Pier board weighs car access, bridge replacement

Nicholas Salazar editor@smdp.com

NO PARKING: Some residents have expressed their negative opinions regarding parking on the Pier.

BY JENNIFER MAAS
Daily Press Staff Writer

Residents want the Pier experience to remain basically the same, albeit with potentially fewer cars and better pedestrian access.

The Santa Monica Pier board recently held a community workshop to discuss plans for the future of the Pier. Organizers said the meeting went well but highlighted the need for better communication between officials and the public.

"The beginning of the meeting was a report on what the consultants were thinking and sort of options for what could be happening on the Pier in the future, including the bridge replacement project," Pier board chair Judy Abdo said. "What I realized from listening to the comments on that was the need for the bridge replacement wasn't fully explained by any of us, and that the complicated issues that are raised by the replacement of the bridge need to be further communicated."

Abdo said the bridge project is necessary because the bridge has been identified as in need of seismic strengthening, and the decision to replace the bridge was made by the federal government.

"So right now the City is in the EIR (Environmental Impact Report) process about how that bridge will be replaced," she said. "And there are many opinions about what the bridge should look like, whether there should be two bridges and how cars will get on the Pier in the future."

The most important feedback Abdo heard was that people don't want to see great changes

Activists unite for police reform

Community workshop follows controversial arrest at Virginia Avenue Park

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

On the night of April 21, Justin Leland Palmer was attempting to charge his electric vehicle at a Virginia Avenue Park charging station when Santa Monica police approached him.

Palmer, who is black, was asked to leave the charging station by officers who said the charging stations were closed for the evening. He didn't. When he was asked for his identification, he refused.

Then, in an incident that was caught on camera, Palmer was tackled to the ground, pepper-sprayed and arrested.

Palmer and police have offered differing visions of the dispute, which sparked concerns in the community about police protocol as tempers flared across the country over numerous high-profile shootings and altercations involving authorities and minorities.

The local arrest was enough to rattle Michele Wittig, a longtime member of the Santa Monica-Venice branch of the NAACP.

"Now there's a videotape of an instance of questionable policing, and I think that has animated the community to examine further how we can develop a better relationship with the police," said Wittig, a professor emerita of psychology at Cal State Northridge. "The advent of new technology has made it possible for us ... to understand how some of these events

'The King and Me' to highlight life of late fastpitch softball player

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

Dave Blackburn accomplished plenty in his life, but there was one project he didn't get to finish: his own.

The late Santa Monica resident was a decorated fastpitch softball player who traveled across the country and around the world for the sport he loved. He threw 70 no-hitters in his career, won four gold medals with Team USA in the World Maccabiah Games and was inducted into the International Softball Congress Hall of Fame.

When he died last May, Blackburn was putting together a

UCLA doctor wins award

Dr. Jeffrey Saver, director of UCLA Comprehensive Stroke since its inception in 1995, has been awarded the American Neurological Association's 2015 Soriano Leadership Award. Established in 1987, the award provides "a brilliant lecture delivered by an outstanding scientist."

A leader in cerebrovascular research and clinical care, Saver was among nine leading neurologists and neuroscientists honored at the association's 140th annual meeting, held Sept. 26 - 29. His research focuses on stroke prevention, acute stroke treatment, stroke diagnosis and the neurocognitive and neurobehavioral consequences of stroke.

Saver's lecture will review recent breakthroughs in the treatment of acute stroke, the second leading cause of death and disability worldwide. He will discuss using clot-dissolving medications and clot-removing devices together to reopen blocked blood vessels and restore blood flow to threatened brain tissue. The title of his talk is: "Two is Better than One: Combined Intravenous Fibrinolysis and Endovascular Thrombectomy for Acute Ischemic Stroke."

A senior associate vice-chair of neurology at UCLA, Saver trained at Harvard Medical School, the Harvard-Longwood Neurology Training Program, the University of Iowa, and Brown, and is author of over 470 research articles, two books and 35 book chapters.

Saver served as principal investigator of the National Institutes of Health-National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke's FAST-MAG trial. The eight-year study found that, by working with paramedics in the field, intravenous medications can be given to stroke patients within the "golden hour," the window in which patients have the best chance to survive and avoid debilitating, long-term neurological damage.

