At-risk missing man located in Santa Monica after Silver Alert

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

A reportedly at-risk Santa Monica man was located on Tuesday afternoon after being declared missing for 24 hours.

A push alert sent to all cell phones in Santa Monica at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday announced a California Highway Patrol (CHP) Silver Alert for a 61-year-old man who had last been seen at 21st Street and Arizona Avenue in Santa Monica the previous afternoon. By the afternoon on Tuesday, the Santa Monica Police Department (SMPD) reported the missing man, identified as Patrick Barris, had been located.

The alert, which sounded loud alarms on phones throughout the city, was triggered by the CHP Silver Alert program on behalf of the SMPD. "A Silver Alert is activated when an elderly, developmentally, or cognitively-impaired person has gone missing and is determined to be at-risk. Silver Alerts provide immediate information to the public to aid in the swift recovery of at-risk persons meeting the criteria," according to the CHP website.

School Board meetings restart for the new school year with new public comment process

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

Meetings of the Santa Monica Malibu Unified School District will resume this week after a summer lull and while the topics of discussion are of no surprise, public speakers hoping to give their input will have to adapt to a new set of rules.

Members of the public wishing to comment on agenda items at tomorrow's School Board meeting will be asked to do so towards the beginning of the meeting rather than wait for the item to come up for discussion.

The school district announced Tuesday that it will begin piloting this new comment structure for School Board meetings as well as institute a six minute speaking limit beginning at the upcoming Sept. 1 meeting.

Board members discussed the changes at their meeting on July 21.

"I think that there is benefit to our public, to our community for people to be able to know that they can tune in at six o'clock, or whatever time it is, and be able to speak to the item on the agenda," said Board Member Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein.

Board Member Laurie Lieberman said she understood the rationale for trying to make board meetings more accessible for those who can't or don't want to sit through multiple-hour long sessions to speak, but was still skeptical of the proposed changes.

"I strongly feel that we'll need to evaluate whether the upside is worth the downside, because if I was a member of the public

City Hires Paolo Velasco as new Equity and Inclusion Manager

City Manager David White has selected Paolo Velasco to lead the City's diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives as its Equity and Inclusion Manager. In this role, Velasco will strengthen a culture of equity and inclusion that builds on significant progress the City has made over the last two years, through efforts by Equity and Inclusion Officers (EIOs) in every City department.

"Paolo brings a wealth of knowledge and experience building programs and initiatives that raise up diverse voices and build a more inclusive institutional culture," said City Manager David White. "We are excited to have him in Santa Monica to help expand our DEI efforts both inside the organization and within the Santa Monica community."

Velasco comes to the City from UCLA where he has spent the past 19 years advancing DEI efforts on campus. Since 2012, he has served as Director of the UCLA Bruin Resource Center where he has led the development of programs and services focused on advancing the understanding and support of diverse and marginalized communities, promoting positive intergroup dialogue and ally-building, and fostering a culture of respect and inclusivity.

He has established programs serving diverse student communities including foster youth, students who have experienced houselessness, system-impacted students, student veterans, and undocumented students.

"I have dedicated my professional career to supporting individuals' education and success, building and empowering communities, and advancing values of equity and inclusivity.

My experiences have taught me that the critical changes that are needed in our society can best be achieved when diverse communities come together and engage in the difficult yet inspiring work of coalition building," said Velasco. "I am excited to join the City of Santa Monica and to contribute to an organization and a community that is striving to cultivate a diverse, inclusive, and fair environment where everyone can thrive and feel a sense of belonging."

As Equity and Inclusion Manager, Velasco will serve on the leadership team of the City Manager's Office, working organization wide to build on the strong groundwork laid by the City's equity team that stepped into action in 2020 to join the movement against systemic racism and to better live the City's values of equity and inclusion.

Velasco has served as a manager, lecturer, research analyst, health educator, and training facilitator. He holds a master's degree in higher education and organizational change and a bachelor's in American literature and culture, both from UCLA.

He starts September 19 with an annual salary of $155,580.

California lawmakers approve landmark fast food workers bill

DON THOMPSON
Associated Press

California lawmakers on Monday approved a nation-leading measure that would give more than a half-million fast food workers more power and protections, over the objections of restaurant owners who warn it would drive up consumers' costs.

