BBB outreaching to explain fare increases

CHANGES COMING: There will be a meeting on Sept. 10 at the Main Library to discuss impending fare increases at the Big Blue Bus.

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Prices are going up for the Big Blue Bus and officials are holding a public meeting on Sept. 10 to preview changes and hear public feedback.

BBB will host a meeting from 6-7:30 p.m. at the Main Library (601 Santa Monica Blvd.) to update customers on its proposed fare updates and service changes.

According to staff, BBB will be adding 11 percent more service over the next 12 months as part of the Evolution of Blue campaign to provide connections to the upcoming Expo Light Rail Line.

To offset costs and bring some of its products inline with regional averages, the base fare will increase by $0.25 to $1.25 per ride. Express fares increase to $2.50 (50 cent increase), seniors/disabled fares will be unchanged, tokens will increase to $1.25 (25 cent increase), day passes are unchanged, the 13-ride ticket increases to $14 ($2 increase), a 30-day pass goes to $50 ($10 decrease), a youth 30-day pass drops to $38 ($2 decrease), an express 30-day increases to $89 ($9 increase). A new rolling 7-day pass will be available for $14.

According to the staff report, the goal is to incentivize prepaid media and limit the amount of cash transactions as a means of increasing efficiency. Currently, cash customers take an average of 23 seconds to board while prepaid customers take less than 4 seconds.

“Currently, 2 percent of customers use 30-day passes, 2 percent use 13-ride passes, 3 percent use day passes, and 1 percent use tokens,” said the staff report. “These low percentages of current prepaid fare media use are directly attributable to the

Case against O'Connor forwarded to County District Attorney

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Complaints against Councilwoman Pam O'Connor filed by a local activist organization have been forwarded to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office for review.

The Santa Monica Coalition for a Livable City filed a complaint last month against O'Connor alleging violations of the City Charter in connection with the firing of Elizabeth Riel and at least one part of that complaint has been sent to the county.

Riel was offered a position with the City of Santa Monica in 2014, only to have the offer rescinded before her first day of work. Riel sued the city and the case was set-

CITY OF SANTA MONICA Ordinance Numbers 2491-2492 (CCS) (City Council Series)

The following are summaries of Ordinance Numbers 2491 and 2492 which were adopted by the City Council on August 25, 2015.

Ordinance Number 2491 modifies three chapters of the Municipal Code in order to facilitate alternative forms of transportation. In particular, the modifications are made to provisions governing car sharing, bike sharing and parking in preferential parking zones.

Ordinance Number 2492 revises the municipal Code so that permits for solar energy systems may be processed on an expedited basis.

Ordinances 2491 and 2492 will become effective thirty days after their adoption. The full text of the ordinances is available from the Office of the City Clerk at 1685 Main Street, Santa Monica, California 90401; telephone (310) 458-8211).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

Entitlement

Editor:

Reading Mr. Brad Brenner’s letter last week commenting on affordable housing and the quality of life for Santa Monica home owners, I was struck not just by the writer’s self-centered sense of entitlement but also by his apparent disdain for others and lack of awareness of the world around us.

Recently this newspaper featured an article pointing out that so-called affordable housing in Santa Monica is not actually affordable for most people, and that the folks who do most of the jobs here to provide the services that Mr. Brenner depends on can’t afford to live here. Well thank goodness for the imminent arrival of the train, since at least some of those potential “new non-Santa Monica residents” won’t have to “move here at our expense.”

Homelessness is a problem in most developed countries that can be solved by providing homes for people who need them: societies don’t have the option of just doing nothing. Santa Monica takes bold positions on homelessness and affordable housing which I believe are admirable if not always completely achievable goals. If Mr. Brenner does not “know of anyone who supports any additional affordable housing” perhaps he should talk to some of his neighbors: there’s a lot of concern to do good things among most Santa Monicans. Just for instance, if Santa Monica happened to be not a beautiful SoCal city by the sea but a western European nation faced with thousands of helpless refugees arriving daily by boat, train and on foot, should we turn them back because the traffic’s a little busy right now? If drowned refugee children and their families were washing up on the beach by the Pier, would our city’s home owners think any of them worthy of an affordable sanctuary?

Compassion for others is an admirable quality we’d all do well to maintain.

