Children's Burn Foundation launches new exhibit

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

Burns are one of the top five causes of accidental deaths in children, even though almost 75 percent of scalding burns in children are preventable. The Children's Burn Foundation is on a mission to lower these statistics through a massive educational outreach effort.

To this end, the foundation is launching an interactive exhibit at the California Science Center that teaches children and adults alike about the science of fire, how to prevent a fire and what to do if a burn injury occurs.

One of their key supporters is Ron Smith who alongside his wife has been involved with the organization for almost a decade. While many Santa Monicans may recognize Smith as their friendly realtor from Smith & Berg Partners, he is also a Gold Sponsor of the Children's Burn Foundation.

"They do a phenomenal job of educating the public of the importance of common sense things that you can do at home to avoid burns," said Smith. "It's a great organization and I know that everybody's really busy with their own personal lives, but whether it's the Children's Burn Foundation or another charity, we've got to make time to make a contribution and get involved."

The new exhibit will open in November and be a permanent feature of the museum. There is a wildfire activity scene that addresses the important issue of wildfires in California and steps that can be taken to protect homes and communities from these risks. There are also 20 different hands-on activities that allow visitors to safely experience fire hazards and practice safety behaviors.

ACTIVITY: The Burn Foundation supports youth who have been injured.

"The number one kitchen accident is boiling water and so I know this sounds super common sense, but you want to put your pots to the back of the stove not the front," said Smith, who has become somewhat of a fire safety expert since he started working with the foundation.

According to Smith, the other two top accidents are children touching hot surfaces in a microwave and scalding bath water. Simple steps like elevating a microwave or always testing water temperature are some of the key tips shared by the foundation, which can go a long way when it comes to protecting children.

Obviously not all burn accidents are preventable and these types of injuries can be very difficult for children to deal with, both because of the intensity of pain and the lasting scars.

SMMUSD reports progress on sustainability goals

DANIEL FARR
SMDP Staff Writer

SMMUSD touted their future sustainability goals and claimed to be on track with their current ones in information presented to the public last week.

The district's sustainability plan was adopted in March of 2019, and it serves to make the district a more efficient, healthy and sustainable community. There are eight focus areas in the plan and each one of them has specific goals and strategies.

Under their climate goal, SMMUSD wants to develop a greenhouse gas emissions inventory.

SMMUSD's manager of sustainability Austin Toyama said the district will log all emissions from facilities and record district operations as a measure of carbon dioxide equivalent emissions. She said they have the ability to monitor utility use and an online platform to organize the efforts.

"This is something we're going to be focusing on this year, and in the coming years," she said. "But once we set this inventory and establish it, we'll be able to set baseline levels of our missions and set reduction goals for years to come."

Education and engagement is a focus area of the district that has been doing fairly well in.

"Some of our past student programs have included the waste

Council to hire police oversight Inspector General and give Housing Element update

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

City Council will be fulfilling two long-term commitments in Tuesday's meeting: the hiring of an Inspector General to assist police oversight and reform efforts and the finalized draft of the Housing Element update.

The meeting will also feature two new faces, City Manager David White and Interim City Attorney Joseph Lawrence, who will both be recognized at the beginning of open session.

An Inspector General was promised when the Public Safety Reform and Oversight Commission was formed on January 26 in response to concerns raised during summer 2020's Black Lives Matter protests.

The role of an Inspector General is to be an independent party that can review internal confidential SMPD documents and provide appropriate data to the Commission. The goal is to enable the commission to conduct impactful work without compromising law enforcement or personnel information.

There was an open request for proposal process to fulfill the role and the OIR Group was selected as the best and only bidder. The OIR Group is the same entity that provided an analysis and suggestions for improvement based on SMPD's response to the May 31 protests and riots.

The OIR Group will be granted $140,000 annually to fulfill the services of an Inspector General, with plans for four one-year renewals contingent on Council budget approvals.

