Samohi wind ensemble tapped for special concert

STUDENTS TO PLAY AT STATE MUSIC CONFERENCE IN SAN JOSE

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

SAMOHI The Santa Monica High wind ensemble seized the opportunity of a lifetime when it was chosen to play at Carnegie Hall this past April as part of an international music festival.

And that performance is still resonating.

The group was recently chosen to give a concert in February in San Jose during the California All-State Music Education Conference, and it's thanks in part to a live recording of the New York show that Samohi band director Kevin McKeown entered for consideration.

"I submitted it and thought, 'What if?'" said McKeown, who shares a name with Santa Monica's mayor. "I had no expectations. Now I've gone from excitement for our kids to, 'Oh my god, we have a lot of work ahead of us.' But that's what we do. Whether it's Carnegie Hall or Chicago Symphony Center, we have to put our program on the map."

McKeown said he was humbled by the selection of Samohi's wind ensemble, which won the prestigious San Jose gig through a competitive application process administered by the California Music Educators Association.

His students have been asked to demonstrate the potential of a high school music program for an audience of music teachers from around the state, who will listen to them play music from Leonard Bernstein's "Mass" and Mason Bates' "Mothership."

"[The educators] want to see what it sounds like when you have a really fun ensemble," McKeown said. "What's capable? What's possible? We have that responsibility to show other communities and other teachers in the state of California what we have in Santa Monica and why it needs to be supported in the community. It's pretty awesome."

The Samohi musicians will have the help of McKeown and several guest conductors, including Thomas Lee, Travis Cross and Michael Stone. Lee was a longtime faculty member in UCLA's music department, Cross has served as a professor and vice chair in the same department and Stone is currently the president of the state music educators association.

McKeown, who graduated from Samohi in 1992, developed his music skills under Stone when the latter was a student teacher at the local high school.

When McKeown took students to Carnegie Hall last spring, they played music from "Aurora Awakes" by John Mackey and "O Magnum Mysterium" as well as the Arthur

Greywater keeps lawn green

BY NICHOLAS SALAZAR
Daily Press Intern

CITYWIDE As lawns citywide turn brown or are replaced with drought tolerant alternatives, Andy Lauer's plush green lawn stands out. The front yard has flourished despite being untouched by a hose or a sprinkler for over a decade. The secret behind its healthy appearance? The entire lawn is grown in sand.

This may surprise any passersby because the grass is indistinguishable from a traditional yard. Looking closely, a thin rubber liner separating the grass from the surrounding concrete can be seen. This liner is one of the only visible components of an underground greywater recycling system that supports all of Lauer's landscaping through a technique known as sand hydroponics. With proponents claiming it uses 75 percent less water than conventional watering practices, this systems represents the future of water conservation and redemption for lawn-lovers in the face of a worsening drought.

The impetus for this innovative system came from Lauer's wife Melisa who wanted a big backyard for their young children. At the time, their own yard was full of dirt and rocks, so Lauer began to look for help to salvage his yard and avoid moving. He discovered grants available in Santa Monica for those willing to employ stringent water saving techniques. Lauer hired Kevin Poffenbarger, an engineer at EPD Consultants/Construction, who proposed a system that used recycled water. This proposal was initially met with opposition from city and county officials due to safety concerns.

"In the 70s and 80s people were recycling their water in unsafe ways," said Lauer, who remembered that, "there was quite a bit of opposition based only on the city codes." However, the officials "weren't opposed to it as an idea," recalled Lauer, whose plan finally gained approval at a meeting between Santa Monica City, Los Angeles City, and LA County officials.

Lauer worked over the next two years to install the greywater system, which recycled water from showers, sinks and the laundry machine. "Everything except toilet and kitchen sinks is diverted to a holding tank, and when the garden is ready for water it signals the holding tank to send water down," explained Lauer, who expanded the system soon after.

"It was working so well that ... three years later I installed the same system in the front yard," Lauer said. "It turned out there was so much good usable greywater being sent right back to the sewer system." With the installation complete, Lauer's home became the site of the first legally permitted greywater system in Santa Monica.

