77-year-old Promenade building demolished this summer

Emily Sawicki

GONE: The building on the 1400 block of the Promenade has been razed.

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

An aging retail/commercial building on the Third Street Promenade was recently razed to make way for what developers plan will be a new, more modern three-story storefront.

The property, 1404-1408 3rd Street, was torn down this summer, more than three years after the building was sold by a private owner to Blatteis & Schnur Inc., according to an article published in the LA Business Journal in February 2019.

The building previously housed a Lush cosmetics retail location as well as Chilli Beans, a sunglasses store. Upper floors contained office space and served as the home of the Promenade Playhouse, a theater

School Board discusses need for mental health services as school ramps back up

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

As school ramps up again for the 2022-23 school year, student mental health is a top concern in Santa Monica-Malibu Unified Schools but resources are not matching the need.

During last week's School Board meeting SMMUSD Mental Health Counseling Coordinator Shuli Lotan told the board that the capacity of mental health services in SMMUSD schools has decreased from before the pandemic.

A combination of funding cuts and staff shortages in partner organizations that work with the district dropped the number of students seen for long-term treatment in an individual setting to 389 this year from 453 during the 2019-20 year.

Meanwhile, demand is high – particularly for individual therapy sessions. Lotan said that at the end of the last school year, a larger than normal percentage of students wanted to stay in therapy over the summer or start back up again in the fall.

"We're starting off this school year already more full than we normally would," Lotan said. "Typically, at Samohi for example, we might start filling up in October and today is September 1st and I'm counting the number of spots we have left and it's not that many."

Venice affordable housing project faces delay en route to approval hearing

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

A proposed large-scale supportive/affordable housing project to be located steps from the beach in Venice is set to go before the California Coastal Commission this week, but commission staff have requested a delay in the proceeding, pushing the local coastal program amendment hearing back by up to a year.

If built, the project would bring 140 affordable housing units to Venice, with about half allocated to formerly homeless households, a quarter allocated to low-income artists and the remainder set aside for other low-income households.

The project was first envisioned about six years ago, after the City of Los Angeles first approved its site — bounded by North Venice Boulevard, South Venice Boulevard, Dell Avenue and Pacific Avenue — as part of LA's Affordable Housing Opportunity Sites Program in 2016.

Since then, a slow visioning, design and approval process has begun, with the nonprofit Venice Community Housing Corporation and Hollywood Community Housing Corporation selected as partners in 2017.

SCHOOL BOARD

Lotan also noted the eagerness and desire of many students to return to in-person sessions this year.

"We're very happy to be back in schools where we can see kids face-to-face and start to climb back up in the numbers of kids we're able to see," she said.

She said that more district funding is needed to adequately support students and meet their mental health needs.

"I think the need is for long-term sustainable funding that is part of our yearly budget so that we can create positions that are going to be here for a long time where we can really build capacity and do the work to build out systems in a more intentional, thoughtful, long-term way."

Board members agreed on the need for more funding for these types of services and expressed a desire to look into possible options.

"I do feel like this is more of a need than ever," said Board Member Laurie Lieberman. "I think the first thing we need to do is look at what [funding] we are getting and then look at what it is you're saying we need and look at what's really doable and how do we start."

Board Member Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein suggested potentially forming a task force to focus on mental health-related issues.

"We need something that signifies to our entire community, that we control in our community, to say: this is something that's significant to us in this moment coming out of the global pandemic, we want to know where the kids are at right in this moment, we want to be able to collect this data," Tahvildaran-Jesswein said.

Lieberman said she doesn't think a new task force is necessary to accomplish that goal and advocated for utilizing existing groups and resources to gather more data about student needs and make a plan to take action.

The item was on the agenda as a discussion item so no vote was taken on a specific action, but Board President Maria Leon Vasquez committed to meet with Lotan, along with Lieberman and Tahvildaran-Jesswein, in the next week to further discuss the issue.

VENICE HOUSING

In January 2021, LA City Planning began community hearings to collect input on the project's initial plans, which also call for job training and life skills, physical and mental health services, addiction treatment, and one-on-one case management for residents of the 68 supportive housing units for the formerly homeless. According to Venice Community House Corporation, the project will also "serve Venice residents with small-scale retail, green and open space, and community arts spaces."

