Council to debate joining lawsuit over new bail system

Matthew Hall

COURTS: The County Courts declared an end to cash bail for most suspects as of October 1 but a group of cities are fighting the new rules.

The Santa Monica City Council will consider joining a lawsuit over the County's newly implemented Zero Bail policy at their upcoming meeting.

The Council agenda for Oct. 10 is short on discussion but long on lawsuits with 11 items scheduled for discussion during closed session and the potential to join the bail lawsuit is one of six legal discussions set for the evening.

Starting October 1, all police agencies in the county had to follow a new bail system after a court ruling in May that prevented LAPD and the Sheriff's department from demanding cash bail for low-level offenses. However, other agencies were not covered by that ruling and at the time, the courts said they would draft new rules for bail that would apply to everyone.

12 CITIES ARE TRYING TO DELAY IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NEW ZERO BAIL POLICY

Daily Press Editor

Those rules came down in July and eliminated the need for money bail for specific offenses while evaluating a suspect's risk to the public.

According to the Santa Monica Police Department, officers now have three choices: cite and release (arrestee is released at the location of the arrest), book and release (arrestee is booked in jail and then released on their own recognizance) or magistrate review (select cases referred to an on-call magistrate).

Most suspects are charged with petty crimes like property crimes, minor theft and vehicle violations that will be covered by cite or book and release. A judge will be called in when a suspect's crimes pose an increased risk to the public. In those cases, it will

School district 'steps aside' from Civic proposal

THOMAS LEFFLER
SMDP Staff Writer

The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District confirmed Thursday that it will not be submitting a proposal to purchase the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium under the Surplus Land Act (SLA).

During a meeting of the district's Board of Education, SMMUSD Superintendent Dr. Antonio Shelton said that while the district "continues to be interested in purchasing and rehabilitating" the auditorium, it will not be submitting a formal proposal to the City of Santa Monica.

"The district has decided to step aside in order to allow time and opportunity for alternative proposals to be made to the city," Shelton said at the meeting. "While SMMUSD will not submit a proposal at this time, the district continues to have an interest in pursuing the purchase of the Civic. Should another entity not surface … we would then go back and have these conversations. But at this time, we are going to step aside and let the city do its due diligence."

The Civic Auditorium has been closed since 2013, aside from a small meeting space in the East Wing that shut down in 2020. In 2022, the City of Santa Monica declared the property as "surplus" under the SLA, a required designation before any lease or sale of the property can occur. The SLA process directs cities to notify and conduct good faith negotiations with affordable housing developers and public agencies for open space or educational purposes before negotiating with other parties.

CIVIC AUDITORIUM: The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District will "step aside" for the time being on negotiating to purchase the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

In accordance with the SLA, the City issued a notice of availability, previously negotiating with the Community Corporation of Santa Monica. City Council rejected the bid, leaving the district as the lone interested party. The district notified the City of its interest in repurposing the Civic as a multipurpose educational and commercial use facility, assuming future bond financing could be obtained for the project, but the district never submitted a formal notice of interest to the City.

With the district passing on a formal proposal, City of Santa Monica Communications and Public Information Manager Lauren G. Howland told the Daily Press that the City will now look to end the SLA process. The City will turn to receiving clearance from the California Department of Housing & Community Development (HCD) to end the SLA process and negotiate with other parties for the property. After receiving clearance, Howland said that the City will "most likely" send out a Request For Proposal (RFP) or hire a broker to solicit interested purchasers, operators and developers for the auditorium. "There's nothing that stops SMMUSD or any other party from submitting a proposal at that point," Howland noted.

Shelton made clear that the district maintains "a sound plan to revitalize the Civic" that "respects its historic and community significance." SMMUSD's vision for the property as a multipurpose space would include district, Santa Monica High School and community uses; such as gymnasium events, theater shows and a concert venue. A feasibility study unveiled to the public during an August 17 board meeting concluded that the Civic project was possible, but would cost an estimated $226,570,000. The study pointed to an expansion of the Samohi campus footprint alongside the Civic purchase, and during the pause in the Civic process, the district will continue its pursuit of the current Samohi campus plan.

The superintendent also noted that "other organizations and individuals have been vocal in their desire and claims to have the ability and resources to find another interested party" for the property. On Tuesday, community organization Save the Civic member Bea Nemlaha said the group was "thrilled" that the district will not be submitting a formal proposal, stating that Save the Civic "saw no support from the community and almost none from City Council for the district's plan."