This system was developed by Tomas Sapilla and his father Jonas Sapilla, who install sand hydroponics on residential and commercial properties through their company ECS. Sand hydroponic systems reduce significant amounts of water by combining innovative infrastructure with the ingenious natural properties of sand, plants and gravity. Water from rainwater spouts, greywater or other sources is mixed with nutrients and piped into a series of underground holding plastic troughs that are placed upside down. The sides of the troughs are lined with holes to allow McKeown said he submitted the live recording "on a whim," and that he was honored by the selection of Samohi students to the state conference. It's likely that many of the students will try out for the various all-state honor music groups during their time in San Jose.

The ensemble plans to raise money for the February trip by holding a local concert a few days before heading north.

"This has so much importance, so much value," McKeown said. "They're going up there for one reason and one reason only: to share a great performance with people who are there to be inspired and see how hard work and support of a music program that starts in elementary school, what that does."

Acting like schoolyard bullies

NOTHING ILLUSTRATES THE DISCONNECT between City Hall and Santa Monica residents like the agenda for city council's retreat, held Sunday, August 23 at the Ken Edwards Center.

The only discussion item was staff's recommendation that council establish three to five priority strategic goals for the city with measurable three to five year outcomes. The goal: "Identify game changing priorities that will make a difference in community safety, wellbeing, prosperity, quality of life and sustainability."

What are City Hall's top priorities?

1. Providing world-class customer service to the community.
2. Establishing a new model for mobility.
3. Addressing homelessness.
4. Maintaining an inclusive and diverse community.
5. Securing local control of the City land occupied by the Santa Monica Airport.
6. Achieving water, energy and climate change sustainability goals.
7. Safeguard Bergamot and the Civic Auditorium assets as cultural hubs.
8. Providing affordable community-wide gigabit speed fiber and Wi-Fi connectivity.
9. Strengthening downtown as a community hometown, with local-serving and cultural amenities.
10. Expanding and improving the resilience of community infrastructure.
11. Taking community civic engagement to the next level.
12. Building on the partnership with SMMUSD and SMC to emphasize Santa Monica as "a learning community" from Cradle to Career and beyond.

The real issue with the city's goals is that they're not the same goals desired by many residents.

As a follow up to its Sunday retreat, council discussed affordable housing and its funding at its regular Tuesday meeting, Aug. 25.

Tricia Crane, chair of the Northeast Neighbors (NN) neighborhood group told the dais that a neighborhood survey conducted in March 2015 revealed different priorities identified by some 400 neighbors who responded to a city-sponsored mailer. They named five concerns: overdevelopment, traffic, parking, water and crime.

Most of the locals I run into support NN's priorities to a much greater degree than City Hall's. While I've heard complaints about government not doing enough about exorbitant rents, I've never, ever had someone say, "We need more affordable housing so low-income people from outside the city can move here."

But, what was really appalling about Tuesday's council meeting was the badgering of Crane by councilpersons Tony Vazquez, Sue Himmelrich, and even Mayor Kevin McKeown. Vazquez stated the city hadn't grown over the last forty years. Vazquez was wrong.

US Census Bureau figures show our estimated 2014 population at 92,987; 86,643 ten years ago; 84,084 in 2000; but 88,314 in 1980. Since 2000, our population has grown a steady and orderly 10 percent.

After Vazquez, Himmelrich, challenged Crane about her statement that "affordable housing" wasn't really a major resident priority.

This council doesn't seem to understand that most of the housing advocates they usually hear from are housing zealots, and people with a stake in the affordable housing industry who show up "en masse" at meetings to push their social agenda. Crane told the dais that many residents feel intimidated and fear being called elitists, racists and "against poor people" by fanatical housing supporters.

Sympathetic council members hear only one side of this issue, because they constantly surround themselves with sycophants who share their liberal political agenda. No wonder they're so delusional on the topic. Yet, Vazquez, Himmelrich and McKeown stood by their guns by implying that NN was anti-affordable housing.

