DTSM Experiment hopes to revitalize north end of the Promenade

CHAIRS: Small parks and comfortable chairs are in place on the Promenade to encourage foot traffic on the Wilshire end of the street.

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

While the search continues for a new tenant to anchor the north end of the Third Street Promenade following the exit of Barnes & Noble, the local business district has launched a new concept to attract families to that stretch of the street.

Boldly painted Adirondack chairs, AstroTurf "lily pads," self-watering planters and spinning top chairs now pepper the 1200 block of the Promenade, inviting visitors to sit, rest and soak up some sunshine further away from one of Southern California's biggest tourist attractions – The Santa Monica Pier.

"The whole tone and vibe has changed. It's been remarkable and very well received," said Downtown, Santa Monica, Inc.'s CEO Kathleen Rawson.

The 1200 block is the least popular end of the walking district, generating less than half as many annual impressions than the 1400 block, which is adjacent to Santa Monica Place

Sustainability efforts grow in SaMo schools

ANGEL CARRERAS
Daily Press Staff Writer

Days after debuting a new tree nursery at Samohi, Santa Monica school district staff were back with more green-related news, reporting updates on the progress of the Districtwide Plan for Sustainability, a long-term plan to reduce energy usage and waste at schools.

The plan will unite many pre-existing sustainability initiatives and incorporate those into education services and all aspects of student learning, integrating sustainability practices such as climate protection, resource efficiency and waste management into day-to-day operations in schools throughout the district.

California to audit DMV amid hourslong wait times, outages

SOPHIA BOLLAG
Associated Press

Gov. Jerry Brown ordered an audit Friday of the Department of Motor Vehicles in light of long wait times at field offices.

"Long wait times at the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) do not reflect the high standards of service that Californians expect from their state government," Keely Bosler, director of the state's department of finance, wrote in a letter to DMV Director Jean Shiomoto.

Man Sentenced for Killing UCLA Student

A Fresno man was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole for the 2015 murder of a 21-year-old UCLA student whose body was found after a fire at her Westwood apartment, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

In May, Alberto Hinojosa Medina (dob 9/15/93) was found guilty of one count of first-degree murder and the special circumstance allegation of murder during a burglary was found to be true.

Medina also was convicted of one count of arson of an inhabited structure, two counts of first-degree burglary and one count of animal cruelty.

Deputy District Attorney Victor Avila of the Major Crimes Division prosecuted the case.

Medina burglarized an apartment in the 10900 block of Roebling Street on Sept. 21, 2015, and then entered a second apartment where he fatally stabbed Andrea DelVesco and set her apartment on fire before fleeing.

DelVesco's body was found by firefighters inside her apartment. She was a fourth-year UCLA student from Austin, Texas, and a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority.

In December 2017, Eric Marquez (dob 5/12/93) pleaded guilty to one count each of first-degree burglary and accessory after the fact. He was sentenced in June to two years and eight months in prison.

Case SA091348 was investigated by the Los Angeles Police Department's Robbery-Homicide Division. Submitted by Greg Risling, Assistant Chief, Media Relations Division

Owner of Los Angeles-Area Clothing Outlets Pleads Guilty and Admits Failing to Report $3.7 Million in Income to the Internal Revenue Service

A Downey man who operates second-hand clothing stores across the Los Angeles area pleaded guilty to failing to report $3.7 million in corporate income to the Internal Revenue Service.

Jose Martin Andrade Flores, 53, the owner and operator of American Superior Used Clothing, Inc., pleaded guilty to subscribing to a false corporate tax return for the 2013 tax year.

According to a plea agreement filed in this case, American Superior was in the business of recycling used clothing, which it then resold at retail stores located on Melrose Boulevard and in Hollywood, Echo Park and Pasadena. The company also engaged in bulk wholesale transactions with buyers worldwide, as well as selling merchandise at Rose Bowl swap meets and sidewalk locations in East Los Angeles.

From 2012 through 2016, Flores concealed from his corporate tax preparer cash sales and deposits into foreign bank accounts that were made on behalf of American Superior. As a result, Flores admitted in court, the tax returns he filed for American Superior for those five years failed to report a total of $3,766,473 in income to the IRS.

