WAXMAN

Waxman's running for real this time

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

BEVERLY HILLS Rep. Henry Waxman (D-Santa Monica) has represented the Westside in Congress since 1975.

In that time, he's racked up influence points as ranking member and — in 2009 and 2010 — chairman of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce where he oversaw legislation relating to public health, telecommunications and interstate commerce, as well as the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform where he participated in investigations meant to root out waste and abuse in government contracting as well as corporate wrongdoing.

Despite his track record, Waxman is looking toward the November election with a bit of trepidation.

He's running in the newly-redrawn 33rd Congressional District, which now includes territories like the South Bay and Palos Verdes Peninsula, two areas with voters that

Samohi Vikings dominate at Palisades, 53-12

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA

PACIFIC PALISADES Just when it seemed that Santa Monica liked to air out the football they decided to turn the page in their playbook and kept things on the ground against host Palisades on Friday.

Behind six total rushing touchdowns, Samohi dispatched longtime rival Palisades, 53-12, while improving to 2-0 on the season.

"If they give us the run, that's what we'll do," Samohi head coach Travis Clark said. "We're going to do what they allow us to do, run or pass."

From the initial kick off it was obvious Samohi came to play. Wide receiver Sebastian LaRue got things started with a 61-yard return to set up the game's first score. Junior running back Will Taylor ensured that the return would pay off when he scored on a 10-yard scamper just 50 seconds into the game.

Taylor would go on to score two more rushing touchdowns on the night.

"[Palisades] looked good stopping the run on film," Taylor said. "I just followed my blocks. I had to step up."

By the time the half came around Samohi held a decisive 43-6 lead.

Samohi's Clark, satisfied with the lead,

WTC memorial magnificent, but at a steep price

DAVID B. CARUSO & DAVID PORTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK With its huge reflecting pools, ringed by waterfalls and skyscrapers, and a cavernous underground museum still under construction, the National Sept. 11 Memorial and Museum at the World Trade Center is an awesome spectacle that moved and inspired some 4.5 million visitors in its first year.

But all that eye-welling magnificence comes with a jaw-dropping price tag. The foundation that runs the memorial estimates that once the roughly $700 million project is complete, the memorial and museum will together cost $60 million a year to operate.

The anticipated cost has bothered some critics and raised concerns even among the memorial's allies that the budget may be unsustainable without a hefty government subsidy.

By comparison, the National Park Service budgeted $8.4 million this year to operate and maintain Gettysburg National Military Park and $3.6 million for the monument that includes the USS Arizona Memorial at Pearl Harbor. Running Arlington National Cemetery, which has more than 14,000 graves and receives 4 million visitors a year, costs $45 million annually.

Officials at the 9/11 memorial say they face unique challenges that make comparisons to other national memorials difficult.

The foundation plans to spend at least a fifth of its operating budget, or around $12 million per year, on private security because of terrorism fears. Visitors to the memorial plaza pass through airport-like security, and armed guards patrol the grounds.

"The fact of the matter is that this was a place that was attacked twice," said Joseph Daniels, the foundation's president and chief executive.

Just operating the two massive fountains that mark the spots where the twin towers once stood will cost another $4.5 million to $5 million annually, said the foundation's spokesman, Michael Frazier.

Foundation officials didn't respond to requests for information about other costs at the site, including the anticipated expense of running the museum, which is still unfinished and might not be anytime soon.

The museum was supposed to open this month, but construction all but ceased a year ago because of a funding squabble between the foundation and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which owns the land the memorial sits on.

Daniels said it will take at least a year for the museum to open once construction resumes, meaning the site may not be fully complete until at least 2014.

'Possession' remains No. 1 at weak box office

DERRIK J. LANG
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES "The Possession" occupied the top spot at a nearly comatose box office.

The fright flick with Kyra Sedgwick and Jeffrey Dean Morgan playing the parents of a girl possessed by a demon earned $9.5 million in its second outing, the lowest grossing weekend for the box office this year and one of the worst weekends at the box office in a decade. It marked the first time since 2008 that no film managed to crack the $10 million mark.

The weekend after Labor Day is typically the slowest of the year, but this weekend's grosses were down 20 percent over last year when "Contagion" opened in first place with $22.4 million. Total box office revenues are estimated at $67 million, which would make this the worst weekend at the box office since the weekend after 9/11 when revenues were $59.7 million.

"There just wasn't a strong opener," said Paul Dergarabedian, box-office analyst for Hollywood.com. "We came off a summer that ended with a whimper. There wasn't any momentum. It just comes down to the movies and the marketplace. There's wasn't some extraneous force keeping people out of the theaters. This crop of movies just didn't have that solid draw."

The bootlegging tale "Lawless" starring Shia LaBeouf, Tom Hardy and Jessica Chastain kept a lock on the No. 2 position in its second weekend with $6 million, bringing its total haul to $23.5 million, while "The Words" featuring Bradley Cooper as an aspiring writer and Zoe Saldana as his girlfriend debuted in third place with $5 million.

A pair of action sequels rounded out the top five films. The ensemble flick "The Expendables 2" earned $4.7 million in its fourth weekend, while "The Bourne Legacy" captured $4 million in its fifth outing at the box office. "Expendables 2" also won $14 million internationally in 23 territories, and "Bourne Legacy" nabbed $13 million in 49 territories.