Saver also served as chair of the American Heart Association Stroke Council. He currently is associate editor at JAMA, the Journal of the American Medical Association, and consulting editor at the journal Stroke.

Founded in 1874, the American Neurological Association is the home of academic neurology. The ANA is a professional society of academic neurologists and neuroscientists devoted to advancing the goals of academic neurology; training and educating neurologists and other physicians in the neurologic sciences; and expanding the understanding of diseases of the nervous system and the ability to treat them.

Boehner goes buh-bye, but now what?

IN CARRIE FISHER'S BRILLIANT 2010 one-woman show, "Wishful Drinking," she re-enacts her mother, Debbie Reynolds, reflecting on her various failed marriages. The first was to Eddie Fisher who, in 1958, infamously left her to be with Elizabeth Taylor.

In looking back, Debbie concluded, "You know, Carrie dear, it turns out that Eddie was the good husband." That's how I feel about resigned Speaker of the House John Boehner. (Younger readers are muttering, "Who the hell is Eddie Fisher?")

I admit I occasionally have made fun of Boehner in this space. Sometimes it was his unusual emotional moments that brought him to tears, sometimes it was his perpetual tan, which actually looked more orange than tan. Just as sometimes Donald Trump's hair is a color not generally seen on other humans, so was Boehner's skin tone. (When Bill Maher joked that Trump's hair color was that of an orangutan, Trump sued him for $5 million.)

Second in succession to the presidency, Boehner's replacement will be the 115th Speaker of the House in American history. But, during the last 50 years, there have only been three GOP speakers: Newt Gingrich, Denny Hastert and Bronzetan, I mean, John Boehner.

With self-righteous zeal, Speaker Gingrich led the charge to impeach Bill Clinton over the Monica Lewinsky affair. Of course, at the same time, Newt was cheating on his own wife. (Actually, Newt cheated on both his ex-wives, which you'd think would make wife No. 3 a tad nervous.)

But karma caught up with Newt in 1997 when he was fined $300,000 by the House Ethics Committee. This marked the first time in history the House disciplined a speaker for ethical wrongdoing.

In 1998 Newt was justifiably blamed when Republicans lost five seats in the House, the worst midterm performance in 64 years by a party not holding the presidency. Gingrich immediately offered his resignation, saying he was "not willing to preside over people who are cannibals." (Can you say "bitter?")

Hastert, the longest-serving GOP speaker ever, is currently under federal indictment, charged with lying to the FBI and attempting to conceal large bank withdrawals. He allegedly used the monies to pay an individual for past "misconduct" while Hastert was a high school wrestling coach and the individual was a minor. (Uh oh!) The hush money was allegedly $3.5 million. (On a Congressman's salary?)

Reportedly, Boehner resigned due to pressure from the Tea Party. Politics is the art of compromise, but to Tea Baggers compromise is an act of betrayal. This may explain Congress' low poll numbers. Put it this way: Twice as many Americans think Elvis is still alive than think Congress is doing a good job.

Washington wasn't even this polarized during Joe McCarthy's "red scare" witch hunts in the early 1950s. And it's likely to get worse with a new House speaker. I could have titled this, "Better the devil you know than the one you don't," except it's too wordy.

Such is the temptation of being the majority in Congress that political parties often sell their souls to sit on the throne. While the Tea Baggers have hijacked the GOP, Democrats have their own skeletons.

For decades in the South, Democrats embraced racist southern segregationists. This unholy alliance ended in 1964 when LBJ signed the Civil Rights Act and reportedly predicted, "There goes the south for a generation." I'm predicting that one day the Tea Party will be the albatross for the GOP that the Dixiecrats were to the Democrats.

The dysfunction that has paralyzed Washington for the past 6-plus years is historic. And it started the day after the 2008 election when charisma-challenged Mitch McConnell warned he'd do everything to make Obama a one-term president and defeat every program the president offered up. (The country be damned.)

Frankly, Boehner's replacement, likely to be Republican Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy from Bakersfield, will probably be even more polarizing. He's already on record as wanting American ground troops in Syria. And even worse, on Tuesday on Sean Hannity's show on Fox, he accidentally told the truth about the Congressional Select Committee on Benghazi.

