Gala comes at turning point for PYFC

Youth center seeking to match City grant

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

Rodrigo Vazquez went from spending time behind bars to attending UC Berkeley. And as he worked towards his degree, which he recently earned, he played an active role in a support group for other formerly incarcerated students.

Known to many as "Froggy," Vazquez has worked as a program manager at the Pico Youth and Family Center in Santa Monica, instilling in youngsters the lessons he's learned along his atypical journey.

Vazquez is one of four honorees scheduled to be recognized at the Santa Monica nonprofit's annual banquet, which will be held from 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday at the Le Meridien Delfina hotel, 530 Pico Blvd.

The 9th annual Hope and Unity Awards Gala is the biggest fundraiser of the year for the PYFC, which provides a wide variety of programs and resources for underserved youths in the area.

The event comes at a turning point for Oscar de la Torre's organization, which recently received funding from the City of Santa Monica after having its public monies pulled last year. It's fitting, then, that the theme of this year's banquet is resilience.

"With everything that we have gone through as an organization," de la Torre said, "the fact that we're still vibrant and serving the youth of our community is a testament to our resilience as the resilience we inculcate in our youth."

The PYFC is working towards raising $50,000 to match the City's cash donation, and de la Torre said he hopes to cover the remaining $7,000 gap through this year's gala.

He added that the importance of the center is underscored by the gun violence, police clashes and antagonistic rhetoric taking place across the country.

"The PYFC is a solution to many of those problems," de la Torre said. "We know that our model of providing direct services and advocacy has transformed the way our city approaches youth development. The impact of that is that we have

Judge refuses to suspend California's assisted death law

BY JULIE WATSON
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO A California judge on Friday rejected a request by physicians to immediately suspend a new state law allowing terminally ill people to end their lives.

Riverside County Superior Court Judge Daniel A. Ottolia said the law will remain in effect for now. He also agreed to allow the physicians to pursue their lawsuit claiming the law lacks safeguards to protect against abuse.

The law took effect June 9 and allows terminally ill adults to obtain a prescription for life-ending drugs if a doctor has determined they have six months or less to live.

Advocates argued that terminally ill people could face prolonged, painful deaths if the law is sus-

City looks to extend tourism fees

STAYING POWER: The City is looking to extend fees for hotel visitors to pay for tourism outreach.

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

City Council took preliminary steps last week to extend and increase fees paid by hotel guests to fund ongoing tourism and marketing efforts.

Local hotels pay a self-imposed assessment that contributes to the operations at Santa Monica Travel and Tourism, a nonprofit agency that promotes Santa Monica as a travel destination worldwide. The assessment is due to expire next year and Council's Aug. 23 meeting included the first step in extending the fees.

Extending and increasing the amount of the Santa Monica Tourism Marketing District is estimated to average approximately $4.45 million annually during its 9.5-year operation.

The fees are paid by hotels and motels citywide and depend on daily average room rates. About 70 percent of the city's lodging businesses petitioned to have the District extended with the majority of opposition coming from businesses that offer lower-cost accommodation.

Daniel Gregory, operator of the Ocean Lodge, said the objections were twofold: the length of the assessment was too long and the structure of the increase was disproportionately impactful on less expensive hotels. As proposed, the new assessment would synch with the SMTT budget year and last for 9.5 years. Hotels with average daily rates of $100-200 would pay a fee of $3.25 per night, hotels charging $200-300 would pay $4.25 per night and more expensive hotels would pay $5.25 per night. Assessments would be subject to an annual increase of no more than 25 cents per year.

Gregory said if you convert the fees to a percentage, the most affordable hotels would be charging guests a fee of 3 percent on their bill while the most expensive would be charging less than 1 percent.

"Guests who can afford it the least, pay the most," he said.

Other affordable lodging operators expressed similar concerns and said the fees were particularly burdensome as they are

Pacific Park to host Bay Foundation fundraiser

On Thursday, Sept. 22, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m., The Bay Foundation will host its 2nd-annual Coastal Connections fundraiser at a customized venue in Pacific Park on the Santa Monica Pier. The family-friendly event will celebrate everyone's connections with the coast, along with TBF's recent accomplishments and upcoming projects. This event will feature a buffet and bar, entertainment, passes for all the rides and games, and more. Tickets are on sale now; visit www.santamonicabay.org.

