Haggen to close local stores

Oregon based company says it will focus on Pacific Northwest stores

OPEN FOR NOW: The store on Lincoln Blvd., could close as Haggen wants to leave the state.

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Haggen has announced plans to abandon the Pacific Southwest market, meaning the chain will close or sell all of its California locations including the Santa Monica store.

The company filed for bankruptcy on September 10 and at that time announced some store closures. However, in a September 24 announcement the company expanded the list of closures and said it would realign operations around 37 core stores with one stand-alone pharmacy in the Pacific Northwest as part of its Chapter 11 process.

Haggen said it has been actively working to explore market interest for its store locations in California, Arizona, Oregon, Washington and Nevada.

Haggen was a small grocery chain based in Washington State in 2014 that exploded almost overnight when it said it would purchase 146 stores that Safeway/Albertsons were forced to sell when the two giants merged. Haggen grew from 18 stores with 16 pharmacies to 164 stores with 106 pharmacies; from 2,000 employees to more than 10,000 employees.

The company ran into trouble almost immediately and was unable to turn a profit from many of its new stores.

At the time of purchase, Haggen said it would rely on cooperation from the newly merged Albertsons/Safeway to facilitate the transition process. However, Haggen contends that Albertsons actively derailed the transition process the two have filed lawsuits against each other as a result of the sale.

In a statement, Haggen said it is asking for

SMMUSD separation would likely take at least three years

County official outlines roadmap for possible split

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

The Santa Monica-Malibu school district took another step towards possible separation last week when the local Board of Education examined the complex procedures for splitting the district.

A county education official laid out for the school board the numerous layers of review and regulation involved in the process, which has gained support among some SMMUSD stakeholders in recent months.

The presentation by Allison Deegan, regionalized business services coordinator for the L.A. County Office of Education, came as the district continues facing a slew of potential challenges, including bond allocations and centralized fundraising as well as chemical testing and cleanup.

The regional impacts would be “significant,” Deegan said of splitting the district into Santa Monica and Malibu entities.

Deegan explained that there are several ways to get the ball rolling on separation, which would likely take at least three years.

One is a petition with signatures from registered voters, and Deegan said having 10-percent participation among voters in the district could expedite the process slightly. The signatures are then vetted by county registrar officials.

The church has invited everyone to worship at 10 a.m. in the church sanctuary, where their chancel choir will debut a new anthem created by “world-renowned” composer Kirke Mechem, which was commissioned by the church to honor Smith.

Throughout his time at First UMC, Smith “has supported

"Let's Talk About Sex" for a Good Cause with Girls

Girls PACT will host its annual fundraising event on Friday, October 24, at Busby's located at 5364 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles.

The fundraiser calls for all community activists, educators, politicians, organizers, non-profits, and professionals to enjoy the festivities and learn more about how Girls PACT supports the youth of the greater Los Angeles community. The theme of this year's event is "Let's Talk About Sex."

According to the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC), “To reduce sexual risk behaviors and related health problems among youth, schools and other youth-serving organizations can help young people adopt lifelong attitudes and behaviors that support their health and well-being—including behaviors that reduce their risk for HIV, other STDs, and unintended pregnancy.”

Girls PACT is a youth-serving organization that does exactly what the CDC suggests. Education and talking about sex is the primary step to prevent risks when having sex. The event is an adult only social gathering; Busby's will sell food and drink items, there will be bingo, a live and silent auction, and a live DJ.

Major companies have sponsored the items that will go on sell during the live and silent auction including massage packages, a mini iPad and tickets to major sporting events in Los Angeles. Join in on the fun, tickets are on sell now at Eventbrite.com. Purchase your tickets before October 8 and receive a $10 discount (early bird prices start at $35). Girls PACT is a non-profit organization in Los Angeles. Imagine a world where every woman knows her worth and stands strong, calm and confident with her "stuff"... That's what Girls PACT strives to enrich in girls. "Stuff" can be whatever the girls define it to be: from school "stuff" to family "stuff" to work "stuff." By focusing on building self-esteem, Girls PACT holistically mentors girls with a goal of preventing unplanned pregnancies. Girls who participate in the program range from 15-24. For more information about Girls PACT, visit the website at <http://www.girlspact.org> or email michelle@girlspact.org.