Trying to show how tough he was, he credited the eight fruitless Benghazi hearings with bringing down Hillary's poll numbers. He thus revealed what many already knew, that the hearings have been a partisan political exercise. And you gotta love Hannity's shameless response to McCarthy's admission of perverting a Congressional investigation to hurt Hillary: "Yes, and I give you credit for that."

The Benghazi hearings, the longest in Congressional history, longer than Watergate and the JFK assassination, have cost $4.5 million in taxpayer money ... so far. The Starr Whitewater investigation cost $80 million (and only discovered a stain on Monica's dress.) Looking on the bright side, at least the current demagoguery has been cheaper.

You can see why I kind of miss Boehner. As for the probable new Speaker of the House, he's a polarizing pompous politician with pervasive power, proud of witch-hunt investigations and whose last name is McCarthy. What could go wrong there?

No saint

Editor:

The new pope so far has been better than the last couple of popes. However, some priests from California deceived him into making Father Serra a saint. He was a saint for Lucifer! Millions of Native Americans died because of him. Native American groups have been upset by this callous making this monster into a saint. Father Serra was the head of the evil Spanish Inquisition here in the West. He was known for self-inflicting beatings on himself and so thought nothing about the brutal beating of heathens. Native Americans in California were forced to give up their religions either by threat of death or by beatings. They were forced to build the missions and work in the mission fields. They were forced to wear clothes even in the terrible heat. California, Oregon and Washington had the largest populations of Native Americans in the U.S.A. Most of them either died of depression and disease or were hunted down and murdered. The treatment by the early priests here in California of Native Americans was deplorable. In the minds of the early California priests it was better a dead Injun than a heathen going to hell. Many of us are sure that Father Serra made it to hell.

'The Mend' playing in the Vidiots Annex

For one weekend a month, the newly renovated Vidiots Annex is transformed into the VIDIOTS Cinema Selects micro-cinema, presenting special limited runs of new, independent films, handpicked and personally recommended by Vidiots' staff. Cinelicious Pics is excited to announce that Vidiot's inaugural selection is "The Mend," the debut film from writer/director John Magary, starring Josh Lucas (Undertow), Stephen Plunkett, Lucy Owen (Higher Ground) and Mickey Sumner (Frances Ha).

For anyone who's ever loathed and loved a sibling in equal measure, "The Mend" is the wonderfully strange and acidic debut comedy from writer / director John Magary. Shot through with the wicked humor and anarchy of Bruce Robinson's "Withnail & I" and Mike Leigh's "Naked," "The Mend" follows a mismatched yin-yang pair of NYC brothers, loose cannon Mat and put-upon Alan as they stagger dimly toward some understanding of love, women, masculinity and what it truly means to be a brother.

With 30 years of trusted movie recommendations under its belt, VIDIOTS Cinema Selects is upping the ante seeking out and presenting unique, daring and entertaining films that demand to be seen on a big screen, with an audience. VIDIOTS Cinema Selects will bring the theatrical experience inside the video store. Vidiots began as a movie rental store with a fierce commitment to making as wide an array of films available as possible-from vintage to foreign to documentary-and its event programming and outreach has that same eclectic flavor. The Vidiots Foundation expands the reach and community involvement of Vidiots through partnerships with community organizations, schools, filmmakers, artists and educators by providing free classes, screenings, panel discussions, spoken word, live music and other cultural events.

Showtimes are Oct. 9 at 8 p.m., Oct. 10 at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m., Oct. 11 at 2:30 p.m., 5 p.m. and 8 p.m.

California meets water savings target for third month

BY SCOTT SMITH
Associated Press

FRESNO, Calif. Californians cut water use by 27 percent in August, marking the third consecutive month that residents and businesses surpassed the 25 percent conservation goal set by Gov. Jerry Brown to deal with the relentless drought, officials said Thursday.

The figures released by the State Water Resources Control Board showed a slight decrease in savings from the 31 percent posted for July — a development that raised concerns among some officials.

However, board chair Felicia Marcus said the slippage was not completely surprising given the heavy rains that drenched Southern California in July and prompted people to turn off sprinklers.

"The fact the numbers didn't drop precipitously shows that people get it," she said. "In a crisis people pull together and they hang in there."

