PIANO: A 'SilentHike' on Saturday will reward hikers with live music to support meditation at the conclusion.

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Summer is reaching its end, and you're probably catching your breath after weekends of dashing to the beach, concerts and festivals. This weekend, conclude the season by taking a trip inward.

Murray Hidary is ending a nationwide tour of SilentHikes with a free meditative experience at Los Liones Trail this Saturday from 5 to 7 p.m. Hidary will guide hikers up the trail while they wear wireless headphones playing his MindTravel piano recordings. At the summit, Hidary will perform on a real piano as participants continue meditating silently.

SilentHikes provide an opportunity for people to work through their emotions and forge deep connections with others, Hidary said.

Suspicious package shuts down part of Promenade

A section of the 3rd Street Promenade was closed for several hours Monday night as police investigated a suspicious package on the 1400 block of the street.

SMPD received a call at about 5:30 p.m. from a witness who said they saw someone place a device resembling a pressure cooker into a trash can near the Urban Outfitters store.

Visitors were evacuated from the block. Broadway and Santa Monica Blvd. were closed between Second and Fourth streets.

Local officers requested help from the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department Bomb Squad who arrived and deployed their robot to investigate the package.

New rent cap supplements local rent control rules

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

State lawmakers passed a landmark measure last Wednesday that will limit annual rent increases to 5% plus inflation for buildings that are at least 15 years old and require landlords to provide a "just cause" for evicting tenants.

While Santa Monica already has a comprehensive rent control program and a "just cause" law of its own, Assembly Bill 1482 will impact some tenants in the city.

The legislation introduced by Assemblymember David Chiu of San Francisco will not supersede the city's rent control regulations for buildings constructed before 1979, which typically restrict annual rent increases to less than 5%. However, it will cap increases for multi-family rental units built between 1979 and 2005.

Chiu's bill did not attempt to overturn a key provision of the 1995 Costa-Hawkins Act, which allows

EPA set to end California's ability to regulate fuel economy

MICHAEL BIESECKER
Associated Press

The Trump administration is poised to revoke California's authority to set auto mileage standards, asserting that only the federal government has the power to regulate greenhouse gas emissions and fuel economy.

Conservative and free-market groups have been asked to attend a formal announcement of the rollback set for Wednesday afternoon at Environmental Protection Agency headquarters in Washington.

Gloria Bergquist, spokeswoman for the Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers, said Tuesday that her group was among those invited to the event featuring EPA Administrator Andrew Wheeler and Transportation Secretary Elaine Chao.

The move comes after the Justice Department recently opened an antitrust investigation into a deal between California and four automakers for tougher pollution and related mileage requirements than those sought by President Donald Trump. Trump also has sought to relax Obama-era federal mileage standards nationwide, weakening a key effort by his Democratic predecessor to slow climate change.

Top California officials and environmental groups pledged legal action to stop the rollback.

The White House declined to comment Tuesday, referring questions to EPA. EPA's press office did not respond to a phone message and email seeking comment.

But EPA Administrator Andrew Wheeler told the National Automobile Dealers Association on Tuesday that the Trump administration would move "in the very near future" to take steps toward establishing one nationwide set of fuel-economy standards.

"We embrace federalism and the role of the states, but federalism does not mean that one state can dictate standards for the nation," he said, adding that higher fuel economy standards would hurt consumers by increasing the average sticker price of new cars and requiring automakers to produce more electric vehicles.

Word of the pending announcement came as Trump traveled to California on Tuesday for an overnight trip that includes GOP fundraising events near San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

California's authority to set its own, tougher emissions standards goes back to a waiver issued by Congress during passage of the Clean Air Act in 1970. The state has long pushed automakers to adopt more fuel-efficient passenger vehicles that emit less pollution. A dozen states and the District of Columbia also follow California's fuel economy standards.

California Attorney General Xavier Becerra said Tuesday that the Trump administration's action will hurt both U.S. automakers and American families. He said California would fight the administration in federal court.

"You have no basis and no authority to pull this waiver," Becerra, a Democrat, said in a statement, referring to Trump. "We're ready to fight for a future that you seem unable to comprehend."

California Gov. Gavin Newsom said the White House "has abdicated its responsibility to the rest of the world on cutting emissions and fighting global warming."

"California won't ever wait for permission from Washington to protect the health and safety of children and families," said Newsom, a Democrat.

The deal struck in July between California and four of the world's largest automakers — Ford, Honda, BMW and Volkswagen — bypassed the Trump administration's plan to freeze emissions and fuel economy standards adopted under Obama at 2021 levels.

The four automakers agreed with California to reduce emissions by 3.7% per year starting with the 2022 model year, through 2026. That compares with 4.7% yearly reductions through 2025 under the Obama standards. Emissions standards are closely linked with fuel economy requirements because vehicles pollute less if they burn fewer gallons of fuel.