Most councilmembers see those questioning City Hall's deeply flawed housing policy (which includes no low-income ownership provisions and doesn't protect existing tenants from speculators who are scooping up older rental properties and buying or forcing long term renters out before renovating and tripling rents) as the enemy. The middle class has also been eliminated as a result of failed policies that only benefit the wealthy and the poor and don't promote diversity. I wonder is this what "Taking community civic engagement to the next level" is all about?

A staff report (Item 4A) submitted by Housing and Economic Development Director Andy Agle was eye-opening on a number of issues.

The City currently has 4,436 deed restricted residencies. A little over 1,000 units have been acquired and rehabilitated by the city, mostly through Community Corporation of Santa Monica (CCSM).

Nearly 1,000 units are inclusionary units, meaning they were built into mixed use/market rate projects by private developers. They're a "community benefit," that enables developers to build bigger, higher and denser projects.

1,845 units are a result of new construction, with its funding subsidized by the City, primarily through CCSM. Another 529 units have been federally funded through Housing and Urban Development (HUD) without City money. HUD assigns tenants from its own lists, which includes political refugees.

Agle revealed that, "the City has exceeded the goals of (1990) Proposition R, with 40 percent of all new housing built over the past 20 years being deed-restricted for occupancy by low- and moderate-income households." Prop R called for "30 percent of all new multifamily housing be affordable to low- and moderate-income households."

A number of remedies for continued funding of low income housing to replace monies lost when the State of California dissolved redevelopment agencies a few years ago were presented. Among Agle's suggestions: cutting city services and diverting general fund monies and/or seeking grants and housing programs from state, county and Federal funding sources.

He suggested increasing the hotel tax, floating general obligation bonds, raising the current sales tax, floating a $344 parcel tax or raising the 10 percent utility users tax (on phone service, cable, gas and electricity.) Increasing the real property transfer tax (a similar measure was defeated in last year's election) and implementing a new parking tax were also mentioned.

Chances are one of these funding opportunities will appear on the ballot come next election. Council should expect a hornet's nest of opposition.

Uber and Lyft LAX Bound: "Only In America"

Editor:

Only in America land of the almighty dollar could you witness what has occurred this past week in Los Angeles. Last Wednesday The District Attorneys of Los Angeles and San Francisco updated their lawsuit against Uber for having useless background checks and for giving the public a false sense of security when in their cars. They say they can prove Uber has had murderers, registered sex offenders, identity thieves and drivers with recent DUI's working. Less than a week later the Los Angeles City Council approves LAX pickups for these people? I was shocked until I learned that Joshua Perttula a member of Mayor Garcetti's transition team is a "paid lobbyist" for Lyft and that Mr. Garcetti's legal counsel is married to an attorney that represents Lyft. Don King was right, "Only In America".

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Malibu Playhouse

The Malibu Playhouse breaks new ground in the LA 99-seat and under theater scene

Malibu Playhouse will be hosting a series of Guest Artistic Directors to bring a variety of expertise and fresh artistic visions. Each Guest Artistic Director will oversee a six-month period of programming. Jeremy Skidmore, a world-renowned theater director and formerly Artistic Director of Theater Alliance in Washington, D.C. will blaze the trail as inaugural Guest Artistic Director. His programming will launch on Thanksgiving Day weekend and go through June 2016. Additional events will be listed on the Malibu Playhouse website and Facebook page throughout the season.

"The major drive behind the change in model is to attract artistic talent among those working in a variety of industries who may not be able to commit to yearlong or full-time employment," said Jeremy Skidmore, the company's first choice to begin this new venture. "I just moved here from the East Coast where I have been producing and directing theater for more than 16 years. The reason for my move was to diversify the kind of work I am doing across theater, film, television and education. So this opportunity could not be more perfect or well timed."

"We're delighted to have Jeremy at the helm for the new direction the Malibu Playhouse is taking. This is a very exciting time for us as there are many great things coming this next year!" Andi Howard-Ringe, chairperson of the board of directors, Malibu Playhouse.

