Los Angeles County to settle lawsuit over homeless crisis

CHRISTOPHER WEBER
Associated Press

Los Angeles County leaders announced Monday a lawsuit settlement agreement that commits hundreds of millions of dollars to expand outreach and supportive services for homeless residents, marking the potential end of two years of litigation over the crisis of people living on the streets.

The deal puts LA County, operator of the local public health system, in direct partnership with the city of Los Angeles, which has committed to sheltering thousands of homeless residents as part of its settlement in the lawsuit reached earlier this year.

The suit was brought in 2020 by the LA Alliance for Human Rights, a coalition that includes businesses, residents, landlords, homeless people and others who allege that inaction by the city and county has created a dangerous environment.

The homeless population was once largely confined to downtown LA's notorious Skid Row, but encampments have spread widely, including within sight of City Hall and the Hall of Administration, where the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors meets.

Supervisor Holly Mitchell said the county will commit an estimated $236 million in new funding to address homelessness through 2027, with an emphasis on expanding street outreach teams to make sure people who need help get it. That's on top of more than $530 million in homelessness funding created by a sales tax approved by voters in 2017.

Mitchell said the new money will also go toward a "comprehensive suite of services" for eligible residents of the 10,200 permanent housing units and 3,100 interim shelter beds that the city of LA has committed to build under its agreement. Services will include case management, medical and mental health support, benefits advocacy, family reunification, childcare and addiction treatment.

Heal the Bay brings over 200 students to beach as part of Coastal Clean-up efforts

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

For the first time in two years, hundreds of students will spend the day Wednesday helping to clean up Santa Monica beaches and learning about the local environment as part of Heal the Bay's Coastal Clean-up Education Day. The event, which began in 2005, has been on hold since 2020 due to COVID-19.

The event is associated with Heal the Bay's annual Coastal Clean-up Day, scheduled for this Saturday, Sept. 17, which draws thousands of volunteers annually to collect trash and assist with other clean-up and restoration efforts in partnership with other local organizations. Volunteers can choose to participate at any of more than 35 sites across LA county ranging from Malibu to Long Beach as well as several inland locations.

While students participating in this week's education day will also take part in clean-up efforts, Kelly Kelly, senior education manager at Heal the Bay, said the emphasis is on teaching them about the environment and the causes and consequences of pollution.

"It's not just about picking up trash on the beach, but also learning 'how does it get here in the first place,'" Kelly said. "Just understanding that our actions, no matter where we live, affect the broader ecosystem, the broader habitat. So, litter and pollution on the other side of downtown Los Angeles can end up on the beach

Kurt Gonska appointed to fill vacant Rent Control Board seat

GRACE INEZ ADAMS

Kurt Gonska was unanimously appointed as an interim commissioner of the Rent Control Board last week to fill the spot left vacant in August when Board Member Naomi Sultan resigned her post after moving out of the city.

In addition to Gonska, three other individuals presented applications to fill the vacancy at the Sept. 8 meeting. Of the applicants, Gonska was the only one who is running for the seat in the upcoming November election, meaning that if any of the other candidates had been selected

COMMUNITY NEWS

The Pier

Santa Monica Classic draws young, old, local and international for 5 and 10K races at the Pier

The 6,000 runners and walkers who stepped to the starting line for the 17th running of the Santa Monica Classic presented by ASICS were treated to the quintessential Southern California vibe: palm trees swaying, waves crashing, the Ferris wheel and party scene atop the Santa Monica Pier.

"This is such a vibrant community," said men's 5K winner Sergio Reyes. "There's so much color down by the beach, very interesting folks that add a lot of flair to the place. And Santa Monica is obviously very beautiful to run through.

"It's alive and energetic, even at 8 a.m. on a Sunday. It's awesome to be a part of this community."

When it came to the 5K, no one was faster than Reyes, who lives in Palmdale. On a humid morning, Reyes, a 40-year-old masters runner, sped to the tape in 15 minutes, 51 seconds, a 5:07 per-mile pace. Santa Barbara's Cory Smith finished second in 16:16.