News Binge: last week's stories all in one place

CATCH UP WITH ALL THE SANTA MONICA HEADLINES EVERY DAY AT SMDP.COM

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT EXAMINED FOR ROOSEVELT CAMPUS PLAN:

Project developers and Santa Monica-Malibu School District representatives spoke to local stakeholders on Sept. 27, laying out the latest campus plan for Roosevelt Elementary School and the potential environmental impacts of construction. The first phase of construction would include a new one-story classroom for transitional kindergarten and kindergarten students, among other improvements. An environmental impact report for the project, required by the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), will further look into topics like air quality and energy use.

COULD THE END BE NIGH FOR RENTAL SCOOTERS?:

Santa Monica City Council voted 5-2 during its Sept. 26 meeting to extend the Shared Mobility Device Pilot Program for e-scooters and e-bikes in the city. During discussion, councilmember Phil Brock said that he's not sure if he "sees the worth anymore" from the devices. Brock and Oscar de la Torre both opposed the motion to extend the pilot program. De la Torre also had doubts about e-scooters, which account for nearly a million trips a year in the city, saying he's "very concerned" about injuries and the devices' cost to the city.

ART ARRAY ON DISPLAY AT MONTANA WALK:

Several blocks of Montana Avenue were shut down on Sept. 30 for the annual Montana Avenue Art Walk. Activities for all ages included music lessons for children and wine tasting opportunities for adults.

SAMOHI VIKINGS' STREAK HALTED IN BAY LEAGUE OPENER:

After a 5-0 start in non-league play, the Santa Monica Vikings football squad fell to Palos Verdes on Sept. 29 by a score of 27-0. The team will be looking to rebound during the Bay League schedule and make the California Interscholastic Federation playoffs after last year's 2-8 campaign.

LOCALS CAN GET PAID TO LEAVE THEIR CAR AT HOME:

The "One Car Challenge" program started in Santa Monica last week, which offered 200 residents up to $599 if they live in a house with at least two cars and were willing to park one of them for five weeks. The challenge is part of a larger LA Metro pilot program, with Los Angeles County officials stating that the promotion will expand to other parts of the county if it is successful in Santa Monica.

FUNDRAISER FUELS NEEDED LEVITY IN LIFE-THREATENING SITUATIONS:

This past Friday, The Crow comedy club in Santa Monica hosted "Storyectomy," a comedy and storytelling show raising funds for the American Cancer Society. Santa Monica resident Nicole Blaine hosted comedy classes for cancer survivors, thrivers, caregivers and medical professionals in order to "normalize" the cancer experience through comedy.

INTERNATIONAL EXPERIENCES GRACE GRANT CAMPUS:

On Sept. 29, over 20 cultures from around the world were represented at Grant Elementary School's World Culture Day. The second annual gathering had international food, sport, music and traditional clothing; as well as cultural demonstrations such as Brazilian jiu-jitsu.

OUTDATED POLICY ON HOMELESS STUDENTS PROMPTS REVISION BY SMMUSD BOARD:

The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District spoke at its Oct. 5 meeting about updates to education of students experiencing homelessness. Revising its board policy and administrative regulation, the board will be appointing a liaison for supporting homeless children and youths.

CITY HALL TO PURSUE NEW OPERATORS TO HELP REOPEN THE CIVIC AUDITORIUM:

See Page 2 for an update to this story.

BIG CHECK FOR THE PALISADES:

California State Senator Ben Allen (D-Santa Monica) presented a check for $1 million for the restoration of Simon Meadow Park and the creation of new gathering and bathroom facilities. The funds will enhance accessibility and improve youth programming at the park.

COUNCILMEMBER CLASH OVER UNREGULATED REPRESENTATION REITERATES DIVISIONS AMONG MEMBERS:

Proposed changes to Santa Monica City Council rules led to heated discussion at a Sept. 26 meeting. Several councilmembers took issue with Councilwoman Caroline Torosis using her council-funded stipend to pay for graduate student interns who have participated in council activities. Newly-proposed guidelines state that no council member shall authorize or permit any non-city employee to represent them at any meeting function or event. Torosis said she was open with her intent to use interns, stating that she used her stipend "to service the public in the best way that I think possible." Council voted 5-2 to implement the guideline, with Torosis and Councilmember Jesse Zwick opposing.

