AFM confirms possible move to Downtown L.A.

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Editor in Chief

DOWNTOWN Cheaper hotel rooms, better movie theaters and a more exciting nightlife are some of the reasons why the American Film Market, one of the world's largest gatherings of independent filmmakers and producers, is considering leaving Santa Monica in 2013 for Downtown Los Angeles, according to a statement released Thursday by the Independent Film & Television Alliance, which produces the event.

Discussions with Loews Santa Monica Beach Hotel, the current home of AFM through 2012, are continuing, according to the statement, but it's clear that the alliance is favoring L.A. Live, which bills itself as the "most entertaining place on the planet," boasting the Nokia Theatre, Staples Center, the Conga Room, numerous restaurants and bars, the Grammy Museum and two high-end hotels.

The alliance board held a telephone conference earlier this week to discuss a possible move and gave the green light for further discussions. The AFM has been held at the Loews Hotel in Santa Monica for the past 20 years, but that contract is up after the November 2012 event.

AFM screenings have been held in several theaters on the Third Street Promenade In Santa Monica, while some conference events have been held at other area hotels.

The Santa Monica Loews Hotel had recently asked for an increase in what the AFM pays which started discussions about a move. Last week, the Loews corporate executives came back with a revised offer to try and keep AFM. The announcement indicates that IFTA is still considering a change.

"In order to provide the best environment, resources and value for the world's buyers and sellers, we are negotiating to make the L.A. Live district the AFM's new home for 2013," the statement reads.

"The L.A. Live district will allow us to grow all segments of the AFM — market, conferences and the celebration of film — and make the AFM more inclusive for the entire motion picture industry."

Guerilla artists raise awareness, irk City Hall

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

BERKELEY STREET A local builder and Heal the Bay volunteer revealed a unique piece of artwork Thursday morning that he and a team of artists created right under the noses of both residents and City Hall.

Unfortunately, it may have to come down quicker than the tarps that concealed it for the past three months.

Code compliance usually doesn't intervene in artistic displays, but the piece on the 800 block of Berkeley Street is a bit different.

While some limit themselves to canvas or sculpture, longtime Heal the Bay volunteer Adam Corlin decided to fuse the two in a big way.

Husband pleads not guilty in fatal market stabbing

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Editor in Chief

AIRPORT COURTHOUSE A man charged with stabbing his wife to death as she worked at a checkout stand at a Santa Monica Albertson's plead not guilty Thursday and is being held in lieu of $1 million bail, officials with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office said.

Kelvin Green, 52, of Los Angeles, was taken into custody Aug. 22 after investigators determined that he was a suspect in the brutal stabbing of his estranged wife, Christina Talley, 46, who died at a nearby hospital hours after the attack.

Police said Green walked into the grocery store, located at 3105 Wilshire Blvd., and began stabbing Talley, a mother of two children, multiple times in the head and torso. Green then fled southbound on Berkeley Street toward Wilshire.

Along with one count of murder, Green faces one count of assault involving a good Samaritan who tried to intervene but was not injured, authorities said.

A preliminary hearing has been set for Oct. 12 at the Airport Courthouse, Dept. 144

Judge urges VA to settle over homeless vets

JACOB ADELMAN
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES A federal judge nudged the Department of Veterans Affairs Thursday toward settlement talks with lawyers who accuse the agency of neglecting homeless vets on its sprawling west Los Angeles medical campus.

Judge S. James Otero appointed a mediation officer to handle the case and commanded government lawyers to name a VA official with the authority to sign off on a settlement agreement who could participate in talks.

Otero disregarded protests from the VA's lawyer, Justice Department attorney Elisabeth Layton, who argued that the step was premature and that federal government defendants are regularly given leeway as to when they specify such a "decision maker."

"I'm not going to let the federal government hide behind bureaucracy," said Otero, who stressed that the case's potential importance to needy veterans could justify some departure from precedent.

The American Civil Liberties Union and Santa Monica City Councilman Bobby Shriver are among a group that filed the complaint against the VA in June that accuses the agency of neglecting homeless veterans who need care after traumatic military experiences.

The lawsuit, filed on behalf of disabled, homeless veterans, accuses the VA of breach of fiduciary duty for leasing much of the 387-acre property to businesses although it was donated by private owners in 1888 to

The tragic day that shocked Americans nationwide is coming up on its 10th anniversary. On Sep. 11, 2001, 2,997 people were killed during the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Of the thousands who lost their lives, five people had connections to Santa Monica, city officials said.

To remember the day and honor those who lost their lives, Santa Monica is hosting two events Sunday.