The bill will create a new 10-member Fast Food Council with equal numbers of workers' delegates and employers' representatives, along with two state officials, empowered to set minimum standards for wages, hours and working conditions in California.

A late amendment would cap any minimum wage increase for fast food workers at chains with more than 100 restaurants at $22 an hour next year, compared to the statewide minimum of $15.50 an hour, with cost of living increases thereafter.

"We made history today," said Service Employees International Union President Mary Kay Henry, calling it "a watershed moment."

"This legislation is a huge step forward for workers in California and all across the country," she said as advocates offered it as a model for other states.

The Senate approved the measure on a 21-12 vote, over bipartisan opposition. Hours later the Assembly sent it to Gov. Gavin Newsom on a final 41-16 vote, both chambers acting with no votes to spare.

Debate split along party lines, with Republicans opposed, although three Democratic senators voted against the measure and several did not vote.

"It's innovative, it's bringing industry and workers together at the table," said Democratic Sen. Maria Elena Durazo, who carried the bill in the Senate. She called it a "very, very well-balanced method of addressing both the employers, the franchisees, as well as the workers."

Almost every Republican senator spoke in opposition, including Sen. Brian Dahle, who also is the Republican nominee for governor in November.

"This is a steppingstone to unionize all these workers. At the end of the day, it's going to drive up the cost of the products that they serve," Dahle said. He added later: "There are no slaves that work for California businesses, period. You can quit any day you want and you can go get a job someplace else if you don't like your employer."

Restaurant owners and franchisers cited an analysis they commissioned by the UC Riverside Center for Economic Forecast and Development saying that the legislation would increase consumers' costs. Gov. Gavin Newsom's administration also fears the measure would create "a fragmented regulatory and legal environment."

The debate has drawn attention nationwide, including on Capitol Hill where Democratic U.S. Rep. Ro Khanna has expressed hope it will trigger similar efforts elsewhere.

It's "one of the most significant pieces of employment legislation passed in a generation," said Columbia Law School labor law expert Kate Andrias. She called it "a huge step forward for some of the most vulnerable workers in the country, giving them a collective voice in their working conditions."

The bill grew out of a union movement to boost the minimum wage and Andrias said it would "work in conjunction with traditional union organizing to give more workers a voice in their working conditions."

International Franchise Association President and CEO Matthew Haller countered that the legislation "is a discriminatory measure aimed to target the franchise business model to bolster union ranks."

Organizations representing Asian, Black and LGBTQ businesses sent a letter to senators Monday arguing that the measure would harm minority owners and workers.

Newsom's water strategy needs to go a step further

Two weeks ago, Gov. Gavin Newsom released his water supply strategy, which is designed to address California's warming climate and increasing drought intensity. Central to this strategy is expanding storage to capture water during wet periods and to help urban and agricultural users make it through dry times.

But why stop there? What about storing water for the environment?

In our recent Public Policy Institute of California report, titled "Storing Water for the Environment: Operating Reservoirs to Improve Freshwater Ecosystems," we explore how to do a better job of managing rivers that are affected by large dams and how to make restoring river health a primary objective of reservoir management.

Reservoirs are crucial for water management in California's highly variable climate. The construction and operation of dams, however, has taken a toll on the environment. Dams change water quality and flow timing, and they block access to high-quality headwater habitat. This — along with many land-use changes and the introduction of invasive species — particularly harms salmon and steelhead, two of California's most iconic and endangered fishes.

By law, dam operators are required to prevent or mitigate harm to river ecosystems and the native species that make use of them. The current approach to environmental management below dams relies on constraining water and hydropower operations, usually by requiring dam operators to meet minimum flow and water quality standards.

This constraint-based approach has neither improved the health of rivers and estuaries nor led to the recovery of native species populations. This approach is also notoriously complex, inflexible and hard to adjust, making it ill-suited to manage rapidly changing conditions. Moreover, these standards are the epicenter of water litigation.

We propose a change in course. Using a simple reservoir model, we demonstrate that ecosystem managers can achieve better environmental outcomes when they are granted a percentage of reservoir inflow along with a portion of storage capacity. Flexibly managed, this combination of inflow and storage leads to the most efficient use of environmental water.

We think our approach — which effectively grants assets to the environment that can be flexibly managed — is the better way to go. It treats the environment as the priority it is rather than a constraint.