The U.S. transportation sector is the nation's biggest single source of planet-warming greenhouse gasses.

Wheeler said Tuesday: "California will be able to keep in place and enforce programs to address smog and other forms of air pollution caused by motor vehicles." But fuel economy has been one of the key regulatory tools the state has used to reduce harmful emissions.

Environmentalists condemned the Trump administration's expected announcement, which comes as gasoline prices have crept higher following a weekend drone attack that hobbled Saudi Arabian oil output.

"Everyone wins when we adopt strong clean car standards as our public policy," said Fred Krupp, president of Environmental Defense Fund. "Strong clean car standards give us healthier air to breathe, help protect us from the urgent threat of climate change and save Americans hundreds of dollars a year in gas expenses."

Ex-Credit Union Manager Sentenced to More Than 14 Years in Federal Prison for $40 Million Embezzlement

The former manager of CBS Employees Federal Credit Union was sentenced today to 169 months in federal prison for a two-decade-long embezzlement that caused the credit union a loss of $40 million – a scheme that ultimately led to the financial cooperative being forced into insolvency.

Edward Martin Rostohar, 62, of Studio City, was sentenced by United States District Judge Otis D. Wright II.

Rostohar pleaded guilty on May 20 to one count of bank fraud. He used his position as a manager at the credit union, a federally insured financial institution, to make online payments from the credit union to himself or by forging the signature of another credit union employee on checks made payable to himself.

Prior to his three decades of employment at the credit union, Rostohar was a trained accountant and an examiner at the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA), a federal agency that regulates credit unions. During his approximately 20 years of embezzling from CBS Employees FCU, he used his senior position at the institution to falsify its records to hide his fraud and make credit union appear to be profitable despite it suffering more than $40 million in losses as a direct result of his scheme.

The scheme was exposed in March when a credit union employee, after discovering a $35,000 check payable to Rostohar, conducted an audit and discovered approximately $3.8 million in checks made payable to Rostohar between January 2018 and March 2019. Rostohar told law enforcement he gambled away much of the money and spent the rest on traveling by private jet, buying expensive watches, and giving his wife a weekly allowance of $5,000. Rostohar also started a coffee business in Reno, Nevada in December 2018, and he wrote tens of thousands of dollars' worth of checks to himself to cover the business's costs as well as to pay a $5,000 monthly mortgage on a home in Reno he recently purchased.

"(Rostohar) has the moral culpability of someone who was willing to leave as many as 43 depositors with deep losses so that he could wear $100,000 watches, buy a new vehicle every couple years, and impress women less than half his age with trips on private jets to international vacation resorts, Tiffany jewelry, and gambling parties," the government wrote in the prosecution's sentencing memorandum.

Rostohar has agreed to forfeit his ill-gotten gains, including bank accounts in his name and the names of his shell companies, four automobiles, including a Porsche, a Tesla and a Lexus, homes in Studio City, Reno, and Mexico, luxury watches, and jewelry.

Rostohar's long-running fraud resulted in the decision by the NCUA to liquidate the credit union and discontinue its operations after determining the Studio City-based CBS Employees was insolvent with no prospect of restoring viable operations on its own. In March, University Credit Union of Westwood assumed CBS Employees' assets, loans, and all member shares. At the time of its liquidation and sale, CBS Employees served 2,798 members and had assets of $21,037,558, according to the credit union's most recent Call Report.

Rostohar has been in federal custody since his arrest on March 13.

This case was investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Los Angeles Police Department.

This matter is being prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorneys Andrew G. Brown of the Major Frauds Section and Victor A. Rodgers, deputy chief of the Asset Forfeiture Section.

Take Another Path

I'M VERY CONSCIOUS

Of not bringing my son's murder in Albuquerque into the public domain, unless I think it may serve a good purpose, and serve others. (Or, like last Thursday, to honor him with a headline and a couple sentences at the bottom of my NOTEWORTHY column, because that day was his birthday.)

As for my column, believe me, I have puh-lenty of things to write about in Santa Monica. But I learned, in writing that very difficult column two years ago, shortly after his death, that being honest and vulnerable about a tough, very personal matter can connect with a lot of people, in ways I couldn't have imagined.

SO I HAVE TO REPORT

What I did last week in regard to his unsolved (barely touched) case, because I think it may apply somehow to Santa Monica, with our many serious problems, getting only worse because of City government actions. Not directly apply, but as an example that after being patient and going through channels, there comes a time to figure out a very different way to approach things.

Our family has been more than patient and understanding, as you will see in my letter below. But at some point you have to say, that's it, you've had your chance, now I'm calling you out. And maybe that helps.