The Santa Monica Fire Department is conducting a remembrance ceremony at 6:45 a.m. that should last for roughly 20 minutes. Four fire stations are participating and visitors are welcomed at any of the locations. Station 1 is located at 1444 Seventh St.; Station 2 at 222 Hollister Ave.; Station 3/4 at 1302 19th St.; and lastly, Station 5 at 2450 Ashland Ave.

During 2001, a total of 343 firefighters, 60 police officers, and eight private EMT/paramedics were lost, according to city officials.

The First United Methodist Church of Santa Monica is also hosting an event Sunday. The Interfaith Prayers for Peace promises to bring people of different religions together to help build bridges of understanding, respect and peace. The event will be held at 4:30 p.m. Members of the Christian, Jewish, and Muslim faiths will be present.

Free parking is available at the church parking garage. For more information, call (310) 393-8258. The church is located at 1008 11th St.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL
Mariners face a tough South Hills team on the road

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA
Managing Editor

WEST COVINA St. Monica's new football coach seems like the type who isn't afraid of a fight.

During the off-season, when Adam Guerra was making his schedule, he decided to setup an early game against a bigger school to see what his team is capable of. He figured why wait to see how the Mariners stand against the kind of competition they'll face in Salesian and St. Genevieve once the Santa Fe League season rolls around. Not to be too confident, but he was already thinking about the playoffs and its inherent elevated level of play.

That philosophy will be tested today when St. Monica travels to West Covina to take on South Hills, a major public school in a tougher division.

For Guerra, he considers it a risk worth tackling and he's taking the steps necessary to prep his team.

"It's the first time [the team] got a 15-page scouting report on an opponent," he said. "They've adapted well to that."

While he does expect a rumble on Friday, he's not exactly shaking in his boots.

"We have some players that are better than they are," he said. "We'll be fine."

Sidewalk safety

Editor:

Bicyclists riding on the sidewalks pose a dangerous risk, so I propose that Santa Monica sidewalks have gates to let only pedestrians through, as is done in England where a law exists to allow pedestrians to walk across the country side, on a path with specially designed pedestrian-only gates, or we could have signs on our sidewalks that read: "Beware of Pedestrians."

Save the magnolias

Editor:

RE: Changes to San Vicente Boulevard

I am writing this e-mail while gazing out on a magnificent magnolia tree with glistening leaves and gorgeous blossoms. It is as tall as the third story of the condo, which my husband and I acquired six years ago. This lovely tree supplies not only beauty, but shade all year long.

San Vicente Boulevard is one of the most iconic streets in Santa Monica. For years, the coral trees and the magnolias have stretched from 26th Street to the sea. Now, City Hall wants to replace the magnolias with the Stenocarpus Sinuatus or "fire wheel tree." An Australian native, this tree is very slow growing, has a much shorter blooming period and, according to the Los Angeles Division of Urban Forestry, is a "very fragile tree." Not only that, but this tree will only be used on San Vicente from Seventh Street to Ocean Avenue.

All the large scale R-1 residences from Seventh to 26th will be allowed to keep their magnolias. But the renters, condo owners and a school will be inflicted with the small, slow growing, short blooming, fragile fire wheel trees.

Are we somehow "children of a lesser God?"

I hope someone will come to the rescue of our magnificent magnolias.

Buyer's regret

Editor:

To Ruth and Larry Rosen ("Close the airport," Sept. 1, Letters to the Editor) and all others like them, listen up! Who was there first? You or the airport? When you buy a house near an airport, you have to expect noise and an occasional crash.

By your theory, everyone who bought a home near the freeway should expect the state to close the freeway. The noise, the accidents, the horns! Get real. Your problem is you got a cheap house because it was near the airport. Now you have buyer's regret. Oh well, too bad! Don't think you can take away my airport because you were stupid.

Not so funny how time flies

SINCE THIS COLUMN APPEARS ON Fridays, and since the 10th anniversary is Sunday, I felt compelled to write about 9/11. (It falls under my 48-hour rule.) Writing about the three power failures Thursday morning that almost destroyed this file seems a tad self-absorbed. Or as Burt Reynolds once said, "Enough about what I think of my movies. What do you think of my movies?"

The reason I'm hesitant to write about 9/11 is because what hasn't been said already? Actually, I can think of a few things. For one, I can't believe it's been 10 years since 9/11. Three or four years, maybe. But a decade? It's downright disorienting. In fact, if I was a pot smoker, I'd consider giving it up.

One thing's for sure, this wasn't a terrific decade. In fact, if I were to rate the decades of my life this one has been the worst.

In 2000, the country was experiencing unparalleled peace and prosperity. (And gas was $1.39 a gallon, a statistic that tells everything, but I will spare you my cynical conclusions.)

