9/11 Ceremony to be held Downtown

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Santa Monica will commemorate the 20th anniversary of the September 11 attacks this Saturday with an expanded, but still brief, ceremony Downtown.

The city's police and fire services have traditionally marked the day with brief services at the police station and neighborhood fire stations that included a moment of silence, lowering of the flag and a radio call. Small groups of neighbors have often gathered at the nearest station to observe the day.

However, this year's event has been expanded and formalized in recognition of the 20th anniversary.

Residents are invited to attend on Saturday, September 11, at 8 a.m. at Fire Station 1, 1337 7th Street.

The ceremony will begin with an honor guard presentation of colors, then include remarks by Interim Fire Chief Wolfgang Knabe, remarks from the Police Department, a statement by Mayor Sue Himmelrich, a prayer / moment of silence from the Santa Monica Fire Department Chaplain and a brief history of the Bell Ringing Ceremony and Present Arms by the John Cox, one of the Republican candidates vying to replace Governor Newsom, continued his "Recall Newsom; Fix California Bus Tour" Thursday, making stops in Santa Barbara and Santa Monica.

Cox is barnstorming the state urging voters to focus Newsom and ignore distractions created by other candidates.

"California is broken. It's unaffordable, fires are out of control, taxes are too high, homeless are everywhere, there's a shortage of water and businesses have shuttered," he said. "The career politicians haven't solved any of

SMMUSD Covid-19 protocols kick into gear with 12 cases and 363 individuals in quarantine

CASES: The County is sticking to current quarantine protocols related to youth outbreaks.

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District has launched an online Covid-19 case dashboard that shows promising early results of its efforts to limit transmission on campus.

As of Sept. 8, the District had twelve positive cases across its approximate 10,600 students and 1,600 staff members, who are all required to be tested weekly. A total of 41 individuals are currently in isolation due to a positive test result or COVID-like symptoms, while 363 individuals are quarantined due to exposure to someone with a positive test result.

Exposed students and staff who are fully vaccinated are not required to quarantine as long as they remain asymptomatic.

Of the 6,656 district students ages 12 to 18 who are eligible for vaccination, 5,224 have received at least one dose. This represents a 78.5 percent vaccination rate for eligible students, which is slightly lower than the 83.1 percent rate across the general Santa Monica population and significantly higher than the 61.8 percent rate in Malibu.

There is a vaccination mandate in place for all SMMUSD staff with exceptions granted for religious or medical reasons.

Per Public Health guidelines, SMMUSD defines an exposure as being within the same class as someone with Covid-19, being within 6ft of someone with Covid-19 for 15 minutes within a 24 hour period, or having direct contact with the bodily fluids of someone with Covid-19.

As a result of this definition, the number of students in quarantine is much higher at secondary schools where students' class groups often change across subjects. For example, while both Franklin Elementary School and Santa Monica High School currently have two positive test results, only 16 students are in quarantine at Franklin compared to 178 at Samohi.

Los Angeles requires COVID-19 vaccine for students 12 and up

AMY TAXIN AND JOHN ANTCZAK
Associated Press

The Los Angeles board of education voted Thursday to require students 12 and older to be vaccinated against the coronavirus to attend in-person classes in the nation's second-largest school district.

The move makes Los Angeles by far the largest of a very small number of districts with a vaccine requirement. Nearby Culver City imposed a similar policy last month for its 7,000 students.

The Los Angeles Unified School District, which has more than 600,000 mostly Latino students, already tests all students and employees every week, requires masking indoors and outdoors and has ordered employees to be vaccinated. Under the vaccination plan, students 12 and up who participate in sports and other extracurricular activities need to get their two-shot sequence completed by the end of October. Others have until Dec. 19.

"It is easy to wait for someone to tell us what to do. LA Unified is leading because we must. Our communities cannot wait," Mónica García, a board member, said before the vote.

"This action is not about violating anybody's rights. This action is about doing our job to be able to offer public schools that children can come to school and be safe," she said.

Los Angeles Unified was among the last of the nation's largest districts to reopen to classroom instruction last spring. The teachers union opposed the move for months, citing health concerns.

The district's student population is nearly three-quarters Latino and many are poor. Among adults, poor Latinos are vaccinated at a lower rate than the state average.

Los Angeles County saw an increase in coronavirus case rates in children from mid-July to mid-August but these have since declined, said Barbara Ferrer, director of the county's Department of Public Health. The shift coincided with the reopening of many schools with safety measures such as masking and testing, she said, adding that bringing so many children to school could lead to more exposures and officials will be monitoring closely.