The Pope Inspires, the Donald Whines

I HAD CONSIDERABLE DIFFICULTY selecting a topic for this week's column. Given our extended heat wave, seemingly all of September, I debated writing about global warming deniers. But that just made me hotter than I already was.

Last week at the 2nd GOP presidential debate, Jeb Bush uttered something that got me equally steamed. "My brother kept us safe," Jeb said proudly. Say what? How about 9/11? I suppose that was just an off day.

The Neocon's defense for 9/11 was that "W" had only been president for eight months. If a 9/11-type disaster occurred on Obama's watch, would the GOP be so generous? Decades later they'd still be screaming.

Such is the modern news cycle that, within 24 hours, Jeb's disturbing claim resonated like day old fish. (Which, forgive me, is also kinda how I feel about Jeb.)

The biggest story currently has to be Pope Francis' historic six-day visit to the United States. In that time, he will have spoken at the White House and the United Nations; will be the first Pope in history to address a joint session of Congress; he will have led tens of thousands in prayer and visited with immigrants, prisoners and the homeless. (If only Pope Francis wasn't so lazy.)

But Donald Trump, in his own inimical way, added a dark cloud over the Pope's joyous visit. But first, the back story is the Pope has spoken out against unfettered capitalism. Perhaps a perfect example is Martin Shkreli, 32, a former hedge fund manager and founder and CEO of Turing Pharmaceuticals.

In August, Turing bought the rights to a 62-year-old drug, Daraprim, used by those with compromised immune systems, like AIDS and cancer patients. Overnight, Shkreli raised Daraprim from $13.50 to $750 a pill, a 5500 percent increase, and had the gall to say he didn't think it was excessive. (Shkreli is so arrogant I'd love to wipe that grin off his face.)

But back to the Pope and Trump. In July, during a trip to South America, he said, "A culture of profit-chasing marginalized the poor and damaged the earth." Trump was asked what would he say to the Pope and responded, "I'd tell the Pope ISIS is trying to kill him." (Such an uplifting message.) It dawned on me there couldn't be two more different people on the planet than the Pope and the Donald.

Whereas Francis, the "people's Pope," preaches humility, the Donald thinks it's a weakness. The Pope says, "Whom am I to judge?" whereas Trump judges everyone. As did Jesus, the Pope ministers to the poor and homeless, whereas Trump thinks "they're all losers."

The Pope has repeatedly called for countries to be more welcoming of migrants and refugees. The Donald has referred to illegal immigrants as "rapists, murderers and drug dealers."

Pope Francis has called on world leaders to fight global warming, including an encyclical that blamed a materialistic, wasteful society for the destruction of the environment. The Donald blames global warming on the Chinese, whom he theorizes created it to sabotage our economy.

When a questioner at a Trump town hall meeting in New Hampshire said, "We have a problem in this country and it's Muslims," and asserted that Obama "is not an American," the Donald didn't feel obligated to correct him. The man was obviously racist and yet, as featured on 60 Minutes this Sunday, Trump told Scott Pelley "You don't know he's a bigot."

Leading the birther movement in 2011, Trump boasted that he had sent private detectives to Hawaii to uncover Obama's birth records, "And what they've found is unbelievable!" And yet Trump never shared that valuable information with the world. Could it be, because like himself, it was bogus? Typically never taking responsibility, Trump now blames Hillary for the birther movement. Go figure.

Shockingly thin-skinned, the Donald stays up late at night vengefully tweeting personal attacks at his many enemies. He made a vulgar reference to Megyn Kelly's menstrual cycle but, later, said he was referring to her nose. (Huh?) He criticized Carly Fiorina's face but, inexplicably, said he was referring to her persona.

Having dodged the Vietnam draft with four deferments, Trump claimed John McCain was no war hero. And considerably overweight himself, Trump also claimed Heidi Klum "is no longer a 10." (Begging the question, who is he to judge?)

The Pope's message is one of joy and hope. The Donald's is one of bigotry and narcissism. In his latest "Trump Tantrum," he tweeted that he was boycotting Fox News, whining, "They're not fair to me." (Aw, poor Donald.) In South Carolina, he spoke to a room shockingly half-empty. It's unlikely, but could the two mark the beginning of the end?

Truly, the Pope brings tears of joy to my eyes, whereas the Donald brings a knot to my stomach.