TBF is honoring filmmaker and environmentalist Leslie Iwerks; Beth Ryan, a longtime volunteer for TBF and Disney VoluntEARS; and Terranea Resort.

"We are thrilled to be at Pacific Park this year, celebrating how all ages enjoy and value our beaches, which are visited by 72 million people a year," says Tom Ford, TBF Executive Director. "We at TBF, along with our partners, work to ensure the health, resilience and sustainability of the Bay through many projects that clean up waterways, create green spaces in urban areas, and restore natural habitats on land and under water.

"Our honorees have the TBF ethic, as witnessed through their art, labor and conservation. I admire their commitment to the Bay, the environment and future generations. I'm proud to be honoring them as they are admirable and deserving of our appreciation!"

Iwerks, a longtime Santa Monica resident and coastal native, is the Academy Award-nominated director of the documentary "Recycled Life" chronicling the thousands of people living inside the largest landfill in Central America, the Guatemala City garbage dump. Among her repertoire of award winning films are those that expose the devastating impacts of the Alberta Tar Sands on humans and the environment ("Downstream," "Dirty Oil") as well as "Pipe Dreams" which investigates the toxic impact the Keystone XL Pipeline has on America's largest freshwater Aquifer. Her films have raised millions of dollars for charity, have screened on Capitol Hill, and have become part of the curriculum in classrooms across Canada and the United States.

Ryan, a Los Angeles transplant since 1991, has always been drawn to volunteering. In 1999, the environment caught her attention and she has worked ever since on restoration projects and beach cleanups with many groups, joining the Disney VoluntEARS Leadership Council in 2010. She has been an inspirational and dedicated volunteer on TBF's Culver City Rain Garden and at Malibu Lagoon, bringing many VoluntEARS with her.

Located on the Palos Verdes Peninsula, Terranea Resort overlooks the ocean and benefits from TBF's kelp restoration project. Appreciating its rich terrain, the resort encourages guests to discover and explore the scenic coastal trails, secluded beach coves and ocean environment using its Adventure Concierge services. The resort was purposefully constructed with ecological initiatives to reduce pollution to the ocean and restore the coastal bluffs. As a result the ocean is cleaner and the bluffs now support rare and endangered species while providing the amenities of a world-class resort.

"As a filmmaker it's been a personal mission to expose and fight for healthy and sustainable water conditions around the world, be it lakes, rivers, aquifers, and oceans," shares Iwerks. "It's an honor to be recognized by such an important organization such as The Bay Foundation whose entire existence has been to protect our own beautiful Santa Monica Bay and California coastline."

The Honorary Host Committee reflects a number of elected officials who have shown commitment to the environment, working to ensure clean water and a healthy region for the future. The Honorary Host Committee includes U.S. Congressman Ted W. Lieu, State Senator Ben Allen, Assemblywoman Autumn R. Burke, Assemblymember Richard Bloom, Supervisor Sheila Kuehl, City of Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti, City of Santa Monica Mayor Tony Vazquez, and City of Los Angeles Councilmember Mike Bonin.

Key sponsors include Terranea Resort and Pacific Park. For sponsorship opportunities, contact jdubrow@santamonicabay.org. For more information and to reserve tickets, visit www.santamonicabay.org.

Blink Inc., a technology-driven photo shoot experience that captures and delivers professional digital photography in real time, announced the formation of an alliance with Macerich, one of the nation's leading owners, operators and developers of retail properties in top markets. The two companies will work together to open new Blink Inc. photo studios at select Macerich properties. The first new store will launch at Santa Monica Place during the 2016 holiday season with more to follow in 2017.

"We are thrilled to partner with a like-minded company like Macerich to help support our continued expansion plans to bring Blink Inc. into new retail markets," said Tristan Davison, Founder of Blink Inc. "They are a smart, forward-thinking company with unique properties looking for what's new and experimental in retail. We offer them something like nothing else in the market currently with our true omni-channel experience that combines brick and mortar photo studios with bleeding-edge technology. It's a great fit."

"Blink Inc exemplifies the type of experiential and tech-driven retail our company believes in," said Eric Salo, Executive Vice President and Chief Strategy Officer at Macerich. "In fact, Blink Inc. and other digitally native retail concepts see the attributes critical to their success across Macerich's portfolio. This class of retailer is delivering elevated experiences for our shoppers and becoming an increasing part of our mix."