The Playhouse 2015-2016 season, under Jeremy's direction, will include three limited-run critically acclaimed productions: "Wonderful Life!" (An instant holiday classic one-man show based on the film "It's A Wonderful Life"), "Mary's Wedding," and "Pavillion." Other projects include several one-night benefits, a multidisciplinary new work mini-festival, collaborations with area universities, and Members Only promotional events (i.e. private dinners with Jeremy and casts, private cocktail parties and meet and greets.). There will also be a film screening of "It's a Wonderful Life," an actual wedding to precede the "Mary's Wedding" show and a high school reunion party unlike any other (since you never know which of Malibu's celebrity local heroes will show up) to get audiences in the right frame of mind for "Pavillion." For information about how to become a member, please go to: www.malibuplayhouse.org or contact: info@malibuplayhouse.org.

Before Skidmore's programming begins on Thanksgiving weekend, Malibu Playhouse will feature a series of one-night events including:

- "The Guys": A Reading Tribute to Firefighters, Saturday, Sept. 12 at 8 p.m.

Written by Anne Nelson, starring Ray Abruzzo (SOPRANOS and TRANSPARENT) and Wendie Malick (HOT IN CLEVELAND), directed by Dan Lauria. An editor and a Fire Chief come together in the aftermath of the 9/11 tragedy to write the eulogies for eight of the men lost in the rescue. A benefit for the Playhouse in which a portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Los Angeles County Fire Department.

- October Open House

"Welcome Jeremy to the Playhouse" event. Details will be available on the Malibu Playhouse website.

-"Rocky Horror Picture Show" Costume Party and Screening Saturday, Oct. 31 at 9 p.m.

Will include a gift bag of throw-able objects.

Forget the topic sentence! A college essay is meant to be personal - something that reveals a little bit about who you are as a person that the colleges would otherwise never know. It's a creative story about you. In this workshop, Diana Hanson of College Mentors shares various strategies for writing the main essays (Common App and UC) as well as the "why this school" and "diversity" supplements. For grades 11-12 and parents. No registration required.

The City of Santa Monica invites you to attend a presentation

Proposed Minimum Wage Ordinance for Santa Monica

Ken Jacobs, Chair of the Center for Labor Research and Education at the University of California at Berkeley will lead a discussion and Q&A session.

Date: Tuesday, September 8th, 10:30 am – 12:30 pm

Location: Santa Monica Main Library, 601 Santa Monica Blvd., Multi-Purpose Room (2nd floor)

The purpose of the meeting is to gather input and feedback from local nonprofit organizations about a potential Santa Monica minimum wage ordinance, modeled after that of the City of Los Angeles. Mr. Jacobs provided analysis for the Los Angeles ordinance, and will facilitate the discussion and answer questions. Everyone in the local nonprofit community is welcome and encouraged to attend. Your participation is important.

If you have any questions about this meeting, please contact Stephanie Lazicki at (310) 458-2201 ext. 2062.

the water to exit. Jonas' innovation was covering the holes with a small plastic awning and using a combination of gravel and sand so that water could access the sand without clogging the holes.

The water seeps out into a layer of gravel, and then meets 13-15 inches of sand (on top of which is a layer of soil). The water is then pulled up through the sand to meet the roots of the plants above through a process called capillary action. "Much like water can travel upwards when absorbed by a paper towel, sand has the ability to draw water upwards and spread laterally," explained Jonas, "the constant and even movement and distribution of water and nutrients throughout the sand is ... termed as sand hydroponics."

According to Jonas, a 60-80 percent water savings means that every square foot of this system saves 50 gallons a year over conventional watering. Such a system is capable of sustaining any plants, said Jonas in a statement; because it provides everything a plant needs, from high oxygen content in the root zone to excellent drainage. Plants are able to draw as much water as they need, without any water being absorbed to the soil and lost. Sand is also capable of draining very quickly so the system absorbs rainwater efficiently and is capable of capturing up to 0.62 gallons per square foot for every one inch of rainfall.

Lauer's system can legally use greywater because the recycled water is stored sub-surface, with no possibility for human contact. A 45-millimeter thick rubber liner covers the bottom of the entire system, preventing water loss to the ground below the system.