Response to Wednesday 23rd's article of the Merit Scholars Editor:

As a college student, I wish to give my thoughts on an article that recently appeared in your newspaper. The author, Mr. Goodman explained that 16,000 students nationwide (4 from Santa Monica High School) were in the run for a prestigious award & most importantly, college scholarships due to their high scores on the Preliminary SAT. While this is a notable achievement, I believe that every serious student deserves a chance to get a scholarship for college, because a complex test does not entirely dictate their academic boundaries. There are numerous students who don't pass the PSAT but they indeed, have an outstanding Grade Point Average. Studies show that there isn't really much of a difference between students who pass or don't pass the tests but maintain a high GPA. Some schools don't even require a submission to colleges of any test scores at all.

Giving every student a fair chance at a scholarship is essential in many ways. It gets a student more motivated to go to college, it gives them and their parents financial security, and moreover, they're not singled out, meaning that they have a chance to participate in the scholarship drawing without a test determining whether they should or shouldn't. Some people may argue that the PSAT or other tests, would determine a student's ability to get a scholarship because if they're able to score high on those complex tests, then they're very intelligent and should be rewarded. I find this false a student just needs to be intelligent within their required coursework, which means they all should have a chance to earn money for a higher education.

Los Angeles
Operation Do Ask, Do Tell

Assemblymember Richard Bloom (D-Santa Monica) and other Los Angeles area public officials recently participated in the first ever event exclusively recognizing the contributions of LGBT veterans. The event, titled Operation: Do Ask, Do Tell, sponsored by the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of American Veterans for Equal Rights (AVER-GLA), highlighted the struggles that LGBT veterans faced under the former discriminatory Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy that existed from 1994 to 2011 and the challenges that still exist today.

"It is disheartening to know that so many veterans voluntarily sacrificed their lives for this country, also had to sacrifice who they were," said Bloom. "Our previous discriminatory policies have left a painful scar on many of our servicemen and servicewomen that may never go away. With the repeal of Don't Ask, Don't Tell, we have certainly turned a corner, but much more work remains. Assisting our LGBT veterans with the services that they need and deserve is one way we can help repay our debt to them."

The event was held at historic Los Angeles County Bob Hope Patriotic Hall and consisted of a resource fair and discussion panels. At the awards ceremony Assemblymember Richard Bloom and his colleague, Assemblymember Miguel Santiago (D-Los Angeles) provided state resolutions officially acknowledging the contributions of the two LGBT veteran honorees of the event: Christopher Paul, recipient of the Miguel Contreras Advocate of the Year, and Tracey "Tra" Cooper-Harris, recipient of the LGBT Veteran of the Year.

The other public officials attending the event included State Senator Carol Liu (D-La Canada Flintridge), Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti, Los Angeles County Supervisor Hilda Solis (1st District), California Deputy Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Minority Veterans Mirtha Villarreal-Younger, U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, Los Angeles Regional Office, Acting Director Emmett O'Meara, Los Angeles County Military and Veterans Affairs Director and Deputy Director, Ruth Wong and Stephanie Stone.

FILM REVIEW SICARIO

Rated R
121 Minutes
Limited Release September 18
/ Wide Release October 2

The opening title screens of the film Sicario flash the meaning of the term - it is the word for "hit man" or "assassin" in modern Mexico/ or in ancient history, a band of zealots who stealthily hunted the Romans who had overtaken their city. It is important that there is not one simple meaning to this term, as you will see in experiencing this film...and it is an experience.

Pay attention to detail all the way through this film. In the beginning, note the rhythm of the "heartbeat" sounds, the long shots and the close-ups, the eyes. Most of what is communicated is done without words. When there are words they are concise and succinct, eloquent and in character. You can see the dust particles in the daytime scenes. In later night-vision scenes the particles are there as bright specs of light, giving the visuals a continuity and realism. Every detail has a meaning.

Director Denis Villeneuve and his team are so skilled at the art of film that even the aerial shots convey deep sadness, and silent close-ups register confusion, loss and fear. This is Villeneuve's best film yet. Most of his work has been lower budget films and shorts, many of which won nominations and awards. His best-known work to this point, the excellent thriller Prisoners, does not have the impactful scope of this film. Villeneuve did however, bring three of his filmmakers from Prisoners to make Sicario: legendary cinematographer Roger Deakins, production designer Patrice Vermette and composer Johann Johannson - three of the best in the business. Great directors are a joy to work with, and their team will follow them to the next project whenever possible. Johannson, who also scored Theory of Everything, has created a sound presence that disappears into the rhythm of the story. That's what a score should do - a level of artistry very difficult for film composers to reach.