Thankfully we are blessed to live in our beautiful city by the sea with, granted, a few issues of its own like the vaccine-denying intelligentsia and, of course, the traffic. But Santa Monica is not a country club and regular working people have the right to be able to afford to live somewhere near where they work. We pay taxes not just to benefit ourselves but to create some element of common good. I’d bet Mr. Brenner actually does know a few folks who wouldn’t disagree with that.

Parking tickets and rock rags

ROLLING STONE, FEH.

For decades now, feh. For the music reporting and reviewing, for the attitude toward music, for bad taste and poor judgment, for selling out their culture-changing original ethos. They still have some outstanding contributors but they are occasional now, rather than collectively the gold standard of music journalism they once were. But RS does have a saving grace.

It’s yet one more thing that has faded from our modern, new and improved world and, this may seem silly to you, but I say we are the poorer for it: rock music magazines. (Which were often tabloid-sized newsprint in their first issues.)

Oh, grow up Charles. You’re not in college anymore and who really cares about music now anyway? Exactly the point. I care, and I know a lot of people who care, and more people would care if we still had those magazines that treated it as vital. My people go to live shows and listen on their various devices to rich worlds of diverse music.

Their numbers may be smaller than when I was a kid, but as long as there are kids coming up they will find their music in their own modern way. They’ll find crappy clipped, compressed MP3 versions of their music, but they’ll still be able to sing along. And hopefully, some day stumble upon high definition music files, or even get hooked on vinyl. Now we have YouTube and all manner of worldwide Internet music sites that can be as useful as the great FM radio stations and enlightened DJs of my youth.

But the great music magazines of yore - Rolling Stone, Crawdaddy, CREEM (you have to spell it all caps, even though the magazine cover itself did not) are gone or corporately co-opted. In their layout, subject matter, photos, their rebellion and willingness to take chances but within a credible journalistic arena, and especially in their attitude of respect for the music driving this emerging youth counter culture, they changed the landscape.

I was a young student sitting in the middle of New Mexico (nowhere, man), energized by my fascination with and love for great music that moved me, this rock and roll that hit me, as a little kid, when I saw Elvis on TV (pre-censorship), but not considering it more than a personal, youthful indulgence. And the whole thing was drenched in the drug culture, so, can’t be legit, right?

But here in these pages were highly intelligent, sophisticated observers, around my age (but living in golden music cities like San Francisco, LA and New York), outstanding writers and thinkers, dissecting it in a timeless, universal perspective of history and the changes taking place in the arts, culture and politics.

It did matter. Even though the world had not seen its like before, it was art. I understood. I related. They gave voice to a generational instinct, and I wanted to be one of those people.

Thus was I launched on a lifelong career path of music journalism that kept most of that handful of us, impassioned and cursed with just a drop enough of talent, in poverty. Nobody warned us about that. But I had great seats to all the best shows, stories for a lifetime and rooms full of vinyl. (See “Almost Famous.”) No regrets.

The saving grace? Read Rolling Stone for its politics, for its investigative journalism. Especially, read Matt Taibbi, anything he writes, wherever he is published. If journalism is dying Taibbi doesn’t know it or show it.

Pretty ironic: here I am, as a music-loving journalist, dissing the Rolling Stone I say inspired me in our respective youths, and some kid is out there reading RS and becoming inspired to be a straight (not music) journalist. Dr. Hook, I think there’s a song there.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO ALL MY FRIENDS - THE PERFECT PRESENT?

I spent most of my life having a lot of really good friends whom I rarely saw. When we did get together it was great, as though no time had passed since the last time.

But when I traveled for a year in Europe and North Africa three years ago, I saw a different way. I observed many people who made the effort to make arrangements, get out of their house and get together with friends.

I resolved to do that, and have since returning, and I couldn’t be happier about it. Not just old friends, but newer ones, mostly in Santa Monica, whom I only occasionally bump into but never for more than a few minutes.

So I’ve been trying to schedule coffee, or lunch, or drinks with a lot of people. I saw recently that a friend was having a birthday so I offered to buy her a coffee and she responded that she would love to, that she was even thinking just then of posting to Facebook that her perfect present from friends would be to spend a little time with them.

Our time at a local fancy coffeehouse flew, more than an hour. I kept my eye on my watch, to feed the meter, and did feed it once but got back into conversation. When we finally got up to leave it couldn’t have been more than two minutes past meter expiration (I thought I was early), but there was a big fat ticket on my car. I think I probably said a bad word. Maybe twice.