Unfortunately, these systems have high startup costs. Lauer spent about $40,000 for his backyard system, an amount that covered the primary infrastructure of the system, such as the holding tank, and the necessary changes to his home's plumbing. Initial expenses for these systems vary from installation to installation, with the largest costs associated with preparing the area to hold sand and construct the initial infrastructure.

"For the homeowner considering their lawn or garden, the average cost below 10,000 square feet is $10-12 per square foot installed," said Tomas. Projects for fields or parks range from $6.00-$8.00 per square foot. However, the system is much easier to expand.

Lauer's front yard cost only a third of what the backyard cost because the exterior components of the system were already in place. "The infrastructure was already laid out, and all the pipes had been diverted, "said Lauer. "I just had to tap into the holding tank."

In addition, low maintenance costs help alleviate initial costs over time. According to Jonas, the underground system is non-pressurized and has no moving parts, meaning less resources needed to maintain it. With few mechanical parts the system needs less downtime for repairs. The system is also permanent; once installed, "it will not decompose or degrade and all parts are totally reusable if relocated to another property," Jonas said.

With high initial costs, this water recycling system is a long-term investment. "I know I've saved almost that in water since I've set it up," said Lauer, whose system reduced not only his overall water usage, but the amount of sewage leaving his property. Lauer said he noticed the water savings immediately, but the city was slower to act.

"One part of the bill is the water that comes in, the intake, and another part of the bill is sewage, what goes back out, and [the City] just assumes what goes in is coming out," said Lauer.

However, his new system was reusing a significant portion of his water. The city installed a measuring device on the outtake at his home, found out he was indeed using about 60 percent of the water, and backdated his water bill to the lower rate. "My water bill was taken down about 60%," said Lauer.

Innovative water conservation techniques are salient at a time when business owners and homeowners are being asked, required or incentivized to cut down their water usage.

Many properties have turned to zeroscaping, replacing their lawns with drought tolerant plants, while others simply let their lawns go brown. According to Jonas, however, this practice hurts drought conditions instead of helping.

"Zeroscaping is an ill advised knee jerk reaction to water savings," said Jonas, who explained that removing lawns increases air temperature, the need for air conditioning and electrical consumption. "The production of electricity is directly related to water use which ... often exceeds water use that would have been used in landscaping," Jonas said.

When Lauer began, his goal was simple. "I wish that I could say that I set out to save water, I'm really not all that heroic," said Lauer. "I just thought I could save a few bucks by recycling water." In the current climate of water conservation, however, Lauer feels great about his lawn and champions his practices like a proud parent. "It's a win in so many ways - it's beautiful, it works, it's good for the environment," he added. "Does it make me feel good? Absolutely. I hear my kids bragging about it."

For over a decade, Lauer's family has grown up with their futuristic lawn. But while they may be used to it, the community is still playing catch up. "People come by and say 'Beautiful garden, but you're really not supposed to water'," Lauer laughed.

"And I say, 'Well, It's all recycled.' That's like telling me and my kids and my family not to shower."

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department.
These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON AUGUST 23 AT ABOUT 1:16 A.M.

An officer was driving down the Pier ramp when he was flagged down by someone reporting their car window had just been broken. The person told the officer he was driving his car out of the Pier parking lot and towards the Pier ramp. As he approached the stop sign, he observed a group of two men and two women standing by the sign. When he got closer, one of the men became upset, accused him of driving too fast, and punched the driver side window of his vehicle causing it to break. The suspect then fled when told he needed to pay for the damages. The officer later located the suspect who had injuries to his hand, walking back down the Pier ramp. Jeremy Robert Clare-Talbot, 23, of Los Angeles, had bail set at $500.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Effects of the drought on California redwoods

Dear Earthtalk:

Are the California redwoods in danger because of the drought?

Jesse Pollman
Seattle, WA

CALIFORNIA IS HOME TO TWO OF THE three redwood tree species: coast redwoods and giant sequoias. The coast redwood is the Earth's tallest tree, growing more than 360 feet tall, with a trunk that can extend to 24 feet wide. The "General Sherman" giant sequoia tree at Sequoia National Park in California's southern Sierra Nevada mountain range is the "undisputed King of the Forest," being not only the largest living tree in the world, but the largest living organism, by volume, on the planet. General Sherman is 2,100 years old, 2.7 million pounds, 275 feet tall and 100 feet wide at its trunk.