The savings figures were derived by comparing current usage to levels from the same period of 2013, the year before Brown declared a drought emergency.

The board also released figures showing how much water was saved by communities and how that compared to the state conservation mandate given to each area.

A total of 406 water suppliers reported water use in August. The figures showed that six communities missed mandated targets by more than 15 percent.

Regulators have given alternative targets to two of the communities, including Livingston, where a large chicken processing plant has counteracted conservation by the 15,000 residents.

Regulators have been considering imposing fines on communities that consistently fail to meet goals. The penalties could begin early next year, said Max Gomberg, a senior climate scientist for the state water board.

Regulators also say they are working to help cities and water districts meet targeted cuts. Some communities, however, are not expected to meet the goals, Gomberg said.

"We will issue some fines," he said. "That is definitely on the table."

Officials say 72 percent of water suppliers did meet their conservation standard. Among the top performers were the city of Morgan Hill near San Jose, which used nearly 43 percent less water, and the California Water Service Co. Selma near Fresno, which reduced water use by 40 percent.

Some of the state's largest cities also reported meeting their mandates.

Officials in Los Angeles said the city saw savings of 17 percent in August, beating its target of 16 percent. Fresno reported a 28 percent drop, hitting its requirement.

Water use in San Diego was 21 percent lower, officials said, exceeding its mandated cutback of 16 percent.

Gomberg warned that Californians can't be distracted by hype involving a coming El Nino weather pattern.

He said an El Nino doesn't guarantee a wet winter for California and urged people to keep saving water.

Gomberg said climate change — signaled by warmer temperatures, a low snowpack and intense wildfires — has made water conservation an ongoing effort.

"Climate change is not something that's happening in the future," Gomberg said. "California is already dealing with the impacts."

film about all he experienced on and off the diamond.

So longtime friends Curt LaFurney and Brian Hanish of Hollywood-based Paradox Productions are now crowdfunding through GoFundMe for the final phase of the project, "The King and Me," which they said is nearing completion.

"We're trying to finish what Dave started," said LaFurney, the documentary's co-director and editor. "It's his legacy. It's the last thing he was working on. As his friends, we're committed to finishing it."

LaFurney has whittled down more than 130 hours of Hi8, VHS, Digital8, Betacam and digital video into 100 minutes that include everything from Blackburn's upbringing to the retiring of his No. 7 Maccabi jersey in 2013, when he threw out the ceremonial first pitch at the international tournament's championship game.

Blackburn discovered his love of softball as a young child while watching his father Ernie compete against legendary pitcher Eddie Feigner.

He was inspired to tell his life story after suffering life-altering injuries in a 2010 car crash while on his way to a tournament in Arizona. He broke more than two dozen bones, including his sternum and pitching arm, and sustained two collapsed lungs as well as bruising on his heart and nerve damage in his leg.

Blackburn spent about two months in a coma and eight months recovering in Phoenix-area hospitals and nursing homes before returning to Southern California, where he had lived so he could play softball year-round.

"I got a phone call from him letting me know what happened, and he came to an epiphany that he survived so he could tell the story about his life in fastpitch," said Hanish, the film's producer and cinematographer. "He asked if we would help him make this movie."

Hanish and LaFurney obliged. They raised $35,000 through an Indiegogo crowdfunding campaign and began conducting interviews with people across the country. When Blackburn was invited to throw out the first pitch, Hanish accompanied him to Israel and shot more footage for the documentary.

A second crowdfunding initiative followed Blackburn's death in 2014, which came a year and a half into his work on the project.

Hanish and LaFurney said they have been funding the production of the film for the last six months, which is why they're making one more request of those who knew Blackburn and those who feel his story would resonate with an audience beyond the sports community.

"It's not just about fastpitch softball," LaFurney said. "It's about the camaraderie that's forged throughout the competition and the spiritual awakenings that Dave experienced by going to Israel. It has a much bigger scope than just softball. It's about 30 years of a man's life and what he experienced. His vehicle was softball, but what he got out of it was much much more."

may be affecting certain segments of the community and not other segments."

Wittig and other local activists are trying to channel the momentum generated by the incident into a productive workshop on community policing at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 4 at Virginia Avenue Park, the site of Palmer's arrest. The forum is free and open to the public.