Blink Inc.'s mission is to bring beautiful photography to the masses. After recently closing on a $3.6-million Series A round of funding, Blink Inc. now has stores in Corte Madera, San Jose, Newport Beach, and Canoga Park (opening this fall). The relationship with Macerich will allow Blink Inc. to continue to open more locations throughout the Western United States in 2017.

Blink Inc. is an experiential photography studio that inspires creativity, self-expression and personal style. Its proprietary technology makes it easy for consumers to book shoots and buy images online via their computer or mobile device at www.blinkinc.com. A Blink Inc. experience consists of a 10-minute (or longer) shoot with a professional photographer.

The result of each shoot is a collection of hundreds of photographs that consumers and businesses can view, buy and share instantly via Blink Inc.'s website. Shoots start at $25. Images can be purchased a la carte for $10 each or all at once with "Buy All" packages. Walk-ins are welcome, with reservations encouraged.

Educator Spotlight

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

Marae Cruce

SANTA MONICA HIGH SCHOOL

The Educator Spotlight recognizes those who contribute to the education of local students. Educators were chosen by consulting with site PTA, student government organizations and staff. Educators were chosen for their reputations with students, staff, parents and the community.

CRUCE

Marae Cruce just began her thirteenth year teaching, and her tenth at Santa Monica High School. She went into education to spread her love of mathematics. At Samohi she has taught various levels of math: Algebra I, Geometry, and Algebra II, as well as served as the department chair for the last five years.

Cruce has multiple reasons to be excited about this new school year — "about 150 of them actually," she says. "I am always excited to meet my new students!" She is also excited to be a part of a collaborative geometry team. This will be the second year she's worked with her collaborative partner and she believes they "will be able to do great things in our classroom." She also plans to incorporate more writing into her classes. "It is great when can students can solve a problem, but their understanding goes much deeper when they are able to explain or defend their answer," she says.

Outside of school, Cruce loves to travel, exploring and learning about other cultures. She enjoys talking with students about their current and/or future travel plans. "The world is a big place meant to be explored," she says.

CRUCE SPEAKS

One of the best parts of working at Santa Monica High School is the large, talented, inspirational staff. I love learning from and with my colleagues and I am regularly inspired by my colleagues and students. Working with the talented group of educators at Santa Monica High School, inspires me to be better and constantly reflect on my teaching practices. Through conversations and professional development alongside them, I have evolved into the teacher I am today. Topics I am passionate and active about include equity in access to classes and resources, as well as the power of a Professional Learning Community. I am involved in various committees and teams, working to make Santa Monica High School a high functioning Professional Learning Community with a focus on student learning.

I find myself inspired by my students. Listening to their stories of struggles and successes inspires me to thrive to be my best for their sake.

So often phrases such as "I cannot do math" or "I hate math" can be heard muttered from people of all ages. I want to help young adults change this opinion and culture. I want them to see the beauty of mathematics and help them reach their potential. My hope for each of my students is for them to become confident thinkers and problem solvers. I believe the most important thing they need to learn from my math classes is how to reason and problem solve so they are prepared to take on and solve the situations they encounter in their futures.

Rather than having students just memorize steps and blindly follow them, the emphasis has rotated to students relating concepts, understanding why formulas exist, and various ways to approach problems. In line with these standards, I do not give my students steps to follow and have them practice going through the motions. Instead, my students spend more time investigating and explaining why formulas or theorems work. I guide them through the process of creating their own plan to solve various problems. I require them to compare methods and choose the best approach to solving a problem. My students do a lot of noticing and wondering about diagrams, situations, equations, etc. Through this questioning process, I have found that students develop more links between concepts, stronger problem solving skills, and start thinking like a mathematician. My overall goal is for students to feel what productive struggle is and come out of the experience through perseverance. I want them to build self-confidence in their abilities so they will feel equipped to rise to these challenges.

My favorite part of teaching is watching students gain confidence in themselves as they grow and learn throughout the year(s). I love hearing where they go and what they are able to accomplish. I feel appreciated when former students stop by to talk or share news after they have moved on.

Clearing the air on SMO

Editor:

We are all pleased with the progress being made on gaining local control of the land we own at the airport.

I think it's worth noting, though, as I did earlier this week in a letter to the newspaper, that this progress came about because of the united work of all seven councilmembers.