Los Angeles school board members overwhelmingly supported the plan, calling it a sound public health measure and a critical step to keep classrooms open for the in-person learning so essential for students. Board member Jackie Goldberg recalled when polio ripped through her school and her friend in third grade lost his arm.

"It is our moral, ethical, religious, political — pick a word — it's our responsibility to protect the children under 12 who cannot get protected any other way," she said.

There are not yet any vaccines against the coronavirus authorized for children under 12.

Under LA Unified's plan, all students age 12 and up will be fully vaccinated by the time they return to class following winter break on Jan. 11. Those who are participating in sports and other activities need to receive a first dose of vaccine by Oct. 3 and a second dose by Oct. 31, while other students need to get their first dose by Nov. 21 and a second dose no later than Dec. 19.

Some parents are eager to see all eligible students vaccinated. Lucy Rimalower, who has a kindergartener in the district, said she is relieved officials are taking steps to try to protect her son until he is old enough to get his shot, and that also helps protect her parents, who are in their 60s and 70s and help her with child care.

"This feels like following the precedent of all the other vaccines over time that have helped us to have a safer school environment, that lets us feel like it's safe to send our kids to school without getting chickenpox, polio, the mumps, measles, rubella, you name it," she said.

Other parents oppose the move and believe it should be up to parents, not the board, to decide what is best for their children. They noted coronavirus has been far less lethal for children than for older adults.

"We don't understand why you are so rushed," Diana Guillen, chair of the district's English learner advisory committee, told the board in Spanish. "This decision should be ours, a family decision."

United Teachers Los Angeles urged the district to provide public education and outreach to families and access to the shot to increase vaccination numbers in school communities. The teachers' union had urged the board to mandate student vaccinations once teachers were required to get the shots and applauded the move on Thursday.

So did the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health. Between Aug. 15 and Sept. 7, nearly 8,000 student cases and more than 1,200 staff cases of coronavirus were reported in the county, most of them in Los Angeles Unified, which conducts weekly testing, Ferrer said. She said that doesn't mean the infections spread through the schools, and many in fact occurred elsewhere.

She added that more than half the county's residents between 12 and 17 are already fully vaccinated.

"Increasing these numbers is a critical part of our strategy for keeping schools open," she said. "Widespread vaccination can dramatically reduce transmission in all settings, especially and particularly at schools."

Taxin reported from Orange County, California. Associated Press writer Jeff Amy in Atlanta contributed.

Although the quarantine requirements may seem burdensome, Public Health Director Barbara Ferrer maintains that they are an essential tool to control campus spread of Covid-19.

"This is the power of quarantine: it does stop chains of transmission before they can take off," said Ferrer in a Sept. 9 media briefing. "And, while it certainly disrupts and it's a big inconvenience to families, the alternative is widespread infection transmission galloping through schools at rates that are more likely to lead to large numbers of exposures and extended outbreaks."

Across the County, school districts have been fairly successful in limiting transmission on campus. According to Ferrer, about 0.5 percent of the 1.5 million students in the County and 0.7 percent of the 175,000 staff members have become infected since schools reopened.

"This does not imply that the infections happened at schools, many of these infections happened before students came to school and some of these infections are also due to the high rates of community transmission and exposures outside school and in your homes," said Ferrer.

The Department of Public Health tracks school outbreaks, which are defined as three or more cases where the probable cause of transmission was school activities. Over the past two school weeks, DPH recorded 12 total outbreaks across all K-12 youth.

"While the small number of confirmed outbreaks is, as you can see, very low given that we have over 3,000 school buildings open, and this is a positive sign that mitigation efforts may be very effective at reducing transmission in the school setting, we do anticipate an upward trend in outbreaks as more schools are open," said Ferrer.

At a County level, cases are continuing to slowly but surely trend downwards, including across all school age groups.

SMFD Honor Guard Commander.

The event is scheduled to last about 30 minutes.

The brief and solemn remembrance ceremony is consistent with the International Association of Fire Chief's recommended protocols for the day and while the public is invited to attend, they can also watch the live stream on the Santa Monica Fire Department (www.facebook.com/santamonicafd, www.facebook/santamonicapd) and City' of Santa Monica's (www.facebook.com/cityofsantamonica) Facebook accounts.

Chief Knabe said his remarks will focus on the role the Fire Department plays in the community and the connections between different groups.