Now, 10 years after 9/11, we're in 2 1/2 wars (not sure what we call the Libyan action) and experiencing the worst economy since the Great Depression. (Except for big corporations which are reporting record profits and many pay zero in taxes. Go figure.)

When the decade began we had the greatest economic surplus in our history amidst predictions that the national debt would soon be paid off entirely. That it didn't quite work out is a gross understatement. It's amazing what two wars, one totally misguided and the other totally mismanaged, can do. (Where didn't the Tea Baggers protest the invasion of Iraq?)

I think one reason that 9/11 seems so recent is that it was so horrific. And it was shown on TV so often that it's indelibly imprinted on our brains. Or, at least mine.

Like JFK's assassination, everyone remembers where they were during the attack on the World Trade Center. I was awakened by a phone call from a tennis buddy telling me to turn on the TV. I did and was speechless, which my friends can tell you doesn't happen often. (Or, as some might quip, not often enough.)

As I watched, I felt many conflicting emotions: grief, anger, even revenge. My friend Russ, on the other hand, took it in stride. A sports junkie, Russ got his 9/11 news by watching Len Berman at ESPN! (I couldn't make this up, folks.)

The South Tower of the WTC collapsed at 9:59 a.m., less than an hour after being hit. And at 10:28 a.m. the North Tower collapsed. With all due respect for the family and friends of the 2,752 people who died on 9/11, and the thousands of heroes who risked their lives, something about the way those buildings imploded made me suspicious.

Then, at 5:21 p.m., building 7, which had not been hit, collapsed from "fires from when the north tower collapsed." It was then, and with apologies to Shakespeare, I concluded it wasn't Denmark where something was rotten.

According to a recent poll, 16 percent of America doesn't accept the official story of 9/11. It's possible then that 84 percent of my readership moved to the crossword puzzle, because I'm definitely in that 16 percent. And it's because of building 7. It's simple. When, in the history of the world, has a steel and cement building turned to dust from fire? The answer uh … never.

LIKE JFK'S ASSASSINATION, EVERYONE REMEMBERS WHERE THEY WERE DURING THE ATTACK ON THE WORLD TRADE CENTER.

So many questions still linger. Why didn't NORAD scramble jets? In 1999, when golfer Payne Stewart's Learjet left its scheduled flight plan, NORAD scrambled jets alongside his. Two years later, on 9/11, the four hijacked planes were off their flight plans for 90 minutes. I know there are so-called "experts" with their so-called "explanations." It's like the old joke, am I going to believe them or my lying eyes?

More questions. Why did Bush and Cheney insist on testifying together at the 9/11 Commission? Why was neither under oath? And why were so many actual eyewitnesses not allowed to testify? And why was the entire Bin Laden family (24 relatives) flown out of the country without an FBI debriefing? (And why is this night different from all other nights? Whoops, that's Passover, sorry.)

Hopefully there's been some positive since 9/11. As Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said recently, "Al-Qaeda has been severely weakened in the decade since the attacks, while the United States has demonstrated a spirit of resilience." In my desire that he's right, my fingers are crossed. (Which might explain the typos.)

In sum, for those who didn't care for this column, at least you don't have to dread next year's version. Next year, 9/11 falls on a Tuesday.

Hollywood hit stirs elderly driver debate

Wednesday's auto accident involving Oscar-winning actress Reese Witherspoon and an 84-year-old driver serves as another reminder that the older we get the more careful we have to be behind the wheel. It also should renew calls for more frequent vision tests and behind-the-wheel exams for elderly drivers, particularly in light of the fact that our population is aging, with estimates that there will be 9.6 million people 85 and older by 2030.

While the exact cause of the accident has yet to be released, one could argue that age was a factor. Normal aging causes medical problems that affect driving. Reflexes, flexibility, visual acuity, memory and the ability to focus all decline with age. Medicines that treat various ailments also make it more difficult to focus and make snap decisions. Elderly drivers are less likely than other drivers to be in crashes involving high speeds or alcohol, but they are more likely to crash at intersections where they turn left in front of oncoming traffic or miss a stop sign. In the Witherspoon accident, the driver failed to see the actress as she jogged in an unmarked crosswalk.

Fatality rates for drivers begin to climb after age 65, according to a study by Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh and the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, based on data from 1999-2004. From ages 75 to 84, the rate of about three deaths per 100 million miles driven is equal to the death rate of teenage drivers. For drivers 85 and older, the fatality rate skyrockets to nearly four times higher than that for teens.

While teens have been the target of lawmakers in the form of increased restrictions, elderly drivers have not thanks in large part to well-financed and powerful advocacy groups like the AARP, which boasts more than 35 million members nationwide. The Daily Press feels it is time to address the issue.

