Council looking for expert team to address changing technology

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

The City Council is poised to recruit a team of experts to advise the city on how to adapt to economic headwinds brought on by rapidly evolving technologies like artificial intelligence, autonomous cars and online shopping Tuesday.

Internet use has already hit the city's bottom line: total taxable sales fell on the Third Street Promenade by 2.9 percent and at Santa Monica Place by 4.5 percent in 2017 due at least in part to online shopping. Parking revenue from the city's garages also fell as more shoppers either stayed home or got around without a personal car.

The Council will consider issuing a Request for Proposal (RFP) to private companies, nonprofits and schools to create a partnership "that could provide services and work products that are tailored to the City's needs," according to a staff report prepared by management fellow Julie Wedig.

"The City and community must now determine how to preserve Santa Monica's unique assets while adapting to rapid changes affecting the economy on a local and global level," the report said.

The potential RFP comes a year after the Council urged city staff to take a broad look at the impacts of globalization, declining retail sales and evolving transportation trends on the city. After a few panels and roundtable discussions, city staff identified three key transformational trends: artificial intelligence, customization and connectivity. All three trends led to the so-called "retail apocalypse," for example, as shoppers use the

Independent Latino parent group recognized by school district

ANGEL CARRERAS
Daily Press Staff Writer

Latino and Spanish-speaking parents looking for a place to congregate aside from traditional school groups have a new, district-recognized organization to call home: Padres, Estudiantes y Maestros Asociacion (PEMA).

The Santa Monica Malibu Unified School District formally recognized PEMA as an independent parent group at the Thursday, September 6 board meeting.

PEMA's mission is to "provide information and resources to Latino parents and families and to empower them to become involved in the education of their children; with the ultimate goal to have a positive outcome on Latino Student achievement at SAMOHI."

The group returned to the school board agenda after having their formal recognition and adoption delayed last week due to application issues.

Having addressed application challenges with help from the district and legal counsel, the inde-

Trill app brings the social back to networking

LILY RICHMAN
Daily Press Intern

In the first eight months of this year, a group of local high school girls have created a social networking app valued at $1 million with more investment on the horizon. While the company rapidly achieved a seven figure valuation, it didn't start as a money-making venture.

Upon learning that roughly 40 percent of transgender people have attempted to commit suicide, the girls decided to take action. Their response was The Trill Project, an app that has been downloaded approximately 15,000 times and has accumulated more than 20,000 posts since its launch in June. The corporation is currently valued at $1 million.

Trill is an anonymous social networking application. Originally created as a vehicle for members of the LGBTQ+ community and allies to freely express themselves, Trill sees itself as a novel platform for social media interaction.

"Trill takes the best parts of what it's like in a social network to form connections with people and have friendships and talk to your peers, but also integrates professional support," said Georgia Messinger, Trill's Chief Operating Officer and Chief Marketing Officer.

Trill, whose name is derived from combining the words "true" and "real," allows users to follow tags on such topics as "lgbtq+" or "friends" to track posts about a particular topic. Users can also join a smaller Community with people who share similar interests or tags.

Rather than allowing users to pick his/her own username, Trill seeks to preserve anonymity by assigning usernames based off the one of 15 colors selected by each person.

"If you can make something cool like Snapchat or Instagram that people want to go on every day because it's fun and there are games ... but you can also get professional support and have moderators on-hand, then you basically get rid of all the negative stuff that anonymous social networks have fostered," 18-years-old Messinger, said.

Messinger is a National Center for Women & Information Technology national awardee.

The app is scheduled to re-launch on Sept. 10, World Suicide Prevention Day, with a plethora of new user profile colors, including new yellows, blues, and purples. The new iteration will also feature a user support score to quantify contributions to the Trill community, a mechanism for offering compliments and a mood meter to measure feelings.

The Trill Project was one of five teams selected from over 1,000 applicants to receive funding from Founders Bootcamp, an accelerator for high school students' startups. Trill received $50,000 in exchange for a five percent stake in the company.

Founder Roger Kassebaum began Founders Bootcamp with his former student, Managing Partner Richard Dahan, with the goal of empowering and aiding young entrepreneurs. Kassebaum facilitates connections and mentorships between the high schoolers and experienced professional mentors.