My friend immediately stepped forward and swiped the dire document from the windshield and shoved it deep into her purse. “It was my fault,” she said, which of course it wasn’t. “I kept you talking.” It was obvious I was not going to get that ticket back, so I thanked her copiously, if awkwardly.

Then I realized, before I even pulled away from the curb, that her generous, spontaneous act of kindness changed my entire day. I could feel good about our get together, as I had just before spotting that damnable ducat, whereas otherwise I would likely be muttering and cursing and feeling dark and having trouble holding on to any good feelings. My smile got even bigger.

Why am I telling you this? Several lessons for me. You? - who ya gonna call?

Tongva Park Holly Rothschild's Seacclipse to replay at Tongva Park

On Wednesday, Sept. 9, from 7:30 - 8:45 p.m. Holly Rothschild replays her site-specific dance work Seacclipse, which was commissioned especially for Tongva Park last year and premiered to rapt audiences. The work will traverse five different areas of the park, highlighting its varied settings and one-of-a-kind architectural features. Spectators will follow the dancers into each of the park's distinctive terrains, exploring the landscape's textures, intimate spaces and urban vistas. Choreographed by Holly Rothschild, the piece features dancers Genevieve Carson, Danny Dolan, Lavinia Findikoglu, Princess Mecca and Andrea Sobke.

These events are free and open to the public. Tongva Park is centrally located in Santa Monica's Civic Center at 1615 Ocean Ave and is easily accessible by foot, bike, or bus. Ample bike parking is located near each park entrance (Ocean Avenue, Main Street, and Olympic Boulevard). Several Metro and Big Blue Bus lines have stops adjacent to the park. Limited metered street parking is available. Parking is also available at the Civic Center Parking Structure (333 Civic Center Drive, enter off Fourth Street) - the first 30 minutes are free, $1 for each additional hour, up to a maximum of $5/day.

For updated information on the programming, visit smgov.net/tongvapark/events.

Citywide Future-oriented "news" site to promote author's new science fiction novel

Local author Ryan Hyatt has timed the September release of his first science fiction novel, "Stay Younger Longer," with an online 'news' site, The La-La Lander. The La-La Lander is a popular Los Angeles-based newspaper in Hyatt's tale, and Hyatt's real-life version of the site will serve as a forum for news stories and commentaries that play on current events and provide a source of curiosity, discussion and amusement for readers about the future. "Stay Younger Longer" is the first in a series of science fiction novels by Hyatt to be released over the next few years, and The La-La Lander also will serve as a platform to promote Hyatt and other science fiction writers' work.

Hyatt was born in Tucson in 1976. He was raised in Phoenix, Los Angeles, Chicago and Copenhagen before returning to his hometown and graduating from the University of Arizona in 1999 with a bachelor's degree in history, psychology and creative writing. Hyatt spent much of his twenties working as a reporter and columnist for newspapers such as the Apache Junction Independent and Santa Monica Daily Press. He is author of the modern western, "The Death of Rock 'n' Roll: A Biography of Darrell Breedlove." Currently, he holds a master's degree in special education from California State University Northridge and works as a teacher in Los Angeles, striving to improve the literacy of high school English students. Hyatt is a proud and happy father. His only regret is that he could not stay younger longer. Visit <http://www.amazon.com/Ryan-Hyatt/e/B002QH4STE> for more information.

But it wasn't what he really wanted.

"I realized that's not where my passion lied," he said. "That financial world was not where I wanted to continue my career."

His true interest was mentoring youths through athletics, which he had done as a volunteer coach in park leagues and other recreational settings.

So Ballaret changed course and charted a path into athletic administration that recently landed him at Santa Monica High School as its new athletic director.

"This was my opportunity to come in, especially at a program as storied as Santa Monica, grow the program, and bring it to new levels and new heights," he said. "When the opening came up, it was something I couldn't resist applying for. It's a dream-come-true type of job."

Ballaret replaces Al Trundle, a longtime

Santa Monica-Malibu school district employee who remains on staff as an advisor at the high school.

Ballaret arrives at Samohi after a three-year stint at Our Community School, a K-8 public charter school in Chatsworth where he served as a teacher and coach. He taught math and science and also coached boys basketball and flag football, among other duties.