Currently, the only power the Department of Motor Vehicles has is to require those over 70 to renew their driver's license in person every five years. Elderly drivers are only required to take a written exam and have their vision checked. The DMV can place restrictions — limiting the times people can drive and the distance — on elderly drivers when they are made aware of certain medical conditions, but that does not go far enough. The law should be changed to require behind-the-wheel driving tests so that DMV employees can see if there are any limitations. We admit that research has shown it is difficult to establish an "early warning system," and that even those are unreliable when it comes to predicting who will crash and who won't, but it's worth further study.

By requiring driving tests annually for seniors of a certain age (we think 70 is a good number), not only would DMV employees be better equipped when determining whether or not to enact restrictions, but so will the drivers themselves. Representatives with the AARP, which, along with the DMV, offers a driver safety program and tips for seniors, said most elderly drivers recognize their limitations and begin to self regulate by driving less at night or choosing to not take freeways. More than 600,000 drivers age 70 and older decide to give up driving each year, according to a 2002 study published in the American Journal of Public Health. That's great, but then there are those who see giving up their car keys as a form of imprisonment and an erosion of their independence. These folks hold on to their cars far longer than they should, creating the potential for a serious accident.

FROM AGES 75 TO 84, THE RATE OF ABOUT THREE DEATHS PER 100 MILLION MILES DRIVEN IS EQUAL TO THE DEATH RATE OF TEENAGE DRIVERS. FOR DRIVERS 85 AND OLDER, THE FATALITY RATE SKYROCKETS TO NEARLY FOUR TIMES HIGHER THAN THAT FOR TEENS.

Unfortunately, Santa Monica knows that all too well. Those who lived here in 2003 will never forget the tragic Farmers' Market crash involving George Russell Weller, then 86, who drove his Buick Le Sabre into a crowded market, killing 10 and injuring more than 70. His attorneys argued that Weller had confused his car's accelerator for the brake. He was convicted of vehicular manslaughter with gross negligence and sentenced to five years probation after the judge ruled he was too ill to be imprisoned.

That tragedy may have been avoided had Weller been required to take a driving test when he renewed his license in November 2000. Lawmakers need to act, and hopefully Witherspoon's fame will keep this issue in the public eye. Something must be done before Baby Boomers become octogenarians. Unfortunately, knowing how slow the wheels of government turn, it might just take that long.

The Q Line

Make way for the gangway

City officials plan to build a gangway and 2,160-square-foot barge on the southern side of the Santa Monica Pier to expedite evacuations in case of an emergency. Although bringing boats back to the pier is not in the cards right now, the gangway will be constructed with the future in mind.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Would you support returning recreational boating back to the pier, helping the landmark reclaim some of its past glory?

CRIME WATCH
BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Alleged peeping Tom arrested at SMC

Crime Watch is a weekly series culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 1, AT 12 P.M.,

Santa Monica police officers responded to the Santa Monica College Library regarding a report of a man using a mirror to look under stalls in the women's restroom. College police officers located a suspect, and after interviewing several witnesses made an arrest. The suspect was transported to the Santa Monica Jail and booked for disorderly conduct and obstructing officers. He was identified as Joshua Flores, 28, of South Gate. His bail was set at $10,000.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 4, AT 8:55 P.M.,

Officers responded to the 2600 block of the beach, near the bike path, regarding a report of a man on the ground unconscious and bleeding from the head and face. Another man was scene stealing property from the victim. When officers arrived, they located the victim and a witness who directed them to a male suspect walking east toward Barnard Way. Police detained the suspect, along with another man who witnesses said played a role in the incident. After medical treatment was rendered to the victim, officers spoke with the witnesses and suspects. They learned that the victim was involved in a fight when one of the suspects used a rock to strike him several times in the head and face, knocking him out. The man then walked away while a second suspect was seen removing property from the victim. The victim had several head and facial fractures and was transported to a local hospital where he was listed in serious/critical condition. The suspects were placed under arrest and transported to the Santa Monica Jail where they were booked. The case is still ongoing. The suspects were identified as Michael Zamora, 37, a transient; and Victor Quinones, 18, of Los Angeles. Zamora was booked for robbery and assault with a deadly weapon. His bail was set at $50,000. Quinones was booked for assault with a deadly weapon. His bail was set at $30,000.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 3, AT 11 P.M.,