Grossly inaccurate materials have been circulated in some Santa Monica neighborhoods alleging that the Council was split on this, and even that one Councilmember in particular was "for sale." The proof to the contrary is in the vote, folks: It was unanimous on a motion by Ted Winterer to close the airport, remove the commercial FBOs (eliminating leaded fuel), apply to close the Western Parcel to aviation, begin active planning for our "great park," etc.

I suspect the egos involved are too invested for apologies to be forthcoming, although they're certainly due. Going forward, I hope the evidence is clear that the Santa Monica City Council, all of it, is committed to the kind of progress we saw Tuesday night.

Councilmember Kevin McKeown

It's a path embodied by Vazquez, who has used his platform to encourage Berkeley leaders to remove requests for criminal history from job applications. Vazquez will receive the Youth Leaders and Scholars Award from the PYFC.

Francisco Juarez will receive the Private Joe Gandara Award, which is named for a Medal of Honor recipient who was born in Santa Monica. Juarez, a longtime local resident and a Vietnam War veteran, has supported youths throughout his life. The community activist is a former chair of the PYFC.

"He's very involved in supporting our veterans, and we appreciate his lifelong commitment to public service," de la Torre said.

The Progressive Champion Award will go to UndocuMedia, a team of immigrant rights advocates. The group, de la Torre said, was founded by undocumented immigrants and provides "a platform for immigrants in our country to express themselves and build community."

Santa Monica-based automotive sales company TrueCar will be honored with the Digital Dream Award. TrueCar has reached out to area nonprofits and is helping to upgrade the PYFC facilities through community service work.

"They embody the concept of social responsibility," de la Torre said.

already struggling to absorb the impact of an increased minimum wage.

"We are an affordable housing motel since 1972 and we want to keep it that way," said Chris Mets of the Seashore Motel. "It is hard on us to keep our motel going to pay our employees. We haven't even raised are own rates, we're raising the rates for other people to make money off us and that's very very tough on us."

Staff, hotel representatives and SMTT were all willing to continue negotiation on a rate increase that worked for all businesses. The action Tuesday night verified that local hotels had agreed to increase the assessment but it did not set the amount of that assessment.

Gregory said ongoing discussions could adjust the threshold for paying an assessment in a way that would exempt more low-cost businesses and praised SMTT for their willingness to adjust the formula.

"We are very pleased and impressed with our TMD, with our CVB, our SMTT that does a great job," said Gregory. "We need to find a way to unify and bring everybody in in a fair and equitable way."

Councilwoman Gleam Davis said adjusting the final proposal to ease the burden on low-cost options is part of council's ongoing responsibility to maintain an affordable city.

"We all are aware that Santa Monica is very expensive and out of reach for many people and I think having affordable lodging alternatives is key to maintaining the diversity and for the lack of a better term, the kind of community that we as Santa Monica want to be," she said. "So I just want to emphasis that this is one of those situations where we put these small businesses under a lot of stress with the living wage and things like that and as I said when we did that, looking for alterative ways to help them out and this is one of the key ways we can do it."

"I want to have the ability to control the end of life and protect my child from watching me be tortured to death," she said. "It just gave me an immeasurable sense of peace."

California is one of five states in which terminally ill people can end their lives. Oregon was the first to provide the option in 1997.

The California law is being challenged by the Life Legal Defense Foundation, American Academy of Medical Ethics and several physicians.

Opponents of the law say hastening death is morally wrong, puts all kinds of patients at risk for coerced death by loved ones, and could become a way out for people who are uninsured or fearful of high medical bills.

Attorney Stephen Larson, who represents the plaintiffs, said his clients want the law declared unconstitutional. Determining when someone has six months or less to live is arbitrary and opens the door for abuse, and doctors are not held accountable after they prescribe the life-ending drugs, he said.

"There are plenty of cases of elderly people suffering and people just want them gone," Larson said. "This makes it too easy."

The state attorney general's office countered that medical professionals can refuse to prescribe and dispense the drugs. The law also specifies that the terminally ill person must be able to self-administer the drugs.

Both sides are due back in court Dec. 5.

Police seek man who posed as Uber driver, attacked woman

BY JEFF MARTIN
Associated Press

ATLANTA Atlanta police investigating a woman's report that she was sexually assaulted by an Uber driver say they now believe the suspect posed as a driver to lure her into his car, the most recent of several attacks by phony Uber drivers around the nation.