So I sent the letter to Mayor Tim Keller, police Chief Michael Geier, and (former) detective Joshua Brown. And I sent it to the Albuquerque Journal, the largest newspaper in the state. Their managing editor did what I hoped he would, he passed it along, to their front page columnist Joline Gutierrez Krueger. She wrote us that day, and my wife and I spent close to an hour on the phone with her, talking about Chris's case and other related things.

There's no guarantee Kreuger will write a column about it. That's her call. But as a former courts reporter and police reporter, she has lots of experience with crime and murder cases, "especially those involving homicides and the way they were investigated — or not." Or not. Not a word yet from the government types — sound familiar? As you read my letter see if any of it seems like what we're going through here. Maybe we can learn something.

THE LETTER:
YOU CAN GET AWAY WITH MURDER IN ALBUQUERQUE

I grew up in Albuquerque, age 3-33. Graduated UNM. Left in 1980 for LA, to work in the music business.

My son Chris Andrews was 11 when we left, went to UC Santa Cruz, lived there about 15 years then moved back to Albuquerque. Bought a small house he loved and lived a good life with his two cats and many friends.

As I write this Sept. 12, it would have been his 50th birthday. But instead of joy and celebration, there is a pervasive sadness his family and friends have to deal with, now until forever, because he was murdered with a bullet through the heart, in his own home, likely by someone who knew him (according to APD), two years ago, a week after his birthday.

The Albuquerque Police Dept. has treated his murder like a pothole report. For nearly a year and a half we called Det. Joshua Brown every Tuesday to get any update. There never was anything for him to report, but we wanted to be the squeaky wheel that's not forgotten.

That didn't help. The detective assured us from the beginning that he would do everything in his power to find our son's murderer, that it mattered, to him personally. But two years later, the APD has shown us that you can get away with murder in Albuquerque these days, pretty easily.

On a visit there we tried to go through channels to get a 15-min. meeting with Chief Geier but were stonewalled and ignored by his "community liaison officer." Geier's so-called commitment to serving the community is a sham. Your Mayor Tim Keller is complicit.

Two years later no one has even checked up on the last phone calls from my son's phone. Isn't that what you do in the first week? Det. Brown has been promoted... and told us he would turn everything over to a new detective as soon as he winds up the phone calls and other details. That was six months ago. The trail on that is now as cold as Sandia Crest in Jan.

A few months ago I checked the APD website for homicides and there was a list of some 35 active investigations. Chris's murder was not among them. That was painful to see. Apparently there are "politics" involved, and our son just didn't matter that much.

It is such an insult for his case to be so dismissed by APD with their botched investigation and nonexistent follow-up.

Right now there is an amazing champion on Jeopardy, a teacher from your city, who is plowing through every brilliant opponent. And I can't even root for him, can't care, because of this. Albuquerque, my hometown of three decades, you are dead to me now.

God save the rest of you who still live there. Lock all your doors, look over your shoulder, get big mean vicious dogs, buy lots of guns. You have no police dept. Your City government doesn't care about you. You're on your own.

Charles Andrews has lived in Santa Monica for 33 years and wouldn't live anywhere else in the world. Really. Send love and/or rebuke to him at therealmrmusic@gmail.com

Protect the State and residents

Over the week including the 4th of July holiday, Governor Newsom pushed through passage of a PG&E bailout bill, AB 1054, as an urgency bill and without proper vetting. As Assemblyman Mark Levine said, "AB 1054 could be viewed as a reward for its (PG&E's) monstrous behavior". Legislators voted yes as a favor to our new Governor and to shore up PG&E's credit rating under threat from Wall Street.

This bill left out a critical contributor to PG&E's financial weakness, specifically, wildfire mitigation to actually prevent utility-caused fires. As reported in the Wall St. Journal (July 10, 2019):

PG&E Corp. knew for years that hundreds of miles of high-voltage power lines could fail and spark fires, yet it repeatedly failed to perform the necessary upgrades.

The CA State Legislature must amend AB 1054 to ensure that utilities perform necessary fire mitigation and to hold utilities companies accountable when they do not.

Details outlining the necessary changes to AB 1054 were recently sent in a letter to state legislators signed by 30 different Indivisible chapters, 350 groups and other progressive advocacy groups representing thousands of Californians from across the state. These amendments are crucial in a time of increasing threat from wildfires due to climate change and include:

- Requiring utilities to maintain/update neglected utility power lines.
- Require yearly independent audits for compliance with wildfire mitigation.
- Ensuring the regulatory process is transparent, and that information relevant to public safety is readily available.
- Removing barriers to formation of municipal utilities, so local governments can produce their own power (and reduce reliance on long-distance electrical transmission)

Leaving the bill as is unnecessarily exposes Californians to the danger of future wildfires and their enormous costs, many of which ultimately fall on taxpayers. The deadly Camp Fire that killed 85 people and razed the town of Paradise was started by PG&E transmission lines; preventing such disasters is obviously in the interests of all Californians.