Public reception of the plan was and remains decidedly mixed. According to Daily Press reporting from the time, of 92 community members who called in to comment on the proposal, 48 were opposed and 42 were in favor, with both sides offering passionate opinions on the matter.

The latest update on the long-envisioned project came earlier this year in July, when the City of Los Angeles submitted a request to amend its certified Venice Land Use Plan (LUP) with the California Coastal Commission, which has jurisdiction over the area due to its proximity to the coast. This is an administrative step that would continue to move permitting for the project forward.

In the report for the upcoming Sept. 8, 2022, California Coastal Commission meeting in Pismo Beach, Commission staff indicated the proposed amendment was "found to be in proper order and legally adequate," but still requested a delay for up to one year before scheduling a public hearing and final action on the amendment.

"Due to the coastal development permit application and local action CDP appeal associated with the amendment (i.e. the Venice Dell Community Project), a time extension is necessary to allow staff to conduct comprehensive analysis of the proposed project and any potential impacts to coastal resources resulting from a change to development standards," staff wrote.

The requested extension would give Commission staff until Nov. 15, 2023, to schedule the hearing, but the report indicated they believed far less time would be necessary.

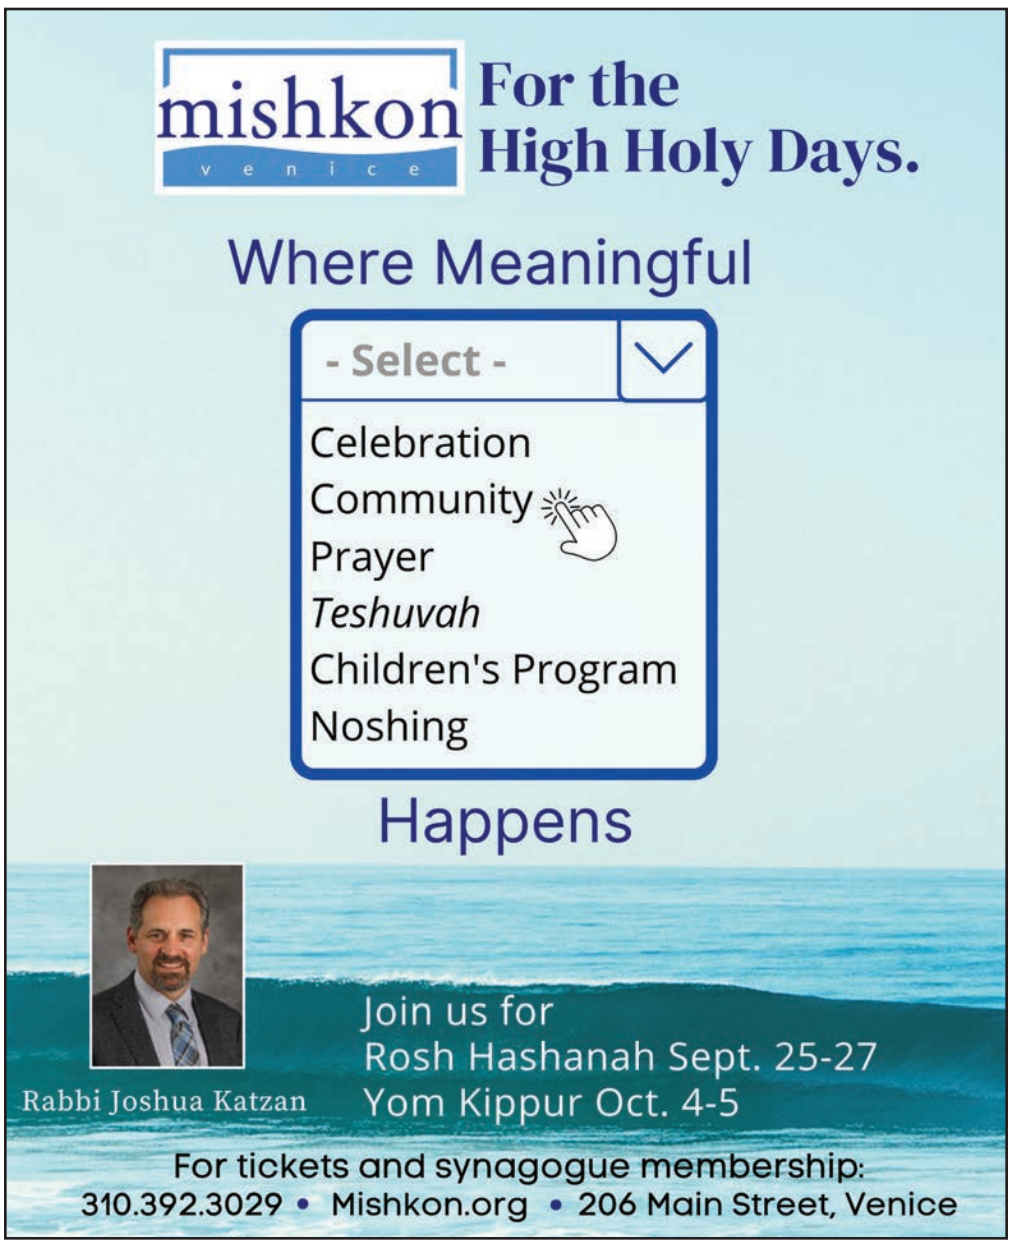

"Although staff believes this matter will be brought to a hearing in the near-term, staff recommends that the Commission extend the deadline for a full year until November 15, 2023 as provided by the Coastal Act to allow for additional time in the review process and flexibility for coordination with the City of Los Angeles on potential modifications, establishing hearing schedules, and managing competing priorities," the Sept. 8 agenda item states.

The extension request will go before the full California Coastal Commission during its Thursday, Sept. 8, regular meeting, which was set to begin at 9 a.m. at Cliffs Hotel & Spa, 2757 Shell Beach Road in Pismo Beach. The agenda and hearing can also be viewed at coastal.ca.gov/meetings/agenda.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

As our children start their 3rd week of school, it's business as usual over at the SMMUSD district office and school board. There has still been no mention of a plan to address the learning loss students are experiencing after the school closures during the last two years. Instead, our current school board and Superintendent Dr. Drati continue to focus on anything but education and further continue to neglect the needs of our students.