The event follows two months of study by Wittig and other community members who are interested in opening a dialogue about ways to improve the police department's interactions with the public.

The study group is hoping that the meeting will lead to the formation of a coalition for policing reform that includes representatives from the Committee for Racial Justice, which is sponsoring the workshop, the NAACP, the local Unitarian Universalist Community Church's Faith in Action commission and the SMPD.

Santa Monica police officials were invited to the meeting, but spokesman Rudy Camarena said the department will not be represented there. It remains unclear whether police will participate in the coalition.

"We really want to hold off [on the coalition] until we can get SMPD representation," Wittig said. "We want this to be collaborative with police."

The group is intent on doing more than merely airing frustrations. Wittig, for one, participated in the SMPD community police academy last year to learn more about the department's practices and procedures.

She and other activists have reviewed Assembly Bill 953, which would require law enforcement agencies to submit detailed information to the state about police stops. Proponents say the bill, which is up for Governor Jerry Brown's approval, would quantify, and possibly curb, racial profiling.

Study group members have also read Portland's community policing plan, Wittig said.

The upcoming meeting will include community stories and a presentation on equity in the line of duty. Workshop attendees will also learn about department statistics, the peace officers' bill of rights and legislation regarding racial profiling and use of force.

Ideally, Wittig said, the meeting would lead to further conversations between the public and police.

"We need to tell our stories," she said, "and they need to tell us how they practice policing."

to the Pier, and the issue of whether or not there should be cars on the Pier.

"Many of the people who were there, while they may be residents, also had businesses on the Pier and we discussed whether there should be cars in the long run on the Pier.

Abdo said that delivery, maintenance, emergency, harbor guard and vehicles with handicap placards will always need to be on the Pier.

"So when we're talking about whether or not vehicles should be on the Pier, besides those kinds of vehicles," she said, "should there be parking on the Pier? And there are lots of different opinions about vehicles on the Pier, and how many, and when they might reduce the number of vehicles on the Pier."

The presentation included an access and use study, which addressed suggestions for changes to five areas on the Pier; showed pedestrian, bicycle and vehicular circulation and linkage on the Pier; and movement and access concepts for the Pier.

Other issues raised during the workshop included better access to the Pier overall, especially from the top of the Pier at Colorado. Better access for the disabled was also an issue of import to the public.

There was discussion of an additional bridge to the south side for bikes and the need for proper bike parking areas. Comments on increasing pedestrians' ability to better navigate the Pier were raised, as were those regarding the need for surface areas friendly to strollers and wheelchairs.

The fact that there is no "backside to the Pier" was mentioned, along with the need for clear areas for pedestrian flow in front of and leading up to businesses. One resident commented that "movement is part of the Pier experience."

Pier board member Misti Kerns said she was "very happy with the presentation and thrilled with the public input."

"[It was] very needed and most welcome," she said. "A well-managed and very positive community meeting with wonderful and creative ideas and engagement. Just underscores how much the community cares about our Pier and the need to continue to reinvest in the Pier."

Abdo thinks at this point the board has a great deal of input and that the consultants can take what they've heard, and after some more input, can come up with some creative solutions to some of the issues that were raised.

"The consultants were hired by the City to help the City and the Pier board think through some of these issues," she said. "And one of the benefits of having an outside consultant come in is that they ask questions that are pushing the envelope and are visionary and making us think outside the box.

"And I think that's a very good thing so that we're not just talking among ourselves. We're hearing the public and having different solutions suggested by those consultants who have done this kind of work in other areas."

The next community workshop regarding the access and layout of the Pier will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 2, at the Ken Edwards Center, 1527 4th St., from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

"I'm sure at that workshop we'll have even more ideas raised and even more feedback and that will be very valuable to the City for future planning as we go to the EIR process for the bridge and as we look at, as a community, what would be happening on the Pier in the future," Abdo said.

Black women booted from Napa Valley wine train file lawsuit

BY SUDHIN THANAWALA
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO A group of mostly black women filed a racial discrimination lawsuit Thursday after they were removed from a train that tours Napa Valley wineries, saying it was humiliating to be thrown off a rail car when loud and inebriated white passengers were allowed to stay.