With "fire season" now all year round and the fires growing in size and damage, our legislature, along with the California Public Utilities Commission, should be doing everything they can to ensure transparency and accountability from the utility companies that have often been the cause of these fires. We need to protect our state and residents as well as the financial positions of utility companies.

Overnight Closures on Pacific Coast Highway

The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) announces plans to close a lane in each direction of Pacific Coast Highway (State Route 1/PCH) from the McClure Tunnel in Santa Monica to the Malibu Lagoon Bridge in the city of Malibu, due to funds from Senate Bill 1 (SB 1), the Road Repair and Accountability Act of 2017.

From Monday, September 16 through Saturday, September 21 between 8 p.m. - 6 a.m., the following closures will be in place:

One northbound AND southbound lane along various locations of PCH between McClure Tunnel in Santa Monica to Cross Creek Rd. in Malibu.

Some closures may start and end later. All closures are weather permitting and subject to change. Motorists should expect delays and are strongly advised to use alternate routes. Drivers can check traffic conditions before they leave by visiting the Caltrans Quickmap.

The work is part of a $5.5 million pavement preservation project will that repair pavement in all four lanes of Pacific Coast Highway and slurry seal the roadways between the McClure Tunnel in the city of Santa Monica to the Malibu Lagoon Bridge in the city of Malibu.

SB 1 provides an ongoing funding increase of approximately $1.8 billion annually for the maintenance and rehabilitation of the state highway system. SB 1 funds will enable Caltrans to fix more than 17,000 lane miles of pavement, 500 bridges and 55,000 culverts by 2027.

Caltrans reminds drivers to be "Work Zone Alert" and to "Slow for the Cone Zone."

Trump says he will do 'something' about homelessness

STEFANIE DAZIO
Associated Press

President Donald Trump began a California visit on Tuesday, saying he will do "something" about homelessness but offering no specifics beyond the mention of creating a task force.

"We can't let Los Angeles, San Francisco and numerous other cities destroy themselves by allowing what's happening," Trump said aboard Air Force One. He said police officers on the beat are getting sick and that tenants want to move because of the homeless problem.

"The people of San Francisco are fed up and the people of Los Angeles are fed up, and we're looking at it and we will be doing something about it at the appropriate time," Trump said.

Trump is expected to attend a fundraiser dinner in Beverly Hills on Tuesday at the home of real estate developer Geoffrey Palmer.

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti on Tuesday morning said he would welcome Trump's help to end homelessness if he contributed federal dollars or property that could be converted into shelters.

"I know I'm just supposed to punch the president back but if he is real about it, I'll believe it when I see it, but I'll also trust that he wants to save some lives as well," the mayor said. "Certainly I do. We could do that together."

Garcetti, separately speaking in a video recorded at one of an eventual 26 housing facilities being built to transition people from life on the streets, noted that the president would be in Los Angeles to raise funds for his reelection campaign.

"But I wanted to talk to him a little bit as if he had come down here to South LA to understand and to hear the challenges we face and ways that Washington, D.C. — instead of demonizing us — might be able to actually come and help us," Garcetti said.

Garcetti pushed back on a Trump assertion in a July interview that homelessness was a phenomenon that began two years ago.

"I'd like to reassure the president it didn't start two years ago when you became president. It didn't even start six years ago when I became mayor. But it is our collective watch and our collective responsibility to solve this," Garcetti said.

Garcetti pointed to a Sept. 10 letter in which he urged Trump to provide funding for a new veterans housing development, support appropriations for federal programs that address homelessness and create economic opportunities and rescind proposed federal rules that would evict mixed-status immigrant families from assisted housing and prevent transgender homeless people from going into federally funded shelters.