"You know, I think it brings everything into perspective for first responders, because, you know, any given day any given moment, you can be responding to something that you don't know what's going to happen," he said. "And that's what you do every day, you come to work, and are there for the community, no matter what the risk is. And this day specifically just brings it all together because of the lives lost, not only the Fire Department but Police Department and other public agencies, and then all the people in both towers that died and, the fact the plane crashed at the Pentagon and everywhere."

Lieutenant Rudy Flores said some SMPD personnel will gather in front of the Public Safety Facility at 4 a.m. on Sept. 11 for a morning 5K run ending under the Santa Monica Pier. Officers will also participate in the 8 a.m. ceremony.

"To always remember the tragic events and show reverence for all the lives lost on 9/11/2001. A reminder that in the face of such pain and adversity, emerged courageous acts of heroism and perseverance," he said. "To honor the ongoing recovery, healing and resilience of the survivors, family members and loved ones. 9/11 motivated many to join Police and Fire Departments, and even 20 years later, it continues to be a driving force for many public servants entering the profession. We will never forget."

The ceremony will follow LA County Department of Public Health's COVID-19 protocols and residents are asked to stay home if you have been exposed to or are experiencing COVID-19 symptoms. Unvaccinated persons are strongly recommended to wear a mask during the event. All persons are required to wear a mask when indoors.

these problems. I have plans to turn around California and as a businessman, I know how to get results. This campaign needs to be about fixing California, not partisan politics."

Cox is the second candidate to hit the area in as many days following a visit by Larry Elder to Venice on Wednesday. Elder's trip was cut short by an egg-throwing woman in a gorilla mask and general animosity from residents of a nearby homeless camp.

Newsom has branded the recall as a Republican power grab that would endanger residents by rolling back coronavirus protections and jeopardize national Democratic priorities if a Republican were to appoint candidates to the Senate or Congress.

Recent polling by the nonpartisan Public Policy Institute of California on the critical first question in the recall – whether to remove Newsom – found those supporting his ouster at just 39%. That figure is roughly in line with the vote share for GOP candidates in recent statewide races — in 2018, no Republicans seeking top offices were able to break 40% of the vote -- suggesting that represents a ceiling for Republicans and conservative-leaning moderates and independents.

President Biden is expected to join Newsom in Long Beach on Friday for a rally after Vice President Harris came through the state this week.

FDA delays decision on e-cigarettes from vaping giant Juul

MATTHEW PERRONE
AP Health Writer

Federal health officials on Thursday delayed a high-stakes decision on whether to permit bestselling vaping brand Juul to stay on the market, while banning the sale of thousands of other electronic cigarettes.

The Food and Drug Administration said it rejected applications for nearly 950,000 e-cigarettes and related products, mainly due to their potential appeal to underage teens. Some of the products are currently being sold while many others were only proposed by manufacturers. But the agency didn't rule on Juul, the most popular brand with adult smokers and many teens.

Parents, politicians and anti-tobacco advocates have pressured the FDA for years to ban Juul's high-nicotine devices, which many blame for the recent spike in underage vaping. But the agency said it would need more time to rule on that company's products.

"There's more work to be done to complete our remaining reviews and ensure that we continue taking appropriate action to protect our nation's youth from the dangers of all tobacco products, including e-cigarettes," the agency said in a statement. The agency noted 80% of teens and children who vape use flavored products.

Thursday's action is part of a sweeping review by the FDA to bring scientific scrutiny to the multibillion-dollar vaping industry after years of regulatory delays. The agency has yet to authorize any vaping product as a less harmful option for smokers.

The FDA faced a court deadline Thursday to issue decisions on marketing applications from Juul and hundreds of other companies. The date was set by a federal judge after anti-tobacco groups successfully sued the FDA to speed up its review.

To stay on the market, companies must show that their e-cigarettes benefit public health. In practice, that means proving that adult smokers who use the products are likely to quit or reduce their smoking, while teens are unlikely to get hooked on them.

FDA regulators previously said they would prioritize Juul and a handful of other key players, but none were included in the agency's announcement.

The delay was immediately panned by anti-vaping groups.

"This is an outrageous move by FDA," said Meredith Berkman, co-founder of Parents Against Vaping E-cigarettes. "Millions of families whose kids' lives have been upended by the youth vaping epidemic created by Juul have waited long enough for action."

E-cigarettes first appeared in the U.S. more than a decade ago with the promise of providing smokers with a less harmful alternative to smoking traditional tobacco cigarettes. The devices heat a nicotine solution into a vapor that's inhaled.