The Housing Element update will outline changes to the City's plan to meet its Regional Housing Needs Allocation (RHNA) in response to comments made by the California Department of Housing and Community Development and Planning Commission.

Santa Monica's RHNA allocation requires the addition of 8,895 units, including 6,168 affordable units, by 2029.

Dear John

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

DEAR JOHN,

My daughter is 16, dating a boy who's turning 20 in a month. He drives a muscle car and lives with a roommate. My daughter who is sometimes mature beyond her years, wise beyond her years, is also emotionally a 16 year old.

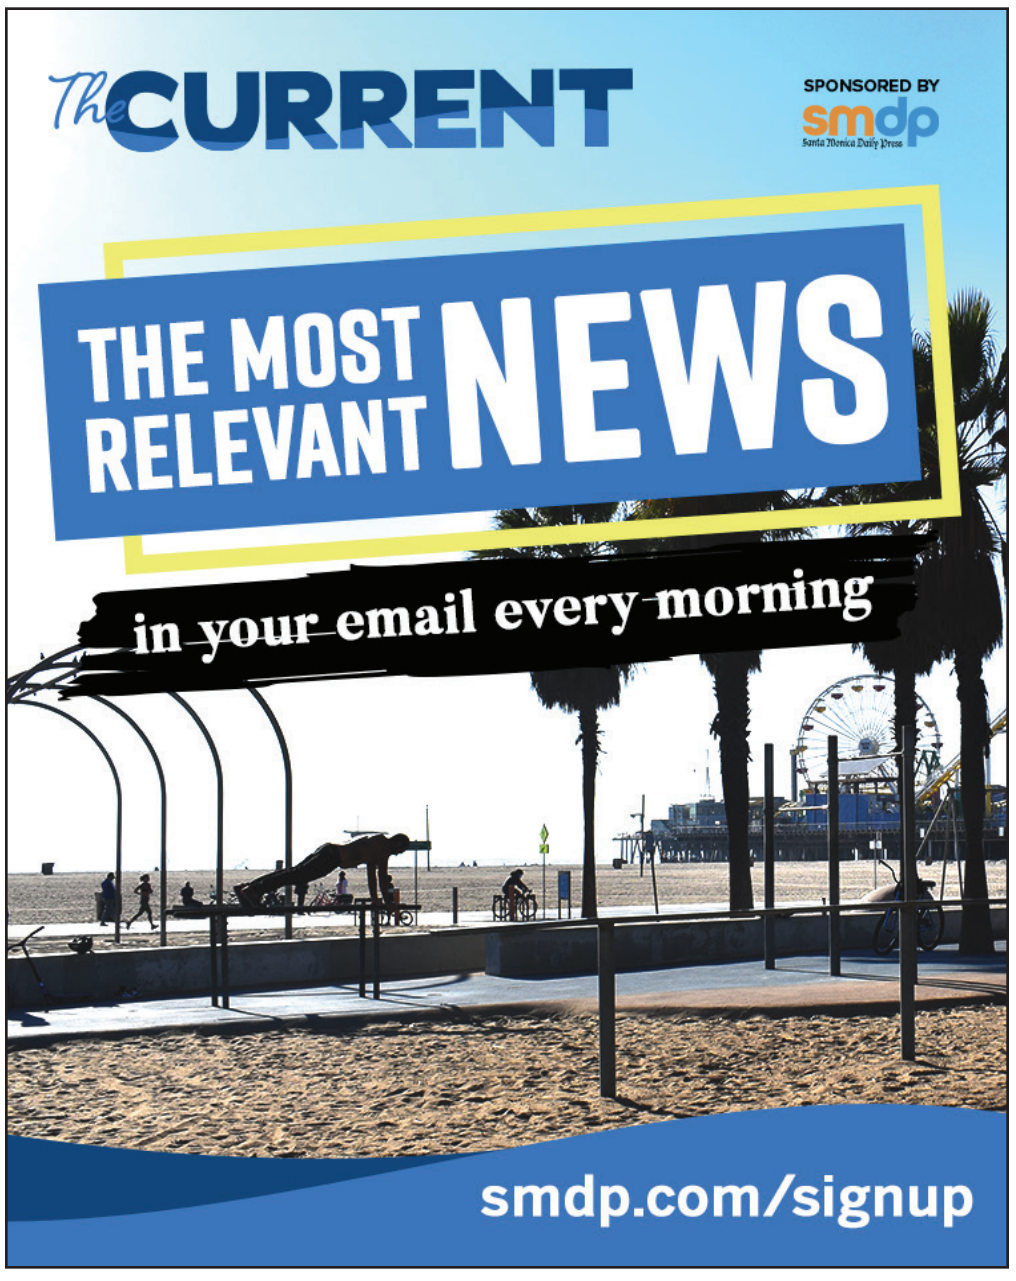

The thing is, I trust her!! I feel ok with it. I met him and feel she can do worse. My wife says that seeing a boy over 18 should be a hard no. I'm judged by my friends for allowing this. But I'm not actually even second guessing my decision. But I do wonder if that's being a bad father? Should I not allow this? I know what he's doing is technically criminal. Is what I'm doing criminal for condoning it? (Part 3)

On a much simpler level, an example of this recently came up in my own family. My fiance and I have a mixed, blended family with kids ranging from 5 to 17. My 13-year-old daughter was in a relationship - they have since broken up and gone their separate ways. My wife and I had to go out for the evening, leaving the two of them alone in our house. I trust my daughter and didn't think twice about it. My fiance also trusts my daughter, but recognized some feelings of discomfort around leaving the two alone for almost 2 hours. We acknowledged and spoke truth to our feelings and perspectives before making a joint decision. Ultimately, we decided to leave the two of them alone, but I was willing to make adjustments to make sure my partner felt seen, supported, and heard. This is a simple example, but one that highlights the differing perspectives and beliefs parents can have when it comes to raising their children. More important than the circumstances of a disagreement is the process you both agree to that integrates mutual respect, attunement, joint decision-making, and child-focused solutions. Boundaries and clear expectations help everyone to show up in the best way. There will be countless