"2016: Obama's America," a conservative film exploring the roots of President Barack Obama's political views, raised its total to $26 million in its ninth week of release, earning another $3.3 million this weekend. That now makes "2016" the second highest

Interesting past

Editor:

I noted with interest that Mayor Richard Bloom successfully nominated Lael Rubin for a position on the Airport Commission ("New airport commissioner breaks mold," Aug. 31).

If I remember correctly, Lael Rubin was the chief prosecutor in the 1980's infamous McMartin pre-school case. Her zeal ruined the lives of seven people and started a nation-wide witch hunt for child molesters in pre-schools. She is credited with single-handedly eliminating males from pre-school employment.

In spite of having co-prosecutor Glenn Stevens leave the case in disgust after testifying that the prosecution team withheld evidence from the defense, Rubin pressed on. She still holds the nationwide record for the longest (seven years) and costliest trial (over $13 million) in history. Ultimately, after almost every shred of "evidence" was shown to be false or fabricated by the so-called experts testifying for the prosecution, no convictions were handed down by the jury. Rubin explained the lack of convictions as "jury fatigue" but everyone else called it long delayed justice.

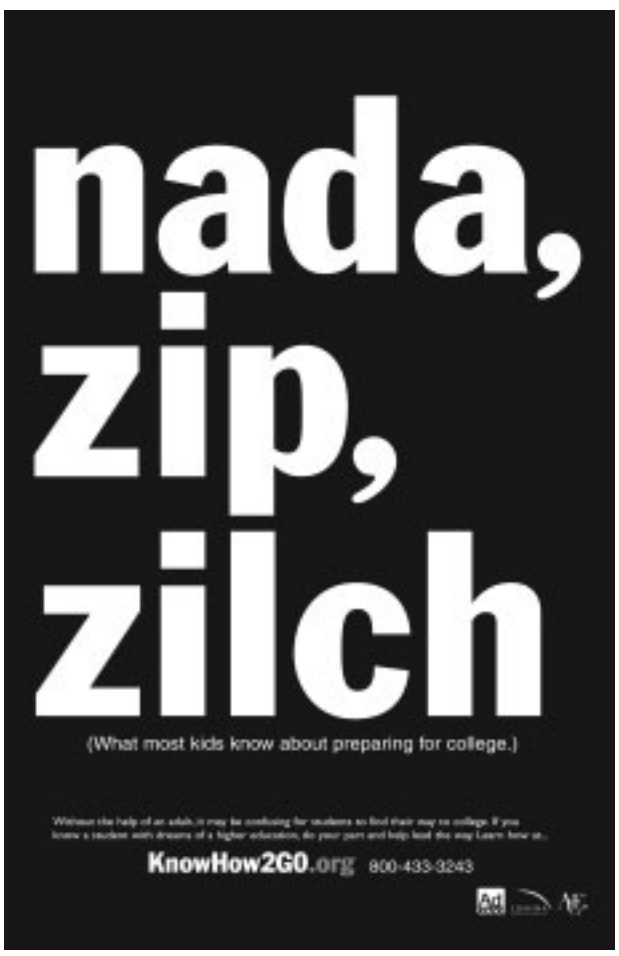

During the trial, she revealed (just before a competing local paper did) that she was dating David Rosenzweig, L.A. Times metro desk editor. Some thought that this revelation explained why the L.A. Times gave such enthusiastic and unquestioned coverage to the prosecution's side of the case.

If you want to watch Mercedes Ruehl play Rubin, check your Netflix cue for "Indictment:The McMartin Trial."

Mayor Bloom praised her "analytical and legal skills" and said she "is not vested in any particular outcome at the airport." Then again, he said almost the same thing about David Goddard in March 2011 and Goddard immediately moved to close the airport and has led the commission in generating ideas about how to use the airport after closing. We can only imagine what Bloom has cooking with this appointment.

Maybe Lael Rubin truly doesn't know anything about aviation, but from all reports, she apparently knows a lot about railroading. Let's hope she can find a more balanced perspective this time.

Latest SM City Council race is off and running

THE MOST IMPORTANT CITY Council endorsements were made in July when members of the powerful Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights (SMRR) organization endorsed planning commissioner Ted Winterer and council incumbent Gleam Davis. A week later, SMRR's secretive steering committee added former City Councilman Tony Vazquez and incumbent Terry O'Day to "The SMRR Team."

Last week, the political action committee (PAC) for the Coalition of Santa Monica City Employees (CSMCE), representing nine municipal employee unions with 1,600 non-public safety employees, announced they were endorsing Davis, O'Day, Winterer and entertainment attorney Frank Gruber.

The city's two public safety unions — Santa Monica Firefighters Local 1109 and the Police Officers Association (POA) — will also endorse council candidates. The POA should announce their picks, today. These bargaining units are primarily concerned with wage and benefits packages for their respective members. This year, as in previous years, they will be actively campaigning for their respective slates.

Endorsements from two school advocacy groups — the Community for Excellent Public Schools (CEPS) and Leadership, Effectiveness, Accountability and Direction (LEAD) — are expected soon.

Development and planning issues seem to be on the front burner this election. Traffic is the number one issue followed by development. There's no doubt that City Hall's development policies and inability to deal with traffic increases have resulted in expanding gridlock all over town — and an increasingly unhappy electorate.

Many residents view Santa Monica's traffic congestion as a direct result of City Hall's permissive stance on new and larger developments. Even though planning staff and their highly overpaid consultants boast that "sustainable" mitigation measures such as bicycling and pedestrian infrastructure improvements will mean "no new net car trips," traffic still gets worse and worse.