Messinger, now a freshman at Harvard University, and 17-year-old Ariana Sokolov, Trill's Chief Executive Officer and a freshman at the University of Southern California, worked throughout the summer with the four other Founders Bootcamp teams at Cross Campus, a Santa Monica coworking office space on Colorado Boulevard. Their days typically consisted of morning workshops and evening guest speakers. Messinger said the teams sometimes stayed until 3 a.m. working.

The five teams pitched their startups to the Tech Coast Angels, the largest LA angel investment group, in August. TCA members offered critiques, advice and encouragement, according to Kassebaum.

Trill was first conceived in January as part of the annual Technovation challenge to create an app that tackles an issue important to one's community. The idea for Trill garnered widespread support. The team received hundreds of responses to an Instagram question "What would you tell if nobody knew you were telling it?" and over 10,000 people reblogged a Tumblr post discussing the proposed app.

Sokolov said users have praised the project for paying attention to an underserved community.

Sokolov, who began coding at 8-years-old, is a two-time winner of the Arizona Congressional App Challenge and a three-time winner of a scholarship to Apple's Worldwide Developers Conference. She said user safety is her biggest priority.

Other anonymous apps like Yik Yak, Whisper and After School fall into the trap of marketing themselves with gossip, according to Messinger. Trill Project, however, is "branded completely differently," she said.

Trill uses volunteer moderators to review posts and watch for indications that a user may be harming his/herself, harming someone else, or is being harmed. Trill currently has about 50 moderators, all of whom apply for the position and receive training to facilitate conversations. If a user cyberbullies someone else, Trill removes their account and blocks that IP address from creating another profile.

Because the app is anonymous, moderators are not able to get into direct contact with users, but they can attach trigger warnings to posts that contain serious mental health concerns like suicide and comment on posts with links and phone numbers for emergency resources such as the National Hopeline Network; the Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network; nearby medical facilities and more.

"I'd like to think that people who would not have been getting support before are getting support," said 17-year-old Lucas Gelfond, Trill Director of Moderators and TEEN LINE listener. "I really do believe that it's having an impact, and that's inspiring."

Trill also employs machine learning algorithms that study moderators' behaviors and will be able to sort through posts more efficiently in the future. Messinger said the algorithms could potentially be licensed to other companies to identify people in crisis.

"I think their algorithms and the professional help they have online can help some people during those weak moments and make them a lot healthier and happier," said Kassebaum, who taught high school science for around 40 years prior to starting Founders Bootcamp. "If they can save some lives, that's incredible."

Trill and the other Founders Bootcamp startups will pitch their ideas to Silicon Valley venture capitalists on Oct. 24 to raise a seed round of funding. The corporation hopes to reach 100,000 users by that time.

The Trill Project is available for download in the App Store. For more information, visit https://trillproject.com.

"And Then They Came for Us"

Santa Monica College (SMC) will present a screening of the Silver Gavel Award-winning documentary "And Then They Came for Us." The special event includes an audience Q&A with trauma psychotherapist Dr. Satsuki Ina and documentary director Abby Ginzberg.

The free event will be held September 13 at 11:15 a.m. in Stromberg Hall (HSS 165) on the SMC main campus, 1900 Pico Blvd. Seating is on a first-arrival basis.

Directed by Ginzberg, a Peabody Award-winning director and president of the Berkeley Film Foundation, the incisive documentary connects the World War II incarceration of Japanese Americans with today's activists speaking out against the Muslim travel ban. The film includes commentary by renowned California-born actor and activist George Takei, who was a child in an internment camp, and by Dr. Ina, a CSU Sacramento professor emeritus who was born to parents incarcerated at Tule Lake, and who has produced two award-winning documentaries about the Japanese American incarceration.

The screening is sponsored by the SMC Associates (smc.edu/associates), SMC Black Collegians, SMC Adelante Program, SMC English Department, and SMC Film Studies program.

For more information about the event, please call the SMC Office of Public Programs at 310-434-4003.

8th Annual Will Rogers Art Exhibit And Sale

Join the Will Rogers State Historic Park (WRSHP) and the Allied Artists of the Santa Monica Mountains and Seashore (AASMMS) on Sunday October 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the 8th annual art exhibit and sale. The event, which is sponsored by the Will Rogers State Historic Park, is located at 1501 Will Rogers State Park Rd, Pacific Palisades CA 90272.

Featuring 15 local fine artists, the exhibit and sale will display original, representational landscape paintings of the Santa Monica Mountains and beaches to promote appreciation of our environment and to support conservation and maintenance Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area (SMMNRA) and local parks.