opportunities for parents to have differences of opinion when it comes to their children, which includes stepchildren, adopted children, foster children, etc., but what remains imperative throughout all of them is a process or plan to ensure everyone in the family feels seen, supported, and heard. When anyone is left voiceless, it sends a message that their voice does not matter. It is a surefire way to make somebody feel invisible and grow further resentments.

These parenting decisions, boundaries, and expectations are all deeply personal and have to be in alignment with your family, your principles and philosophies, and the culture you are trying to create. When you include your partner in your decision making, you send a message to them that they matter. When you set clear boundaries, it shows kindness. When you support your daughter's autonomy and keep an open dialogue, it shows her that you trust her, and she can trust herself. If your daughter gets hurt during this relationship, you have an opportunity to support her back on to her feet and build her resilience. These are all opportunities to show up in meaningful ways. Life is not about black and white decisions or clear cut delineations on what you "should" and "should not" do. It is an ever-changing, always flowing dynamic. It is a dance that is conducted in the grey. When we open up to the possibility that all of this is a representation of life, and prime material to learn and grow from, we surrender to the flow of life and learn to intuit more easily on how to best support one another. I trust you - you've got this!

League of Women Voters of Santa Monica to Screen Racially Charged: America's Misdemeanor Problem

Did you know that many of the misdemeanor laws were created in the Jim Crow era to target formerly enslaved people? And that they are still being used today to disproportionately arrest people of color and poor people, often with dire consequences to those arrested?

Robert Greenwald explores this topic in his documentary, Racially Charged: America's Misdemeanor Problem, which the League of Women Voters of Santa Monica will screen in collaboration with Committee for Racial Justice, the Santa Monica Coalition for Police Reform, and the Human Relations Council Santa Monica Bay Area at 2p.m. on October 17.