"I felt a little bit like a car wash sponge the entire way," added Reyes. "I was drenched. It was humid. But I made it across the finish line and thankfully chose the 5K today. Running that pace for 10K would have been punishment."

Venice Beach's Allison Lynch defended her title in the women's 5K, winning in 18:51, a 6:04 per-mile pace. She finished eight seconds ahead of Deanna Erwin of Pasadena.

Lynch moved to SoCal from New England and gave props to the local running scene.

"There's a ton of welcoming people," she said. "It's a fun community."

It was a big morning for masters runners as Franziska Vansickle won the women's 10K in 37:54, a 6:06 per-mile pace. Vansickle won by nearly two minutes with Alejandra Santiago of Inglewood taking second in 39:44. Vansickle was born in Germany and lived the past eight years in Switzerland before recently moving to Huntington Beach.

Of the Santa Monica atmosphere, Vansickle said, "This is absolutely amazing. The palm trees and the ocean. It's just outstanding. We get to race where people go on vacation."

Vansickle said the Southern California running community is more inclusive than in Europe.

"Here, it's much more of a community," she said. "It's much more friendly, everyone is helping each other. In Europe, it's a lot more competitive and tougher."

In the men's 10K, it was a Gutierrez themed podium. Luis Gutierrez of Rancho Cucamonga won in 32:12, a 5:11 per-mile pace. John Gutierrez of Santa Maria, no relation, took second in 32:32. It had been nine years since Luis ran the Santa Monica Classic and that year he opted for the 5K.

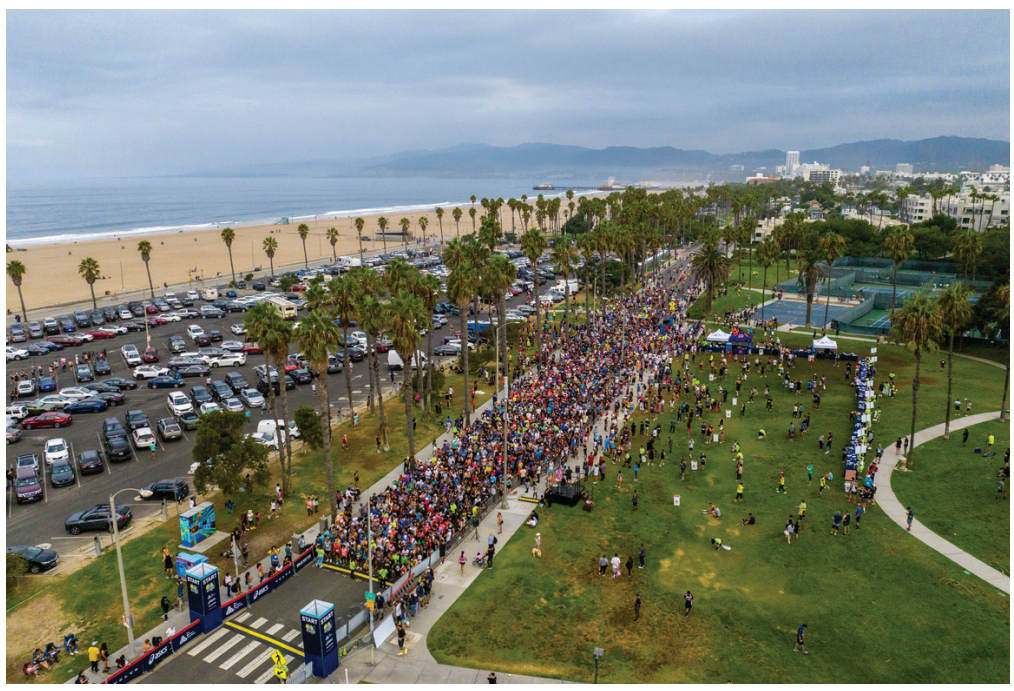

Winning in a sprint finish down Ocean Ave, Luis said, "We finished basically together. I just went for the kick and I got it."