Within the past 12 months, police in Chicago, Washington, D.C., and Orlando, Florida, have issued alerts to warn residents about people pretending to be Uber drivers and preying on unsuspecting customers.

The 20-year-old woman told officers she was leaving the Park Bench Pub on Atlanta's north side about 2:30 a.m. Aug. 13 when she contacted Uber to get a ride home, police said.

The woman told officers that instead of taking her home, the driver took her to Chastain Park, about 2 miles away, and assaulted her. Police say the driver eventually pushed her out of the car after she fought back.

Atlanta police Sgt. Warren Pickard told reporters at a news conference Thursday that some Uber drivers wait outside bars anticipating that people will need rides, much like taxis do.

"He just generally picked up on that methodology and it just so happened that she got into the car," Pickard said.

Similar cases have been reported in several cities, including Los Angeles, where a man in April was arrested and accused of luring a woman into his SUV, and then raping her and choking her until she became unconscious.

The woman fought back and was choked unconscious at least three times before she managed to scream loud enough to alert neighbors, Los Angeles Police Chief Charlie Beck said.

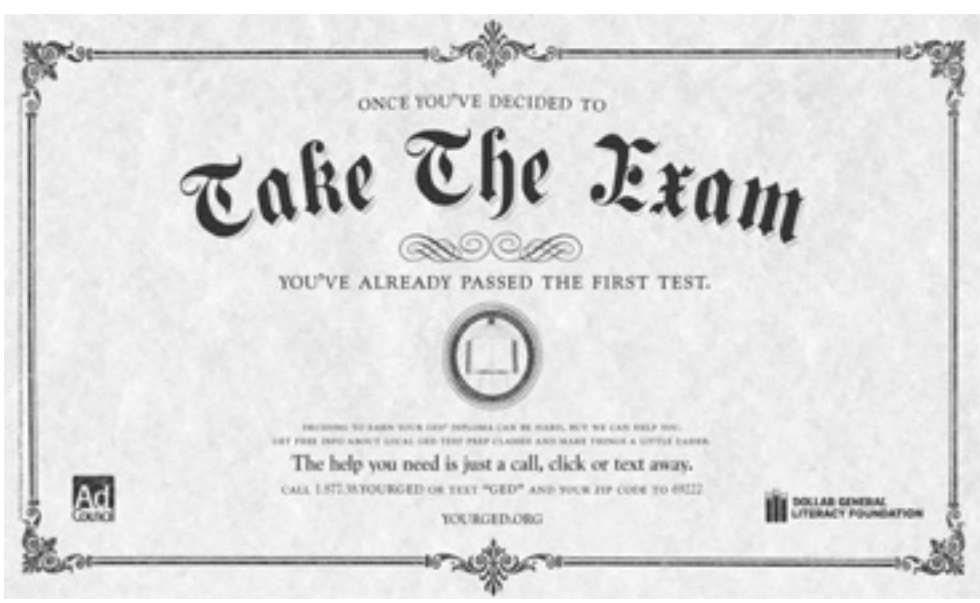

In Washington, D.C., police warned residents to be on guard after a woman on Oct. 10 entered a silver sedan, "which she mistook as an Uber car," the Metropolitan Police Department's alert states. The driver had a knife, and sexually assaulted her, police said in the statement.

Within the past week, University of Florida police warned students that a man in a Chevy Malibu with Uber stickers on the car has been soliciting rides around campus. The driver, who is not affiliated with Uber, "is specifically targeting female students," police said in a statement on Sunday, warning students to be vigilant about their safety. University police said they knew of no criminal activity, but asked that anyone with information about the driver contact them.

Uber advises that customers take several steps to ensure that their driver is an actual Uber driver, a company spokeswoman said in a Friday statement to The Associated Press.

Riders are advised to only ride with drivers they request through the Uber app, not by flagging down cars. Before the trip begins, customers also should double check the vehicle's license plate, the driver's name and photo to make sure they match the information they receive through the app when requesting a ride, the statement said.

Customers may also share details during the trip with family and friends, such as their estimated time of arrival and specific route, Uber said in the statement.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON AUG. 18 AT APPROXIMATELY 4:25 P.M.