But there has been little rigorous study of whether the e-cigarettes truly help smokers quit. And efforts by the FDA to begin vetting vaping products and their claims were repeatedly slowed by industry lobbying and competing political interests.

Today, the vaping market includes hundreds of companies selling an array of devices and nicotine solutions in various flavors and strengths. But the vast majority of the market is controlled by a few companies including Juul Labs Inc. — which is partially owned by tobacco giant Altria — and Vuse, part of cigarette maker R.J. Reynolds.

Juul accounts for nearly half of the $4 billion U.S. market but sales have fallen sharply from when the company controlled more than 75%. In 2019, the company was pressured into halting all advertising and pulling all of its flavors except for menthol and tobacco.

The FDA received applications for more than 6 million vaping products. The agency said Thursday it has taken action on 93% of those applications, including for 4.5 million products that were immediately rejected because they were missing key information.

It is still reviewing a smaller number of applications for other non-traditional tobacco products like hookahs, pipes and mini cigars. Those products weren't covered by the original 2009 law that first gave the FDA authority to oversee some parts of the industry, including the review of new products. Also awaiting review: larger vaping devices with refillable tanks that are mainly popular with adults and sell at specialty vape shops.

The vaping issue took on new urgency in 2018 when Juul's high-nicotine, fruity-flavored cartridges became a nationwide craze among middle and high school students, leading the FDA to declare an "epidemic" of underage vaping. Last year, the FDA limited flavors in those small vaping devices to just tobacco and menthol, and teen vaping dropped. But the question of whether e-cigarettes should be sold at all remained.

Most experts agree the chemicals contained in e-cigarette vapor are less harmful than tobacco smoke, which contains thousands of cancer-causing chemicals. But there's been little hard data that smokers who start vaping actually stay off of cigarettes. Surveys show that many people wind up using both.

FDA regulators warned companies for years they would have to submit rigorous, long-term data showing a clear benefit for smokers who switch to vaping. But virtually all e-cigarette makers have resisted that kind of expensive, time-consuming research.

Laurence E. Eubank

June 18, 1948 - September 1, 2021

From Michigan to India to Maine to Russia to New York back to Maine to California, Laurence Eubank lived a life of wonder and adventure.

Raised in Detroit and educated at Michigan State University, Laurence went off to the Peace Corps in India to help farmers in a village outside of Jaipur boost their cattle production, and then thumbed around Asia and Australia before embarking on a career as a carpenter, homebuilder, and real estate developer. When the wanderlust struck again he went back to the Peace Corps, this time in Saratov, Russia, to lead American entrepreneurs and consultants helping Russian entrepreneurs set up their businesses after the fall of the USSR. That experience led to a few years of trying to identify, support, and invest in those potentially successful entrepreneurs, running between New York City and Moscow for the US Russia Investment Fund.

Next came living on Zuby, his 42-foot sailboat, in Portland Maine, while publishing magazine articles on sailing, international development and investing, and writing the modern-day "great Russian novel," A Bend in The Volga. It was during this period that Laurence, while serving as a groomsman at the wedding of friends from his Saratov days, very briefly met the woman, Alin Wall, who 13 years later was to become the love of his life.

Other adventures ensued. Laurence was the captain on a ship competing in the Marion Bermuda Race, a 645-nautical-mile ocean race. He twice bicycled across America with his son Louie, once taking a northern route and once a southern one. From those two crazy and fabulous trips came his nonfiction adventure piece, Spokes. And along the way, he studied with Jorma Kaukonen to perfect his mastery of the guitar which he carried with him on all his travels.

And then, on a 2010 reunion trip to Yosemite with the friends he met during the Saratov project, Laurence re-met Alin, and POW! They were both hit with the same bolt of lightning, were never again apart, and lived happily-ever-after together until now.

After joining Alin in Santa Monica, Laurence finished another novel, Run Down the Wind, and several screenplays. He became very active in local politics, chaired their neighborhood association, served on several commissions, and was the driving force behind a PAC that helped elect new city council members. During these joyous years, he was often seen riding his bike all over town with his long silver hair flying in the wind, or playing his guitar with friends in the park, or walking shih-tzus Ellie and Lulu and his favorite, miniature poodle Charlie.