Previously, Ballaret worked for five years at the private Mary Immaculate School in Pacoima.

Although his experience is primarily at the middle school level, he had long envisioned working at a high school. And he found one with a large student body, a rich athletic tradition and the potential for growth in up-and-coming sports.

"The opportunity to come into a school like Santa Monica was too good to pass up," he said.

Ballaret acknowledged that his work in the field has come in lower grades and at smaller schools, but he believes his experiences in coaching, education and financial management have prepared him for his role at Samohi.

He hopes to continue developing the Vikings' athletic program while exploring additional opportunities for students. He named lacrosse as a sport with ample potential for growth in the near future.

"My goal is to have a well-rounded program," he said. "I don't want Samohi to be known as a one-sport or two-sport school. I want kids to come out and play, and I want Samohi to be in the news for many different sports. That's my long-term goal: to have that kind of reputation that we are an all-around excellent sports school."

Ballaret, who grew up in the San Fernando Valley, earned his business degree from USC with concentrations in finance and entrepreneurship.

With a few coaching gigs under his belt, he secured a job as a coach at Mary Immaculate, where he eventually took on teaching responsibilities as well.

Then, after receiving a master's in education from Mount St. Mary's University in Los Angeles, Ballaret weaved his way into an administrative role before moving on to Our Community School.

Ballaret noted the importance of athletics to the development and mental growth of students.

"For some, it's a motivating factor to do well in school," he said. "It helps to build a well-rounded student. They learn not just how to play a sport, but how to be a teammate, how to have confidence, how to have good practice habits, how to be a leader. You learn so many different skills. Going through an athletic program can help you in all aspects of life, whether it's in athletics or business or the arts."

Ballaret, who started his current job in mid-August, has spent his first few weeks on the job getting organized, meeting colleagues and making sure everything is in place for the fall sports season.

"Everything's going great," he said. "I've enjoyed every minute that I've been here since I stepped on campus."

minimal level of discount currently being offered on most products. The fare restructuring presented, herein, will encourage greater use of prepaid fare media through discounting and is expected to contribute to the reduction of cash payment customers to less than 35 percent of all customers."

According to BBB, the new fare structure will increase prepaid usage, minimize ridership loss by providing pricing options, reduce fare handling, increase boarding time, leave senior/disabled fares unchanged and increase revenue to offset costs related to Expo Plan improvements.

City Council approved the service changes in April of this year. Council adopted their biennial budget in June that included the BBB's revenue projections and council is expected to hear the item for a third time as part of their consent calendar on October 27. New fares will be implemented on January 10 of 2016.

BBB Government and Community Relations manager Suja Lowenthal said the Sept. 10 event is an opportunity for the public to hear a presentation about the fee structure. She said director of Transit Services, Edward King, will speak about the changes and there will be an opportunity to ask questions about the fare increases toward the end of the meeting. She said residents will also be able to provide written feedback or give input via other methods.

"We're also looking for folks to provide us input via email, letters, social media ... however they wish to communicate, we'd like to hear from them," she said.

She said current bus riders might have more hands-on experience with the system but everyone is welcome to attend and give feedback.

Residents can find more information about the fare proposal at <http://bigbluebus.com>.

LABOR DAY CHAMPIONS
The Santa Monica United G97 team spent their Labor Day weekend working hard. Playing five games over the weekend, they had to get past three highly ranked teams in the United Cup 2015 women's tournament. Finishing up at 9 p.m. on Monday night, Santa Monica United won a dramatic final match 5-4 in penalty kicks to take home the champion's trophy.

tled for $710,000.
Court documents related to the lawsuit show that then Mayor Pam O'Connor was upset with Riel's hiring and that O'Connor sent several emails to then City Manager Rod Gould expressing her distrust and dislike of Riel. Riel was a political supporter of current Mayor Kevin McKeown, had contributed to a mailer critical of O'Connor and written commentaries for the Daily Press also criticizing O'Connor's positions.

In his deposition, the now retired Gould cited Riel's past political activity as the reason he withdrew the job offer and said Riel should have been more forthcoming about her past actions during her job interview. However, SMCLC has alleged the decision to fire Riel was prompted by O'Connor's actions.

According to the city charter "Neither the City Council nor any of its members shall order or request directly or indirectly the appointment of any person to an office or employment or the removal of any person therefrom, by the City Manager, or by any of the department heads in the administrative service of the City."