Allied Artists of the Santa Monica Mountains and Seashore is a 20-year-old organization of local fine artists that paint representational art of the Santa Monica Mountains and beaches to promote appreciation of our environment and to support conservation and maintenance Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area and local parks. The 156,000-acre recreation area stretches from Runyon and Franklin Canyons in Hollywood to Point Mugu State Park in Ventura County and contains over 500 miles of trails including the 67-mile long backbone trail that follows the crest of the coastal mountains from Will Rogers State Historic Park to Point Mugu State Park.

The group of artists provides information, art, environmental education and an appreciation of the local mountains and seashore as a public service and donates a portion of art sales to conservation and environmental organizations. The members of Allied Artists collaborate with conservation and park agencies such as Will Rodgers State Historic Park, King Gillette Visitor Center, Western National Parks Association, Palisades Village Green, National Wildlife Federation, and Mountains Restoration Trust to hold exhibitions of their paintings several times a year to raise money and increase public awareness of the endangered land that they depict in their paintings.

The group also sponsors free monthly paint-outs on the second Saturday of the month.

The free paint outs provide a unique opportunity for any painter to enjoy a sense of camaraderie with like-minded people and are a great way to see the beauty of the natural environment. A painting demonstration and friendly critique is usually held at the paint-outs. The free paint-outs are from 9AM to 1PM and are open to any artist and any media and at any skill level. Contact the allied artists at www http://allied-artists.com for more information.

Butterfly Release Fundraiser Event

On Sunday, November 4, from 2 – 4 p.m., The Emily Shane Foundation's Fourth Annual Butterfly Release Fundraiser Event will take place at Alumni Park, located on the Pepperdine University campus in Malibu.

This event is an opportunity for organizers to honor the mentors/tutors of the Foundation's flagship SEA (Successful Educational Achievement) Program, as well as the mentors and role models in all lives. Just like the caterpillar is transformed into a beautiful butterfly, through their SEA Program they work to transform disadvantaged middle school children who are at risk of failing to soar to improved academic heights.

The event will feature live musical entertainment by singer/composer Robin Hild accompanied by saxophonist Perry Gentile as well as the talented Lizzie LeBleu, a Nashville-born, California-based singer/songwriter, and a Pepperdine student. Lizzie is known for her soulful mix of feel-good folk with a touch of spunk. Guests can visit the Silent Auction, a Children's Activity Table with arts and crafts, and a Mentor Tribute Table. In addition, a butterfly education table will be hosted by the Malibu Monarch Project and The City of Malibu will host its own informational table related to sustainability and the environment. The Grilled Cheese Truck will be there.

The Emily Shane Foundation's SEA (Successful Educational Achievement) Program provides individualized, intensive mentoring/tutoring to struggling/failing middle school students in the mainstream classroom. SEA students are those who risk "falling through the cracks" and who could not otherwise afford this much needed after-school support.

The only "cost" to SEA student participants is to perform a good deed for every mentoring session they receive, in the spirit of our Foundation's motto - "Pass it Forward". They encourage the sponsorship of the butterflies at $10 per butterfly to help provide mentoring/tutoring support to the disadvantaged children they serve.

The Emily Shane Foundation was created in memory of 13- year old Emily Shane who was tragically murdered on Pacific Coast Highway in Malibu on April 3, 2010. The Foundation honors her memory by helping those who need extra help academically, something she herself struggled with during her life.

SMMUSD Receives Highest Credit Rating from One Agency, an Upgrade from Another

The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District recently had their 'AAA' rating affirmed from Moody's Investors Service ("Moody's") for the second consecutive year (the highest rating assigned by Moody's), and received an upgraded rating from S & P Global to 'AA+,' on existing general obligation bonds. Taxpayers will save close to $10 million over the life of the bonds through lower borrowing costs associated with high ratings.

"We are so pleased to receive the strong ratings from both Moody's and S & P," School Board President Dr. Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein said. "S & P highlighted the district's good management practices, and they were impressed with our long-term financial planning. It's great to hear from the credit agencies that we are doing a good job."

The S & P report states, "The positive rating action reflects our view of the district's recent transition to basic-aid status, whereby it is less reliant on volatile state revenue, and a tax base that grew by half over the past decade."