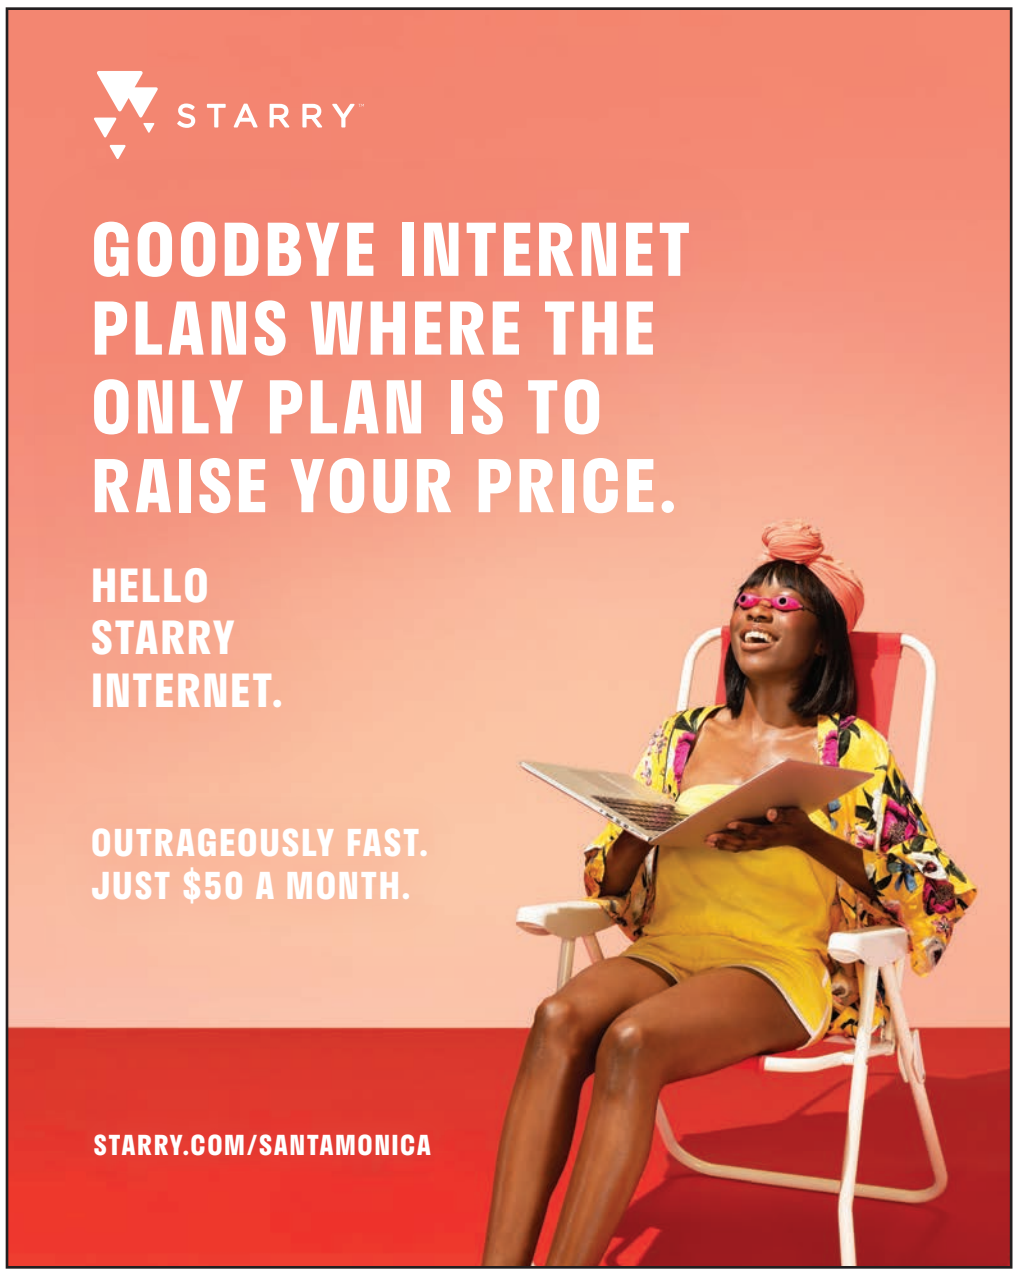

The mayor, who noted that homelessness occurs at a higher rate in Washington, D.C., than in Los Angeles, said it was "time for us to pause politics and not to demonize Americans that are on the street."

Former Texas Rep. Beto O'Rourke, who is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, also spent Tuesday in Los Angeles where he visited a women's center on Skid Row.

"I came to listen and to learn from those who are living on Skid Row, those who are serving the people who are living on Skid Row and not just in terms of addressing challenges here but how that might apply to this country," O'Rourke said. "You could argue that Los Angeles has the best perspective in the United States of America on this issue."