Two citizen groups concerned with development issues will support restrained development candidates. Santa Monica Coalition for a Livable City (SMCLC) which was behind 2008's failed Measure T ballot measure that would have temporarily capped commercial growth to reduce traffic impacts in the city has already endorsed planning commissioners Winterer and Richard McKinnon.

The new Santa Monicans for Responsible Growth (SMRG) has formed a PAC and promises to endorse candidates they think will back more temperate development policy. If the slow growth contingent expects to have any influence on the pace of development in the community, they must put up a united front, support the same qualified "slow growth" candidates and work hard to get their people elected.

Conversely, developer and hotel interests will be sending out slick, color mailers under the name of some phony citizen's group such as Santa Monicans for Quality Government. As they have in previous years, these brochures will tout pro-development candidates as being against big development and push the big lie: "Development doesn't cause traffic." Organizers and consultants behind the so-called "citizen's group" will once again hide their supporters and financial contributors.

Major projects — such as the Fairmont Miramar Hotel renovation and expansion and the construction of a half-dozen new, large, mixed-use/office projects (including the highly controversial East Village development at the Village Trailer Park and Bergamot Transit Village project at the Paper Mate site) — won't be up for council approval until after the election.

Pro-development incumbents such as O'Day and Davis have dodged a bullet because they now don't have to risk voter disapproval by supporting these projects or lose developer campaign contributions by opposing them.

A few more viable candidates are also coming down the track.

Environmentalist and recent Planning Commission appointee McKinnon is getting some support from slow growth advocates. Like other lesser-known challengers, he needs to become better known to voters.

I've met former TV news producer John Cyrus Smith a couple of times, He impresses me as a smart, no-nonsense type of guy who also needs more exposure.

Attorney and neighborhood activist Bob Seldon has his hat in the ring. I know Seldon personally. He supports controlled growth and "green" initiatives and he's firmly rooted in reality. Like Smith, he uses common sense when solving problems.

"Urbanist" Gruber has consistently supported big development interests and their projects in his sufsantamonica.com opinion columns over the years. On his FrankGruber2012 web page, he's posted, "Santa Monica must continue to control development for the benefit of all." Is this the same Gruber who described slow growth/anti-traffic advocates as "Santa Monicans fearful of change" in his writings?

Former City Councilman (1990-94) Tony Vazquez jumped into the race after 18 years on the sidelines. His single council term was fraught with controversy. He voted against a number of key public safety measures and his feud with the POA contributed to his failure to be re-elected for a second term back in the day. Vazquez says things are different now. It remains to be seen if this leopard has changed his spots.

Why is school activist Shari Davis running for City Council? She should be shooting for school board being that she has been behind every school tax and bond measure in recent memory. Maybe, with a council seat, she could funnel even more city money to our fiscally voracious school district.

Other council candidates have little chance of winning a seat. They won't get key endorsements, recruit enough volunteers or raise sufficient money to make any impact. I suspect some are running for ego. Who knows about the others.

More to come. Stay tuned.

Tests confirm oil came from BP spill in Gulf

CAIN BURDEAU & JAY REEVES
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS Laboratory tests show that globs of oil found on two Louisiana beaches after Hurricane Isaac came from the 2010 BP spill.

Tests run by Louisiana State University for state wildlife officials confirmed that oil found on Elmer's Island and Grand Isle matched the biological fingerprint of the hundreds of millions of gallons of oil that spewed from BP's Macondo well.

On Wednesday, BP PLC said oil from its spill had been exposed by Isaac's waves and that the company would work to clean it up.

Ed Overton, the LSU chemist who did the state tests, said the oil found on Elmer's Island had not degraded much while oil at Grand Isle had.

"Both were good solid matches on Macondo oil," Overton said.

Two other samples collected from another barrier island did not match the signature of oil from the BP well.

Experts expected that hurricane waves would stir up oil buried along the Gulf Coast and that Isaac, which made landfall on Aug. 28 and soaked the region in the days afterward, apparently did just that. Reports of tar balls washing up on beaches after the storm were reported in Alabama and Louisiana, two states that got hit hard by BP's massive offshore oil spill.

On Tuesday, scouts found what they described as a large tar mat on the beaches of Elmer's Island, prompting state officials to close a 13-mile stretch of beach and restrict fishing along that shoreline.

Still, Overton said the discovery of the buried oil does not mean that the Gulf is seeing a repeat of the summer of 2010, when oil was spewing from an out-of-control well about 55 miles off the Louisiana coast.

"This is not oil everywhere," Overton said. He said the difference between the amounts of oil being exposed now by Isaac and what the Gulf saw in 2010 is "night and day."

Still, he said more oil was likely buried in other places along the coast, perhaps as deep as 3 feet. He said the difficulty for cleanup crews has been finding and removing buried oil.

About 100 pounds of tar balls collected on the Alabama coast after Isaac are being tested at Auburn University, which has a contract with local government to assess the material. Researcher Joel Hayworth said a full chemical analysis isn't yet complete, but the new tar deposits appeared "remarkably similar" in composition and consistency to tar found on state beaches during and immediately after the BP spill.

The tar balls are "clean," he said, virtually identical in size and shape to ones found in 2010 and fragile enough that they fall apart when handled. That indicates material on the bottom of the coast isn't moving much and is very near the surf line, Hayworth said.

"They are resident tar balls that got redistributed by Isaac," Hayworth said.

Relatively pristine tar balls have washed ashore with each tropical system that has hit the Alabama coast since the spill, Hayworth said, indicating the material isn't going anywhere.