In the fall of 2020, our schools closed. Children, families and teachers were left to figure out the realities and struggles of remote learning with little to no leadership from the district. Unlike many other districts in our country and state it soon became clear that SMMUSD's focus was not on getting students back to safe, in person learning as soon as possible. It was at this time parents and students began to unite and demand a plan. Teachers were scrambling to put together an online curriculum, children were struggling with the challenges of virtual learning and parents were wondering just how much more they could sustain.

During this time SMMUSD leadership decided to direct vital resources away from students and education and focus on real estate ventures.

When our children desperately needed a plan of action to address the mounting learning loss, the incumbent school board members focused their attention on purchasing a $21million new district office. THIS was their priority during a time when all attention should have been on creating an education plan to address the learning loss and get students back to in-person learning quicker.

In a recent study, Thomas Kane, an economist and faculty director of the Center for Education Policy Research at Harvard University states that elementary schoolers might need up to three years to fully recover, while middle schoolers might need five years. He also concluded that Black and Hispanic students had lost four to five more weeks of instruction than white students had. There is an outpouring of studies since the start of the 22/23 school year on the effects of learning loss and our district not only remains silent on the topic but is denying its very existence.

Here we are in 2022 and I must ask as a concerned parent and Santa Monica voter, where is the action plan to address learning loss? The Superintendent and School Board continues to focus on their pet projects, real estate ventures, saving their seats, and requesting SMPD presence outside of school board meetings. Meetings that only returned to in-person a month or so ago with very limited numbers for public attendance. The school board is clearly more concerned with silencing any kind of critique from parents during an election year than working collaboratively to create solutions that can benefit all students. The school board has even gone so far as to limit the time for public comment and change from Zoom to a Webinar format, where only the board can see who and how many are in attendance

This year our neighborhood title 1 school John Muir was also left to rot while $1.5 billion in bond money was spent on vanity construction projects. The Muir community had alerted the school board for years about the mold and structural damage plaguing their school and making their children sick. The displaced Muir community is now too fearful of retaliation, an all-too-common occurrence in our district to risk speaking out about the discrimination they have experienced.