NEW CROP OF DISTRICT ATHLETES BRED FROM THE MIDDLE GROUND:

This fall, students at Lincoln Middle School and John Adams Middle School began to take part in new sports programs for flag football, girls' volleyball and cross-country. Directly supported through the district with the help of the Santa Monica Education Foundation, the new middle school sports program will extend to games like basketball and soccer in the winter and spring.

COUNCIL SAYS 'SO LONG SWIMMER GIRL' AND 'HELLO HOUSING' WITH PROPOSAL FOR 570 NEW HOUSING UNITS:

Santa Monica City Council unanimously voted to allow the start of negotiations with AMCAL Multi-Housing, Inc. for the development of 570 affordable and market housing units. The units would be on a proposed 2.8 acre site on 5th Street between Colorado Avenue and Olympic Boulevard, home to an EVgo charging station, an empty office building used sparsely by the Santa Monica Police Department for close quarters battle training, and the Comma Building, home to the Daily Press. The final number of available units will be determined by the results of a feasibility study.

'THE FANS STRIKE BACK' STAR WARS-THEMED EXHIBITION LANDS AT THE PROMENADE:

A new exhibit at the Santa Monica Art Museum will transport visitors to a galaxy far, far away; as The Fans Strike Back showcases more than 600 items from the Star Wars universe collected by fans of the film and television products. The exhibition includes life-size figures and models such as Jabba The Hutt's palace and a life-size Darth Vader.

Exploring the emerging and changing identity of our city

MILES WARNER

MILES WARNER: New columnist Miles Warner will be ruminating on what it means to be a Santa Monican.

Who are we as a city? What are our values? Where are we coming from and where are we going? These are questions that seem more difficult to answer than ever before for our lovely Eden by the sea. This new bi-weekly column, for which this is the first edition, aims to explore these questions. It aims to squarely evaluate and engage with the different interests and intersections of our community. Together we will look at our past and to our future, at our institutions and individuals, with an open mind, an open heart and earnest intent.

Santa Monica is a special place in the world. Every one of us who lives here knows that. And it's not just the geography that makes our little town so wonderful, but an endearing belief in justice and good governance. We are very different than our neighboring cities, and those differences are directly correlated to our identity and our values. But our city is changing, and so are those values.

I was born in Santa Monica, in a little house near Pico and Lincoln. I went to our schools and am one of the fortunate few I grew up with who still can call Santa Monica home. Over my lifetime (I'm 42) I've seen a sizeable increase in the wealth of our citizens. I've always correlated that with the success of city management. Over time our leadership created a place that people wanted to live and because of the lovely weather, the ocean and well-cared for infrastructure, naturally we became a more desirable area. And yes, there are so many other factors, and those other factors are what I think make us who we are. Our schools were always excellent. The promenade was a focal point for the greater LA area, and the slow-growth mindset made it so there was limited housing density. That is not an all-inclusive list, it's just a start, but each of those things have changed: Our schools have dropped in enrollment and standing from their highs, while we've seen the number of private schools rapidly increase. The promenade feels seedy and at times disquieting. And finally, we are at a crossroads over how much density we want.

In the 70's we followed Berkeley in enacting rent control, and as such have been an experimental space for all sorts of things. More than 40 years later rent control is still a strong part of our identity, and continues to shape us. We have also been a strong advocate for a humane approach to homelessness, again often at the leading edge of our greater society's progress. But homelessness seems overwhelming now, in a way it never did before.

We are a city that has housed some of the most famous and influential people ever to live. Our schools have momentous alumni who go on to shape the world. Our inventions and innovations change the way the world works. And yet we are a smallish city with only so much bandwidth to right the wrongs of the greater American experiment. Our greatest contribution seems to be our willingness to do what's right and live as an example. But again, we are at a crossroads, and 'doing what's right' is not always clearly laid out.

Next year we will have an election that will determine one step in the direction of where we are headed. Beyond that we have immediate societal concerns that as a community we will need to engage with; crime, homelessness, school and city infrastructure and funding et al. Some of these are concerns that feel new to our community, some are ongoing issues of governance.

I will from time to time pick a subject, a person, a business, or an institution to explore and investigate over one or multiple columns, in hopes that the subject adds dimension to the great question of our evolving identity. I will also touch on issues of the day, attempting to make sense of what I think is at stake and what are important considerations. My hope is that you will be part of this process; will inform me and reach out to me. I also, possibly naively, hope you will do it respectfully and good naturedly.