"We're in year three and this seems to be the new normal for the Gulf Coast," said Hayworth. "For some unforeseeable time, this is going to be the new normal for the beach."

On Thursday, BP said the company expected to see "residual oil" after Isaac. The company said the tar balls and tar mats found after Isaac were in places where the company had ongoing cleanup operations.

The company said oil found after Isaac would be sampled to see if it matched that from the Macondo well. The company has said some oil may not be from its well. The company cleanup work in Florida and Alabama has resumed while crews were expected to start work Friday in Louisiana. Work in Mississippi has been delayed due to extensive debris in areas where it wants to send teams, BP said.

"If there's something good about this storm, it made it visible where we can clean it up," BP spokesman Ray Melick said on Wednesday.

The spill began after the explosion of the BP-leased drilling rig Deepwater Horizon on the night of April 20, 2010. The blast killed 11 workers and started the nation's worst offshore oil spill. Beaches, marshes and seafood grounds from Louisiana east to Florida were fouled for months.

BP has been running TV ads touting Gulf Coast tourism and urging people to "come on down."

Safety for kitties

Dear EarthTalk:

Which are the most eco-friendly and non-toxic (to people, cats and sanitation systems) cat litters?

–Sam Barnes,
Macon, GA

It makes sense that environmentally enlightened cat owners would want cat litter made from natural products that will not potentially compromise their health or that of their beloved pets. Many mass market cat litters contain significant amounts of silica dust which has been linked to upper respiratory issues in cats and even humans. Likewise, the chemical fragrances in many cat litters can also be toxic to cats.

Yet another issue is the sodium bentonite clay in "clumping" cat litters. The fact that this type of clay can swell up to 15 times its original volume when a cat urinates or defecates into it makes it an excellent cat litter substrate, as waste clumps can be scooped out and filled in without changing the entire litter box. But when cats ingest this material it can cause gastrointestinal distress that in some cases can lead to death. Also, the clay commonly used can be derived from environmentally destructive strip mining.

But thanks to increased concern for cats' health and the environment, there are plenty of greener options out there. To wit, Yesterday's News cat litter is made from recycled newspaper and is reportedly three times more absorbent than clay. It is non-toxic and contains no scented fragrances, but its makers say it is still tough on odors, and is 99.7 percent dust-free. It also comes in recyclable paper packaging.

Wood shavings and sawdust also make good cat litter substrates. NEPCO's Cedarific Natural Cat Litter is a blend of hardwood and cedar chips with no clay or silica dust. Besides being inexpensive, it is easy to handle, has a pleasant odor, and is biodegradable and compostable. Other wood/sawdust alternatives include Feline Pine, which is made from dust-free pine chips, and Better Way Cat Litter, which combines clay with cedar chips for natural odor control. Yet another great choice is Eco-Shell's Purr & Simple Cat Litter, made from a proprietary blend of fibrous material from annually renewable tree-nut crops.

SwheatScoop Natural Wheat Litter keeps odors at bay through the power of natural enzymes in renewable wheat crops; it is low-dust and low-tracking besides being biodegradable and compostable. Meanwhile, World's Best Cat Litter is made from whole kernel corn. And Benevo Cat Litter is made from non-genetically modified maize and other vegetable derivatives.

Frugal eco-conscious cat owners might consider making their own cat litter by repurposing everyday materials that would otherwise end up in the waste stream. Plain sawdust makes great cat litter, but doesn't control odor as well as other substrates and might be hard to find in urban areas. The website treehugger.com offers instructions on how to turn old newspapers into cat litter; the process is a bit involved but can save money while extending the life of discarded newsprint.

Cat litter made from natural materials can also be composted as a way to reduce waste while creating rich soil for the garden. The Glenbrook North Zero Waste Blog in Vancouver, BC provides instructions on how to get healthy compost from cat litter derived from wood, sawdust or vegetable products.

Don't let Santa Monica City Hall throw your community's values under the Big Blue Bus!

For many years, AIDS Project Los Angeles has purchased advertisements on Big Blue Bus to help educate and engage the public.

This year, they are rejecting AIDS Walk Los Angeles promotions and all other non-commercial ads from charities. In doing so, they provide an economic advantage to corporate interests, and a disadvantage to community interests. Their decision targets all non-profit ads which foster community spirit, help those who are most vulnerable, and provide valuable information to the public.

WE NEED YOUR HELP TO FIGHT BACK!

Step 1:
Call Mayor Richard Bloom and the Santa Monica City Council at 310.458.8201 to express your outrage over this discriminatory and absurd policy.

grossing political documentary of all time behind director Michael Moore's "Fahrenheit 9/11," which holds the top spot with $119.1 million.

"The Cold Light of Day," the weekend's only other new major release, wasn't able to see the light of the top 10. The drama starring Henry Cavill and Bruce Willis earned just $1.8 million in the No. 13 spot.

Below "The Cold Light of Day," an IMAX re-release of 1981's "Indiana Jones and the Raiders of the Lost Ark" collected $1.7 million in the No. 14 position. The film starring Harrison Ford as the iconic archaeologist is playing a limited engagement in 267 theaters.

Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Hollywood.com. Where available, latest international numbers are also included. Final domestic figures will be released Monday.

MEMORIAL

The failure to open the museum on time has thrown off the foundation's financial planning. Officials had expected to use the museum, being built mostly with money from various government agencies, plus private donations, as its main source of revenue.