Here's why this is a better approach: Research has demonstrated the importance of varying the timing and amount of streamflows to meet specific ecosystem functions. Everything from fish, insects and amphibians, to birds and plants rely on this variability. All are adapted to the first freshet in the fall, the winter flood pulses, the slow decline in spring flows as snows recede, and the low flows of summer. And all are adapted to the wet and dry cycles that are part of California's climate.

Storing water set aside for the environment in reservoirs allows ecosystem managers to vary flow releases to create the seasonal and year-to-year variability necessary for healthy rivers below dams. Done well, with good governance and investments in physical habitat, managing stored water also reduces uncertainties for both the environment and other water demands.

Several consequential regulatory and planning efforts in progress in the Central Valley would benefit from adopting this approach. These include:

An update of the water quality control plan for the Sacramento–San Joaquin Delta and its watershed;

Negotiations over voluntary agreements that seek to meet the objectives of the water quality control plan;

Efforts to develop a coordinated operating plan for the Central Valley Project and State Water Project that protects endangered species; and Major investments of state funds in new storage and water for the environment.

All these efforts rely upon storing water in reservoirs to meet environmental requirements. And all will struggle to adapt to rapidly changing conditions as the climate warms and droughts intensify. We think reserving storage space and reservoir inflow for the environment is better than traditional regulatory approaches. And we recognize that this approach is novel — even risky — but we need to take some risks to manage growing threats to the health of our rivers and estuaries.

Veterans Day

In our time November 11th is referred to as Veterans Day in recognition of those who served in the armed forces during war time.

Once called Armistice Day to mark the end of World War I, the war to end all wars, which then morphed to being named Decoration Day in response to the adorning of grave sites and public places with flowers and heartfelt mementos in reverence on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

May I gently remind everyone The All Service Memorial that once stood on 3rd street was demolished to make way for the new mall and replaced with a topiary of dinosaur. Some years later Santa Monica kept its promise to replace the Memorial with the one that now stands at Palisades Park where at the exact 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month the columns there cast their long shadows in a poignantly silent statement of Remembrance. A tribute that has attracted fewer and fewer attendees every passing year.

Yet the columns remain posted all the same like sentinels overlooking the vast ocean as the historic cannon are silenced for all time there. How perfect a statement I ask in content knowing my home town cares enough to provide for such a site.

And so I find myself turning my attention to two timely events occurring simultaneously by design or coincidence? One of those is the establishment of a commission in our nations Capitol to address the correlation between veterans and the statistics of their incarceration of a reported 18%. The other event is the current release of a movie called "Breaking" a story about a contemporary veteran in crisis killed by a police sharp shooter.

And so I ponder in whose name do we refer to in Santa Monica on veterans day? Is it Santa Monica's own Medal of Honor recipient Joe Gandara a Mexican American long denied the honors? An omission amended by President Obama. Joe Gandara that rushed an enemy machine gun position during the D Day invasion that broke the deadly grip on his small band of brothers that had lasted for hours.

Do we recall Santa Monica's own, Colonel Hackworth one of this nations most decorated soldiers who wrote the book About Face that chronicles his experiences and his change of heart after his great soul searching he must have come to terms with?

Do we recall Lieutenant McCormack whose B52 bomber exploded on take off from Guam? Or Albro Lundy senior who was listed as Missing In Action until his son trekked to Southeast Asia to successfully find the crash site and recover the remains that now lay in Arlington?

Or do we recall all the names of veterans who are MIA, "Missing in America", that once resided in the hotel Dodge, Ford and Chevrolet in the beach parking lots as buildings at the West Los Angeles Veterans Administration were shuttered for decades?

All of them I say, none shall be denied their honors for having served because none here are not indebted to them for their efforts regardless of time served, rank or post. An obligation that we the living beneficiaries of generations past present or future are duty bound to observe on such a day of that war to end all wars that regrettably did not end all conflicts unless we recall and remember on this Veterans Day and in to the future in the continued hope for Peace among all People who recognize the differences between war and Peace and choose Peace.

INTERFAITH UPDATE

As the Interfaith Council for the Santa Monica Area (SMAIC), we advocate for human rights and work to foster peace and justice for everyone regardless of religious affiliation or belief. We stand against the persecution of any faith community that is under attack or threat.

We collectively find the news of intensified persecution of the Baha'is in Iran, including arbitrary arrests of its peace-loving adherents, demolition of their homes, and confiscation of their land and properties heartbreaking and appalling.