Regarding the race-day surroundings, John Gutierrez looked at the party unfolding atop the pier, the palm trees, the ocean and said, "The finish line, man, this is so much fun."

Since 1992 when the McCourt brothers organized a road race to honor their father who battled Multiple Sclerosis, TMF committed itself to enhance the lives of patients and families affected by neurological diseases (MS, ALS, Alzheimer's, and Parkinson's. The Santa Monica Classic cares about giving back to the community. More than 25 runners participated with Team TMF, raising funds to support The McCourt Foundation, which is dedicated to finding cures for neurological diseases. FROM PAGE 1

"I cannot underscore enough how this adds to our toolkit for stemming the tidal wave of people who are experiencing homelessness," Mitchell said at a news conference with city and county officials.

Matthew Umhofer, attorney for the alliance, said the "monumental" settlement seals the deal with the city by ensuring county support.

"But most importantly, this deal provides something that has been desperately missing on this issue for decades: real accountability in the form of supervision over the next five years by a federal judge," he said. The county's agreement requires the approval of U.S. District Judge David O. Carter, who is overseeing the case and will supervise the settlement's implementation through 2027.

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti conceded there's been a collective failure of properly addressing the crisis at a local level. He said the new partnership is a step toward "putting a game plan on paper for how we can continue to march towards our ultimate goal of eliminating homelessness."

The city has said it will spend around $3 billion over five years to construct the new housing units. But the exact commitment will be based on the results of the 2022 point-in-time count of homeless people that was released last week. As of February, there were more than 69,100 homeless people in Los Angeles County, with about 42,000 within LA city limits.

Last year, Carter issued an order that would have required the city and county to offer shelter to all unhoused people on Skid Row within six months.

An appeals court struck down the order on grounds that the plaintiffs lacked standing to bring most claims. The alliance then filed an amended lawsuit.

Under the city's agreement, announced in April and approved by the judge in June, Los Angeles will create shelter or housing for 60% of homeless people in the city who do not have a serious mental illness, substance abuse disorder or chronic physical illness.

The city, which does not have its own health department, had contended the county is obligated to provide services and housing for people with those problems but was failing.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING BEFORE THE SANTA MONICA CITY COUNCIL

SUBJECT: Proposed establishment of a Pedestrian Mall along a southern portion of First Court between Arizona Avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard in the City of Santa Monica

APPLICANT AND REQUESTOR OF PEDESTRIAN MALL:
M David Paul Associates/Worthe Real Estate Group

The City Council will hold a public hearing regarding a request to establish a Pedestrian Mall associated with a development agreement application that was approved by the City Council July 14, 2022 for a mixed-use development ("Ocean Avenue Project") on the site commonly known as 101 Santa Monica Boulevard and associated addresses 129 Santa Monica Boulevard, 1327 Ocean Avenue, 1333 Ocean Avenue, and 1337 Ocean Avenue. The applicant owns all property abutting the portion of First Court where the Pedestrian Mall is proposed. First Court is a public alley that currently allows for one-way vehicular travel southbound from Arizona Avenue to Santa Monica Boulevard. The 160 ft southern portion of First Court is proposed to be closed to vehicular traffic and would be prioritized for pedestrian use by establishment of the Pedestrian Mall. If established, the Pedestrian Mall would necessitate the rerouting of southbound vehicular travel on First Court to Second Street (rather than to Santa Monica Boulevard) via a new mid-block, one-way, east-bound connection. The applicant would be required to construct and maintain, at their expense, the new eastbound leg of the public alley so that vehicles traveling southbound down First Court would be able to exit onto Second Street. The Pedestrian Mall would remain a public right-of-way and be closed to all motorized vehicular traffic, with the exception of occasional deliveries, emergency vehicles, and public utility and infrastructure maintenance during limited timeframes. A clear emergency access pathway along the center of the Pedestrian Mall would be required to allow for Fire, Emergency Medical Services, and Police access.