While visitors will be allowed into the above-ground portions of the memorial for free, the foundation plans to charge people to descend into the museum's exhibition space, where they will see portraits of the nearly 3,000 victims, hear oral histories of the tragedy and view artifacts such as the staircase World Trade Center workers used to flee on 9/11.

The admission price hasn't been set. Foundation officials say they may also charge a "suggested donation" where visitors would be allowed to enter for free but would be strongly encouraged to pay a yet-undecided amount.

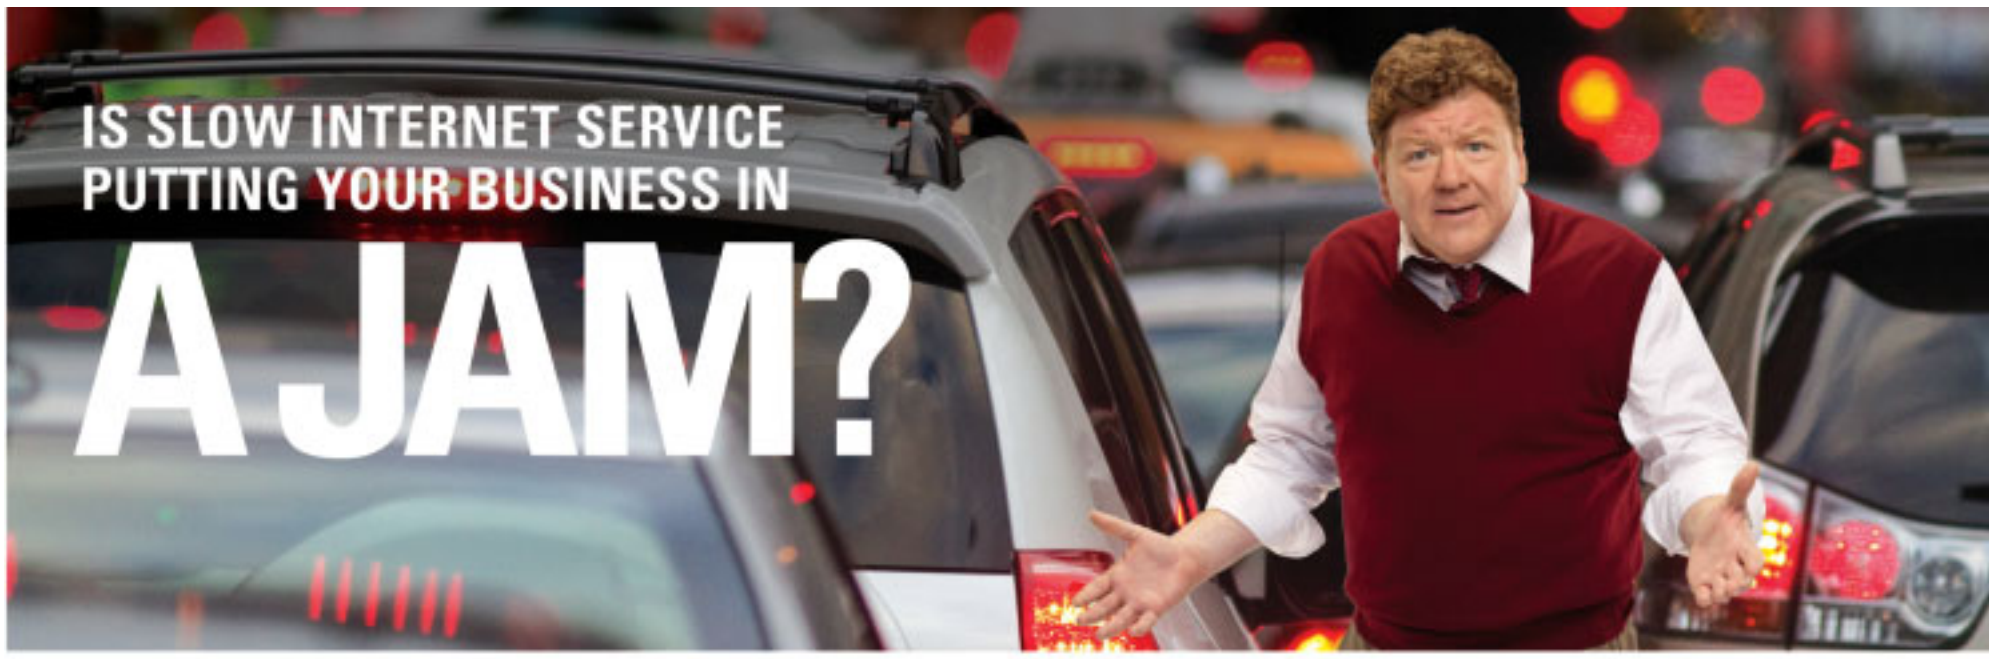

But if the museum gets the 2 million visitors a year the foundation expects, a $12 fee, like the one charged at the memorial to the victims of the 1995 Oklahoma City bombing, would cover 40 percent of the operating costs. More money will be generated through fundraising and the sale of memorabilia.

In addition, the foundation and several elected officials have proposed that the American public pick up one-third of the operating costs.

So far, Congress has balked. A bill proposed by Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, that would have had the National Park Service contribute $20 million per year ran into opposition from Sen. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., who noted that the federal government had already spent $300 million on the project.

A National Park Service official, William Shaddox, testified at a hearing that $20 million is more than the agency can afford, and larger than the entire annual appropriation for nearly 99 percent of the parks in its system.

have never heard of him before.