Following the screening, Michele Wittig, convener, Santa Monica Coalition for Police Reform and LWVSM member, will moderate a panel discussion and Q&A session. She hopes that the video will "provide a springboard for a candid discussion of the ways we can address the vestiges of past moral wrongs that are present in our current misdemeanor system.

Wittig will be joined on the panel by Angela Scott, Santa Monica Public Safety Reform and Oversight commissioner, Committee for Racial Justice steering committee member and LWVSM member, as well as Natalya Zernitskaya, president of the LWVSM.

"Systemic racism is at the heart of most of the pressing problems facing us today, including issues with our criminal justice and public safety systems. We can see how the effects of our current criminal justice system have been harmful to people in our very own local community and we have an opportunity to support our community's healing process by shining a light on what isn't working so we can create a criminal justice system that truly provides justice for all," Zernitskaya said.

This is a virtual event and will be hosted on Zoom. Please RSVP at https://bit.ly/AMP101721

CRIME WATCH BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON OCT. 1 AT APPROXIMATELY 3:15 P.M.

Officers responded to the 2000 block of Ocean Ave to a radio call of a DUI. The comments of the call stated that the reporting party was involved in a traffic accident and he believed that the other driver was intoxicated. The victim reported that a vehicle parked next to him struck his vehicle while attempting to back up. The victim noted that the driver of the other vehicle was drinking a beer while driving. After completing a field sobriety test, Alyson McDaris, was placed under arrest for Driving Under the Influence. While being handcuff, McDaris physically lashed out at the arresting officers leading to the additional charge of battery on a peace officer.

Beverlywood Man Pleads Guilty to Securities Fraud, Admitting Massive Ponzi that Falsely Claimed to License Foreign Film Rights

A Los Angeles man pleaded guilty this afternoon to a federal securities fraud charge and admitted operating a Ponzi scheme that raised at least $650 million with bogus claims that investor money would be used to acquire licensing rights to films that HBO and Netflix purportedly had agreed to distribute abroad.

Zachary Joseph Horwitz, 34, who resides in the Beverlywood neighborhood of Los Angeles, admitted his fraudulent scheme has caused more than $230 million in losses.

Horwitz pleaded guilty before United States District Judge Mark C. Scarsi, who scheduled a sentencing hearing for January 2, 2022. When he is sentenced, Horwitz will face a statutory maximum sentence of 20 years in federal prison.

Over the course of about five years, Horwitz used his company – 1inMM Capital LLC, which purported to be a film distribution company – to solicit investors with false claims their money would be used to purchase regional distribution rights to films and then would generate profits by licensing the rights to online platforms such as Netflix and HBO.

The scheme began in 2014, when groups of private investors began entering into hundreds of six- and 12-month promissory notes with 1inMM Capital based on Horwitz's statements. The funds supplied under each note were supposed to provide money for 1inMM Capital to acquire the rights to a specific film. The promissory notes guaranteed a specified payment on a specified maturity date, as well as the specified amount to be paid at maturity, which included investment returns ranging from 25 percent to 45 percent.

"However, as [he] then knew, his representations concerning 1inMM Capital's business activities and the promissory notes themselves were false and deceptive because 1inMM Capital generally did not and would not acquire or possess the film distribution rights for the films specified as collateral in the promissory notes, and 1inMM Capital did not and would not enter into any distribution agreements with the online streaming platforms for these specified films... and the purported copies of the distribution agreements were fake," Horwitz admitted in his plea agreement.

Instead of using the funds to acquire films and arrange distribution deals, Horwitz operated 1inMM Capital as a Ponzi scheme, using victims' money to repay earlier investors and to fund his own lifestyle, including the purchase of his $6 million Beverlywood residence.

Investors started to complain after 1inMM Capital began defaulting on notes in 2019, court documents states. In response, Horwitz "falsely reassured investors that any missed payments on promissory notes were caused by the actions of the online streaming platforms, and that payment on the notes would resume," he admitted in the plea agreement. To support these false claims, Horwitz sent the investors emails and text messages he falsely claimed had been sent to him by representatives of the online streaming platforms.