It is time, now more than ever to address the leadership crisis our public schools are facing. Parents and residents have joined forces to elect a new majority to our school board. A board that prioritizes education, students and teachers; exercises fiscal competency to spend our tax dollars where they are most needed; leads with transparency and accountability; and equitably allocates resources among all our neighborhood schools and students. It's time for a brighter future for SMMUSD students, which is why I will be supporting and voting for non–incumbent candidates Miles Warner, Stacy Rouse, Angela DiGaetano and Esther Hickman for school board this November.

arts space. It was located between T-Mobile and Anthropologie, near the intersection of 3rd Street and Santa Monica Boulevard and just steps from the Santa Monica Police Department public safety kiosk.

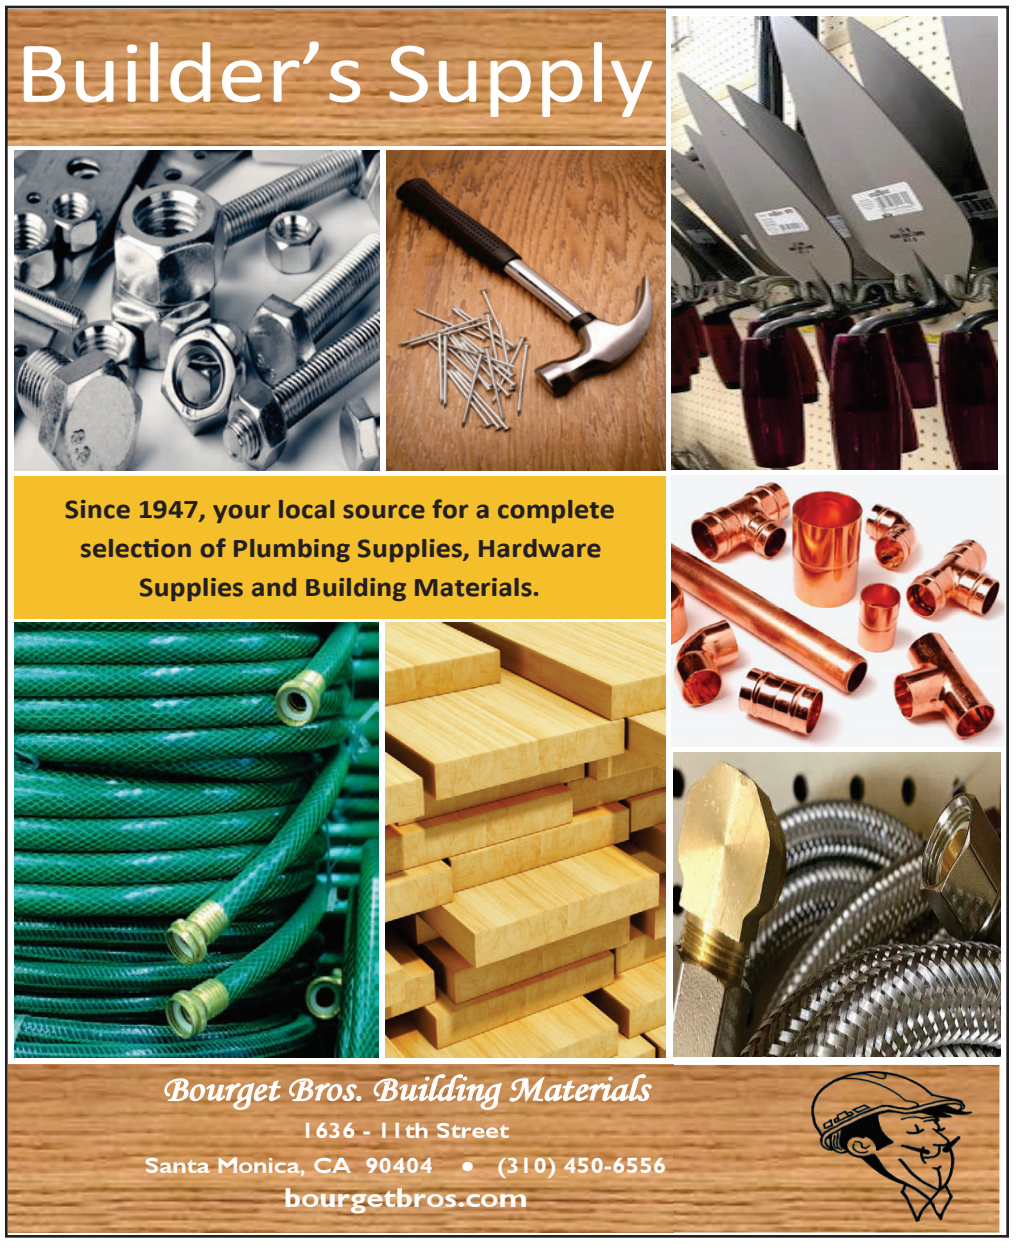

Blatteis & Schnur, Inc., a 100-year-old retail leasing and brokerage firm, maintains a webpage for the project, which states an "estimated delivery" date of Q3 2023, about one year from now.

A digital brochure for the project (dated 2019) touts plans for a 22,500-square-foot three-story building with 50 linear feet of Promenade frontage, which the brochure advertises as a "built to suit retail flagship."

According to the 2019 LA Business Journal article, the previous building was listed at 14,594 square feet and was fully occupied at the time of the $24.5 million sale. Real estate websites list the age of the now-demolished building as 77, having been constructed in 1945 and renovated in 1993.

Until 2020, businesses on the Promenade were limited to traditional retail and commercial uses with some exceptions requiring additional permits; however, during the pandemic, Santa Monica City Council expanded allowed uses to include things like group residential, liquor stores, hotels and motels, medical and dental offices, tattoo or body modification parlors, and more.

California facing chance of blackouts amid brutal heat wave

ROBERT JABLON
Associated Press

California is facing its highest chance of blackouts this year as a brutal heat wave continues to blanket the state with triple-digit temperatures. State energy officials said the electrical load Tuesday afternoon could top 51,000 megawatts, the highest demand the state has ever seen.