THE S & P RATING ALSO REFLECTS:

■ Extremely strong and resilient local tax base, with very strong incomes, focused in one of Southern California's main economic centers
■ Substantial, diverse array of supplemental revenue streams not common to most school districts in the state, such as the ability to realize property tax revenue above what is constitutionally allowed under the California funding formula
■ Good financial management practices

Moody's included in their rationale the following strengths:

■ exceptionally large, diverse, and growing tax base with high resident wealth levels
■ very strong financial position bolstered by increasing local revenues and its recent transition into Community Funded (Basic Aid) status
■ average debt burden, manageable pension and OPEB liabilities, and conservative management

The district's ratings were updated as part of its successful $120 million Measure ES general obligation bond issuance last week to fund planned modernization projects in Santa Monica and Malibu schools. "We are very pleased with the investor response to the SMMUSD sale," municipal advisor to the district Jon Isom of Isom Advisors said.

The district's senior managing banker at Raymond James John R. Baracy also commented, "We were able to successfully pre-market this transaction and garner $700 million in orders for the $120 million of general obligation bonds offered. The district was able to see almost a 10 basis point reduction in interest rates from the pre-pricing discussion to the final sale."

The SMMUSD Board of Education has approved a school improvement funding measure to be placed on November 2018 ballots, with a $485 million bond for Santa Monica schools and $195 million bond for Malibu schools. Learn more about school repairs and upgrades needed to meet 21st-century education standards.

"We are thrilled with the results of the rating meetings and the upgrade from S & P," Superintendent Dr. Ben Drati said. "Especially knowing that the upgrade could save taxpayers up to $10 million."

City of Malibu Completes Purchase of 29.24 Acres for $42.5 Million

The City of Malibu closed escrow on the purchase of three commercially-zoned parcels totaling 29.24 acres from the Malibu Bay Company on September 6, giving the City ownership of three parcels for the community's future use.

"Malibu has leveraged years of careful fiscal management to take advantage of a rare opportunity to acquire such valuable and desirable open space in California's coastal region," said Mayor Rick Mullen. "This land was commercially zoned, and by purchasing it, we can ensure it will never become a shopping mall or an office building, but instead will benefit the community in perpetuity."

City Attorney Christi Hogin helped negotiate the deal and commented, "this is an exciting and consequential event in the history of Malibu. Owning this property opens up a world of possibilities for the community."

On July 9, the Council approved the purchase agreement and authorized the issuance of Certificates of Participation (COPs) to fund a portion of the acquisition. The COPs were issued in August with a top credit rating from S&P Global Ratings (S&P).

The City's strong financial position has enabled Malibu to take advantage of this unexpected opportunity. Malibu's long history of responsible and conservative fiscal management of public funds has resulted in an AA+ long-term rating for the COPs from S&P and an issuer credit rating of AAA, the highest rating possible for a city.

The City made the purchase with a combination of Undesignated General Fund Reserves, Designated General Fund Reserves, Los Angeles County Measure R and M funding and through the issuance of COPs. A portion of the lands will be developed for transportation or parking uses consistent with the guidelines for Los Angeles County Measure R and Measure M funds.

The purchase includes 9.65 acres located at 23575 Civic Center Way; 1.11 acres located at Civic Center Way and Webb Way; and purchase of 18.48 acres located at Pacific Coast Highway and Heathercliff Road. Potential land uses will be thoroughly explored and discussed in a robust and transparent process which will be developed in the coming months based on feedback from the community.

SMC Appoints Jennifer Merlic Vice President of Academic Affairs

Santa Monica College (SMC) announced the appointment of Dr. Jennifer Merlic as the college's new Vice President of Academic Affairs, effective today. The SMC Board of Trustees unanimously approved Dr. Merlic's appointment—following a recommendation made by SMC Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery—at their Sept. 4 meeting. The role of SMC's chief instructional officer was left vacant after former VP of Academic Affairs Dr. Georgia Lorenz became the third president of Seminole State College of Florida in August.

Under the direction of Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery, Dr. Merlic will provide leadership and oversight for SMC's instructional programs and services. Her portfolio encompasses online and traditional "on-ground" academic programs, degrees, and certificates (both transfer and career education); noncredit instruction including the Emeritus Program for older adults; and not-for-college-credit professional development, personal enrichment, and workforce training offerings through the SMC Office of Workforce & Economic Development. She will also oversee academic support services such as the college library, tutoring, and computer labs.