On May 24, 2022, the City Council adopted Resolution No. 11420 (CCS) declaring its intention to initiate the establishment of a Pedestrian Mall along a southern portion of First Court and set a public hearing for September 27, 2022, at 6:30 pm. This public hearing will be held by the City Council pursuant to the Pedestrian Mall Law of 1960 (California Streets and Highways Code Sections 11000 et seq.) to consider the request to establish a Pedestrian Mall over a portion of the public right of way, including hearing any protests or objections and claims relating to the establishment of the Pedestrian Mall.

Governor Newsom opposes tax on rich in statewide TV ad

ADAM BEAM
Associated Press

California Gov. Gavin Newsom wants voters to reject a new tax on rich people that would pay for more electric vehicles in the nation's most populous state, warning in a new statewide TV ad that a measure on the ballot this November won't help the environment but is instead "one company's cynical scheme to grab a huge taxpayer subsidy."

Proposition 30 would raise taxes on people who make more than $2 million per year. It would generate up to $5 billion in new tax money each year, and most of that money would go to programs that help people buy electric cars and install charging stations. A smaller amount would go to wildfire prevention response and prevention programs.

The ballot measure's campaign is paid for by the ride-hailing company Lyft. Last year, state regulators ordered companies like Lyft to make sure nearly all of their rides are in electric vehicles by 2030. Newsom says the ballot measure is Lyft's attempt to make taxpayers pay for that.

"Don't be fooled. Prop 30's been advertised as a climate initiative. But in reality, it was devised by a single corporation to funnel state income taxes to benefit their company," Newsom says in the ad, which will air in all of the state's major media markets. "Put simply, Prop 30 is a Trojan horse that puts corporate welfare above the fiscal welfare of our entire state."

Newsom does not mention Lyft by name in the ad, but as he is speaking a headline from the San Francisco Chronicle is displayed in the background that says: "Why is Lyft bankrolling this California ballot measure on electric cars?"

Representatives for Lyft did not immediately respond to a request for comment on Monday.

Responding to the ad, the Yes on 30 campaign noted it is supported by lots of groups, including the American Lung Association and the California Democratic Party.

"It is disappointing that the Governor would side with the Californian Republican Party and a handful of San Francisco billionaires who would rather kids breathe toxic, polluted air than pay their fair share," the campaign said in an email to The Associated Press.

"The opposition has never been able to point to any actual provision in the measure that provides a special benefit to Lyft or any other interest," said Bill Magavern, policy director for the Coalition for Clean Air, one of the groups that crafted the measure. "The money would go to state agencies that the governor himself oversees and would fund existing programs that the governor himself funds through his budget."

Newsom has been a big advocate for electric cars, approving more than $10 billion in new spending over the next several years to accelerate their adoption in California. Last month, California regulators approved new rules that will require new cars, pickup trucks and SUVs be electric, hydrogen or a gas-electric hybrid by 2035.

California law lets voters bypass the state Legislature to pass their own laws at the ballot box, typically resulting in several measures each year. It's not unusual for governors to campaign for or against these measures. But it's somewhat rare for governors to appear in TV ads speaking directly to voters about an issue not related to their own election campaigns.

"No one has more credibility on this issue than the governor," said Matt Rodriguez, campaign manager for the No on 30 campaign. "I think you're going to find the voters of California trust Gavin Newsom on what is the best way to go about addressing climate change."

Newsom is being challenged in his re-election campaign this year by Brian Dahle, a little-known Republican state senator who hasn't yet raised enough money to wage a strong statewide campaign. Free from the pressure of a well-funded challenger, the Newsom campaign has so far been spending its money on ads in other states that criticize the Republican governors of Florida and Texas.

Biden hopes ending cancer can be a 'national purpose' for US

ZEKE MILLER AND CARLA K. JOHNSON
Associated Press

President Joe Biden on Monday urged Americans to come together for a new "national purpose" — his administration's effort to end cancer "as we know it."