Horwitz defrauded five major groups of private investors, but these entities derived funds from more than 250 sub-investors. By late 2019, 1inMM Capital began defaulting on all of its outstanding promissory notes, according to the plea agreement, in which Horwitz admits that he owes investors more than $230 million and that his scheme has caused substantial financial hardship to at least five investors.

The FBI is investigating this matter. The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission provided substantial assistance.

Assistant United States Attorneys Alexander B. Schwab and David H. Chao of the Major Frauds Section are prosecuting this case.

California extends cocktails-to-go and outdoor dining rules

DON THOMPSON
Associated Press

California moved Friday to extend the sale of cocktails-to-go and keep alcohol service for outdoor dining at parklets as officials try to help restaurants recover from the coronavirus pandemic.

"This is a pathway for these businesses to frankly make up for a lot of the constraints that have been imposed upon them over the course of the last 18 months," Gov. Gavin Newsom said as he signed the three bills into law at a community restaurant in Oakland.

Two of the three bills extend outdoor dining permits and alcohol sales at the pandemic-era parklets for a year after the state of emergency ends, giving businesses time to seek permission for permanent approval.

The third allows restaurants, bars, breweries and wineries that sell food to continue offering to-go alcoholic beverages with food orders through Dec. 31, 2026.

Associations representing restaurants and the distilled spirits industry praised the signing.

"The road to restaurant recovery will be a very long one and the importance of these measures taken together will remain a critical part of helping restaurants get back on their feet, reemploy massive numbers of Californians, and continue to safely serve the public," California Restaurant Association CEO and President Jot Condie said in a statement.

Adam Smith, vice president of state government relations for the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States, said the move will support hospitality businesses devastated by the pandemic.

At least 35 states allowed restaurants or bars to sell cocktails to-go during the pandemic, he said. Sixteen states and the District of Columbia have since made that permanent, while 15 other states like California continued it temporarily.

Newsom signed the bills at Oakland's Kingston 11 restaurant, where owner Nigel Jones said sales plummeted 70% at the start of the pandemic mainly because of lost alcohol sales.

"We are excited about the future," Jones said, though "it's still very difficult as we move forward."

Newsom got his start as a wine entrepreneur, though his wineries and other businesses are now in a blind trust.

He said in response to questioning that state and local officials must still enforce responsible alcohol consumption, but that the laws are more restrictive than his earlier executive orders. They include requiring accompanying food and allow for pickup but not delivery, Newsom said.

Assemblyman Jesse Gabriel, who authored one of the bills, said six of 10 restaurants in California are owned by people of color, whom he noted have been hit harder than others in the pandemic.

Sen. Scott Wiener, the author of another bill, said the temporary measures were "a lifeline to restaurants and bars" during the pandemic.

Wiener, of San Francisco, said the new laws "step back and say, you know, we did this thing quickly during the pandemic, and as big a catastrophe as this pandemic was, let's take the good that we learned during this emergency and make it permanent."

SMC Emeritus Gallery to Host Online Opening Reception

The Santa Monica College (SMC) Emeritus Art Gallery is pleased to present a mixed-media exhibition of Emeritus artists working in forms that defy description. Though ranging in material, subject, and aesthetic, the works by four exhibiting artists – paintings by Bernice Glenn and Shoko Sakanaka, photography by Karen Sandler, and a wide range of mixed-media production, including intricate and ephemeral abstract sculptures from simple material arrangements, by Jodi Sena – consistently strike sublime moods and conjure elegant and elusive forms and spaces. The exhibition will be presented online at smc.edu/emeritusgallery.

A free, live Zoom Virtual Launch Event will be held online from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, October 21. A link at smc.edu/emeritusgallery – available shortly before the event begins – takes guests directly to the exhibition's opening reception.