Watch the breathtaking understated performances from Emily Blunt, James Brolin and Benicio del Toro. Each of their characters has flaws and these great actors have embraced the imperfections without flinching. The whole narrative of the first few earthshaking minutes of the film is told in Emily Blunt's eyes. Del Toro and Brolin walk the line between good and evil with the sensitivity of tightrope artists. Their characters are, above all, human. Every minor character, even if on screen for just moments, makes an impact.

The story told here is universal. The backdrop is the Mexican drug wars, depicting the absolute chaos surrounding that scene today. The US intelligence agencies, with their copious bureaucracy, have a hard time keeping pace with split-second developments. That point is made in the film. In fact, one could imagine that it would be easier to gain control of this dangerous and tumultuous state of affairs if the US could to revert to the "unwritten code of the Old West", a mythic and simplistic sense of order popularly depicted on film. Look for Sicario as a contender for possible multiple Oscars.

Tales From Hi De Ho Comics

I Don't Like Superman

I DON'T LIKE SUPERMAN, I LOVE HIM.

No comic character gets as much flak as Superman. I'm sure you have either heard or thought to yourself "He's too powerful" "He's a goody two-shoes" "Batman is better" or something similar. I'm here to dissuade you from your opinions on Superman.

The best Superman stories offer something more than just a character for Clark Kent to punch. I would be considered "too powerful" if I only played basketball against second graders. The writers of Superman don't have him fight human bank robbers for 700 issues in a row. He's had to fight Gods, time-travelers, King Kong, robots, and even Muhammad Ali. A character is only "too powerful" if the writers don't know how to generate conflict, and with over 10,000 comic books featuring Superman, there are plenty to choose from where he faces a sufficiently dangerous threat.

The idea of a character that is so inherently good, he fights for the equality of all humans. That's something we can all read, enjoy, and learn from. That should not be the first criticism leveled at Superman, it should be the first defense of Superman. A character that is the manifestation of the heights of humanity is boring? And he also punches giant robots? That sounds exciting, inspiring, and uplifting.

The argument inevitably comes to "Batman or Superman" - like they are Coke and Pepsi, UCLA and USC. YOU CAN'T POSSIBLY LIKE BOTH! First off - you most certainly can like both. Secondly, Superman has had to fly into the center of the Sun after it had been damaged by another, evil sun computer. Batman punches mentally ill people in the face. Let's maybe give Superman another chance. The stories of Batman and Superman take place on different levels, and there is no need to compare them. We can love both characters!

If you are still not convinced, then please pick up the comic "All Star Superman" from your local comic book shop. It has everything you could want from a story, let alone a Superman story. Never before has one comic book been so unanimously praised as the definitive work of a single character. All Star Superman is a peerless book. A great adventure story that mirrors the 12 heroic labors of Hercules - All Star Superman is poignant, fun, imaginative, and beautiful. In other words - it is EVERYTHING you could want in a comic.

If you buy your copy from HiDeHo Comics and you don't like it, we will give you a full refund. That is how much I am sure you will love Superman if you just give him a chance.

Luckily for Oliveira, his squad isn't lacking in athletic background. The Seawolves boast nine graduating players, and their new head coach is excited to see the impact of their collective experience on the team's success this season.

Pacifica has not only managed to win eight league titles in a row, but it has also reached the CIF Southern Section quarterfinals as many times during that span. Last year, the Seawolves seized the Liberty League crown and reached the 4AA quarterfinals before falling 3-1 to Santa Fe Springs-St. Paul.

"It's definitely something that we strive for," Oliveira said of extending the program's streaks. "It's always a goal. At the same time, we understand it's high school volleyball and it fluctuates from year to year. I don't think there's a ton of pressure, but it's definitely one of our top goals as well as performing well in CIF."

Building on those legacies will likely require strong efforts from the senior class as Pacifica enters Liberty League play, which begins Oct. 3 with a match against Los Angeles-Archer. The Seawolves' only conference loss last season came at the hands of Archer.

The senior corps features setter and floor captain Georgia Twersky as well as middle blocker Liz Hook and outside hitter Maddy Daly, who is transitioning away from her middle blocker spot. Additional adjustments come as junior middle blocker Ella Hix recovers from a knee injury.