At the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum, Biden channeled JFK's famed moonshot speech 60 years ago, likening the space race to his own effort and hoping it, too, would galvanize Americans.

"He established a national purpose that could rally the American people and a common cause," Biden said of Kennedy's space effort, adding that "we can usher in the same unwillingness to postpone."

Biden hopes to move the U.S. closer to the goal he set in February of cutting U.S. cancer fatalities by 50% over the next 25 years and to dramatically improve the lives of caregivers and those suffering from cancer. Experts say the objective is attainable — but with adequate investments.

The president called his goal of developing treatments and therapeutics for cancers "bold, ambitious, and I might add, completely doable."

In his speech, Biden called on the private sector to make drugs more affordable, and data more regularly available. He ticked off medical advancements possible with focused research, funding and data.

And he spoke of a new federally backed study that seeks evidence for using blood tests to screen against multiple cancers — a potential game-changer in diagnostic testing to dramatically improve early detection of cancers.

Danielle Carnival, the White House coordinator for the effort, told The Associated Press that the administration sees huge potential in the commencement of the blood diagnostic study on identifying cancers.

"One of the most promising technologies has been the development of blood tests that offer the promise of detecting multiple cancers in a single blood test and really imagining the impact that could have on our ability to detect cancer early and in a more equitable way," Carnival said. "We think the best way to get us to the place where those are realized is to really test out the technologies we have today and see what works and what really has an impact on extending lives."

In 2022, the American Cancer Society estimates, 1.9 million new cancer cases will be diagnosed and 609,360 people will die of cancer diseases. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention rank cancer as the second-highest killer of people in the U.S. after heart disease.

The issue is personal to Biden, who lost his adult son Beau in 2015 to brain cancer. After Beau's death, Congress passed the 21st Century Cures Act, which dedicated $1.8 billion over seven years for cancer research and was signed into law in 2016 by President Barack Obama.

Obama designated Biden, then vice president, to run "mission control" on directing the cancer funds as a recognition of Biden's grief as a parent and desire to do something about it. Biden wrote in his memoir "Promise Me, Dad" that he chose not to run for president in 2016 primarily because of Beau's death.

Despite Biden's attempts to hark back to Kennedy and his space program, the current initiative lacks that same level of budgetary support. The Apollo program garnered massive public investment — more than $20 billion, or more than $220 billion in 2022 dollars adjusted for inflation. Biden's effort is far more modest and reliant on private sector investment.

Still, he's tried to maintain momentum for investments in public health research, including championing the Advanced Research Projects Agency for Health, modeled after similar research and development initiatives benefiting the Pentagon and intelligence community.

On Monday, Biden announced Dr. Renee Wegrzyn as the inaugural director of ARPA-H, which has been given the task of studying treatments and potential cures for cancers, Alzheimer's, diabetes and other diseases. He also announced a new National Cancer Institute scholars' program to provide funding to early-career scientists studying treatments and cures for cancer, with a focus on underrepresented groups and those from diverse backgrounds.

The president was joined by Caroline Kennedy, the daughter of JFK who is now the U.S. ambassador to Australia. And he was expected to speak later in the day at a fundraiser for the Democratic National Committee.

Experts agree it's far too early to say whether these new blood tests for finding cancer in healthy people will have any effect and why is that important not just to the ocean animals but to us."

She said students will rotate between five different educational stations on the beach and in Heal the Bay's aquarium.

"They get to use tools like sand sifters, they get to kind of explore and we encourage observations, like so 'what do they notice?' and then asking questions like 'what do they wonder about it'?'" Kelly said.

Prior to the pandemic, Kelly said around 10,000 students from around LA would come for field trips every year, around 11% of which were SMMUSD students.

Kelly said that prior to the pandemic about 500 students would participate in Coastal Clean-up Education Day. This year she said there will be fewer at around 280, but she sees it as a good start in ramping back up the organization's in-person programming and getting kids outdoors to learn.