Redwood forests offer shelter to many animals, including mountain lions, American black bears, Roosevelt elks and mountain beavers. According to the National Park Service, approximately 280 species of birds have been recorded within the boundaries of redwood national and state parks. Just over 800 bird species occur in all of the United States, so that equates to approximately one third of the country's birds.

"Redwoods are an iconic key species," said Anthony Ambrose, a postdoctoral researcher with the Department of Integrative Biology at the University of California (UC), Berkeley. "They're the tallest, oldest, and largest trees in the world. Everybody around the world knows about them. People love them, even if they've never visited them. They're beautiful forests and beautiful trees."

For the past four years, California has been suffering a grueling drought. Agricultural economists at UC Davis recently calculated that the drought will cost the state $2.74 billion in 2015. Drought can reduce tree growth rates and may even lead to tree death. Coast redwoods receive up to 40 percent of their water supply from fog, which is created from warm, moist air rising from the cold surface waters of the Pacific. Giant sequoias grow in mountain habitats where an abundant winter snowpack recharges the groundwater they depend upon and use in the summer. However, during the past two winters, much of the giant sequoia range had little to no snowpack. As a result, groundwater levels have dropped, sometimes below the roots of immense giant sequoias that are greater than 1,000 years old, says Todd Dawson, a UC Berkeley Professor of Integrative Biology who's been studying redwood ecology and physiology for over 25 years.

For the coast redwood, the drought impacts are not as severe as they seem to be for the giant sequoia. Trees at the edges of the coast redwood range, including the southern end of the range in the Santa Lucia Mountains south of Big Sur, seem to be the most affected. Here, young trees have lost a lot of their leaves, and have not grown very much, if at all, Dawson said.

"Many trees are experiencing the highest levels of water stress we've ever measured. We've not seen much tree mortality, but many trees have thin crowns and do not look healthy," Dawson said. "Our biggest question is just how far can these trees be pushed? If the winter does not bring good rainfall and a normal snowpack throughout the state I am not sure how our state trees will do. We are likely to see some mortality as we are seeing in some of the pines and firs in California. But how bad this will be, only time will tell."

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Only China and Iran execute more prisoners, but Saudi Arabia also has a soft side -- for jihadists. Saudis who defy a ban on leaving the country to fight (usually against the common enemy, Syria's Bashar al-Assad) are, if they return, imprisoned at a maximum-security facility in Riyadh, but with liberal short "vacations" at "Family House," hotel-quality quarters with good food, playgrounds for children and other privileges (monitored through guest-satisfaction surveys). Returning jihadists also have access to education and psychologists and receive the equivalent of $530 a month with ATM privileges. The purpose is to persuade the warriors not to return to the battlefield once released, and officials estimate that the program is about 85 percent effective.

■ Impersonating a police officer in a traffic stop is not uncommon, but Logan Shaulis, 19, was apparently so judgment-impaired on May 30 that he set up his own elaborate "DUI checkpoint" on route 601 near Somerset, Pennsylvania, complete with road flares, demanding "license, registration and insurance" from driver after driver. The irony of the inebriated Shaulis judging motorists' sobriety was short-lived, as real troopers soon arrived and arrested him (on DUI, among other charges).

Picture a world of Art

by Giive staff

Last month, Giive called on artists to "capture The Arts." Our contest sought an iconic image to represent nonprofits that promote creative excellence, preserve cultural heritage and are accessible to everyone.

The winning entry from Jill Emmer was selected from more than 2,300 images submitted by 1,000 photographers. See her work on Instagram: @ShineOnYouCrayDiamond.

Giive: How would you describe your work?
Jill: Whimsical minimalism, with lots of color.

How does your image appeal to young volunteers?
It shows what you can do with an iPhone! I used apps to superimpose the birds and background. You don't have to travel to the most beautiful places to take a beautiful photo.

What inspires you?
My favorite pieces evoke emotion. I love how observing whimsy can make you feel.

