent of its classes online prior to the pandemic and has honed in on its model over the past academic year, which includes asynchronous courses, synchronous virtual classes and a hybrid option.

Of the 1,380 students who responded to an SMC survey, 56 percent said they would not be interested in taking online classes this fall. Additionally, 88.3 percent said that SMC had provided adequate support and resources during the pandemic.

Some of these resources include a drive-through food pantry and a highly utilized 24-7 emotional support hotline. These too will become permanent parts of the college, with the drive through set to be converted into a physical food pantry space in September.

"That (the food pantry) was really a result of the learning we had around students' basic needs," said Lane. "This kind of focus on equity and access in service to students' basic needs is something that the college is going to continue focusing on."

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (AUGUST 23)

Relationships take unexpected turns -- especially ones tied to your livelihood. You're in for a ride. What you receive will be different and more than what you ever thought you would take away from a situation. Tweaks to your routine lift your vitality. Someone new helps you get unstuck from what held you back before. Leo and Taurus adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 4, 22, 28 and 13.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). In-person meetings are the best way to go if you can swing it. What happens face to face will be completely different from anything that could transpire otherwise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The truth about any moment or state is that it is impermanent. Any sense you have of yourself inside that moment is equally ephemeral, so ruminating is essentially useless.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). While it's true the world wouldn't run right without give and take, the onus to compromise shouldn't always have to fall on you. What would really happen if you more often dared to do what you wanted?

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There's safety and security in feeling you belong and are more or less like the others in the group. However, the ways you are different will not set you apart; they will instead be cause for fascination.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your talent for persuasion and negotiation gets stronger every time you use it. You're still learning what buttons to push. Though this changes with every deal, your intuition on the matter gets keener with practice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The word "yes" -- being just what you wanted to hear -- will make you smile. This affirmation is cause for relief, relaxation and celebration. It's also a signal. The real work begins.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Don't tell all you know or show all you have. A glimpse is more interesting than a reveal, which should be saved until the very last moment for the audience who has earned it. And for the rest -- never.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). As the sign of transformation, you welcome the fascinating evolution of your own nature, which often occurs without your control or interference. However, the change is solely your invention today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Expectation has a way of blinding people to the possibilities outside of what they anticipate. Don't let this happen to you. Drop your preconceived notions and open up to more mysterious realities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You are used to obeying the driving force of your ambition. It benefits you to change it up. Give that ambition a rest and it will still be there when you come back to it. Settle into a process. Let that be enough.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Because you don't expect people to behave like you would, you'll see their unique gifts and earn the reciprocal attention ignited by the tender power of your quiet observation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). It feels like you're giving absolutely everything to love. But if you stop to consider the real-life limits and practicalities, the feeling changes. So don't stop. If you can't romanticize love, what can you romanticize?

item two altogether, i.e. vote NO on item one and be done with it. That implies to some that if they vote NO on item one their candidate vote won't count however this is not the case. Your vote for both items is counted regardless of how you vote on item one.

Newsom's all-or-nothing strategy is generating much consternation within Democratic circles. Polls have shown significant enthusiasm for the election among the state's small conservative voter base and some voters are concerned skipping the second question could leave the choice of Governor up to a very small, very vocal conservative minority.

Additionally, Newsom and the Democratic Party's decision to not allow a strong Democrat fall-back candidate onto the ballot is garnering criticism now that polls are tightening.

Of the 46 replacement candidates on the ballot, 24 list themselves as Republicans. One, former Congressman Doug Ose, has withdrawn after a heart attack in recent weeks.

Conservative radio personality Larry Elder has emerged as the front-runner but other significant candidates include former San Diego mayor Kevin Faulconer, businessman John Cox, celebrity Caitlyn Jenner and Assemblyman Kevin Kiley. Few of the remaining candidates have significant campaigns or fundraising efforts. The non-Republican field includes 10 independents, nine Democrats, two members of the Green Party and a Libertarian.

Jackie McGowan, one of the Democrats running for Governor, criticized the California Democratic Party for telling Democratic voters to leave item two blank.

"Polls show Governor Newsom at risk of being recalled. A Trump takeover of California could result in Mitch McConnell controlling the Senate. That's bad news for California and bad news for our country," said McGowan. "Our Senior Senator Diane Feinstein is 88 years old. We all wish her a long life and good health. But we need to make sure a Democratic Governor would replace her if she could no longer serve. President Biden's ambitious plans to Build Back Better would never pass a McConnell-controlled Senate."

McGowan does not support the recall itself but said Democrats should have a plan in case it succeeds.

VOTING LOCATIONS

All registered voters in Los Angeles County will be mailed a Vote by Mail ballot and many are already in the hands of voters. Voters who have yet to receive their Vote by Mail ballot can request a replacement ballot as of Aug. 23.

Residents have three choices to return their ballot, by mail (no postage necessary), in person at a Vote by Mail Drop Box location or at any Vote Center in the county.

Santa Monicans have three choices for Drop Boxes at the Santa Monica Main Library (601 Santa Monica Boulevard), Virginia Avenue Park (2200 Virginia Avenue) and Marine Park (1406 Marine Street).

The Drop Boxes were first used in the November 2020 presidential election. The boxes are open up to 8 p.m. on election day. The boxes are bolted securely into cement or chained in place and are designed with security features identified in state regulations.

There are no in-person Vote Centers located inside Santa Monica city limits. The closest locations are:

Stoner Recreation Center (1835 Stoner Ave, Los Angeles). Hours: September 4 - Sept. 13: 10 a.m. - 7 p.m. Sept. 14: 7 a.m. - 8 p.m.

Mar Vista Recreation Center (11430 Woodbine St, Los Angeles). Hours: Sept. 4 - Sept. 13: 10 a.m. - 7 p.m. Sept. 14: 7 a.m. - 8 p.m.

Oakwood Recreation Center (767 California Ave, Venice). Hours: Sept. 4 - Sept. 13: 10 a.m. - 7 p.m. Sept. 14: 7 a.m. - 8 p.m.

Ballots postmarked by Election Day and received within seven days will be counted.