Thank you in advance for your readership and I look forward to our journey together. We will start with the schools, specifically issues of class size and inequity. So, hang with me, and over time we will explore the many facets of this lovely place we are lucky enough to call home.

Exploring the emerging and changing identity of our city. And stirring the pot ... a bit. Send comments to editor@smdp.com or reach Miles directly at @mileswarnerSM

Hurst continues special education mission in new role

THOMAS LEFFLER
SMDP Staff Writer

Special education services continue to be a focus for the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District, and a familiar face will lead the charge for the 2023-24 academic year and beyond.

The district approved the appointment of Victoria Hurst as the new special education director at the Sept. 21 meeting of the Board of Education. Hurst has served the district for 20 of her 25 years of education experience, and said she is "honored and humbled" by the appointment.

"I look forward to working collaboratively with all stakeholders to ensure that all students have access to an appropriate education," Hurst said. "I share in the district's vision of curiosity, belonging and empowerment for all."

Hurst has been prominently involved in the district's special education program, serving as one of four Special Education Coordinators for the past 13 years. She has also ingrained herself in the Roosevelt Elementary School community during her time with the district as assistant principal, teacher, summer school intensive intervention teacher and family literacy specialist.

For the 2023-24 academic year, Hurst is replacing Deanna Sinfield, who worked for SMMUSD for 24 years. Sinfield is now the assistant superintendent of the try-city Special Education Local Plan Area, which serves SMMUSD along with Beverly Hills USD and Culver City USD. The district congratulated Sinfield on her new position, and knows that Hurst will make a worthy successor.

"Ms. Hurst is a proven leader on our special education team with the best interests of our students always in mind," said SMMUSD Superintendent Dr. Antonio Shelton. "We congratulate her on her new position and know she will have continued success serving our students, families and staff."

The California Department of Education defines special education as "information and resources to serve the unique needs of persons with disabilities so that each person will meet or exceed high standards of achievement in academic and nonacademic skills. During her time as Special Education Coordinator, Hurst worked to achieve those standards with school sites and developed relationships with families and staff. A liaison between families and school officials, she "(worked) out ways to support the students and for the family to feel supported."

"I am fortunate to have relationships with many parents since I have been in my position for a long time," Hurst said. "So a lot of the parents I'm speaking to, I worked with them in preschool or elementary school, and now their students are in high school. So it's really just a collaborative process with not only the parents, but our staff as well."

Once assigned just a few school sites, she will now oversee the entire district's set of special education services, such as an internalizing program, a program that focuses on social skills and self-regulation, and programs based on teaching life skills and community-based instruction.

The internalizing program, called STEP (structured therapeutic education program), is implemented at Santa Monica Alternative School House (SMASH) and Malibu High School for students with emotional and behavioral difficulties. The district also saw a "large area of need" for instruction in social skills and self-regulation, expanding social skills programs to different school sites.

"I think what has changed over time (in the district) is the needs of the students," Hurst said. "What our job is, and my job is now, is to make sure we have programs to meet the students' needs."

Saying that any good leader doesn't make changes during a first year, Hurst will continue to travel to district sites to see what students' needs are for the next academic year and beyond.

be up to the court to decide what terms of release are assigned to that suspect. The most serious crimes, like murder, will not qualify for pre-arraignment release.

"The new bail schedules reflect the conclusions of the Judicial Council of California's 2017 Pretrial Detention Reform Workgroup that pretrial systems that rely exclusively on the financial resources of the accused are inherently unsafe and unfair," said the Los Angeles County Superior Court in announcing the new rules.

In addition to the fairness rules, proponents of zero bail cite studies that show reduced bail systems have not had an impact on crime rates including the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors who issued a report saying reduced bail rules during the Covid pandemic had no impact on suspects likelihood to appear in court.

However, in response to the new rules, twelve cities in Los Angeles County filed a lawsuit to delay implementation of the policy saying it is dangerous.

Whittier, Arcadia, Artesia, Covina, Downey, Glendora, Industry, Lakewood, La Verne, Palmdale, Santa Fe Springs and Vernon were the initial group to file.

The City of Glendora said its police department faces extraordinary challenges in its efforts to hold criminals accountable.

"It is our duty to this community to ensure the safety of those live here, work here, and visit," said Glendora Mayor Gary Boyer. "The zero-bail schedule fails to support local leaders in their pledge to protect their residents, and that is unacceptable."