"I'm trying to get a feel for everybody and figure out everybody's role," Oliveira said. "But it's going pretty well right now. Everybody's happy with the direction we're going in."

At the helm of the program is Oliveira, a 2006 graduate of Santa Monica High School who replaces Julie Bennett.

Oliveira, who recently spent two seasons as a junior varsity coach and varsity assistant at Calabasas, is familiar with Pacifica because he was the volleyball program's freshman coach in 2012 and has worked at the school occasionally as a substitute teacher.

The team kicked off its current campaign with a 3-0 (25-9, 25-6, 25-12) sweep of New Roads on Sept. 1.

The Seawolves then posted mixed results at the Laguna Blanca tournament four days later in Santa Barbara, topping Malibu and Carpinteria but falling to Santa Ynez and Palm Springs in abridged matches.

Pacifica found its groove Sept. 9 with a 3-0 (25-6, 25-13, 25-6) rout of Los Angeles-Pilobos on the road thanks in part to Hook, who had 10 kills, two aces and two blocks. Daly added seven kills and sophomore outside hitter Thalia Rakosky chipped in six for the Seawolves.

"There's a little bit of a learning curve, but it's been a pretty smooth transition," Oliveira said. "It's been great. The girls have been really receptive, and we've got lots of leadership. They're taking charge."

ANNIVERSARY

countless musicians, restored and tuned innumerable pianos, overseen the development and maintenance of our organ, and added a grand piano to the mix,” wrote the church's senior minister, Reverend Patricia Farris.

“He has worked with talented vocalists and composers. His music has delighted the hearts of many throughout the community. But to my mind, most praiseworthy of all is his ability to make ordinary folks sound and feel like God's own heavenly choir, coaxing gorgeous music from mere mortals week in and week out, all to the praise and glory of God.”

BUILDING A HISTORY

Smith, turning 75-years-old next week, came from a musical and religious family with a Methodist minister for a father and a mother who dabbled in piano.

He began his career at First UMC in June of 1965 when he arrived in California to work on his doctorate at USC. During his first week in town he applied for the position of choir director, even though it was a full-time position for which the church had already interviewed over 20 people.

Smith was asked to attend a music committee meeting, during which the choir happened to be rehearsing. The committee asked him if he would like to direct the choir in a piece and he agreed.

“So we went up to the choir room, I leafed through their choir book and found one of the songs that I knew like the back of my hand, 'Psalm 150' by Cesar Franck. I rolled up my sleeves and conducted the piece - I could tell they were all watching,” Smith said in an interview with the church.

Smith said the church decided they could not afford a full-time music director, so all the applicants dropped out. Except for him. Smith was then offered the position.

“The minister at the time asked me how long I would be here and I said 'Really it's gonna take me about three years to finish my doctorate' ... And they said 'Oh that'd be fine.' So I didn't have any clue I'd still be here 50 years later,” Smith said.

According to Smith “it all worked together,” as he happened to be hired to teach at Santa Monica College and he and his wife Barbara chose to live in Santa Monica and raise their children here.

WORKING WITH JIM

Smith has been responsible for many of the iconic events at the church over the years including their theater productions, annual Christmas concerts and Mid-Week recitals. According to Farris, the Christmas concerts alone bring in a full house, beyond the church congregation, every year.

But Farris cares about more than just what Smith can do for the church, noting that Smith himself is a great friend and colleague.

“Jim's got a great sense of humor,” Farris said. “[He is] very dedicated, very creative.

He has a treasure chest of knowledge of the church that is wide ranging. He is always bringing something fresh to the worship that speaks to the congregation. And music is a way of drawing us close to God and he opens that door for people.”

Farris enjoys collaborating with Smith regularly.

“We plan carefully and thoroughly and with the hope that the whole worship service will reinforce the theme of the day, and he's a wonderful collaborator and colleague in that sense. I can say almost any theme and he can say anything that will fit and draw people more deeply into that theme.”

ACCEPTING THE HONOR

“It's too much,” Smith said in regards to the celebration First UMC is giving him. “You know I'd just as soon them say 'Thanks for being here 50 years,' give me a hardy handshake and leave. But they decided they should do more than that, so I don't know. It's kind of who knew when I came here I'd be here for 50 years?”

Smith said it is appropriate that they will be honoring his wife as well. “She's been very active in the choir too,” Smith said, noting that Barbara became soprano section leader shortly after the two arrived. “We've been sort of a duo combo.”