His opponent, Bill Bloomfield, of Manhattan Beach, is a political neophyte, but is running as an Independent and is independently wealthy, making him able to pump money into his own campaign.

"I don't think he can win, but I'm not going to take it for granted so that's why I'm going to be doing as much of a campaign as I can afford," Waxman said.

Waxman says he wants to stay in office because he still has things he hopes to accomplish. He wants to tackle legislation to fight climate change, reform the tax code and take on immigration reform, issues he feels have been stymied by Republican intransigence.

In a sit down conversation with the Daily Press, Waxman discussed his past, present and what he hopes will be his future representing Santa Monica and the Westside in the halls of Congress.

(The responses have been edited for length and clarity.)

Daily Press: What inspired you initially to go into politics?

Henry Waxman: I always thought I would be in politics. I was interested in the issues. The issues in those days were different than the ones now in some ways but they're ongoing questions of fairness and justice.

I got into the State Assembly and then had a chance to run for Congress after redistricting. That was done by the courts. I have been in congress ever since. I was first elected in 1974, and took office in 1975. The thing that inspired me to get into politics and public office is that I think government has a very important role to play to help people, to let people succeed as far as their talents will take them, and I think government has to be there to provide a safety net for those who cannot succeed so we can respect their dignity. And there are very essential services of government such as education, roads, infrastructure and funding research.

DP: You've been in office for over three decades. Why run for re-election? What do you want to do?

HW: I'm proud of the accomplishments I've had over the years … But there are things I still want to do. I think it's important that we develop an energy policy that lowers green house gas emissions and fights climate change. I want to work with President (Barack) Obama to get our economy moving again and to lower our deficit in a way that's fair. I want to reform our tax system and work with the president in doing that, and I want to work with him on comprehensive immigration reform. So there are things that we need to do.

The energy issue of course is closest to my heart. I was chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee and author of the bill that passed the house that was called the Waxman-Markey "cap and trade" bill. It would have directed us away from simply relying on coal and oil and other fossil fuels and moving in the direction of renewable fuels, alternative energy sources and a lot of efforts to use our energy resources more efficiently.

After we lost the Congress in 2010, what we found is that the Republicans deny the science of global warming. So when I asked them to work with us when I was chairman in 2009 and 2010, they said we don't want to work on a problem we don't think exists. They still deny the science up to this moment.

DP: Your opponent is in favor of the Keystone XL Oil Pipeline. You oppose it. Why?

HW: The thing that bothers me the most about the Keystone pipeline is that it will be encouraging Canada to take the dirtiest source of tar sands oil. They have to spend a lot of energy just to refine it so it can be sent in a pipeline. That adds to the greenhouse gas emissions. There also have been problems about pipeline safety which we hope we addressed in bipartisan legislation last year, but I think we need to look at the pipeline and where it's going.

This is going to be oil that will be brought to the United States and could well be sent off to China once it gets to the refineries, even though it has been touted as oil for America. It will be added to the world's oil supply. What we need is less adding to the world oil supply and more moving away from our dependence on oil. So I've opposed the pipeline.

DP: Switching to more Santa Monica-specific subjects, you've expressed support for keeping the historic post office on Fifth Street. What is the best course of action for the Postal Service on that issue?

HW: I don't think they have to close a historical building like we have in Santa Monica. I've argued to the Postal Service that they shouldn't close that particular post office.

I haven't given up on this fight to save the post office in Santa Monica, and I'm still actively involved with people at the Postal Service to try to get them to change their minds. I'm hopeful.

DP: On the issue of the Santa Monica Airport, you've called for a "meaningful solution." What would that look like?

HW: There are a number of concerns at the airport, and the first one has to be safety. … This is an airport located right in the middle of a residential area. I don't think the runways offer enough safety protection. The (Federal Aviation Administration) was supposed to work on that issue and I don't think their solution was adequate. I think there are problems with the fuel used in the airplanes, which still has a lot of lead in it. We banned leaded fuel for automobiles which caused a dramatic drop in some of the harm that's done from lead exposure. Lead exposure to children is particularly harmful, but lead exposure to adults is not particularly conducive for good health, either. For kids, it's so dangerous that exposure to lead can cause immediate harm in terms of mental retardation and learning disabilities.

DP: Some people are advocating for straight closure of the airport. What do you say to those folks?

HW: It's possible after the (20-year) agreement expires. Well, in 2015 this issue will come to a head as to whether there's going to be an airport or not. But in the meantime, we need greater protections in place for the safety and pollution problems.

(Waxman is referring to grant assurances that Santa Monica City Hall entered into with the FAA in return for money for airport improvements.)

DP: Housing for homeless veterans at the Veterans Affairs campus in West Los Angeles has been an ongoing issue. Why is this dragging on and on?

(City Councilmember Bobby Shriver is one of many working on a lawsuit by the American Civil Liberties Union against the Veterans Affairs Administration in order to force the VA to make improvements on buildings on the campus to open up permanent supportive housing for disabled veterans.)

HW: I'm very frustrated that there hasn't been more movement on that. I met with General (Eric) Shinseki, the head of the VA. He agreed that we needed housing for the homeless, agreed he'd take a couple of the buildings that are there and do that so they can be a place for residential homeless vets. Yet they still haven't figured out how to do that. Maybe we should have started from scratch and torn the buildings down and built something from the beginning, because now they've run into a lot of problems going to redo those buildings.

DP: What's the latest on that?