We call on the authorities in Iran to immediately stop these persecutions and grant the Baha'is of Iran their rightful freedom to practice their faith in accordance with the Declarations of Human Rights by the United Nations, of which Iran is a signatory.

We also call on the US government and all people to lend their assistance to the cause of ensuring the freedom of the Baha'is and all religious minorities in Iran. We ask all for their support in various ways, including reminding the Iranian authorities repeatedly that they must immediately stop these persecutions.

We further ask all members of Congress for their wholehearted support of Resolutions H.Res.744 and S.Res.183 currently pending in the United States House of Representative and Senate, respectively, condemning the persecutions of the Baha'is and other religious minorities in Iran. Individuals whose legislators have not yet cosponsored these resolutions can contact their offices and ask them to become cosponsors now. Santa Monica Public Library Enhancements to Service

The Santa Monica City Council has approved funding to enhance operating hours at the Santa Monica Public Library, including new Saturday service at the Montana Avenue and Pico Branch libraries. Operating hours will increase from 84 hours per week across four locations to 116 hours per week across all five locations. Expanded library hours are scheduled to begin in the Fall.

Erica Cuyugan, Director of Library Services, said, "The enhancement marks a milestone in library restoration. For the first time since April 2020, the library will be able to provide service at every neighborhood branch location through a combination of self-service and in-person models. The Main and branch locations will offer evening hours and two branch locations will be open every Saturday."

A focus on neighborhood and branch services will include additional programming for youth and families, alignment, and coordination of Main Library services, such as the Literacy Education for Adults and Families (LEAF) program through which adults can reach their reading and writing goals with the assistance of our one-on-one literacy tutoring, workforce development services, and an increase in branch staffing support.

Most residents will be able to walk to their neighborhood branch to browse the adult and youth collections, pick-up holds, check out materials, interact with staff, and use a computer, meeting or study room. The library continues to rebuild services and hours as funding is restored. Staff is committed to exploring opportunities to increase hours of operation, programs, and services.

Join the library in celebrating National Literacy Month and Library Card Sign-up Month during September by signing up for your no-cost and fine free library card!

Libraries play a crucial role in the education, literacy, and development of children, offering a variety of programs to spark imagination and stimulate an interest in reading and learning. Through access to technology, media resources and educational programs, a library card gives students the tools to succeed in the classroom and provides people of all ages opportunities to pursue their dreams, explore new passions and interests, and find their voice.

For more information on programs and services offered at each Santa Monica Public Library location, visit our program page.

Please reach out if you have questions. Friendly Library staff are available to assist you Monday, Tuesday, Friday, 10 a.m. – 5 p.m. and Wednesday, Thursday 12 p.m. – 7 p.m. Call (310) 458-8600 or email library@santamonica.gov.

during their time in the facility.

Tickets start at $35 and all tickets include an ice cream tasting. Higher priced options range up to $225 per person and include promotional or limited edition items.

Banks previously opened a dedicated ice cream parlor in the mall under her Smize Cream brand and while that store closed, the ice cream products have been incorporated into ModelLand.