The 11 women sued Napa Valley Wine Train Inc., claiming they were singled out because of race and seeking $11 million in damages. The company said in a statement that it takes allegations of discrimination very seriously and has hired a former FBI agent to investigate.

The women said many of them were part of a book club that meets regularly and had gathered on the train to discuss a romance novel. Before the train left the station in Napa, a train employee asked them to quiet down because they were offending other passengers, they said.

The same employee admonished them a second time before telling them that police officers would be waiting for them when the train reached St. Helena, the suit says. They were escorted through several cars as other passengers stared and then off the train and into a dirt lot where police were waiting, according to the suit.

"That was the most humiliating experience that I have ever had in my entire life," Lisa Johnson, 47, said with tears in her eyes, appearing with some of the other women at a news conference announcing the lawsuit. "This is 2015, and this just cannot happen again."

The wine train issued an apology after the women were ejected, promising additional training for employees on cultural diversity and sensitivity and free passes for a future trip.

The lawsuit also claims the women were defamed by a company statement saying they had been verbally and physically abusive.

Their removal led to discussion online under the hashtag, #laughingwhileblack. The women wore black buttons with the hashtag at Thursday's news conference.

Katherine Neal, 85, the oldest woman in the group, said she was reminded of when she was about 12 and a store clerk asked her to eat her ice cream outside while white families ate inside.

"I took this case because it's an egregious case," said the women's attorney, Waukeen McCoy. "This lawsuit highlights that blacks are still being treated differently in America."

McCoy said he engaged in settlement talks with the company, but it did not make an offer.

The Napa Valley Wine Train offers food and wine to passengers as they visit Napa County wineries in updated Pullman cars.

A spokesman for the company, Sam Singer, has said individuals or groups are asked to get off the wine train once a month on average for various reasons.

FILM REVIEW
'99 HOMES'

"99 Homes" is a close-up, in-your-face view of the quasi-dictatorship that occurs when the ideals of capitalism are horribly misused. The first few minutes of the film conjure up images of Nazi soldiers invading a Jewish home. As unbelievable as it is that human beings could do this to each other, it happens.

"99 Homes" is not a slick action thriller or a heralded psychological drama with mega-stars. Yet its impact has you waking up at night with the troubling vision of yourself being placed in the same incomprehensible circumstances. As in films such as Paul Weitz's "Grandma," restrictions of a low budget required an intimate style for "99 Homes," which works well for the story.

Andrew Garfield turns in his best performance to date. He is superbly believable as the young carpenter/contractor whose whole life is turned upside-down by the real estate bust of 2008. Michael Shannon shines as the real estate broker driven by a lust for ever more profit, as he takes advantage of unfortunate victims of unscrupulous bank loans amidst the economic downturn. Laura Dern is excellent as the carpenter's mother. Also outstanding is Tim Guinee as one of the homeowners.

Rahmin Bahrani has forged a passion project with "99 Homes." Bahrani's parents were Iranian immigrants to the U.S. That fact probably helps him step outside his own American society to provide us with a searing and honest vision. He is writer, director and editor and he did extensive research in Florida prior to filming. Many of the characters who appear in the story are real people playing themselves. The story flows, we vividly see emotions at the right points, and the tension builds consistently throughout the film. In 2009, Roger Ebert declared Bahrani "the new great American director." Luckily, this did not go to Bahrani's head. He's has made an impactful and thought-provoking film with "99 Homes."

This film doesn't simply display how those who are power-hungry take advantage of the disenfranchised and ruin their lives. It looks at the forces behind what made these tyrants who they are. Cinematographer Bobby Bukowski captures the faces of both the characters and their threatened homes. Production designer Alex DiGerlando has staged the homes skillfully to reflect the people who live in them.

This is a "sleeper film" originally released in August 2014. Since then it has played film festivals throughout the world, including Venice, Telluride, Toronto and Sundance, and has won five awards. Now it's being re-released in the U.S. with nationwide openings slated for Oct. 9. It should get a lot more attention today as an important commentary on our society. There are many landowners who care about their tenants' lives and the quality of their holdings. For some moguls, however, real estate becomes a game with an addictive quality like gambling. When you own land that other people live on, it's too easy to revert to a Middle Ages mentality of lord and serf. "99 Homes" will probably be shown in film classes and history classes in future years.