HW: Cost over-runs, and they're not moving as quickly as I would like.

DP: Is there ever a vote that you regretted?

HW: Yes. I regret voting for the power of George W. Bush to go to war in Iraq. I did that based on the lies we were told by the administration that Iraq had a nuclear weapon, and this of course is the most feared of the weapons of mass destruction. We had briefings from people on the intelligence that turned out to be wrong and I was so concerned about Iraq having a nuclear weapon I voted for a proposal that said if we couldn't get the United Nations to act together and force Iraq to open up for inspections to stop any potential nuclear weapon the president had the authority to take military action unilaterally. I regret that vote, I think I was misled in to casting it. Most Democrats didn't vote for it, and I'm sorry I did.

DP: So you say that you want to reform the tax code. What would you do?

HW: The tax code should be reformed. There are too many loopholes. I don't think we should be creating more loopholes. I think that so many of the loopholes Mr. Romney has been able to use are unjustified. I don't know the situation with Mr. Bloomfield (his opponent in the Nov. 6 election), but I think both are in the same situation.

They're living on the return from their investments.

So he's paying a far lower rate on his income tax, as is Gov. Romney, than a person who works very hard at a job that pays a full fare on income tax. I think we need to look at those distinctions. I think we need to end some of the loopholes. I think we have to make sure we don't skew the tax system just to lower the taxes for those at the top, but to make sure that those who can pay more do pay more.

DP: You spent a lot of time looking into steroids in baseball. Why was that so important to you?

HW: The reason I thought it was important is that a lot of kids were starting to use steroids in high school for their athletic abilities, and they saw baseball players and other professional athletes using steroids and they thought, "Well, maybe that's the thing to do." Their heroes were using it, their role models were using it. They thought that message was that it was OK to use it, and it was OK to cheat. That it was OK to use it even though steroids can harm them physically. And so we were thinking of the kids.

I'm proud to say that as a result of our hearings on that issue, we didn't pass any legislation, but as a result of our hearings the use of steroids by kids has dropped dramatically in this country, and professional sports have clamped down harder on their athletes for using performance-enhancing drugs. I think this was a good public health objective we were trying to achieve and we were successful in moving things in that direction.

rested most of his starters for long stretches during a second half that was more of a formality than anything.

For Palisades, the loss evens their record at 1-1.

"They are a really explosive team," Palisades head coach Perry Jones said of Samohi. "When you let a team like that rip off long gains you know it's going to get bad real quick."

On top of the gaudy offensive numbers, Samohi was successful at stifling Palisades' wishbone running attack all evening. It wasn't until late in the second quarter that Pali would finally score, but the game was already out of hand with Samohi holding a 43-6 advantage.

Pali would add another score when Justin Sinclair ran for a 9-yard fourth quarter touchdown against mostly Samohi backups.

With two routs behind them, Samohi moves on to face powerhouse Mater Dei on Thursday.

Despite entering the game as underdogs, Clark is feeling confident about his Vikings.

"I have respect for them," Clark said. "But, I'm not afraid. Every high school football team has a weakness."

Doctor: Unclear if Tulane player is paralyzed

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TULSA, Okla. It's too soon to tell if Tulane safety Devon Walker will be paralyzed as the result of a spinal fracture he suffered while making a tackle, and the full extent of his injury may not be known for days, the team's doctor said Sunday.

Dr. Greg Stewart, Tulane University's director of sports medicine, said Walker remained in stable condition in the intensive care until of St. Francis Hospital in Tulsa, Okla. Physicians there will plan to do surgery on Walker in the coming days, he said.

"These kind of injuries take 24, 48, sometimes 72 hours to full declare themselves," Stewart said. "We don't know what the long-term implications and outcomes are going to be."

Stewart said he was with Walker on the field, in the ambulance and at the hospital on Saturday. He said Walker was put into a cervical collar and couldn't see much of what was happening, so Stewart explained what was going on. Walker was talking with doctors as he was being treated, Stewart said.

Walker's parents had traveled to Oklahoma to be with their son, and they were "doing as well as can be expected," Stewart said.

NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY OF A DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORT FOR THE 2002 21ST STREET CONDOMINIUMS PROJECT

OFFICIAL NOTICE is hereby given on the completion and availability of a Draft Environmental Impact Report (Draft EIR) for the proposed 2002 21st Street Condominiums Project (proposed project) located in the City of Santa Monica.

PROJECT DESCRIPTION: The proposed project involves demolition of the existing improvements and development of a two-story (plus roof deck) 21-unit condominium complex building on the 0.66-acre project site. The proposed building would be two levels up to 33 feet in height. Each of the 21 units would be two-bedroom, two and one-half bathroom townhouse style condominiums with two stories above a private garage. The site layout is configured around a courtyard. Private outdoor space would be provided with patios on the ground level, balconies on the second level and roof decks for each unit on top of the building. A total of 48 parking spaces would be provided within a one-level subterranean structure containing 21 private two-car garages. A minimum of four guest parking spaces are also proposed within the subterranean garage. Vehicular access to the subterranean garage would be from a single driveway from 20th Court Alley.