Officers responded to an emergency room at Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center to interview a man who claimed he was the victim of an assault at his home in the 800 block of Wilson Place. The victim told officers that at about 10 p.m. that evening he and his roommate, who was allegedly intoxicated, got into an argument regarding the suspect's girlfriend. The victim said that he started to walk down some stairs located on the back porch when he turned toward the suspect and was kicked in the mouth, causing him to fall backwards and strike the back of his head on the ground. The victim suffered a laceration to his lip and lost a front tooth. Officers went to the residence and took the roommate into custody for assault with a deadly weapon. He was identified as Joshua Greene, 35, of Santa Monica. His bail was set at $30,000.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 4

A Pacific Park employee reported to the Santa Monica Police Department headquarters to be booked for embezzlement. The employee was arrested and cited out on July 31 after police received a tip from Pacific Park security that the employee was seen stealing money while working one of the carnival games. The suspect was ordered by the court to report to the SMPD. He was booked and released per the court order. He was identified as Miguel Ambrocio, 23, of Los Angeles.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 3, AT 1:05 A.M.,

Officers responded to the area of Lincoln and Olympic boulevards regarding a report of a woman being assaulted. When officers arrived, they made contact with the victim who said that her boyfriend struck her in the head with a brick. The victim, who was bleeding from an open wound to the left side of her head, told officers that she was asleep when her boyfriend suddenly woke her up and began hitting her in the head with the brick as he yelled obscenities. The suspect was located a short distance away on the freeway embankment and was placed under arrest for assault with a deadly weapon and spousal abuse. He was identified as Jeffrey Glen Cooke, a transient. His bail was set at $50,000.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 3, AT 12 P.M.,

Officers responded to the 2500 block of Santa Monica Boulevard – CVS – regarding suspicious people loitering in the parking lot. When officers arrived, they made contact with two people as they were sitting inside a parked vehicle. During the investigation, officers obtained consent to search the vehicle, at which time they recovered methamphetamine and crushed up Xanax. The driver was placed under arrest and booked for possession of a controlled substance and possession of less than an ounce of marijuana. The passenger was released at the scene. The suspect was identified as Logan Westering, 20, of Woodland Hills. Bail was set at $10,000.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 31, AT 1:52 P.M.,

Officers responded to the 1200 block of the Third Street Promenade – Apple Store – regarding a report of fraud. When officers arrived, they made contact with store employees who told them that two suspects entered the store and tried to buy a laptop and iPhone 4 using a bogus credit card. The suspects grew nervous when the employee called to verify the card. Both suspects fled the location without their credit card and were followed by store security until they were detained by police. Officers said they found other fraudulent credit cards in the suspects' possession and determined they had made purchases at an Apple Store in San Diego a month earlier. The suspects were placed under arrest and booked for conspiracy, burglary and forging an access card. They were identified as Alexander Chin, 22, of Alhambra; and Sokvuen Sum, 22, of Rosemead. Bail was set at $20,000 for both.

Coming off of last week's big 43-14 win over Animo Leadership, Guerra is happy to see where his team stacks against a tougher opponent. He didn't disparage Animo, but he knows South Hills poses a much greater threat.

What he isn't doing is changing his team's approach to the game on both sides of the ball. He's content with letting his team's running game and defense lead the way while junior quarterback Lukas Dretzka learns to manage the team's new pro-style offense.

"I'm not ready to open up the offense yet," Guerra said. "I want Dretzka to develop slowly. A big loss is something that can ruin a quarterback's psyche."

Running back Sean Martinez, who ran for 152 yards and three touchdowns against Animo in the opener, again will be handed the rock with regularity. Guerra added that Nick Pegnato and Kevin Holubowski will also see plenty of action against a South Hills defense that Guerra considers to be deeper than his squad.

On defense, Guerra expects to see a run-first offense that relies heavily on running back Jamel Hart. After watching tape of South Hills' season opening loss to Colony, Guerra noted that Hart isn't the type of back that runs away from defenders, but he does show ability to pound it between the tackles at the heart of the defense. He doesn't plan on changing his defense too much to handle Hart, but won't be afraid to change his play calling mid-game.

"He's a pretty complete back," Guerra said. "We'll see a lot of him on Friday. We'll be ready."

ART

He used a house.

Several months ago, Corlin bought a dilapidated home on the 800 block of Berkeley Street. It hadn't been lived in for years, except for the occasional transient that took up residence on the top floor, and it was covered in unwelcome graffiti.

"I looked at it and said, this looks like a billboard," Corlin said.

If companies can use billboards to sell products, Corlin wanted to use his to send a message, one of support for Heal the Bay. He also wanted to do it in a way that nobody could ignore.

With the help of a friend, Corlin reached out to the internationally-known graffiti artist Risk, whose work has recently been featured in the Pasadena Museum of California Art.

Risk, together with another artist — Retna — with work in that collection, joined forces with Corlin to design an installation like no other — one that completely covered the 2,200-square-foot exterior of the home.