"We're excited, we have a lot of field trips already booked this year, the majority fully back in person," Kelly said.

> "We're excited, we have a lot of field trips already booked this year, the majority fully back in person - Kelly Kelly"

Kelly said she hopes Coastal Clean-up Education Day and the organization's ongoing education work help kids to better understand the environmental issues facing the world and empower them to take action to address them at both the collective and individual level.

"Coastal Clean-up day is a large international effort to clean up, but you can also do things like ask your local restaurant to not serve single use plastic or it could also be supporting policies like the plastic bag ban," she said. "Reduce, reuse, recycle- it's in that order for a reason and a lot of those are personal actions."

More information about Coastal Clean-up day and how to register can be found at Heal the Bay's website. All ages are welcome to participate but those under the age of 18 need a signed safety waiver which can also be found on the website https://healthebay.org/coastalcleanupday.

they would have only served a brief four-month term.

Gonska, who said he has lived in rent-controlled housing since 2014, cited his experience with landlords as his motivation.

"Having gone through it myself, having seen how effective you all are when you work with tenants who are having issues to help them navigate and get resolution on those issues, I really feel passionate about joining you and helping my neighbors, helping fellow Santa Monicans navigate those issues and take advantage of the rights they have here," he told the board.

The other three applicants were Alex Elliot, chair of the Santa Monica Disabilities Commission, Ron Gilbert, a former building manager and Marc Mouallem, a real-estate agent and software developer.

Each applicant was given three minutes to present their case to the board for why they should be chosen. Elliot said he wanted to serve the brief term to help make RCB meetings more accessible, Gilbert shared specific concerns about the building where he lives and Mouallem said he was working on an app to facilitate interactions between landlords and tenants and saw the opportunity as a chance to "give back."

The board showed interest in some ideas presented by the other applicants but Gonska's desire to serve a full term won them over.

"It was a non-starter for me if you didn't apply to serve the full four-year term," Commissioner Caroline Torosis said." Serving two months is not very productive for us and if you're committed to this, you're committed to the full four-year term, and you're committed to running, so, for that reason, I think Mr. Gonska is the only candidate we can appoint this evening."

Commissioners also expressed appreciation of the dedication Gonska has shown to rent control issues, even without being on the board.

"I'm convinced from the extent of his participation in both rent board meetings, city council meetings, planning commission meetings, community meetings, activism during recent weeks when rent control questions came before us, my conversations with him about this issue, that he understands our law and that he's ready to hit the ground running," said RCB Vice-Chairperson Anastasia Foster.

Gonska was present at city council meetings this summer during which rent increases for rent controlled units were discussed.

"The dedication that he showed in showing up even though he was not an appointed board member, also that he has real life experience as far as having to go through the ebbs and flows of fighting with a landlord and knowing the steps that need to be taken, shows he has the passion and dedication that we need for commissioner," said Commissioner Lesley.

Gonska's term began immediately following the Sept. 8 vote and his name will appear on the November ballot for voters to elect him for a full term.

Gonska is one of three candidates for three seats on the board this year, meaning the race is all but decided. Along with Gonska, the likely RCB members this fall will be Ericka Lesley, an incumbent appointed to the board following another vacancy this summer, and Daniel S. Ivanov, an attorney and first-time RCB candidate.

CANCER

on cancer deaths. There have been no studies to show they reduce the risk of dying from cancer. Still, they say setting an ambitious goal is important.

Carnival said the National Cancer Institute study was designed so that any promising diagnostic results could be swiftly put into widespread practice while the longer-term study — expected to last up to a decade — progresses. She said the goal was to move closer to a future where cancers could be detected through routine bloodwork, potentially reducing the need for more invasive procedures like colonoscopies, and therefore saving lives.

Scientists now understand that cancer is not a single disease, but hundreds of diseases that respond differently to different treatments. Some cancers have biomarkers that can be targeted by existing drugs that will slow a tumor's growth. Many more targets await discovery.