The opening reception will be hosted by Dean of Noncredit and External Programs Dr. Scott Silverman and Emeritus Art Gallery Curator Jesse Benson. The event includes a live scroll through the exhibition and a discussion between Benson and the artists about selected works. To see the artwork online at any time after 5 p.m. on October 21, viewers may go to smc.edu/emeritusgallery and click the exhibition link, available 24 hours a day. The link takes viewers directly to the exhibition album on a Facebook page that is open to public viewing (Facebook account not necessary).

"Rather than organizing this exhibition through related materials, subject matter, or style, the exhibited artworks have been gathered together based on feel," said Benson. "They all share a difficult-to-describe type of uncanny depth, almost like a spirituality. There is a simplicity of approach that allows for transcendent viewing experiences. It's easy to get lost in the beauty."

"Even though we can't yet gather in person to appreciate the art produced by our wonderful Emeritus students, this exhibition gives us a chance to still enjoy their art, from the comfort of our own homes," said Silverman. "An added benefit is that it will give Emeritus and our students a chance to share this art to a broader audience that has not previously had a chance to visit the Gallery."

SMC's widely praised Emeritus program – founded by Santa Monica College in 1975 as a noncredit program to serve the lifelong learning interests of older adults – offers more than 120 noncredit adult education classes and special programs that serve more than 3,000 students each year.

More information is available by visiting smc.edu/emeritusgallery or calling 310-434-4306.

Leading Health Systems Unite to Unveil Public Health Campaign

Five of Los Angeles County's largest nonprofit health systems with hospitals, clinics and facilities regionwide announced the newest campaign for their BetterTogether.Health coalition. With a mission to convince Angelenos to put health first and access care when needed, the public service educational campaign features everyday patient heroes with the theme: "Get Back to Your Doctor. Your Health. Your Joy. Because We Love a Healthy L.A."

UCLA Health, Providence, Keck Medicine of USC, Dignity Health and Cedars-Sinai pivoted from last year's campaign of empty beaches, freeways and landmarks to today painting an authentic, intimate mosaic of 11 Angelenos (described below) who overcame health challenges as a result of timely access to preventive care. From athletes, entertainers and entrepreneurs to a mom of newborn triplets, an artist and a priest, their moving stories are everyday symbols of strength, inspiration and hope. The campaign takes you inside the lives of these courageous heroes who overcame challenges of serious disease and returned to what they love most.

Among issues driving the new campaign are ongoing concerns among health care professionals who see people not seeking timely, preventive and life-saving services, health screenings and medical assistance when critical to do so. Unfortunately, too often the results are late-stage cancers, advanced heart disease, debilitating strokes and other serious medical conditions.

The five health systems–with hundreds of health care locations throughout Los Angeles County–remain committed and available to serving the community's health care needs, including emergency, primary, specialty and urgent care.

Rather than each health system individually addressing what medical professionals call a "silent sub-pandemic" of those requiring but instead avoiding timely medical services, they remain committed to tackle head-on what has increasingly become a new public health crisis resulting in serious and avoidable health consequences.

These leading health systems united for this purpose since March 2020 know it is their duty to reach out and let people know they are committed to saving lives and maintaining optimal health of the communities they serve.

"We are confident these efforts make a positive difference in community health. This collaboration of health systems is not only extraordinary, it provides critical information in meeting a challenge beyond anything any of us ever experienced," says Kevin Manemann, Chief Executive, Providence Southern California.

BetterTogether.Health public service effort includes messages on multi-language TV and radio, billboards, buses, malls, newspapers, magazines, digital, social media and more. Combining resources demonstrates the organizations are in this together, accomplish more together and will get through this together.

"The health of our Los Angeles community is our top priority. We are here to ensure everyone has access to the preventive health care and medical treatment they need to live to their full potential," says Johnese Spisso, President, UCLA Health and CEO, UCLA Health System.

Patient health and safety are top priorities for every health care provider.