While Smith may know about the celebration, organizers said they have kept a few of the details secret to maintain an element of surprise.

GOING FORWARD

Smith said after the celebration he hopes that the choir can just continue to do what they do best.

“We have a strong faithful choir. In fact three members of my choir have been here since I started 50 years ago ... Choirs are hard to get these days. It is a big commitment. You have to commit to an hour and a half on Thursday night for rehearsal and an hour and a half on Sunday mornings. And we expect you to come regularly. You don't just drop in and out.

“So we have a good group who comes almost all the time. So we just keep doing our thing every Sunday.”

As far as how long Smith plans to stay in his position after this anniversary, he joked, “I'm assuming they're not giving me a retirement party. So hopefully I'll still be here a few more years.”

The celebration honoring Smith will be held on Sunday, Sept. 27 at First United Methodist Church of Santa Monica, 1008 11th St., at 10 a.m. in the sanctuary. There will be a luncheon reception following the service held in Simkins Hall in the Shelby Center where guests can greet Smith and his wife Barbara.

“I hope that people from the community who've enjoyed the concerts over the years will feel welcome to come. There will be plenty of food so the whole community is invited,” Farris said.

approval to conduct store-closing sales.

“All employees of the non-core stores and the Pacific Southwest support office will receive 60 day notice of the pending store and office closures,” said the statement. “During this process, all stores will remain open. Employees will continue to receive their pay and benefits through the normal course of business as previously approved by the court.”

Albertsons has previously said it would give priority to former employees laid-off as a result of Haggen closures. Haggen said it supports employees looking for work elsewhere and said it is working with the Federal Trade Commission to facilitate rehiring of employees who would have been barred from returning to their previous employer as a result of the sale/merger.

“This has been a priority for Haggen management to ensure its employees can take advantage of every opportunity available to them,” said the statement.

Employees at the Santa Monica location said they were unable to comment on the corporate announcement but said the store was currently open.

In its announcement, Haggen said its original stores have seen strong sales this year and that 21 of the newly acquired locations that are in its original market have also proven successful.

“The Company anticipates they will continue to see increased customer counts and sales growth as Haggen continues its original mission of adding more fresh, local, and exclusive items to these new stores and expanding on its successful Pacific Northwest strategy,” said the statement.

“Haggen plans to continue to build its brand in partnership with its dedicated corporate support and store teams. Haggen has a long record of success in the Pacific Northwest and these identified stores will have the best prospect for ongoing excellence,” said John Clougher, Chief Executive Officer of Haggen Pacific Northwest. “Although this has been a difficult process and experience, we will remain concentrated in the Pacific Northwest where we began, focusing on fresh Northwest products and continuing our support and involvement in the communities we serve.”

Seth Jacobson, a Malibu parent and former school board candidate, was named during the meeting as an active petitioner.

The separation process can also be initiated with a majority vote by a school board or city council, Deegan said.

Those actions trigger involvement by the County Committee on School District Organization, an 11-member elected body that analyzes and makes recommendations and decisions on separation and related issues.

The county committee can initiate and review its own petition, Deegan said, but typically there's local involvement first. She recalled one scenario in which the committee approved a voter-initiated petition despite opposition from two of the three school districts involved.

"This is often a little-known committee," she said. "But the code gives them very broad authority."

Meanwhile, Deegan said, the county education office offers guidance to districts while maintaining neutrality.

The timeline for separation varies from one case to another, but the county committee typically spends a year assessing the situation. It takes into account variables such as student populations, employee benefits, fiscal ramifications, real estate values, district facilities and community identity, which Deegan said is subjective and therefore often the most contested issue.

State officials usually take another two years to conduct their own studies, she said, adding that any environmental concerns would halt the lengthy process. Compliance with the California Environmental Quality Act is paramount.

Another potential obstacle is the California Voting Rights Act, which has sparked a flurry of litigation across the state in recent years. Some districts have developed trustee area schemes to make their governing bodies more ethnically representative, but Deegan said the process is often divisive and expensive.

"There's a whole kitchen sink of issues that are intertwined," she said. "What does unification mean for the new district? Is it sustainable? And what does it mean for the remaining district?"