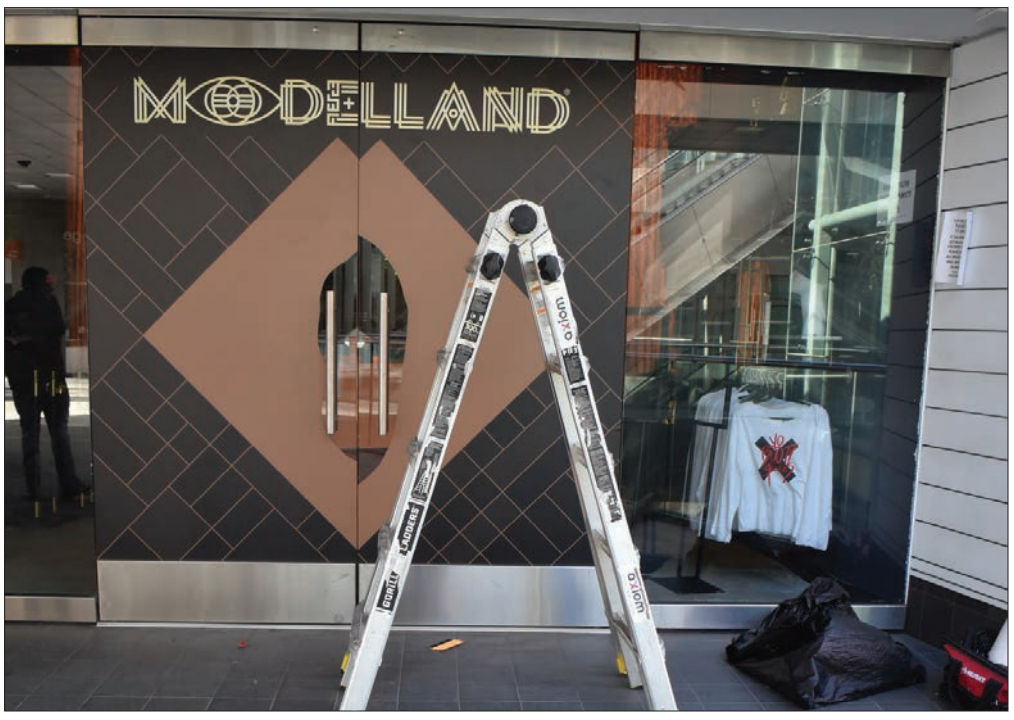

Banks is known for her modeling career and television work. She was the first female model to appear on the cover of GQ magazine and the first black woman to appear on the cover of the Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition. She was also twice named as TIME magazine's most influential people in the world and has taught at Stanford's Graduate School of Business.

"After almost a lifetime of dominating the front covers of major magazines, supermodel and super-businesswoman Tyra Banks is turning the camera on you," said the announcement of the opening. "Santa Monica's long-awaited ModelLand is opening at Santa Monica Place on Friday, September 2. ModelLand is not a museum; it's a celebration of beauty in all its forms. Everyone is invited to step into their best light and live out their photo fantasies within a gleaming, luxurious attraction."

The 21,000 square foot space previously hosted a pop-up museum, Candytopia, for four months in early 2018. Banks announced plans for her business in 2019 with an initial scheduled opening in 2020.

MISSING PERSON

The Silver Alert bulletin was posted online at 1:18 a.m. Tuesday, although the Silver Alert push notification did not sound until mid-morning.

The missing man, identified as Barris, was reportedly last seen on foot at 2:10 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 22, wearing a dark shirt, khaki vest and khaki pants.

The SMPD later updated the post with a security camera image showing Barris departing Berkley East Healthcare Center on Monday carrying what appeared to be a shopping bag. At the time, he was wearing a black or navy blue jacket, with black or navy blue pants and dark sneakers.

"Patrick is in need of medication and may appear to be confused and/or disoriented," the public information bulletin described.

The CHP and SMDP social media posts elicited a number of responses from Twitter users, with several reporting they believed they had seen Barris or someone who met his description in the hours after the Silver Alert was issued; however, it was not clear whether any of these sightings were verified.

At 1:57 p.m., SMPD offered an update on Twitter: "MR BARRIS HAS BEEN FOUND AND IS SAFE WITH FAMILY!!"

-which I once was and will be again- I would rather speak when the item was before the board," she said.

The board approved piloting the changes earlier this year and decided to evaluate them in Dec. 2022, to determine if they have increased efficiency and effectiveness of meetings.

This comment structure is already used by other school districts and municipalities. The six minute time limit is also in place elsewhere, including Santa Monica City Council meetings.

General public comments about topics not included in the board's agenda will still be heard at the end of the meeting. Individuals wanting to speak in-person at meetings are required to submit a public speaking card and those wishing to comment virtually must fill out a Google form, which can be found on the SMMUSD website.

Among the items on the agenda for the Sept. 1 meeting is a discussion on mental health programs for SMMUSD students. School district staff will provide an update to board members about the state of current programs being offered throughout the district as well as data from the 2021-2022 school year regarding the number of students who received counseling and the outcomes. There will be a specific focus on the Community Schools program at Samohi and the district-wide needs assessment being conducted in partnership with the LA County Office of Education, which will be completed this fall.

Also on the agenda are updates on several facility improvement projects, the awarding of an agreement to repair the water damage at the Muir/SMASH campus and the adoption of a resolution to designate Sept. 15 - Oct. 15 as Hispanic/Latino Heritage Month, among others. The full agenda can be viewed on the SMMUSD website.