As people crank up their air conditioners, the state forecasted record levels of energy use, said Elliot Mainzer, president of California Independent System Operators, which runs the state's electrical grid. The state has additional energy capacity at the moment "but blackouts, rolling, rotating outages are a possibility," Mainzer said, calling additional conservation "absolutely essential."

The CAISO site Tuesday morning showed California could fall more than 5,000 megawatts short of its power supply at peak demand, forecasted for 5:30 pm.

The danger of wildfires was extreme as scorching heat and low humidity turned brush to tinder. Four deaths were reported over the Labor Day weekend as some 4,400 firefighters battled 14 large fires around the state, with 45 new blazes on Sunday alone, said Anale Burlew, a deputy chief with the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

In Southern California, two people were killed and one injured by the Fairview Fire, which started Monday near the city of Hemet, the Riverside County Fire Department said. Roughly 50 miles southeast of Los Angeles, the fire had quickly spread to at least 2,400 acres, prompting evacuations, and was only 5% contained. Multiple residential structures burned.

The dead people were not immediately identified. Authorities said both were found in the same area but it was not known if they were from the same household. They were apparently trying to flee when they were overcome.

> "... but we have now entered the most intense phase of this heat wave - Elliot Mainzer"

California's energy grid runs on a mix of mostly solar and natural gas during the day, along with some imports of power from other states. But solar power begins to fall off during the late afternoon and into the evening, which is the hottest time of day in some parts of the state. And some of the aging natural gas plants California relies on for backup power aren't as reliable in hot weather.

At CAISO's request on Monday, four temporary emergency power generators deployed by the Department of Water Resources in Roseville and Yuba City were activated for the first time since they were installed last year, providing up to 120 megawatts, enough electricity for 120,000 homes.

CAISO also issued a Flex Alert call for voluntary conservation between 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday, making seven alerts in as many days. Consumers were urged to keep air conditioners at 78 degrees or higher during the period and avoiding using major appliances such as ovens and dishwashers.