The design, entitled "Oceans at Risk," is composed of 138 homemade panels, 4 feet across and 4 feet wide, each painted by hand in the security of Risk's Thousand Oaks studio and transported in secret to the house.

Corlin installed the panels under a seemingly endless supply of black tarp, with no one, not even his neighbors, any the wiser.

Risk, a New Orleans native and experienced surfer, said that the message and the method appealed to him, particularly in the wake of the 2010 oil spill that blanketed the Gulf Coast for months.

"I've wanted to do something for charity, and this concept of water came up," said Risk, who still had purple paint on his hands from working on the piece up to the wire Wednesday night. "It sounded perfect."

Risk created a theme of colors that melt from a fiery orange into red, purple-black and finally the cool blue of the ocean.

Each layer represents a different piece of the elements, he said, with the orange and red evoking the sky, and the dark, bruise-like colors the pollution that mars the purity underneath.

After a team installed the panels, Retna, a graffiti artist who specializes in lettering, put his own twist on the design with a largely illegible scrawl, which is meant to read "Oceans at Risk," "Heal the Bay," "Sea Shepherd" and "Mad Society."

At approximately 8:20 a.m., with God, man and a KTLA news crew in attendance, Corlin ordered the tarp dropped, revealing for the first time the work that he and so many others had created over the last three months.

"I'm ecstatic," he said.

Karin Hall, the executive director of Heal the Bay, was thrilled.

"It's a great way to show what's going on with our oceans," she said.

The bright display seemed as much a road hazard as a public art display, as driver after driver craned their necks to get a glance at the unlikely sight.

"That's cool!" said Michael Alemania, a resident in the neighborhood.

Alemania was walking two small dogs when he caught sight of the home-turned-installation. He's been watching the renovation process, but had no idea what Corlin was planning.

Not all of the neighbors had such glowing reviews.

When the tarps came down, a half-naked man on a balcony two doors south shouted, "It's a [explicative] eyesore!"

Corlin intends to leave the panels up until Sept. 17, when Heal the Bay will participate in the California Coastal Cleanup, a statewide initiative to get trash off of California's coastline and beaches.

He may not get that long.

Corlin and his crew did not apply for permits to put up the display, and that's a problem, said Code Compliance Officer Ron Takiguchi.

"He not only needed it to install, but city approval as well," Takiguchi said in a phone message.

Takiguchi said that he would order an immediate removal of the panels.

Even prior to City Hall's determination, Corlin had not decided what will happen with the panels after they're removed from the scaffolding surrounding the home.

"I want to find a place in Santa Monica to install them," Corlin said.

A possible move has some local business leaders on edge, concerned that losing a significant event like AFM would hurt local businesses that rely on the influx of cash during the fall, when tourism tends to slow down. During the market, which is scheduled from Nov. 2- 9 at Loews, theaters are packed daily as are many hotels, restaurants and retail stores.

In 2007, the market was expected to generate between $15 million and $17 million in total spending.

"There is no deal yet," officials with the alliance said in the statement.

"We appreciate the attractiveness of Santa Monica and we are continuing discussions with the Loews, but relocating to L.A. Live would provide:

• Lower costs for sellers and buyers. Exhibition costs would drop for sales companies and hotel costs would be lower for everyone;

• Better showcase opportunities for films. Regal Cinemas has an 800 stadium-seat premiere screen and the Nokia Theatre can accommodate premieres for 7,000.

• Increased business efficiency. All theaters and screening rooms would be located within a five-minute walk from the market. Additionally, by 2014, there will be more hotel rooms in the L.A. Live district than there are within miles of the Loews.

• More dining, sports and major entertainment options for travelers from around the world. From concerts and sporting events to fine dining and exciting nightlife, the L.A. Live district and surrounding area offers more than any other market venue."

The move would put the market somewhat closer to the affiliated AFI Fest, which runs Nov. 3-10 in Hollywood.

While convenience and cost savings are key, one question remains: will foreign filmmakers and visitors want to spend a week in Downtown L.A. instead of at the beach?

It is estimated that $800 million worth of transactions will be made during the market's run.

VETS

provide housing for disabled war veterans.

The suit, which names four veterans as plaintiffs and seeks class-action status, says the land was used to permanently house vets until the 1960s and 1970s, when the VA stopped accepting new residents and allowed buildings that had provided permanent housing to fall into disrepair or be used for other purposes.

The complaint seeks an injunction forcing the VA to use the property for the housing and care of wounded vets, among other demands.

Layton said Tuesday that she would file a motion to dismiss the lawsuit based on claims that the plaintiffs have no standing to allege breach of contract by the federal government and that providing housing is not explicitly among the VA's responsibilities.