Heal the Bay reminds you not to swim or surf within 100 yards of any flowing storm drain or for 3 days after a rainstorm. After a rain, indicator bacteria counts at beaches throughout California usually far exceed health criteria in the state's Beach Closure and Health Warning Protocol.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Hang out tonight, Virgo

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You are an old hand at dealing with tension and/or power plays. An opportunity to show your expertise will arise. Respond instinctively. Tonight: Head home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Stay centered, even when dealing with difficult demands, and you'll see certain situations in a new light. Communication stays active. You hear news that makes sense to you now, when previously it did not. Tonight: Meet friends for some munchies.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Pull back, and make yourself aware of new possibilities. The unexpected occurs with a friend. You might note that this person has become somewhat troublesome. A conversation with a family member finally makes an impression. Tonight: Treat yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You have an edge, no matter what you decide to deal with. Be direct with someone you have put on a pedestal. You know what works, and you know what to do. This person appreciates honesty and clarity. Think before you react. Tonight: Be yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Know what is going on behind the scenes. Pressure builds as you run into a complication. A willful person could put up barriers at the last minute. A meeting might be informative and, in some way, could fertilize your imagination. Tonight: Vanish while you can.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your sense of direction comes through, whether you are arguing or simply debating a key issue surrounding a project. Your resourcefulness comes out during a conversation and increases your creativity. Your words have power right now. Tonight: Hang out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You might want to rethink a personal matter in order to avoid a collision. A partner, friend or associate could be explosive if challenged. Be smart; do not entice this person to be more verbal or expressive. Use care with spending -- you could go overboard. Tonight: What you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You could be taken aback by someone's resourcefulness. You need to think through a decision with more care. Understanding evolves as you keep working through an idea with this person. Open up to new possibilities. Tonight: Tap into your imagination.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Deal with someone directly. How you feel and where you go depends on the quality of your interaction with this person. Pressure will build to an unprecedented level if you cannot see eye to eye. Tonight: Chat over dinner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Emotions build, especially as you might find yourself unexpectedly in an either-or situation. Verbalize more of your thinking before you decide whether to keep others in your camp. Tonight: Walk in someone else's shoes before you make a decision.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Focus on routine or daily issues, and you'll come out way ahead. Do not question a decision so much. Sometimes your knee-jerk reaction takes you down the right path. Listen to what someone is saying. Tonight: Relax; take a walk.

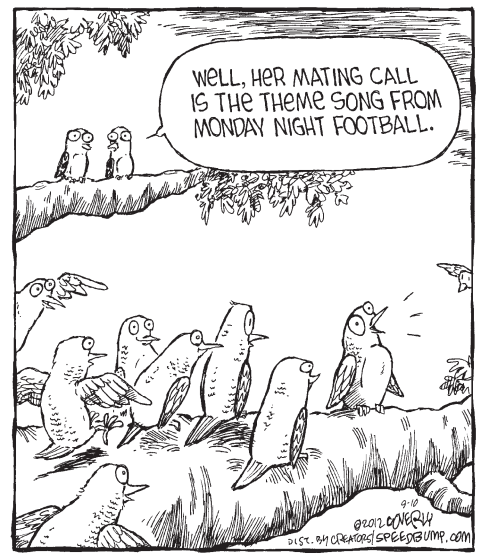

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Your creativity remains high. A partner keeps feeding you new information, which creates fertile territory for new ideas. Be careful with your funds. The unexpected plays a big role in the next few days. Tonight: Treat both yourself and a friend.

Happy birthday

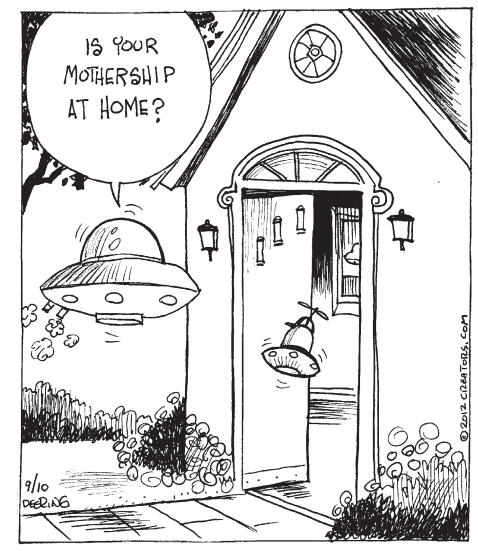

This year success seems to follow you. You finally achieve what you have wanted to for a long time. You gain through expanding your horizons and making new friends. You have control and the possibility of making more powerful decisions in the near future. Display your penchant for excellent communication, and expect others to respond accordingly. People seem to like your way of thinking, and often follow in your footsteps. If you are single, you could see a change in the choices you make. You'll meet people with ease through friends. If you are attached, the two of you express a love of entertaining. The more you do together, the closer you will become. CANCER can be quite a friend.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Challenging Business Models: (1) In June, owners of the legal brothel Stiletto in Sydney, Australia, revealed their multimillion-dollar expansion to create the country's (and perhaps the world's) first "mega-brothel." (2) Short-stay "love hotels" proliferate in Brazil, but in July in the city of Belo Horizonte, Fabiano Lourdes and his sister Daniela were about to open Animalle Mundo Pet, which they described as a love hotel for dogs. Owners would bring their mating-ready canines to rooms that feature the dim lighting and heart-shaped ceiling mirrors traditional in love hotels (to appeal to the party paying the bill, of course).

■ Oh, Dear: New York City is the scene this summer of a particularly nasty turf war among ice cream trucks vying for space on the city's choicest blocks. Most aggressive, according to a July New York Post report, are the drivers of Mister Softee trucks. Said a Yogo frozen yogurt vendor, "If you see a Mister Softee truck, you know bad things are coming," including, reported the Post, such hardball tactics as cutting rival trucks' brake lines.