Flores specifically pleaded guilty to subscribing to a false corporation income tax return (Form 1120) that he filed for American Superior for 2013. In that year, American Superior had income of approximately $3,440,769, but Flores instead reported only $2,505,183, omitting income of $935,586.

Flores pleaded guilty before United States District Judge Christina A. Snyder, who scheduled a sentencing hearing for December 3. As a result of today's guilty plea, Flores faces a statutory maximum sentence of three years in federal prison.

As part of this case, Flores agreed to pay all back taxes, interest and penalties associated with his willful failure to accurately report American Superior's income. Flores has paid the IRS $1,189,331, which includes $439,632 in penalties.

This case was investigated by IRS Criminal Investigation.

This matter is being prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney Ranee Katzenstein, Chief of the Major Frauds Section.

Jason Silletti Named Co-Chair of Orthopaedic Institute for Children's "Vision for Our Future" Capital Campaign

Jason Silletti, vice chair of the board of trustees at the Orthopaedic Institute for Children (OIC), has been appointed co-chair of the organization's $20 million capital campaign "2020: A Vision for Our Future." Silletti has served as chair of OIC's investment committee since 2013 and currently serves on OIC's annual "Swing for Kids" golf committee.

"OIC has changed the path of tens of thousands of children, and our Vision for the Future campaign will help ensure that all children with orthopaedic conditions have a future where they can grow well and play well," said OIC's CEO Anthony Scaduto, M.D. "We are thrilled that Jason has accepted this important position and know that his passion and true love for our mission will have a meaningful impact in helping us reach our fundraising goals."

The centerpiece to OIC's Vision for Our Future campaign is a major reconstruction, which will transform the Lowman Building into a state-of-the-art medical pavilion. Inside this new pavilion will be the largest pediatric orthopaedic urgent care center in the United States that will include a new fracture clinic, physical therapy center, research laboratories, pharmacy, radiology center and lecture hall. This transformation will help ensure that OIC's expert surgeons, doctors and nurses have the best facilities and equipment to care for the increasing number of children who come through our doors.

"I am honored and excited about the opportunity to help bring to light awareness of our need and appreciation for the incredible value OIC brings to our community," said Silletti. "As a resident of Pacific Palisades, I know firsthand of OIC's strong and vibrant presence on the westside through its Luskin Children's Clinic in Santa Monica and its alliance with UCLA Health. We should all take great pride in their unselfish mission and support the great work OIC is doing for children throughout Los Angeles and beyond."

Silletti has been a member of the OIC board of trustees since 2012. A fixture in the Los Angeles financial and investment communities, Silletti has been a private wealth advisor with Goldman Sachs in Century City for more than two decades and holds a master's in business administration from the University of Chicago, Booth School of Business and a Bachelor of Arts from UCLA.

Orthopaedic Institute for Children (OIC) was founded in 1911 as Los Angeles Orthopaedic Hospital. Focused solely on musculoskeletal conditions in children, OIC receives nearly 70,000 patient visits each year. In alliance with UCLA Health and with the support of the OIC Foundation, we advance pediatric orthopaedics worldwide through outstanding patient care, medical education and research. Our locations in downtown Los Angeles, Santa Monica, Westwood and Calexico treat the full spectrum of pediatric orthopaedic disorders and injuries. Talk and listen

WE'RE IN THE MIDST OF ENDORSEMENT season and with a sudden burst of activity this week, we think voters need to take some time to evaluate who they listen to and why.

In a world of near overwhelming information, there's certainly value to using endorsements as a filter, however, there's no substitute for direct education.

First and foremost, voters need to talk to the candidates. This isn't always possible in regional, state and national campaigns but it's 100 percent possible in local races. Every candidate running for Santa Monica College Board, Santa Monica Malibu Unified School District Board, Rent Control Board, and City Council should be reachable to any voter. They have websites, Facebook pages, emails and phone numbers. If they don't, they're not good candidates and don't deserve your vote anyway.