The public meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m., following the closed session which begins at 4:30 p.m.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Aug. 31)

A quest is featured, and in addition to the prize, you'll find respect and admiration for yourself as you accomplish more than you dreamed possible. Someone will enchant you in a way that won't wear off. The relationship inspires lifestyle improvements. Spontaneous fun with friends leads to travel and projects. Libra and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 10, 4, 19 and 30.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Those who are born to privilege are often blind to the extent and nature of that privilege. To fully understand your advantages, it helps to spend time with those who do not share the same ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Relying on others for happiness is the experiment of immaturity. You're long past that stage of emotional development, but a momentary lapse is a reminder to take back your power and return to a peaceful, easy feeling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're not a high-maintenance type of person but you do enjoy things a certain way. With a perfectly breezy communication style, you'll make your preferences known and give people the keys to pleasing you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're aware of how narrow experience can get if you only do what's familiar and sanctioned by the group. You'll break the rules and let people infringe on you a bit, too. It will break open a whole new adventure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Some people enjoy withholding what the others want. This speaks to the very nature of power. As long as one person has and the other has not, the dynamic is set. For this reason, do not reveal your wants to the power-hungry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Today will affirm your position. It feels fated that you have come to this place in the journey with these fellow travelers. The other person's excellent deal requires no sacrifice from you; all are content at the same time. Beautiful!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Everyone dances differently. When, somehow, the song and dance don't jibe, awkwardness ensues. It's confusing until you consider that others may not hear the same song as you. Usually, that's the problem, and it's easily remedied.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's not that your problem is an illusion, but it certainly is a distortion. You'll get it into the right size by taking care of someone. Providing just what someone needs will bring you satisfaction, pride and a proper perspective.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You notice things you don't dare speak of yet. What good is being aware if you don't make a choice based on that awareness? You will in time. Your restraint is smart. Wait until you know what to do with all this information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The day is a puzzle for you to solve, and not a very easy one, but you are well-suited to this challenge. You'll move three things out of the way to get one thing to fit snugly into your world.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're careful with your words and even more so when they might be copied into a calendar. Commitments are sacred to you. Follow-through is your great strength. You're far too wise to waste it on unworthy pursuits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll get to know people by observing them in good and bad luck, low and high pressure. You're careful not to share your fears with those who may be susceptible to taking them on as their own. You'll share inspiration instead.

A new eviction moratorium and a one-time Rent Control Adjustment Relief Program provide rent relief to rent-burdened households in Santa Monica Rent Control units unable to afford the 6% General Adjustment increase that takes effect September 1, 2022.

To qualify for Rent Control Adjustment Relief you must:

- Currently reside in a rent-controlled unit; AND
- Have received a notification of a 2022 Rent Control General Adjustment rent increase; AND
- Pay more than 50% of household income towards rent.

Funding is limited. Priority will be provided to households identified as having "extremely-low" and "very-low" income and not everyone who applies will be guaranteed assistance. This program is open to all Rent Control tenants regardless of citizenship status.

A new ordinance offers eviction protections for qualifying tenants who need more time to pay increased rent. See website for details.

Una nueva moratoria de desalojo y un programa de ayuda para el pago del ajuste de alquileres por única vez proporciona alivio para el pago del alquiler a los hogares agobiados de las unidades de alquiler controlado de Santa Mónica que no pueden pagar el aumento de ajuste general del 6% que entra en vigor el 1 de septiembre de 2022.

Para ser elegible para solicitar el programa de ayuda para pago del ajuste del alquiler:

- Residir actualmente en una unidad de alquiler controlado; Y
- Haber recibido una notificación de un aumento de alquiler del ajuste general de alquileres de 2022; Y
- Utilizar más del 50% de los ingresos del hogar en el pago del alquiler.

La financiación es limitada. Se dará prioridad a los hogares identificados con ingresos "extremadamente bajos" y "muy bajos" y no todos los solicitantes tendrán garantizada la asistencia. Este programa está abierto a todos los inquilinos de unidades de alquiler controlado, independientemente de su estado de ciudadanía.

Una nueva ordenanza ofrece protecciones contra el desalojo a los inquilinos que cumplen con los requisitos y necesitan más tiempo para pagar el aumento del alquiler. Consulte el sitio web para más información.