Why should young people care about supporting the arts?
If you think there should be something more to life than what you see, perhaps something a little magical lurking around a corner, then you already believe in the arts! Art is timeless.

What would you say to readers?
Don't be afraid to do something different even if the people around you don't "get it." Someone out there will!

Support The Arts like Jill. Go to giive.org to find nonprofits in your community.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You might sense a serious tone coming from others. Realize that this energy is not directed at you, but it does serve as a warning not to push people too hard. A disconnect seems to exists between you and someone else. Share your feelings. Tonight: Stay mellow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ A flaky friend easily could throw your day into chaos. You will want to blame this person, but perhaps you also need to assume some responsibility for the commotion. When making plans, take into account this person's nature. Tonight: Snuggle in at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ A close loved one finally will take a step toward you. Be open to this person, as he or she often encourages and supports you in whatever you do. Honor the new possibilities that surround work or a new important person in your life. Tonight: Seek out a fun friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Your ability to clear up a problem emerges. Take a back seat, and allow someone else to feel as if he or she is in control for now. You know better, but you don't need to let this person know that. In a sense, you'll be helping his or her self-worth. Tonight: Share a dream.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You might be overly generous. Make sure you don't have expectations that aren't realistic. Detach from a difficult and/or awkward situation. You will beam in much more of what you want once you pull back some. Tonight: Consider a last-minute summer getaway.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ A relationship will test your self-discipline. You might be confused by a close friend or loved one who makes promises but often does not follow through. Listen to your inner voice, but also recognize that you generally accept this person's behavior. Tonight: Talks over dinner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You could be in a difficult position. You might have company or some obstacle that prevents you from being 100 percent present. Focus on letting go. Remain supportive of others. Tonight: Remain positive, and tackle some of what you need to get done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Observe, but be willing to get involved and help clear up a hassle. You might stumble into a situation where problem solving -- your strength -- is needed. Demonstrate that skill with sensitivity. Others don't like feeling inferior. Tonight: Pace yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Your ingenuity emerges, and while others are frustrated with a boss or older family member, you'll move past the issue immediately. A child or loved one likes your ideas in general. Your originality delights him or her. Tonight: Forget hassles and enjoy the moment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ You might not understand why you feel as if you're in a funk. When someone is as busy and responsive as you are, slowing down doesn't seem natural. Give yourself some personal time more often. When you turn on the switch, you will be all the better for it. Tonight: Ever playful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Expect to be busy, and you won't be disappointed. You will need to prioritize. As a result, you likely will have to adjust your schedule. You might feel as if your circuits are about to blow -- so much is going on. Tonight: Accept someone's caring invitation.

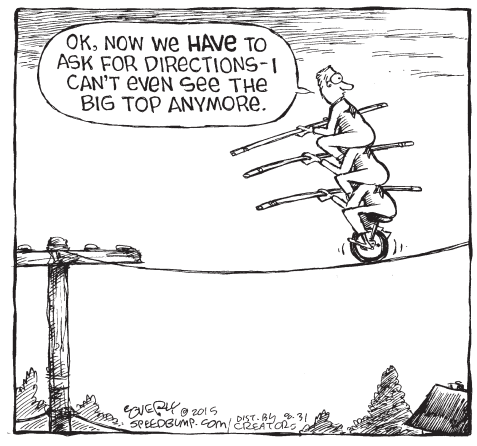

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might find yourself in a situation where you need to understand what is happening with a matter that could affect you in many ways. Even with as much as you know, you can never know too much. Go to an expert, if need be. Tonight: Schedule a massage.

The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you might sense that you have entered into a memorable and important period of your life. Jupiter, the planet of luck, is riding along with your Sun sign, making nearly anything possible. You have a tendency to take risks that you normally wouldn't. If you know what you want, you are likely to get it. If you are single, a special person could knock on your door at any given time. Don't settle, unless you're sure you have met the right person. If you are attached, your good luck flows into your sweetie's life, too. A renewed sense of confidence will make your interactions with him or her more enjoyable. ARIES has the same priorities as you.