Talking to the candidates is important, but its arguably more important to actually listen when they speak and vote for someone based on their actual qualifications, not just pre-existing biases.

Voting for someone just because they're a challenger is every bit as idiotic as voting for an incumbent just because you recognize their name. To earn your vote, a candidate should have a grasp of the issues and an ability to explain how they will impact the city if elected. Incumbents and challengers should have to earn your vote every cycle.

While direct contact is certainly best, there are opportunities to hear from the candidates in other settings.

We will be holding a series of candidate forums in October for all the local races. The events will be free and open to the public. We're holding our SMC forum soon (date TBD) on the SMC campus, Rent Control Board on Oct. 9 at Virginia Ave. park, SMMUSD on Oct. 10 at Pt. Dume school in Malibu and Council on Oct. 16 at the MLK stage.

Candidates also hold fundraising events, attend public meetings and they should make the rounds for local community groups.

Voter education is critically important and to forego these opportunities for direct contact, whether it's at our event or somewhere else, is unforgivable given the important of elections to our society.

Endorsements can be part of a balanced educational diet when they are put into the right context. As a rule of thumb, if you don't interact with a person or organization throughout the year, you shouldn't care about their endorsement. Entities that emerge from a civic torpor for three months during election years are not going to be informed, engaged and aware enough to make honest recommendations.

Groups you've never heard of may well be legitimate but little known organizations or they could be fronts for paid advertising efforts. Huge organizations have earned a reputation but are unlikely to be consistently engaged in local issues. Specialist organizations endorsing races outside their wheelhouse need to clearly explain why they suddenly have a general interest in an election.

Making informed decisions isn't about which way you choose to vote, it's about how you form the decision. This takes work and it takes time. Certainly endorsements can be signposts for the final decision but it's up to the individual voter to make sure they have their hands on the wheel.

and steps away from The Pier (6.4 million impressions versus 14.2 million, according to DTSM's annual report).

"It's just so beautiful and the chairs are super comfortable," said Spozhmi Zarifi, who has worked at the nearby Chase Bank branch for two decades. Zarifi said she recently brought her family to enjoy the chairs and game of corn hole.

The former Barnes & Noble will not be empty for long, a wellness-centered shared working space founded by a former We Work executive has claimed the top two floors. Rawson confirmed Friday that Starbucks will open a coffee shop on the first floor.

That still leaves a significant bulk on the ground floor of 1201 Third Street Promenade empty amid a challenging retail landscape, as more shoppers buy goods online. The former bookstore tenant was hit hard by the so-called "retail apocalypse," struggling to compete with e-readers and Amazon.

Barnes & Noble is not the only national chain to shutter stores in Santa Monica. Total taxable sales on the Promenade fell 2.9 percent last year to $472 million. Overall, restaurants make up the bulk of spending downtown (31 percent) over apparel (20 percent) and department stores (15 percent). Occupancy is down four percent on the Promenade.

As landlords seek new kinds of tenants, the DTSM's experiment seeks to meet the needs of visitors, locals and nearby employees. On Friday, a 30-year resident felt out a song on the keys of the north end's new piano.

"You just go by the rhythm," said Solomon Turner, who had rested his guitar on top of the instrument when he sat down to make up a song and take in the tranquil scene. He was enjoying the piano and the weather, but said he wished the city would do more to care for the homeless. There are more people sleeping on Santa Monica streets than at any other time since the city began keeping track.

Rawson recently brokered a deal between volunteers who offered a weekly vegan meal service on the block and the Salvation Army to move the service indoors and off the north end of the street. Mayor Ted Winterer told the Daily Press there was concern the weekly line-up of homeless people waiting for a meal was a deterrent to business owners considering replacing Barnes & Noble.

While a few of those homeless residents rested on the blue and green lawn chairs recently, the rest of the space seemed occupied by local workers and shoppers taking a break. Rawson said she's seen nursing mothers, seniors and young families use the chairs throughout the week.

She said the furniture is there to stay for now and looks forward to hearing more feedback from the community.

State Senator Ben Allen, who represent Santa Monica and the surrounding area, said he welcomed the decision to audit the DMV.