While the property hosts veterans' medical clinics, the plaintiffs' lawyers said its in-patient services are not sufficient for Los Angeles' massive population of homeless veterans. There were 7,000 homeless vets in the Los Angeles area in 2010, about 10 percent of the country's total population of 71,609 homeless vets, according to the VA's most recent tally.

The VA recently enacted a new master plan for the campus that provides for more veteran housing on the site and at other new facilities, but the ACLU and its co-counsel have criticized those measures as inadequate.

The VA has said the new master plan also prompted it to boot from the property three longtime tenants, a bus company, a car rental firm and a commercial laundry.

At Thursday's hearing, lawyers for the veterans concurred with Otero's orders that would set the groundwork for mediation to take place.

Attorney Ronald Olson said that veteran advocates had long wanted to negotiate an accommodation with the VA over their claims concerning the Los Angeles campus, but government officials have resisted such talks.

"We have tried to move that ball from the get-go," Olson said.

Stocks slide after Bernanke offers no new stimulus

DAVID K. RANDALL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK Stocks closed sharply lower Thursday after Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke offered no specific plans to prop up the economy.

In a speech closely watched by investors, Bernanke said the Fed will consider a range of steps at its Sept. 20-21 meeting. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 100 points shortly after Bernanke's remarks began at 1:30 p.m. Eastern. It ended down 119.

"The implications are that the Fed is going to act, but the market is disappointed because he was a little short on details," said Scott Brown, chief economist at Raymond James.

Concerns about the U.S. economy have pushed stocks lower each month since April. Many traders now say the stock market is pricing in the assumption that the economy is in a recession, meaning limited job growth and a weaker corporate profits.

The economic worries have pushed the prices of Treasurys and highly-rated corporate bonds higher and their yields lower. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note was 1.99 percent Thursday, down from 3 percent July 25. Mortgage rates, which are affected by Treasury yields, fell to their lowest level in six decades, Freddie Mac reported Thursday.

President Obama will lay out his jobs plan at a joint session of Congress tonight. He is expected to announce a $300 billion package that includes tax cuts, additional state aid and spending on infrastructure.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 119.05 points, or 1 percent, to 11,295.81. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 12.72, or 1.1 percent, to 1,185.90. The Nasdaq composite shed 19.80, or 0.8 percent, to 2,529.14. Each index had posted gains earlier in the day.

Cisco Systems Inc. led the 30 Dow stocks with a 2.6 percent gain after it was upgraded by analysts. JPMorgan Chase & Co., Bank of America Corp and Boeing Co. each fell 3 percent, pulling the average lower.

Investors received mixed economic data before the market opened. First-time applications for unemployment benefits rose last week to 414,000. Economists had expected 405,000. The prior week's estimate of new claims was also revised higher.

The weekly report on unemployment applications is an important economic indicator for investors. Rising claims can add to concerns that the job market is stalled and the U.S. economy is headed for another recession. Applications need to fall below 375,000 to indicate sustainable job growth. Last week the government reported there was zero job growth in the U.S. economy in August.

Not all of the economic news Thursday was negative. American exports of cars, airplanes and other goods reached an all-time high in July, the Commerce Department reported. Economists said the jump in exports suggest future growth in the U.S. economy. A weaker dollar has helped American exports this year. The dollar has fallen 8 percent over the last 12 months against an index of six other currencies.

"The market is sitting around and trying to piece it all together, "said Rob Stein, the founder and global head of asset management at Astor Asset Management. "For all the volatility that we've had recently, the market is going nowhere."

OpenTable Inc., a restaurant booking and review website, dropped 8 percent to $57.50 after Google Inc. announced it was buying OpenTable rival Zagat, a publisher of restaurant reviews in print and online. Pall Corp. slumped 10 percent, to $44.03, after the maker of filtration equipment reported earnings that fell far short of what analysts were expecting. Pall dropped the most of any stock in the S&P 500 index.

Yahoo Inc. jumped 6 percent to $14.44 after Third Point, an activist investment fund, disclosed that it has bought a 5.2 percent stake in the troubled Web portal and called for sweeping changes to the board. Yahoo's board fired CEO Carol Bartz on Tuesday after 2 1/2 years on the job. She harshly criticized the board in an interview published Thursday.

Four stocks fell for every one that rose on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume was lower than average at 3.9 billion shares.

Procrastination is a problem when it comes to doing my disaster plan. As a business owner I have a lot to do. It's not like a disaster is going to happen tomorrow. Besides, we have that new business pitch. I've been waiting for this to happen for a while now. I'll get the disaster plan finished eventually. Nothing to worry about, it'll happen.
Whether natural or man-made, at least one in five businesses affected by a disaster never reopen. Though emergencies are unpredictable, when you have a plan in place you can adapt, recover and stay in control.
It's never too late to protect your business until it is.
Make a plan.