"How do we learn what therapies are effective in which subtypes of disease? That to me is oceanic," said Donald A. Berry, a biostatistician at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. "The possibilities are enormous. The challenges are enormous."

Despite the challenges, he's optimistic about cutting the cancer death rate in half over the next 25 years.

"We can get to that 50% goal by slowing the disease sufficiently across the various cancers without curing anybody," Berry said. "If I were to bet on whether we will achieve this 50% reduction, I would bet yes."

Even without new breakthroughs, progress can be made by making care more equitable, said Dr. Crystal Denlinger, chief scientific officer for the National Comprehensive Cancer Network, a group of elite cancer centers.

Any effort to reduce the cancer death rate will need to focus on the biggest cancer killer, which is lung cancer. Mostly attributable to smoking, lung cancer now causes more cancer deaths than any other cancer. Of the 1,670 daily cancer deaths in the United States, more than 350 are from lung cancer.

Lung cancer screening is helping. The American Cancer Society says such screening helped drive down the cancer death rate 32% from its peak in 1991 to 2019, the most recent year for which numbers are available.

But only 5% of eligible patients are being screened for lung cancer.

In his speech, Biden highlighted provisions in the Democrats' healthcare and climate change bill that the administration believes will lower out-of-pocket drug prices for some widely used cancer treatments. And he celebrated new guarantees for veterans exposed to toxic burn pits, that cover their potential cancer diagnoses.

Dr. Michael Hassett of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, said Biden's goal to reduce cancer deaths could be met by following two parallel paths: one of discovery and the other making sure as many people as possible are reaping the advantages of existing therapies and preventive approaches.

"If we can address both aspects, both challenges, major advances are possible," Hassett said.

Johnson reported from Seattle.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 13)

The adventure unfolds according to your brilliant curiosity. Others see the magic trick; you'll look for the secret. Others see the risk; you'll look for the possibility. Others see the action; you'll look for the motivation. Your active, questioning mind will land you in the honey time and again this year. Just ask, relax and listen. Libra and Aries adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 4, 44, 39 and 28.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Everyone wants to be right, and no one is — not completely. So, be patient with those futilely trying to convince the world. You'll never regret being kind. Relatedly, you're now in a position to forgive and keep on forgiving.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). While you can't see the big picture of your own life, someone else's scene will inspire a mix of admiration and envy. You can have a version of what they have. Let your feelings help you determine a new direction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). True, there are more hospitable environs for growing your talents, but with a bit of determination you can make your current situation work. The first step is to carve out the time and hold it sacred.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're so easygoing and adaptable now that it may come as a surprise to you that certain people can't seem to deal when things don't go as they anticipate. Avoid the dynamic entirely by carefully managing expectations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). At first, you thought you created a dream in your mind, but now you wonder if it was already there and you simply discovered it. Either way, your dream once belonged to you, and now you belong to it. It will lead you magically now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Traditions of the past can play a purposeful role. But a group that honors tradition without incorporating the ever-changing needs of the moment will go stagnant. With diplomacy and strategy, you can breathe life into a group.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Connecting with others won't be a logical experience, so you don't have to worry about how much you know about how to do this. Maybe the so-called experts don't really know what they're doing either. Relax into receptivity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). While it's possible to talk to more than one person at the same time, you can't listen to more than one person at a time. You deserve to be heard. With careful timing, you'll give your message a fighting chance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Here comes the new thing. If you're going to add this to your life, something's got to give. Maybe let go of the idea of balance. Anything compelling is going to disrupt the equilibrium for a time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Just as your body needs a period of recovery after a hard workout, so does your soul require a rest after vigorous pressures. When was the last time you asked absolutely nothing of yourself? Make your life easy for a moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). To change yourself will be demanding of muscle and mind. Changing your environment to support the you that you would like to become will be less draining of your willpower, and your chances of success will skyrocket.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll be in a social mood and you'll gravitate to the sort of interesting, accomplished and attractive people with whom you have much in common. Someone with a stellar sense of humor will steal your heart.