"Dr. Merlic's leadership experience is truly expansive and has prepared her to advance Santa Monica College's mission of open access and a superior teaching-learning experience, with a clear focus on ensuring the success of every SMC student," said Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery. "Over two decades, she displayed outstanding leadership skills in roles as a professor and faculty leader/administrator, which led to vital advancements for SMC: in STEM, the creation of a more efficient technology structure, and a first-ever baccalaureate program in interaction design. She has also helped guide SMC's efforts in redesigning the student experience, to reduce the equity gap."

Dr. Jeffery added "the attention to detail and a deep knowledge of SMC's core mission which Dr. Jennifer Merlic has already displayed and the collaborative relationships she has cultivated will help inspire and set new directions for the college."

Dr. Jennifer Merlic first began working at SMC as a full-time chemistry professor in 1991. In subsequent years, she progressed to leadership roles as Director of Academic Computing, Director of Tech Training & Research, Chair of the SMC Physical Science department, and Chair of the Academic Senate Department Chairs Committee. In 2014, she was appointed Dean of Instructional Services, overseeing 23 instructional departments and their chairs (with over 1,100 full-time and part-time faculty reporting). Her responsibilities included developing SMC's annual academic plan of more than 7,500 classes (15 percent of which are delivered online).

While she was Dean of Instructional Services, Dr. Merlic authored the proposal for SMC's Bachelor of Science degree in Interaction Design. In January 2015, SMC was selected by the California Community Colleges Board of Governors to be among the first 15 community colleges in the state to offer a four-year degree. Dr. Merlic provided administrative leadership in the implementation of the degree program; the first cohort graduated this June.

Dr. Merlic's achievements in previous leadership roles included helping create SMC's STEM Science and Research Initiative—in partnership with UCLA—supported by a $6 million grant from the U.S. Department of Education to increase the number of Hispanic and low-income students transferring to four-year STEM programs. She also helped develop a streamlined, online "program review" process for the college's departments and operational areas; served as the project co-director for the statewide Multimedia Educational Resource for Learning and Online Teaching (MERLOT); and directed the "Virtual Office Hours" project, which was SMC's first online supplement to traditional office hours. Dr. Merlic also supervised the development and implementation of online and live training as training director for the California Virtual Campus Professional Development Center, a partnership between El Camino College and SMC, funded by a $2.4 million state grant.

As a professor, Dr. Merlic taught general chemistry and introductory chemistry courses, in addition to developing and updating chemistry curriculum from 1991 to 2014. She was previously also a visiting professor of chemistry at UCLA. She has co-authored articles in several leading scientific journals, covering a variety of topics related to laser spectroscopy – the use of lasers to study the structure and behavior of molecules.

Dr. Merlic holds a Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Science in Physical Chemistry from Princeton University; she obtained a Bachelor of Arts in Chemistry from Smith College (she graduated Cum Laude with High Honors in Chemistry). An avid hiker and animal lover, Dr. Merlic and her husband Craig A. Merlic—who is a Professor of Chemistry at UCLA— have two sons, Kyle and Aidan.

internet to order customized products straight to their doorstep.

"Demand for delivery trips will grow exponentially, making it ever more important to determine how goods get to and through the community safely, sustainably, and efficiently," the report said.

As more deliveries test the city's infrastructure, declining brick-and-mortar sales have hit Downtown Santa Monica, increasing the number of vacancies. Downtown Santa Monica, Inc. is encouraging landlords to find a balanced mix of uses to replace retailers who have closed up shop and plans to promote new businesses that differentiate downtown from other destinations around Los Angeles.

Climate change could also impact the city through worsening drought conditions and sea-level rise, according to the report.

Ride-share companies and driverless cars could mean fewer people will own their cars in the future, but it could also lead to gridlock as vehicles spend hours circling downtown, picking up passengers. The staff report said cities will need to adopt new policies to avoid the projected increase in congestion and greenhouse gas emissions, while promoting equitable access.

Finally, the staff report warned computers and robots will mean responsive education and job training will be vital to Santa Monica's workforce.

The City Council will consider the RFP Tuesday, Sept. 11, at their regularly scheduled meeting inside City Council Chambers, 1685 Main Street, Room 213.

pendent group is now official after unanimous approval from the school board.