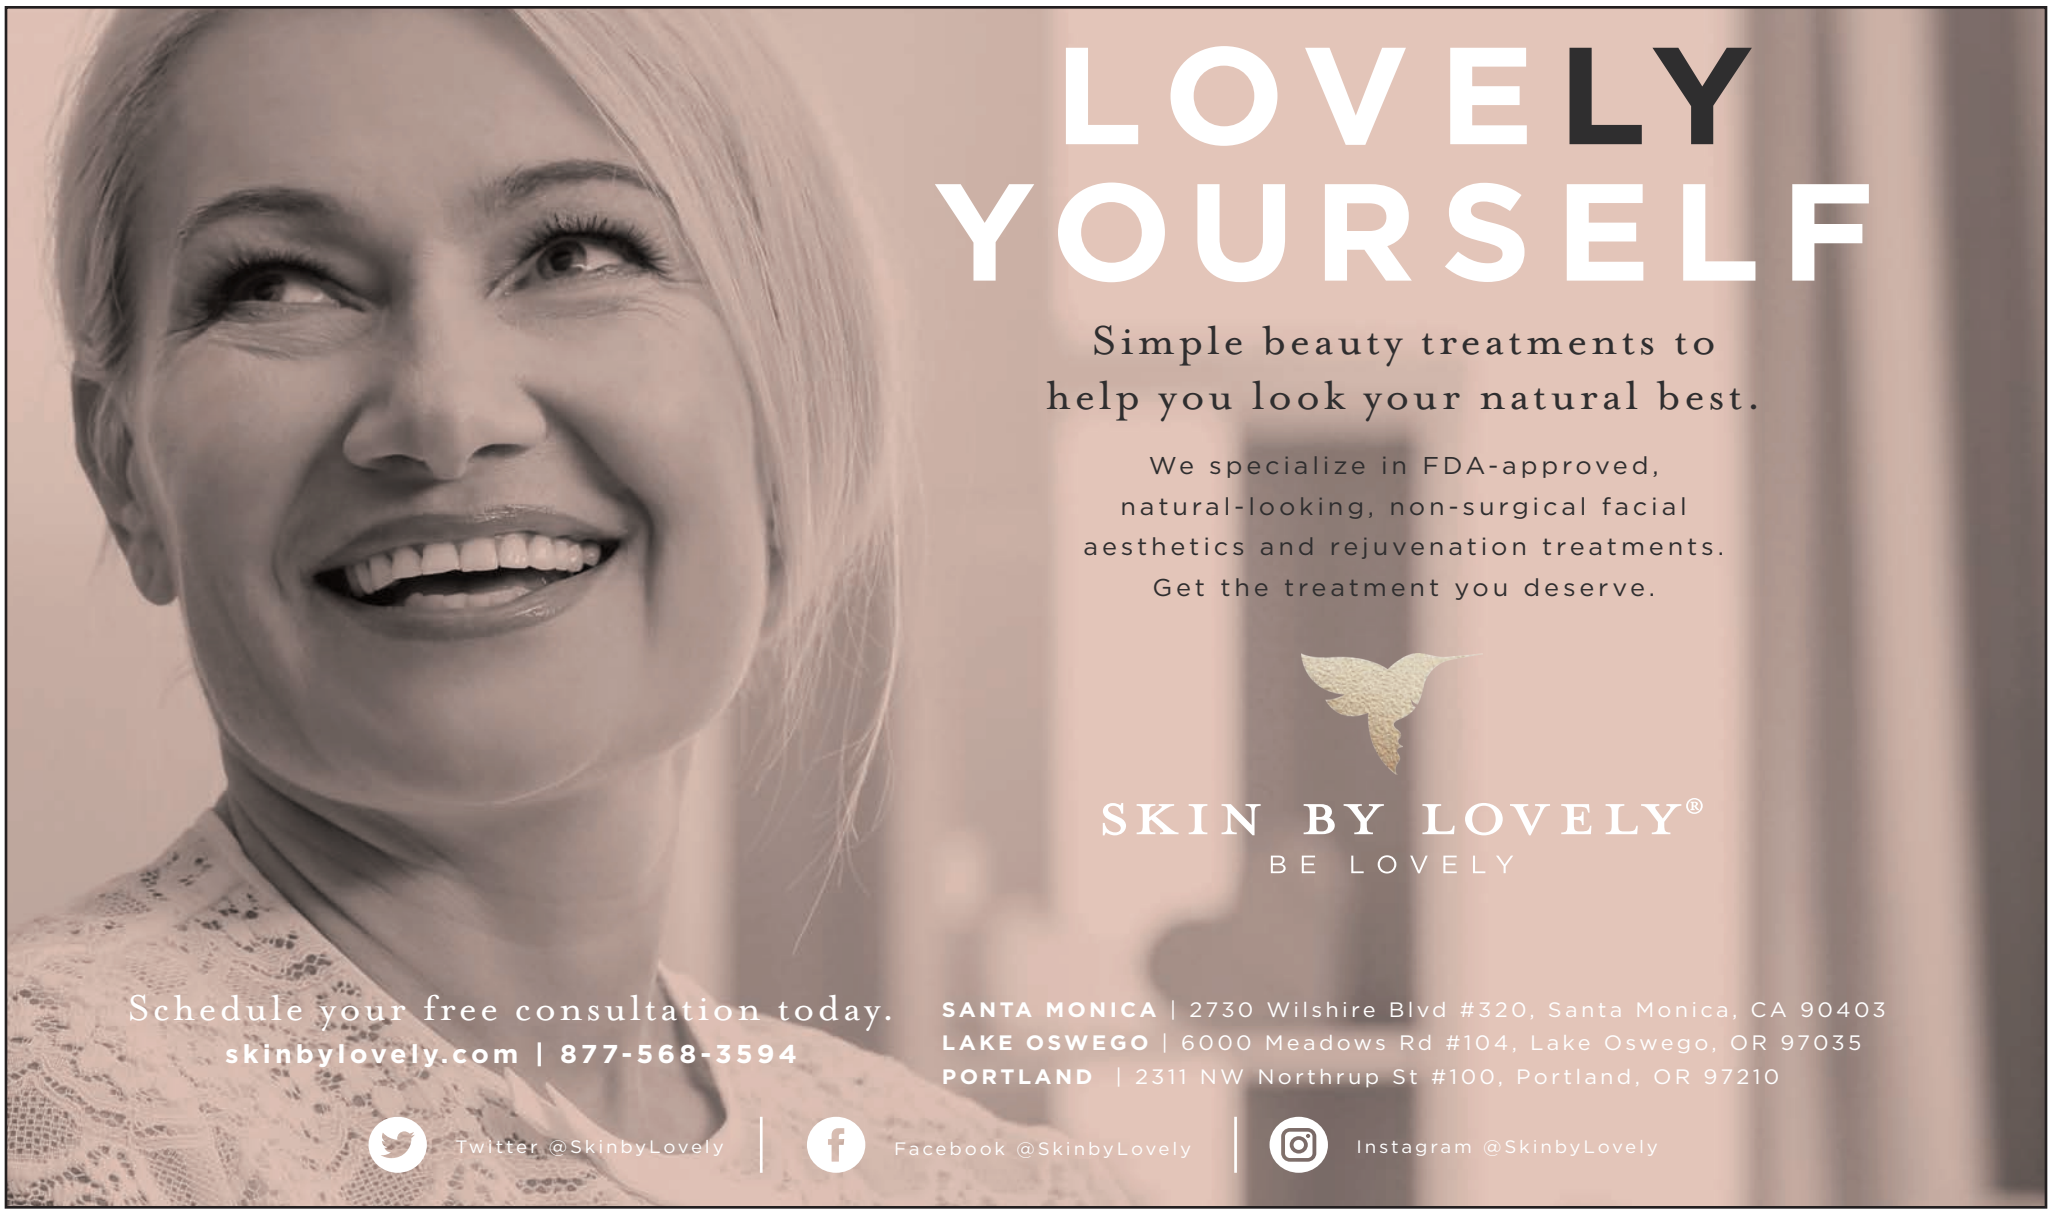

AP reporter Kevin Freking contributed to this report from aboard Air Force One. John Antczak contributed from Los Angeles.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (SEPTEMBER 18)

You'll learn empowering knowledge and skills and quickly use them to compete. With each victory, you'll build confidence until you're a contender for a big prize. The start of 2020 will take a turn toward opportunities more spiritual and personal in nature. Music and friendship will be key to your care regimen. Sagittarius and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 2, 22 and 18.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Take part in a small, informal discussion group where everyone has a chance to speak a number of times. People will build off of each other's creativity and come up with ideas they wouldn't have thought of on their own.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Counterintuitive as it may be, making a good impression will require you to surrender your need to come across well. Concern yourself with the message and with the other person and you'll do just fine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your value is not in your productivity or usefulness; it is intrinsic. Even if you do nothing at all, you are just as valuable as if you do all that is humanly possible. Hopefully, knowing this will help you to rest when you need it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Life is a series of temporary states and clinging or incorrectly thinking that any one of them is going to last will rob you of the freedom and levity that comes with accepting the movement of life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Socially clever, you'll keep things moving along with new topics, people and locations in order to distract and manage people who otherwise might not have such an easy time getting along.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your worries, as valid as they may be, are not the only place for your mind to dwell. You are still learning to move your focus to the places that it will do the best to support you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Love at first sight is really infatuation. True love takes time. There is no true love without trust, and there is no trust without experiencing a person enough to be able to make accurate predictions as to the person's behavior.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You will encounter people who resemble and act similarly to other people you know. Even though this is a unique and new situation, what you learned from the past will definitely help.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). While you can't totally control how others see, think or feel about you, you can use what you know and present yourself in a way that's likely to serve your purposes. You can also decide that it doesn't matter to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). In the meal of human relationships, an apology is the appetizer; changed behavior is the main course. And just like in a meal, skipping the appetizer is more common than skipping the main course, which leaves you unsatisfied.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). When people have a known weakness, you don't tempt them accordingly or in any way push into the pain of it. And anyone who plays on weakness is displaying a terrible character flaw and should be avoided at all costs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll have one of those "how did I get here?" moments followed by the "why am I still here?" question. You might be too close to the situation to recognize what's in it for you.