"I have been monitoring closely the progress of the reforms put in place by the Brown Administration several weeks ago that were intended to reduce the unacceptable wait times and other performance issues at the DMV," he said in a statement. "While progress has been made in reducing wait times, it is clear that in many DMV offices the problems are still very bad, and the public is not being well served."

The finance department's audit will look into the DMV's information technology and customer service.

Brown's order came a day after a computer outage crippled more than a third of DMV offices for several hours. A router issue prevented about 70 offices from processing driver's license, identification card, and vehicle registration matters, spokeswoman Jessica Gonzalez said.

"We welcome the Department of Finance's input into DMV's ongoing efforts to reduce wait times and improve customer service and stand ready to assist with the audit," Shiomoto said in a statement.

The DMV has faced angry backlash in recent months from lawmakers and customers over long lines that have left people waiting hours.

Shiomoto has told lawmakers wait times spiked several months ago as Californians updated their licenses to meet new federal security standards known as Real ID. The agency underestimated how long it would take to explain the new requirements to customers and ensure they have necessary documents, Shiomoto said.

After Oct. 1, 2020, airport security checkpoints won't accept cards without the special markings required by the federal government. Californians must apply for new cards in person at DMV offices.

The department has already hired hundreds of additional employees to handle increased demand. The state has increased funding for the department to lower wait times.

The agency has also come under scrutiny after it mishandled roughly 23,000 voter registrations under the state's new "motor voter" law.

California's motor voter law lets residents automatically register to vote and took effect in April. The DMV says it sent the secretary of state's office incorrect information for thousands of voters. The department says the errors mostly affected customers' vote-by-mail, language and political party selections.

The state Legislature in August denied a request by Republican lawmakers to audit the DMV.

"I'm glad to see Jerry Brown finally heed the call of Republicans in the Legislature," Republican Assemblyman James Gallagher of Yuba City said in a statement. "This action, although too late for many Californians who've had to wait in extremely long lines, will hopefully lead to better efficiency and a full review of a flawed voter registration process."

Allen said he would personally participate in the process.

"I look forward to the findings of this targeted audit, and to the implementation of additional reforms to get the DMV back on track," he said. "I plan on being at the Senate Transportation and Housing committee's hearing on October 4 in Sacramento to monitor progress and hold the Department's feet to the fire."

project management company, assisted in developing the plan which is currently in its final phase of development.

Emma Sorrell, assistant project manager at Cumming, provided the roadmap of the plan for the district, illustrating where the program began and where it hopes to go.

The plan was first built on eight focus areas — education & engagement, energy efficiency, food nutrition, green buildings, water, waste, transportation and material procurement.

To draft the plan, Sorrell and staff were active in engaging the community, the plan's first phase. Cumming and staff created a steering committee and met with stakeholders and the community, creating workshops and attending the recent ClimateFest for public outreach.

The plan's second phase reviewed current sustainability programs and analyzed data within those programs and created goals, objectives, and strategies.

Now, in its third phase, the plan is being fleshed out, with a draft being available to view in December after a series of town halls and district review before plan implementation.

Thus far, components of the plan will create metrics to measure the plan's focus areas to measure progress and achieve goals. Goals will be prioritized by the ease of implementation and cost-effectiveness. Metrics will be implemented in the 2017-18 fiscal year with goal deadlines in 2020, 2025 and 2030.

"Sustainability is a road, not an end destination," Sorrell said about the plan. "It's an iterative process. By having metrics, we can constantly evaluate and see that we're moving in the right direction."

Sorrell said the 2020 goals will be "low hanging fruit, easy to implement" in order to build momentum for the program with the latter years "providing a roadmap of where we want to go, allowing the district to put an infrastructure in place."

Project costs and funding are being considered as well, with the team looking at cost savings potential within the sustainability measures themselves as well as grants.

After Districtwide Plan for Sustainability update, Caroline Coster, sustainability coordinator of SMMUSD, provided an update on the plastic food ordinance.