LEGEND

DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Union boss: Players have questions about HGH test

ANTONIO GONZALEZ
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA The NFL's goal to be the first major professional sports league to implement testing for human growth hormone appears a long way from coming to fruition.

NFLPA executive director DeMaurice Smith said Wednesday that players have serious questions about the safety and reliability of the test. He said the World Anti-Doping Agency has not turned over the information the players' association has requested.

Blood testing for HGH was part of the collective bargaining deal struck between the league and players this summer — but only if the union agreed to the methods. NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell sent a letter to Smith last week reiterating the league's eagerness to implement HGH testing.

Smith's comments came after he spoke at a sports law symposium at Santa Clara University.

Hang out tonight, Sag

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Someone could be quite fussy. You might be partially listening, not wanting to deal with this person's energy. Know that you are fortunate with funds, but don't overspend. A partner seems to be easing up and relaxing. Tonight: Find your pals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You might be dealing with considerable tension, yet you seem to be able to twist a difficult situation into a more positive one. Realize your limits within the workplace. An awkward moment or two could evolve into a new understanding of boundaries. Tonight: A must appearance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Put your imagination into fifth gear. You'll not only come up with some good ideas, you'll enjoy yourself much more, as will a child or loved one. Frequently, you allow your mind to open up to more fantasies and get in touch with the child within. Tonight: A late lunch could develop into a fun night.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Deal on a one-on-one basis with others. A friendship could help you overcome some sense of awkwardness. You are coming from a very stable position where you enjoy yourself a lot more. Listen to feedback carefully. Tonight: Kick back and allow someone to express him- or herself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Others clearly want your attention. You have little control over various situations. Understand what is happening and how a new friendship could be impacting your daily life. A boss, parent or supervisor looks up to you. Tonight: A must appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ A nice, easy pace marks your interactions. If you detach and try to understand where others are coming from, you will gain. Tonight: Hook up with a co-worker or two.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Give 100 percent of yourself no matter what you do. Your levity and intensity draw another person to you. Allow your creativity to come forth when it counts. Lighten up and relax with the moment. Tonight: Christen the weekend well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ In your environment, there could be a variable involved that could be getting the best of you. Realize what is going on with someone you deal with on a regular basis. You might need more feedback from a friend or a trusted loved one before making a decision. Tonight: Don't make it too late!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Keep conversations moving as you gain a greater sense of direction and knowledge. Take time to go over the pros and cons of a situation or project with an associate. A discussion, though serious, could be the gateway to a fun afternoon. Tonight: Hang out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Be aware of what you have to offer. Money isn't the only asset you have. Your assets touch both your intellect and your emotions. Tap into your innate creativity and take a risk. You could be surprised by what someone offers. Tonight: Treat a friend to a fun few hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Continue to express yourself. Someone delights in your offbeat yet perceptive ideas. You might feel a bit awkward with someone who is too detail-oriented for your comfort. Remain in control and create your plans. Tonight: Start the weekend full force.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You could be exhausted by everything that is going on. Say little and observe more. A partner shares much more than he or she has in the past. You are full of information, but hold back for now. Tonight: Opt for something tranquil.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult

This year, be open to the unexpected within a partnership. Your understanding deepens because of a continually developing perception. Travel, a foreigner and education all could play significant roles in your year. You might be looking at making a commitment to a new lifestyle. If you are single, you could meet someone from a different culture. Get to know this person and his or her lifestyle before making a commitment. You might like the experience but not want to make a lifelong commitment to this person and his or her culture. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from planning that special, long-desired vacation. AQUARIUS is a good sign for a co-worker.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The veterans' support organization Home for Our Troops had recently started to build a 2,700-square-foot house in Augusta, Ga., to ease life for Army Sgt. 1st Class Sean Gittens, who had suffered concussive head injuries in Afghanistan and is partially paralyzed. However, in June, the Knob Hill Property Owners Association, which had provisionally approved the design, changed its mind. "The problem is," one association member told the Augusta Chronicle, there are "5,000-square-foot homes all the way up and down the street" and that such a "small" house would bring down property values. "It just doesn't fit."

■ First Things First: Alan Buckley, 44, on holiday from Cheshire, England, was arrested in Orlando in June and charged with taking upskirt photographs of a woman at a Target store. Buckley's child had gotten sick and was admitted to Orlando's Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children, and Buckley was apparently killing time at Target after visiting with the child (and was later identified by witnesses because he was still wearing his hospital visitor's sticker, with his name on it).