The efforts have worked to keep the lights on "but we have now entered the most intense phase of this heat wave" that could last into the week, and two to three times the level of conservation will be needed from people and businesses, Mainzer said.

CAISO also issued a Stage 2 Energy Emergency Alert from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday. The second of three emergency alert stages means taking emergency energy-saving measures "such as tapping backup generators, buying more power from other states and using so-called demand response programs," according to a CAISO website. Stage 3 would be rolling blackouts.

Several hundred thousand Californians lost power in rolling blackouts in August 2020 amid hot weather, but the state avoided a similar scenario last summer. Gov. Gavin Newsom signed legislation on Friday that could allow the state's last remaining nuclear plant to stay open beyond its planned 2025 closure, to ensure more power.

The National Weather Service predicted highs between 100 and 115 degrees across inland California, with 80s to 90s closer to the coast. Nighttime won't bring much relief, with many places seeing lows in the 80s or even 90s.

Ironically, unsettled weather also brought the chance of thunderstorms over Southern California and into the Sierra Nevada, with a few isolated areas of rain but nothing widespread. The storms also could produce lightning, forecasters said, which can spark wildfires.

South of the Oregon state line, the Mill Fire was 55% contained Tuesday morning after killing two people, injuring others and destroying at least 88 homes and other buildings since it erupted last week, CalFire said. The bodies of the two women, 66 and 73, were found in the city of Weed on Friday, the Siskyou County Sheriff's Office announced Monday. Details weren't immediately released.

A few miles away, the Mountain Fire grew to nearly 18 square miles square miles and only 20% contained, with winds threatening to renew its eastward spread in steep terrain, fire officials said.

Scientists say climate change has made the West warmer and drier over the last three decades and will continue to make weather more extreme and wildfires more frequent and destructive.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 7)

It's said that well-behaved people rarely make history. You'll prove this wrong as you play by the rules and go down in the books as a trustworthy leader with the tenacity to get things done. More importantly, you'll be let into the hearts and plans of lovable, fun people. Notable: You'll grow something incredible. Leo and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 36, 1, 18 and 41.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll be among people who may be able to help you but are clueless about what you want and need. Fill them in so you can begin the process of building your team. The first step is figuring out who's in and who's out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Among your most sincere beliefs is the idea that each person is great in their own way. Making comparisons seems wholly unnecessary, and you won't bother with valuing one person's efforts over another. You'll live your beliefs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You get the feeling you can add something special to another person's life, but you're not sure exactly how you're going to do it. Coming up with the idea is the fun part. Daydream until you think of something only you can give.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Being an open book has advantages and disadvantages. People will trust you because they understand what you're about and can predict your behavior. But for this trust, you sacrifice the strange power of mystery.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When you love someone, you don't need a lot of reasons to be happy around them. (Although you could come up with a long list just off the top of your head.) Today, you'll revel in the unfounded joys of an excellent connection.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Action is attractive. Movement captivates attention and activates the senses such that there's an inward quickening even while watching in perfect stillness. You will rev up your charisma by simply getting into motion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Process feelings so you can move along in a lighter, brighter direction. The right person to talk to will make a difference, be it a friend, mentor, coach or your own diary, which can be the best companion for sorting through emotions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're friendly and relaxed because you trust yourself in social situations. You weren't born with this skill. You earned it through trial and error. Now you're onto new skills that you'll eventually employ with equal success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). To get the right answer, often one must ask the right question. But not you, not today. You'll stumble upon it, perhaps while investigating something else entirely. The trick here is recognizing what you have when you have it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're on a path, but it's not paved, and in fact it's so overgrown it's hard to see the way. Nonetheless, follow the compass and you'll get there. It also helps to remember your excellent reason for choosing this journey.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It's fun to play your games; it's less fun to play other people's, especially the ones you didn't sign up for. Still, you're masterful as you shift moods, adapt to new circumstances and find the opportunities in whatever is happening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). It feels like you're dealing out of your league, but this is when you're at your best. It's a most auspicious, if uncomfortable, position to navigate. When you're challenged, you soar. When you're understimulated, you sleep.