"We've been sitting down with our supplier for all the products, going through a very thorough evaluation of what we use currently and what we can phase out, and what kind of material is available. We're working with the city Santa Monica and Malibu to see what they recommend. Since this is new, there's not a lot of vendors. It will take a while to process and evaluate and make sure it'll work for the district."

Other sustainability efforts in the district include the creation of a SMMUSD energy dashboard which examines energy use overall in the district, electric. The goal is to reduce energy usage by 5% by June 30, 2019. A district-wide friendly competition will be had to see who can change their usage behavior the most.

Additionally, Prop 39 lighting installation will occur, changing lights to LED to conserve energy.

Solar panels will also be installed in Samohi, Edison, and JAMS with evaluations in upcoming weeks.

Medical Myths

■ If you stop weight training, your muscle will not turn to fat. These are two completely different types of tissue – one cannot become the other. What happens after you stop maintaining or building muscle mass is that resulting inactivity may cause muscle to atrophy (use it or lose it). Compounding the problem is that reduced activity lowers metabolism. If you eat the same but exercise less, the result might be additional, accumulating fat tissue.

CREATORS SYNDICATE © 2018 STANLEY NEWMAN STANXWORDS@AOL.COM 9/22/18

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 22)

You'll be able to pour hundreds of hours into the thing that is your joy. More excitement this solar year will include: solving a mystery and later being rewarded for it, seeing the something you planted ages ago make a life-changing difference for a stranger, and finally hearing the loving words written on your heart. Aquarius and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 17, 42, 9 and 26.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Take heart and keep working. Your excellent efforts will eventually be seen, acknowledged and awarded, though perhaps not until you've reached a kind of critical mass on your own accord.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Typically, a thing you have no control over is not your problem. If it bothers you, the problem is the bothering and not the thing itself. The solution will be an understanding and a reckoning that happens in your mind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
The timeline feels more like a continuum now because when one thing ends, another picks up right where that left off. If you want to take a break and a breath, you'll have to willfully carve that out.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You're the "wise" for whom "a word to" is usually sufficient. Today you're so tuned in that you don't even need the word. A slightly raised eyebrow is more than enough for you to get the info and react accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
There's so much you want to do with this weekend. But if you try to do everything, you'll end up doing nothing of note. Your ideal move is to pick one focus and do it well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You're a great friend. Your kind words and support will really make a difference to another person. Your luck will double when you offer the same sort of encouragement to yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Take advantage of the astral magic offered today by acting as though you already have what you want. It will feel so fantastic to appreciate your great fortune that you will find it's actuality quite irrelevant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
The most difficult thing to prioritize — the thing that people overlook time and again — is the love they already have. Get this right and you'll be getting a lot right. In fact, everything else will fall into place.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Letting go of the need to control anyone but yourself will liberate your energy and put you in a more loving, receptive mode. The magic motto is, "To each his own."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Your big plans are getting even bigger, which, oddly enough, will have you focusing on dozens of very small but crucial details today. These are the efforts that practically guarantee an unforgettable experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
There are questions people can handle and then there are questions that are akin to opening Pandora's box. They overwhelm and create chaos that can't be put back. Think twice before you ask.

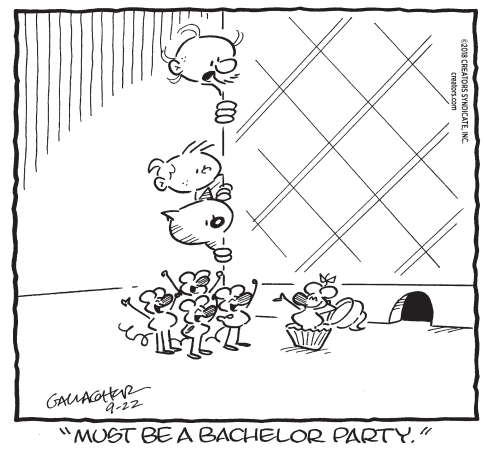

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
There's a reasonable-sized cosmic shift happening and however you feel about what's going on, you're likely to feel differently about it tomorrow. So hold on and enjoy the roller coaster. Ride it out until the end.

Happy Equinox!