Santa Monica police officers responded to a call of a shoplifter trying to leave the Vons market at 1311 Wilshire Blvd., with various items. The employees knew the suspect because he has stolen numerous items in the past month. When a supervisor saw the suspect enter the store, she posted an employee at each exit door to watch for him. When the suspect realized he could not exit the store without detection, he locked himself in the restroom with items he had removed from the shelves. When officers arrived, the suspect had locked himself in the bathroom. The officers identified themselves and asked the suspect to exit the restroom. When the suspect exited, he did not have any merchandise on his person. When the market staff checked the garbage can in the restroom they found the empty bottles and wrappers from the food and drinks they had seen the suspect take off the shelves. The suspect had no money to pay for the items he had consumed. Gabriel Lewis, 33, was arrested for commercial burglary and transported to jail. Bail was set at $5,000.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

Play it low'key tonight, Aquarius

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Stay on top of a personal matter. Your intuitive ability will help you process a problem. Express your sensitivity when dealing with someone in your day-to-day routine. You have a way of letting others know where you are coming from. Tonight: Stay close to home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Express your feelings, and be more responsive to others. Emphasize what is important. Make plans with a friend that will allow greater flexibility, and you are likely to create a memorable adventure. Tonight: Stay in touch with a key person, even if you are out and about.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You suddenly might become aware of the costs of your weekend plans. You could be planning to host an extended afternoon barbecue or some other type of event. Whatever goes on, you'll create goodwill wherever you go. Tonight: Let the good vibes flow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You might be more in sync with someone than you realize. Share some of this person's thoughts with your friends. Your translation seems to have meaning to others. Detach and imagine what it might be like to walk in someone else's shoes. Tonight: All smiles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Be willing to lie low and let others take the lead. Note that it won't be as easy for them to bring people together as it is for you. Practice makes perfect. Seize the moment to spend special time with a loved one or a dear friend. Tonight: Be unavailable for a change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Make a point of bringing loved ones together. What occurs could be a spontaneous and memorable party. A partner's imagination feeds the moment, the activity and the conversation. Be optimistic and share your positive attitude with others. Tonight: Wherever the action is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your intuition will help you understand what is ailing someone who is close to you. Opportunities come forward because of your awareness. You might opt to spend special time with one person instead. The choice is yours. Tonight: Touch base with an older friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Reach out to a loved one at a distance. You have not had time to visit with this person, or even chat on the phone, as much as you would like. Make plans to get together soon. Make special time for a child who means the world to you. Tonight: Bask in the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You seem to have little choice but to relate to a key loved one. This person knows how to get your attention. A conversation could trigger your imagination and might lead to a spontaneous get-together! Invite friends over. Tonight: Don't forget about a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Understand what others want from you. You might enjoy how a loved one tries to organize a get-together in an attempt to imitate you. Rather than offer suggestions, just enjoy the moment. News from a distance could be music to your ears. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Stay in touch with friends. You might want to check out the price of a special item you have been thinking about buying. A loved one could be excessive in his or her willingness to spend money. Understand that you can control only yourself. Tonight: Play it low-key.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Romance is close to the surface, whether you're with your sweetie or a new friend. You nearly twinkle in delight as you experience these feelings, especially if you are in a long-term bond. Let go of a need to be so disciplined. Make the most of the moment. Tonight: All smiles.

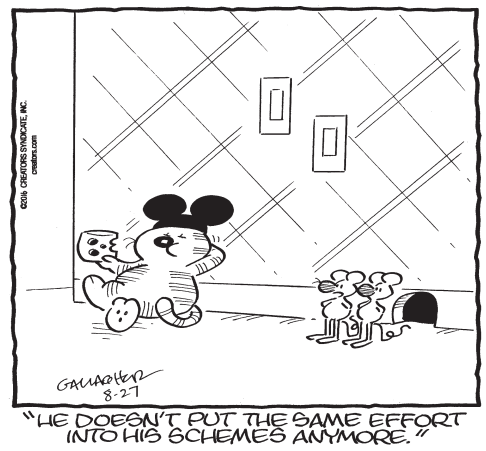

Weekend Edition, August 27-28, 2016

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you will be more expressive than you have been in the past. Others seem to flock toward you as a result. If you are single, this sensitive side of your personality gets you far. You might want to date several different types of people. You will learn a lot about yourself in the process. If you are attached, you need to make your alliance to your significant other abundantly clear. Your sweetie will appreciate having clear boundaries, and the trust and caring between you will grow as a result. CANCER loves to hang out with you.