Laurence will be terribly missed by the many friends he made all over the world, and by his loving family: wife Alin Wall; son Louis Eubank and wife Katie, granddaughters Brooklyn, Sierra and Mackenzie and their little brother on the way; sister Anne & Paul Glendon; sister Dorothy & Bob Deremo and their children and spouses; brother John & Kathy Eubank and their children and spouses; his closest nephew and wife Spencer Glendon & Lisa Tung; his closest niece and husband Christina Glendon & Brian Ellman; and his friend and former wife Marty Riehle & her wife Janis Childs.

After so many years in the construction industry, adventures around the world, and just living life, Laurence developed a lung disease that eventually led to his untimely passing on September 1st. One celebration of Laurence will be planned for Santa Monica CA and one for Portland ME, both sometime in the weeks to come.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (SEPTEMBER 10)

The Venus transit coinciding with your solar return shows a shift in relationships. Some get deeper; others lighten up. Also, new subjects will fascinate you, and as you follow your changing interests, different people come into your world. The fresh influences enliven your scene and make existing ties more dear. Sagittarius and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 15, 4, 44 and 39.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). If anything close to perfection can be achieved, it will only be without the ego. But without the ego, perfection doesn't matter in the least because being fully present to the process is all that matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Making a wrong choice doesn't mean you owe yourself admonishment. This is all a learning process. Now you know the right move, and soon you'll do it so many times it will come automatically to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You know what you want, and you ask for it in a way that makes it easy for people to say yes to you. Just make sure they are really qualified to follow through and you're golden!

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're courageous and adventurous. Even when something is completely unfamiliar to you, you are still able to open your mind and heart to it. You'll thrive creatively because of this.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The mystic Osho said that all artistic activity is on the way toward becoming religious. Start a practice of creativity today, and it will lead you to a sacred place in your own soul.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Add people to your world. The more reciprocal and uplifting relationships you have, the better balanced your perspective will be -- and, it follows, your mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). No role can represent the entirety of your being. A role is something you do, not someone you are. An expansive spirit pervades your being and inspires you to handle things without defining yourself in the process.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You have built much in your life, but the current relationship will not be created through building. It will come together through allowing, granting and gaining access to another person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). People will say just what you wanted them to. Is it as satisfying to hear as you thought it would be? Does it accomplish your original goal? Decide what to do next with your growing influence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The stressful situation will pass; the problem will be solved; the transition process will be successfully completed. When they ask why you're so confident, ultimately, you will credit this experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The scene may meet your standard on paper, but that doesn't mean it really fits. Try things for a while, and then decide. Take your time because this decision will alter the course.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Avoid twisting yourself up into a knot to prove how flexible and willing to please you are. Instead, walk tall and follow your own rules. Just for today, it's better to err on the side of rigidity.

California State law requires that communities prepare and update the Housing Element of the General Plan every eight years. The Housing Element serves as the City's guide for addressing the housing needs of all segments of Santa Monica's population. Housing needs are determined by the California Housing and Community Department (HCD), which decide the numerical housing targets for each regional council of governments. Each council of government across the State then further allocates the regional housing number (known as the Regional Housing Needs Allocation – or RHNA) to every city and county within its jurisdiction. The RHNA is a targeted housing number - cities and counties must plan for the RHNA and show that under current land use and development standards, there is capacity to accommodate for this number of housing. For the proposed 6th Cycle 2021-2029 Housing Element, the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG) determined that the City's draft RHNA allocation is 8,895 units, more than 5 times than the last cycle. The significant increase in the City's RHNA housing number is indicative of the severity of the current housing crisis. As part of the proposed 2021-2029 Housing Element, Santa Monica must demonstrate to the State that there is available capacity within its jurisdictional boundaries to meet its targeted RHNA number. Per State requirements, the City's 2021-2029 Housing Element has been drafted and available online at www.santamonica.gov/housing-element-update. The Housing Element Update includes the following components:

- A detailed analysis of the City's demographic, economic and housing characteristics.
- An analysis of the barriers to producing and preserving housing.
- A review of the City's progress in implementing current housing policies and programs.
- An identification of goals, objectives, and policies, in addition to a full list of programs that will implement the vision of the plan.
- A list of sites (aka the Suitable Sites Inventory) that could accommodate new housing, demonstrating the City's ability to meet the quantified housing number established in the RHNA.

Environmental Analysis

The Housing Element update was analyzed in accordance with the California Environmental Quality Act ("CEQA") and this analysis is contained in the Housing Element Update's Final Environmental Impact Report (SCH #2020100575) (FEIR). The Planning Commission will consider the analysis and make a recommendation to the City Council on the FEIR.