"SAMOHI Latino PEMA would like to thank every SMMUSD board member for their unanimous approval of our application," Dr. Berenice Onofre, founder of PEMA said in an emailed statement. "Latino PEMA looks forward to working collaboratively and in partnership with SAMOHI and district administration & staff to have a positive impact towards accomplishing equity in parent engagement at SMMUSD."

The school board was enthusiastic about the approval, excited for more parent engagement.

Board member Ralph Mechur says he felt PEMA members seemed "dedicated to working with our community," saying he hopes engagement of Latino families rises and that he hopes PEMA is a "great success."

Maria Leon-Vazquez echoed Mechur's sentiments, saying the group is "much-needed" in a time where the district is attempting to create more family engagement.

She questioned the group's 501c3 designation, which Superintendent Dr. Drati said was due to the group being independent from the district, providing PEMA an option of fundraising, if the group wishes to.

When reached for comment, Onofre said the group may do small fundraisers, if necessary.

While the board was warm to the adoption of PEMA, one public speaker was not.

Lupe Ibarra, Chair of the Samohi Parent Teacher Student Association (PTSA) and President of the District English Learners Advisory Committee (DELAC), said she felt a Latino / Spanish-speaking parent group would create division within the district and it's Latino community.

"We have the PTSA, it's the parent support group for all of us," Ibarra said. "I feel like we're separating ourselves and self-segregating. Parents need a Spanish group that they can get an education from, they don't need a group that needs to raise funds … I don't feel it's needed. I feel like we're going backwards instead of forward."

Ibarra further added that she felt PEMA would "feed anger", saying there's "so many things already" for parents. She said parents have asked her why PEMA formed, answering that she doesn't know why, but that everyone should get along— at PTSA meetings.

Oscar de la Torre pressed Ibarra on her accusations of potential division.

"You're President of DELAC, correct? Most of the members in that organization, are they Spanish-speaking? Majority of them? Is that self-segregation? Do you feel that type of organization is a problem? Do you feel the African American parent support group is also a problem?" De la Torre asked.

"No, no, no," Ibarra said. "I feel we already have a big group with all — the PTSA. Just make it one [group] and come to the meetings. We have a lot of education workshops, all that there. Why separate ourselves? We have a PTA already for everyone. I feel we should all be one family."

De la Torre noted there's roughly 900 Latino students in the district, "which means there must be around 1800 parents," and a 15% drop-out rate among Latinos, making more engagement and groups necessary. He compared PEMA and the PTSA as Santa Monica and Malibu school districts, realizing they can do better work separately while working for the same goals.

Board President Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein agreed.

"We're all committed to closing the achievement gap," he said. "Experience isn't all the same for Latino parents and I too welcome many groups. I hope people attend PEMA, other groups, and the PTA."

Police lieutenant to plead to illegal sale of 100-plus guns

Prosecutors say a former Southern California police lieutenant who also acted as a department spokesman has agreed to plead guilty to illegally selling more than 100 guns.

The U.S. Attorney's Office said Friday that former Pasadena Police Lt. Vasken Gourdikian has signed an agreement with prosecutors to plead guilty on Sept. 20 to dealing in firearms without a license and lying during a gun purchase.

Prosecutors say Gourdikian used his job to get around California's strict gun laws to resell at least 108 guns between 2014 and 2017.

As an officer, they say Gourdikian was able to buy so-called "off-roster" handguns, which aren't available to the public and aren't listed in a catalog of certified handguns maintained by the state.

Gourdikian resigned in March after a 22-year career.

His attorney didn't immediately respond to a message seeking comment Friday but has previously said the charges were "misguided and truly an abuse of the supposed discretion of the government."

LA marks Attendance Matters Day to bring students back

Members of the Los Angeles Unified School District are knocking on doors of students who have stopped attending classes, expecting to bring both students and millions of dollars back to school.

Superintendent Austin Beutner visited chronically absent students' homes Friday as part of the Attendance Matters Day, when the nation's second-largest school district conducts home visits, phone banking and community canvassing.

The district loses state funding for each day a student is absent. In the 2016-17 school year, more than 80,000 students, or 14.3 percent of the student population, were chronically absent.

LAUSD says more than 5,000 students have returned to school since the first coordinated effort began 10 years ago.

The district combats absences by sending postcards, calling parents, giving attendance improvement rewards, and using other incentives.