> "The Zero-Bail policy is a significant public safety concern as our residents and businesses are increasingly victimized by these lower-level offenses"
> - Tim Hepburn, La Verne Mayor

Other mayors voiced similar statements.

"The Zero-Bail policy is a significant public safety concern as our residents and businesses are increasingly victimized by these lower-level offenses," stated La Verne Mayor Tim Hepburn. "This decision to pursue an injunction is based on the joint commitment of a growing list of cities who believe this lack of regard for public safety imperils the safety and security of our residents, businesses, and law enforcement personnel."

The request for Santa Monica to join the lawsuit was put forward by Councilmember Phil Brock and will be discussed in closed session. If council votes to join the lawsuit, the action would be reported when the Council returns to open session.

AIRPORT PLANNING

Other items include a debate over how to encourage public participation in land use planning process, specifically at the airport. According to the staff report, traditional planning systems haven't brought a diverse and representative sampling of residents into the fold and instead, they are requesting a new lottery system for establishing citizen advisory groups.

"...participants are selected through a democratic lottery, ensuring representation across demographic factors," said the staff report. "The process actively invites randomly chosen community members, breaking participation barriers by reaching people in their homes via mailers. Those who respond to the invitation mailer opt-in to a pool of respondents who are then selected in a public lottery selection event to participate in the process."

Opposition to the idea began to coalesce Friday with criticism of the organization chosen to work on the new process and the possibility that the process would yield housing on the airport property.

DISCUSSION ITEMS

In the open session, some councilmembers are asking the city to endorse the Justice for Renters Act. The act will be before voters in the November 2024 election and would expand rent control rules throughout the state. The request comes from Mayor Gleam Davis, Councilmember Caroline Torosis and Councilmember Jesse Zwick. The same trio are also asking the city to support and prepare for adoption of a new rule in Sacramento that would allow homeowners to sell small accessory dwelling units separately from the main property.

Councilman Brock is asking the city to prohibit the use of engineered countertops in Santa Monica following reports that the manufacture of those countertops is dangerous for workers.

MEETING DETAILS

Council will meet in City Hall, 1685 Main Street on Tuesday, Oct. 10. Closed session begins at 5:30 p.m. Meetings are available online via the City's YouTube channel.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 9)

You're tuning into the essence of your own happiness. Small moments fill your heart, and big moments tilt you in the direction to gather up loads more magic. Other highlights: Something you commit to paper goes public in a lucrative way. You'll be featured at a gathering. You'll give a gift that you'll also get to enjoy and travel with. Aries and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 2, 10, 4, 44 and 17.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). If you count on the fact that you'll make mistakes, you won't fear making them anymore. You're powerful when you decide that no matter what happens, you'll make good, if not in the moment then because of it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You can feel when someone likes you, and right now they like you. Take it in. There's nothing you have to do about it. That's the beauty of a pure feeling like this. It's a gift without strings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). A meteoric ride to the top is a thrill, but speed has a price. It burns as it goes, diminishing the goods. It may be worth it to get there quick, though you should also consider the slow climb.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Acceptance is not passive, rather it's a brave opening to reality. Acceptance gives you power because suddenly, instead of fighting against a reality that doesn't match up to your preferences, you're dealing in what's real.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Preferences, demands and censorship limit what you can engage with and be energized by. This limit keeps you in a box -- not good or bad, it's just a particular experience that may or may not fit your current needs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). No one is born knowing the right thing to say. Eloquence must be learned, and often the education comes through saying the wrong thing. You'll offer grace to yourself and anyone who needs it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Theoretically, you don't have to put much of yourself into the work. Many could do the job just fine; your emotional investment is completely optional. And yet, without the personal touch only you can give, this will all fall flat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Should you feel guilty for wanting space/a project/a person completely to yourself? It would be nice not to feel the constant weight of compromise on your shoulders. You'll get your wish if you negotiate for it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Since each person is differently wired, you never can tell who will resonate with what. Luckily, the internet will do the sorting for you, so you have a better chance at making good matches for work and play.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). First times are so exciting. Firsts can make life beautiful, scary, adventurous and transformative. Getting older doesn't necessarily mean there are fewer "firsts," though you must be the engine that seeks them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The whole truth is not purely facts. The facts are not inconsequential, but because they can be stacked in so many different ways, they cannot be trusted. The whole truth is facts plus intention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Another sign that you're on the right path: The sensory aspects of an endeavor are growing on you. You'll proceed to mastery, though by that time your results will matter less to you than the joy of the process itself.