City staff confirmed the complaint, first brought to the Santa Monica City Attorney's office, has been sent to the county. Doing so is standard practice when the City Attorney has a conflict of interest, as would be the case when prosecuting a member of the city council.

This would be the second time a complaint against O'Connor has been sent to the County District Attorney's office.

The first was an alleged violation of Santa Monica's anti-corruption law, known as the Oak's Initiative in 2014. In that case, O'Connor is accused of accepting campaign contributions from individuals that stood to gain financially from decisions made by the council. In that case, District Attorney Jackie Lacey declined to take up the complaint saying her office shouldn't become the de facto enforcer of the law and cited constitutional concerns over the Oak's implementation.

In this case, the allegation describes a violation of the City Charter and seeks prosecution under a different section of the law.

In a statement, SMCLC said the City should pursue the complaint even if the County D.A. declines to prosecute.

"On the criminal side, we have informed the City that should the DA decide not to take the case, it will not be acceptable for the City to drop the matter," they said. "Santa Monica cannot enforce laws against leaf blowers but not against its very highest officials. The criminal complaint must be fully investigated."

The SMCLC statement also claims "the City will soon be taking steps to hire experienced, independent counsel to conduct an outside investigation into this matter and publicly report his/her findings."

However, no proposal is listed on current or future city agendas to discuss hiring an independent council and the City Attorney's office did not return calls by press time.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON AUGUST 28 AT APPROXIMATELY 8:30 P.M.

The victim arrived home and found her brother (the suspect) acting erratically, as if he was under the influence of drugs. A short time later, the suspect grabbed the victim's house keys and walked out the front door. The victim's other brother followed the suspect on foot, while the victim eventually got her mother's car to pick them up. After stopping at a store, the victim drove her brother and the suspect back home. After parking the car though, the suspect got out of the back seat and began kicking the passenger door several times, until it bent forward past its hinges. The suspect then walked away again as the victim called the police. Officers located the suspect nearby and detained him, then later took him into custody and booked him at the Santa Monica jail. Michael Anthony Allen, 25, of Santa Monica had bail set at $20,000.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★ ★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Artist Anish Kapoor initially denied that his 400 to 500 tons of stones, called "Dirty Corner," were "problematic," but later conceded that they might have "multiple interpretive possibilities." The installation, which ran through the summer at France's Palace of Versailles with five other large sculptures, was arranged in the form of a huge vulva, and represented, he said, "the vagina of a queen who is taking power."

■ (1) A Pig Flies: On Aug. 20, a 250-pound pig was knocked free of a trailer traveling at 65 mph on Interstate 25 near Fort Collins, Colorado -- thus briefly, at least, sailing. It was not badly hurt. (2) In July, Mexican customs officers detained an American and a Mexican on the bridge between El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, with 13 pounds of marijuana the two allegedly were smuggling into Mexico to sell. (The month before, Juarez officials arrested another El Paso woman with a kilo of crystal meth allegedly destined for Mexican sale.)

■ Short-Term Rehab: Heath Franklin, 44, was arrested on Aug. 20 at the Wal-Mart in Dalton, Georgia, charged with taking "upskirt" photos of female shoppers. Franklin, a registered sex offender, had been released on Aug. 19 from Central State Prison, where he was serving a term for sexual offenses (including taking unlawful photos).

"I'm just proud we live in a world where boys can play princess and girls can play soldier," Swift said, clutching an astronaut trophy.

A different take on gender politics was put forth by Amber Rose, who, along with Blac Chyna, showed up for the awards show in outfits covered with words like "golddigger," "bitch" and "whore." The obviously bold fashion statement intended to reclaim words that both of the women say they've been called in the past. Words hold power over us as long as we let them, so Rose's tactic was a good one.

There's nothing wrong with taking a stance, but stances work best when they're well defined and fit the event. An awards show is partly for better or

This year you have many great ideas. Often others chime in and support you in the pursuit of one or more of your potential plans or schemes. You need to take some extra time for yourself this year, as so much happens so fast. If you are single, use care with someone you meet whom you might want to get closer to. You are likely to encounter at least one person who is emotionally unavailable. If you are attached, the two of you love to run away from your life and go somewhere you can't be found! These escapades support your bond. LEO makes a great healer for you.