Fentanyl suspected in 4 Southern California overdoses

Police say four men in Southern California were taken to a hospital after possibly overdosing on the powerful drug Fentanyl.

Glendale Fire Department paramedics responded to a residence Thursday and found four men who showed signs of an overdose.

The four were taken to a local hospital. Two were treated and released and two were hospitalized in stable condition. Their names were not released.

Police say the men likely overdosed on Fentanyl, but doctors are waiting for tests to confirm that.

Fentanyl is a powerful synthetic opioid painkiller that is 50 to 100 times more potent than morphine. It is a prescription drug typically used to treat patients with severe pain.

There were no arrests, and it is unclear if the men would face any criminal charges.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 10)

It's a year of discovery in which a new gem will be revealed monthly. Spiritual truths, treasures of the heart and actual material finds will be among the spoils. Apply what you learn in inventive ways. Lifestyle change brings enhanced health and attractiveness. This may be inspired by an exciting new relationship. Scorpio and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 4, 44, 23 and 18.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Framing the truth is a social skill. As it is with all framing, there are decisions to be made about the positioning. Cropping is an option, and it's one you should strongly consider today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

We are all stuck inside ourselves, though some seem more stuck than others. Empathy isn't just a virtue for better souls; it's also a ticket to living more lives than just the one that we live from behind our own eyeballs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)

There are sunk costs to consider — money, time and energy you'll never get back. Recall them and say one last goodbye. Those sunk costs are a thing of the past and have no bearing on your next step into the future.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)

Though basic daily occurrences seem to have special meaning when you're with someone you love, this does not happen because you're with someone you love. Appreciate your own part in the experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Trust is a commodity. People who are entrusted are able to do and experience things that distrusted people cannot. Trust that is freely given won't buy much, though earned trust can open entire worlds.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You'll become sensitive to another person's tendencies and rhythms and be able to predict this person's next move — a form of love, really, as it requires a certain quality of attention to figure out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

As your guiding planet, Venus, communicates freely today, so will you. This communication isn't restricted to loved ones or even humans. You'll be in kinship with animals, rocks, even the sky.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)

Sociology teaches us that lying is innate. Animals evolve to deceive predators. Sign language-trained gorillas tell fibs, as do toddlers. Today you'll hear lies of little consequence, the sort you'd be gracious to ignore.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

It is said that each person is a world. Though you do enjoy tourism, you'll spend the most time with those whose worlds you understand and relate to. Bonds will be built in realities that are shared, not imposed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Protect your solitude. If you're with even one other person, you won't be completely yourself. Alone, you'll have a sense of spiritual stillness that allows you to get a better feel for what is really worth doing at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

It's challenging to save money when there are so many things you need and want. Your increased interests and appetites make this a good time to explore a side business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Helping others have their fun will be much easier to do when you've helped yourself first. It's wrong, selfish even, to ignore your own need for comfort, pleasure and excitement.

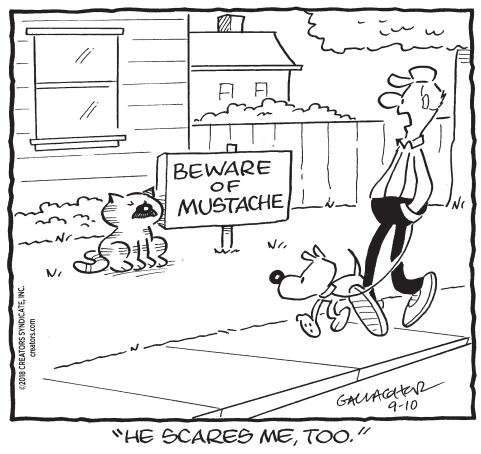

Mars-in-Aquarius Challenge

Perceptions are like windows. Consider the housefly trying to get outside, bashing itself against the window, not realizing that glass is both what inspires and what thwarts its attempt. Each person can only see it "a" way, not "the" way. To challenge assumptions takes advanced thinking and superior character. Mars in Aquarius offers the challenge.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Medical history

■ This week in 1954, a six-year research program found that Los Angeles smog was caused by the chemical reaction of sunlight with auto and industrial emissions. The first major "smog" event in LA occurred on July 26, 1943, reducing visibility to under three blocks. The public clamored for action. The Los Angeles Times launched an anti-smog campaign. In October 1947, the LA County Board of Supervisors created the nation's first air pollution control program.