TIME: 10:30 a.m., Tuesday, October 13, 2015

LOCATION: Council Chambers, Room 213, Santa Monica City Hall, 1685 Main Street, Santa Monica

A Public Hearing will be held by the Zoning Administrator of the City of Santa Monica at the above noted time and place in regard to the following requests:

FENCE WALL HEDGE MODIFICATION: 15-ENT-0274, 741 Marine Street. A fence and wall height modification to legalize an existing wood fence within the front setback area of a corner property located in the OP-1 (Ocean Park Single Family Residential) zoning district. Fencing along the Marine Street frontage (front yard) and Bentley Court frontage (street side yard) consists of wood slats measuring 72 inches (6'-00") in height on top of an 18-inch retaining wall for an overall height of 90 inches (7'-06"). Additionally, fencing along the interior side property line consists of wood slats measuring 90 inches (7'-06") in height within the front yard area. According to the Santa Monica Municipal Code (SMMC) Section 9.21.050, fences, walls, or hedges cannot exceed a maximum height of 42 inches within the required front yard, as measured from the lowest existing grade point within a three-foot radius of any point on such fence to its highest point. SMMC Section 9.43.080.B permits a modification to the height limitations in the front yard area subject to approval by the Zoning Administrator. [Planner: Ariel Socarras] APPLICANT/OWNER: Sergio Ramirez/Silviano Ramirez.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department.

These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON SEPTEMBER 18 AT APPROXIMATELY 4:50 P.M.

The suspect entered California Bank & Trust, located at 100 Wilshire Blvd, wearing only a pair of pants. Once inside, the suspect hid his right hand behind his back and demanded money from one of the tellers. Fearing the suspect was armed with a gun; the teller handed the suspect a small amount of cash and then quickly ran away to a safe room inside the bank. The suspect then took off his pants and walked out of the bank of bank completely naked. A security guard was standing a short distance away and saw the suspect as he was walking toward Ocean Ave. When the security guard confronted him, the suspect immediately started punching the guard in the face. Santa Monica police officers from the Downtown Services Section arrived within minutes and, after a short foot pursuit, took the suspect into custody. The suspect was then booked at the Santa Monica jail. The suspect was identified as Nathan Amsalou Jemere, 41 of Los Angeles. Bail was set at $100,000.

Difficulty Level ★★★★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The Cambridge, Massachusetts, company AOBiome believes we have dangerously stripped "good bacteria" from our skins via "excessive cleaning" and has introduced for sale "Mother Dirt" spray to add it back. Chemical engineer and co-founder Dave Whitlock told WBZ-TV in September that he personally has "not taken a shower in over 12 years," but instead uses his odorless bacteria-restoring mist twice a day to cover himself with helpful "dirt" that activates the "good" bacteria. The company will soon begin clinical trials to demonstrate whether Mother Dirt (which also comes in shampoo form) can additionally improve certain skin conditions.

■ The New Waterboarding: In April, the district attorney in Vilas County, Wisconsin, announced that he was seeking volunteers for a forensic test to help his case against Douglas Plude, 42, who is scheduled to stand trial (in 2009) for the death of his wife. The volunteers must be female, about 5 feet 8 inches tall and 140 pounds, and will have to stick their heads into a toilet bowl and flush. Plude is charged with drowning his wife in a commode, but his version (which the prosecutor believes improbable) is that his wife committed suicide by flushing herself. (Plude ultimately pleaded guilty to reckless homicide.)

by Mikey Tittinger

For more than seven years, Volkswagen has been cheating on emission tests to make their cars appear environmentally friendly. Now we know 11 million of their cars are both ugly AND choking the environment. Volkswagen, which translates to "people's car" in German, is nobody's car.

And if they convinced you to buy stock, well, you just pissed a quarter of your money out your Passat.

It's been a rough week for the company and their drivers to be sure. But it's also something of a tipping point. Further down on the front pages this week, The Wall Street Journal reported that Apple was entering into the electric car race and expects to have its first "Titan" off the assembly lines by 2019. With innovators like Tesla and Apple riding shotgun, our days driving fossil fuel-coughing cars may actually be numbered.

Let's hope Apple diehards (you know, the guys that tattoo a computer brand logo on their untouched-by-sun calves) stand in line for weeks to pony up for electric vehicles like they do phones.

In the meantime, get involved with a local nonprofit that's keeping its eyes on the environment and holding companies like Volkswagen accountable. Search the Causes directory at giive.org for Environment nonprofits in your community.