Saturn's Last Retro Day

The snooze button isn't just for alarm clocks. You can hit the snooze on just about anything today. It will be easier than ever to find a suitable procrastination loophole as Saturn comes to a screeching halt and reverses direction. Don't worry. By the end of the week, progress will resume and then start to accelerate. "Do it now" will become the mantra.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS

"I was wondering what you could tell me about my stars. I have never had a chart done, so I am clueless to my rising signs, etc. I think I am on the cusp of Leo/Virgo and sometimes feel like both. My birthdate/time is 11:45 p.m., Aug. 24, 1962 born in Cottage Grove, Oregon." You have Leo on the 3rd house, which rules your mental state, intellectual orientation and self-expression. This suggests that you communicate in Leo's extraordinarily entertaining manner! Furthermore, you are a Virgo with a Cancer moon and Gemini ascendant. There are plenty of lovely water sign influences in your chart, and your tendency is to ride the wave of your emotions to see where it leads you. This is unusual for Virgos, who can be so analytical at times that it's difficult to simply let go. But when it comes to other Virgo traits such as a talent for being orderly, you fall right into that category. You prefer yourself and your environment to be neat, clean, healthy and organized. I see your relationship with your mother as being something you are working on. Appreciating the similarities and differences in you and your mother will pave the way to a very fruitful end of the year.

CELEBRITY PROFILES

From "Friends" to the upcoming comedy "Friendsgiving," Aisha Tyler is a Virgo who brings beauty and brains together with a stellar sense of humor. Tyler, who comes from the world of standup comedy, was born under three sharp-edged Scorpio planets and four hardworking, detail-oriented Virgo planets. Her moon and Saturn in Taurus suggest an attitude of utter determination. Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.

"Something really wonderful happens when you look around and you see hundreds of people having this personal alone experience and sharing that together," he said. "This beautiful balance of the individual and the collective comes into play."

Hidary, a former web developer who studied classical music composition at New York University, created MindTravel six years ago when he started playing improvisational compositions to groups of a few dozen people in his New York City apartment.

Since then, he has brought MindTravel's meditative experiences to thousands of people in concert halls and parks, on hikes and beaches, and at landmarks and museums. One of his most regular venues is Santa Monica State Beach, where he first brought MindTravel outdoors.

Hidary, a Santa Monica resident, chose to conclude his yearlong, 21-city SilentHikes tour on his favorite hike in Los Angeles.

"Los Liones has such dramatic views of the ocean and a beautifully diverse landscape," he said. "It provides enough of a challenge for a physical and emotional and spiritual experience all combined."

Hidary describes his contemporary classical music, which is inspired by minimalist composers like Philip Glass and Steve Reich, as the soundtrack to the human story and soul.

"It's really about expressing through music the journey and the ups and downs of life," he said. "I also look at the patterns in nature and reflect that in the music."

In addition to playing his music for participants, Hidary will also perform improvised spoken word and poetry inspired by the landscape through a microphone connected to their wireless headphones.

After he finishes performing on the piano at the summit, he will bring the participants into a circle to share a word, phrase or sentence about what they are feeling and want to create in their lives.

"I do this at the end of each experience, and the usual sentiment people share is one of belonging and deep connection," he said.

Hidary said participants often share personal stories of how the experience helped them work through life transitions, such as divorce or loss of a loved one. He became a licensed grief counselor to better connect with those participants, he said.

"They find some kind of solace and connection within the music," he said. "Music is such a wonderful language for processing grief and pain — it's the language of feelings and emotions, especially profound feelings we don't have words for."

Hidary will also host a MindTravel experience at Santa Monica State Beach on Oct. 6 and perform with Santa Monica College's symphony orchestra at the El Rey Theatre on Nov. 2.

landlords to raise rents to market rates when tenants leave.

"These anti-gouging and eviction protections will help families afford to keep a roof over their heads, and they will provide California with important new tools to combat our state's broader housing and affordability crisis," Governor Gavin Newsom said in a statement.

The bill will impact almost 5 million households in the state, according to a UC Berkeley report. Jim Kemper, the city of Santa Monica's housing division manager, said the city does not have a count of how many units were built between 1979 and 2005, so it is unknown how many will be subject to the state law.

Rent Control Board director Tracy Condon said the state law will also apply to formerly rent-controlled buildings that were decontrolled when their owner moved into a unit — about 780 units in Santa Monica.

"The bill recognizes the state housing crisis that exists, and the rent caps definitely provide stability for people in place," Condon said. "It was thoughtfully done in that they exempted jurisdictions with stronger protections."

The California Building Industry Association and the California Apartment Association, which represent developers and landlords, did not oppose AB 1482 because it exempts new construction from the 5% cap for 15 years after it is completed.

The associations say that exemption will ensure developers can still attract investors who expect to turn higher profits on new buildings.

The California Association of Realtors dropped its support for the bill, however, when the proposed cap was lowered from 7% to 5%.

The law is set to expire in 2030, unless lawmakers vote to extend it.