Rated R. 112 minutes.

LEGEND
DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON SEPTEMBER 23, AT APPROXIMATELY 9 P.M.

Officers responded to the 1600 block of Ocean Front Walk in response to a fight in the parking lot in which a suspect was brandishing a weapon. Upon arrival, the officer was directed to the victim, whom stated that he was a victim of an assault. According to the victim, he and his girlfriend decided to sit on the beach and left their belongings where they sat as she walked on the Pier and he took a walk on the shoreline. While on the shoreline, the victim saw a male and female sit next to where his belonging where; he thought this was odd so he walked back to where his belongings were. The victim told the male, later identified as Juan Contreras, 20, of Los Angeles, and female that those belongings were his and if they could give him a little room. Contreras went on to tell the victim that this was a free beach, and shortly thereafter a verbal altercation ensued. No sooner did the victim decide to move his items, when he turned around and saw Contreras standing feet away from him and start punching him. Once the fight ended, the victim chased after Contreras when he realized that he left his belongings behind. When he went back to retrieve them, he noticed a male and female subject throwing his belongings around. Both subjects began to run toward the parking lot and the victim began to run after the subjects. As he approached the silver sedan that the subjects entered, the car attempted to exit the parking lot and Contreras and another male subject exited the vehicle and appeared to point what he thought was a gun at him. The victim later stated he was not sure if it was a gun they had in hand, as he stood 20-30 feet away from the car. As officers arrived at the scene, Contreras began to run away from officers. Multiple commands for Contreras to stop were made, yet he continued to run. Contreras was finally apprehended by the officer and placed under arrest. He was arrested for resisting arrest and interfering or delaying an investigation. Bail was set at $25,000.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Marie Holmes tearfully disclosed in March how the $88 million Powerball lump sum she had won would allow her to finish college and help her four kids (one with cerebral palsy). Right away, though, her boyfriend, Lamar "Hot Sauce" McDow, was charged with drug trafficking and needed $3 million bail, which she took care of. Then, in August, in Brunswick County, North Carolina, "Hot Sauce" was arrested again, for selling heroin, and reporters surmised that Holmes must have been the one who posted that $6 million bail. (Holmes addressed her critics on Facebook: "What Y'all need to be worried about is Y'all money ....")

■ Military veteran Gary Dixon, 65, has multiple medical issues, the worst of which is stage four lung cancer, which he says he got from Agent Orange during the Vietnam War. He takes from 10 to 15 meds a day, previously supplied by the Veterans hospital in Topeka, Kansas, but for post-traumatic stress and anxiety, he also smokes marijuana when he can get it. (Kansas has not legalized medical marijuana.) A recent policy change by the VA bars pain meds for marijuana users, leading Dixon to fend for himself for the meds (about $400 a month, he said), because he so badly needs the marijuana.

Get dancing and hush the hate

By Katharine Romefelt

Last month, the Foo Fighters "rick-rolled" the hate away. On the day of their concert in Kansas City, lead singer Dave Grohl and his bandmates got wind of some Westboro Baptist Church protestors outside Sprint Center. How did they combat the radical group's anti semitic and homophobic rants? By rolling up in the back of a pickup truck and flamboyantly dancing to Rick Astley's '80s hit "Never Gonna Give You Up".

The sight and sounds of rock stars, some wearing skimpy swimsuits, expressing themselves in a fun and nonviolent manner completely changed the energy surrounding the arena. Drowning out hate with creative means seems to be catching. Last week, in a video that has gone viral, a young bagpiper named Daniel Boyle brazenly played "Scotland the Brave" beside a ranting homophobic preacher. When the preacher attempted to avoid the musician, Boyle continued to follow him around the town square.

Everyone has the right to express themselves, even if their opinions make us uncomfortable. But there's nothing stopping the rest of us from doing the same. The more creative, it seems, the more effective. So grab your bagpipes, your Rick Astley record collection or any creative tool at your disposal and make your opinions heard.

People only listen to hate when no one else is talking.