The autumnal equinox has been celebrated through the ages as a time to give thanks for all we have and entreat the powers that be to favor us with abundance in the months to come. The sun moves into Libra, the sign of art, partnership, beauty and justice. May all the karma of your benevolent deeds come swiftly around.

Gilena Simons Joins The Board Of California Heritage Museum In Santa Monica

Santa Monica-based arts patron, entrepreneur and assemblage artist Gilena Simons has joined the board of the California Heritage Museum. Located at the intersection of Ocean Park Boulevard and Main Street in Santa Monica, the museum is housed in an 1894 structure built by renowned architect Sumner P. Hunt as a seaside home for Roy Jones, son of the founder of Santa Monica, Senator, John Percival Jones. The "Roy Jones house" was moved to its current location in 1977 and opened as the California Heritage Museum in 1979, the same year it was declared an official Santa Monica City landmark. The museum is committed to promoting the diversity and rich history of California's heritage through exhibitions, lectures, publications and community events.

"I am so thrilled and honored to be elected to the board of this historical landmark," says Simons. "As a local, business owner, member of the board of the Main Street Business Improvement Association, and commercial property owner of a building on Main Street, my goal is to revitalize the museum for the benefit of the community. We are always looking for enthusiastic, resourceful people to further this goal."

Simons will work closely with longtime California Heritage Museum Executive Director Tobi Smith to usher in an exciting new era for the museum. Smith has been with the venue since 1986. She oversees all artistic programming, and has curated more than 30 shows during her tenure there. In addition to special exhibitions, the Museum rotates selections from its own collection for viewing.

Director Smith says, "I'm delighted to have Gilena Simons on board at the museum. Her passion and energy, and her support of the arts and of our community are invaluable to what we seek to achieve going forward."

The California Heritage Museum is hosting its annual Flea Market fundraiser from September 22 to October 21. The sale will take place at the Museum during regular hours – Wednesday to Sunday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. For those wanting early access to purchase offerings including art works, furniture, clothing, pottery, dishes, clothing, and much more, Advance Preview Day is Saturday, 9/22, and requires a $25 admission (with $5 discount for members, who may also arrive at "early bird" time of 10 a.m.). Admission is free for all other days of the sale. Local Santa Monica businesses are encouraged to donate gift certificates, and donations of any kind – treasures from closets, storage spaces, and garages! – are accepted from individuals, and may be dropped off during regular hours. All proceeds will benefit the Museum, which is a 501c3 non-profit organization.

Santa Monica resident Gilena Simons was born in North Hollywood, California. She received a BA in Economics from Mills College – where she founded the Gilena Simons Library Fund, which provides conservation and preservation of the college's Special Collections of early rare books – and an MBA from Pepperdine University. She has been on the Photography Committee at MOCA since 2005 and is a passionate collector of contemporary art. Her gallery and highly curated vintage store TATABA will re-open in 2019 in its new space, an architecturally restored historic building on Main Street. In addition to her new role at the California Museum of Heritage, Simons is on the board of the Main Street Business Improvement Association, the Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce, and OWL, the Chamber's organization of Women Leaders.

Man Sentenced for Killing Pregnant Girlfriend in 2016

A man was sentenced to 75 years to life in state prison for murdering his pregnant girlfriend during a card game in Hollywood two years ago, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Last month, Philip Patrick Policarpio (dob 8/17/76) pleaded no contest to one count each of first-degree murder and first-degree murder of a fetus as well as admitting a gun allegation.

Deputy District Attorney Kathy Ta of the Family Violence Division prosecuted the case.

On April 12, 2016, victim Lauren Olguin, who was about 17 weeks pregnant with the defendant's child, was playing cards at a friend's apartment in Hollywood. Policarpio came to the apartment separately and an argument ensued between the two.

Policarpio struck Olguin, 32, and then placed a gun to her head and fatally shot her, the prosecutor said. He fled and was added to the FBI's Ten Most Wanted fugitive list. Policarpio was arrested several weeks later at the U.S.-Mexico border.

Case BA445887 was investigated by the Los Angeles Police Department.