Head home tonight, Sagittarius

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You have a lot of energy when it comes to communicating with others. You might want to clear out any details of the workweek or make plans for the next few days. You have a lot to say about your day-to-day life, but understand that it is subject to change. Tonight: Out and about.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You might be worried, as your expenses seem to be soaring out of control. How you deal with a loved one could change once you gain a different perspective. You tend to go overboard when indulging someone. This person will love every moment. Tonight: Your treat.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Your hands are full, but fortunately you can process information quickly and come up with answers easily. Your smile will draw in someone closer. If you are single, use your innate charm well. Tonight: Wherever you are, trust that others are aware of your presence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You could be in a situation that you would prefer not to be in. At the moment, try to detach and ride out the problem. You might be surprised by what comes up for you. At a certain point, you will feel as if you have had enough. Look for a better option. Tonight: Go for mystery!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You always make quite an impression, and today is no different. In a meeting, you'll show off your wit, intelligence and natural affinity for people. Don't say "no" to an invitation that sounds too good to be true; it could go in your favor. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ You might feel pressured to take charge in your own way. You can do that, but be careful about creating much more work for yourself as a result. To pitch in one time is very different from having to do this same deed all the time. Be careful here. Tonight: The lead player.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You might be at your wits' end and want to make a major change. Keep your eye on the long-term as well as the short-term effects of following through. You are more emotional than you realize. Follow your sixth sense -- it will point to the right choice. Tonight: All smiles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ A conversation of depth between you and a loved one can't be escaped, and could be worthwhile. You might want to set the stage for this talk. Relax more, and ultimately you will be quite happy with the results. Tonight: Create the mood you want at a place you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You could be dealing with one or more key people in your life. A boss, though well-meaning, might create some uproar. Others seem to be rather touchy. Refuse to get involved, and go off and enjoy your weekend. A friend will lighten up the moment. Tonight: Head home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You have the ability to change your mind and head in a different direction. Your flexibility surprises people who look to you as an authority figure. Your self-confidence allows you to head down a different path from that which many others would choose. Tonight: Say what you feel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Your playfulness will take you down a new path, but before you go too far, you might want to change direction. Is this where you really want to be? Make sure it is, because after a certain point, you won't be able to go back. A partner is very indulgent. Tonight: Be bohemian.

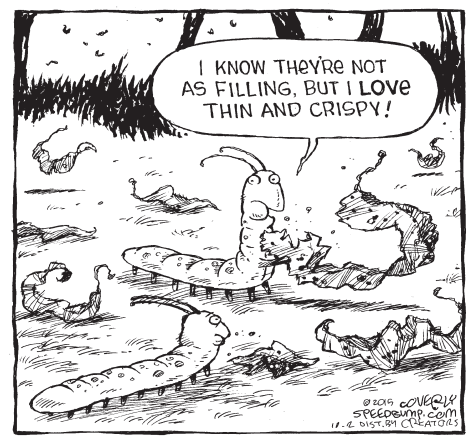

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You could feel tense around a domestic issue. You know what you want, so go for it! Are you aware of what you will need in order to deal with this issue? Think twice before you cause a rift right now. Be willing to listen to the other side. Tonight: Head home early.

Friday, October 2, 2015

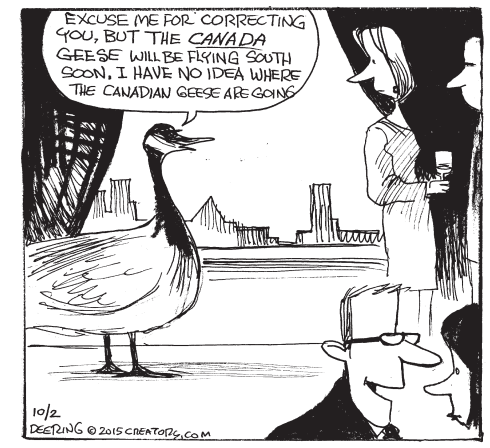

This year you seem to make the right choices, as you have the ability to detach from situations and imagine what it is like to be someone else. You will greet unusual success. If you are single, you could meet someone very different from you, who perhaps is from a different culture. Time is your ally; get to know this person better. If you are attached, the two of you might plan that special trip you both often speak about. Be willing to learn about other cultures and people. GEMINI amuses you.