"As people return to work, school and family gatherings we are still concerned that they have not returned to their annual screenings or health interventions. We must continue to engage our communities to put their health and well-being first," says Julie Sprengel, President, Southern California Division, Dignity Health Hospitals.

Emergencies don't stop and neither do hospitals providing emergency care 24/7. Getting to a hospital quickly for heart attacks and strokes is critical and saves lives. Those exhibiting serious symptoms like chest pain, shortness of breath, numbness in one side of the body or severe headache should seek medical care immediately.

"There's concern that patients with serious conditions are putting off critical treatment. We know that seeking immediate care for heart attacks and strokes can be life-saving and may minimize long-term effects. Our hospitals and health providers are ready and open to serve your needs," says Rodney Hanners, CEO, Keck Medicine of USC.

It is also critically important for children to stay on schedule for vaccinations for protection of their health and others as well, including measles and whooping cough vaccines. These highly contagious diseases could become a public health issue if not addressed. Immunizations protect children and those around them from diseases caused by bacteria or viruses.

"Receiving timely treatment by skilled medical professionals is essential to helping achieve for our patients and communities the best possible outcomes. Please do not delay getting your health care. We encourage you to call a trusted health care provider, your doctor's office, hospital or urgent care center," says Tom Priselac, President & CEO, Cedars-Sinai

BetterTogether.Health unites health systems and creates messages for betterment of health in their communities. It was formed and is led by Rhoda Weiss, Ph.D., president, Rhoda Weiss Consulting Group, who also chairs Health Market Leaders–110 health system executives representing majority of U.S. hospitals who offer solutions and best practices to health care's most pressing issues. Special thanks to Vin Scully, voice of L.A. Dodgers for 67 seasons and Kareem Abdul Jabbar, NBA all-time leading scorer and global humanitarian, for volunteering to narrate the public service announcements; and music composer Chris Thomas. Heartfelt gratitude to our health care heroes who shared stories of timely detection and treatment of health issues–stories we hope encourage others to seek medical care when needed.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING BEFORE THE SANTA MONICA CITY COUNCIL

SUBJECT: Adoption of Master User Fee Resolution and Resolution Modifying Credit Card Convenience Fee for Utility Payments

PROJECT DESCRIPTIONS

The City Council will conduct a public hearing on the proposed adoption of new fees and revision to existing fees charged by the City's Community Development Department, Department of Transportation, Public Works Department, Community Services Department, and Fire Department for the provision of a variety of services including, but not limited to: construction permits on private property and in the public right of way, voluntary pre-submittal plan reviews, recreational services, emergency medical services, Airport related services, parking signage, and other permit and user fees for services provided to or for the benefit of particular individuals rather than the general public.

The City Council will also conduct a public hearing to hear anyone wishing to speak regarding a proposed resolution which revises certain convenience fees pursuant to Government Code 6159(h) for credit or debit card payments to the City for utility-related payments. These convenience fees are paid to third-party merchant processing companies, and the City will not retain any portion of the proposed convenience fees. The revised convenience fees will continue to be at or below the City's costs.

The proposed fee revisions are intended to more fully recover the City's cost of providing services and processing applications. The proposed fee schedules will be available online at http://www.smgov.net/departments/clerk/agendas no later than October 21, 2021.

A public hearing will be held by the City Council to consider this request:

FOUNDATION

Another initiative of the foundation is a summer camp for child burn victims called Camp Gung Ho. The camp helps children connect with other young burn-survivors and their siblings for four days of free fun-filled activities.

"The summer camp is a wonderful initiative because it gives kids a sense of belonging and, especially with social media these days, there's so many reasons for kids to feel self conscious," said Smith. "When you're in an environment with no expectations and no one scrutinizing you, it makes it very warm and comforting."

The foundation also provides reconstructive treatment for victims, emergency family assistance, counseling and a teen support program. Collectively the foundation's programs reach more than 85,000 children and families annually.

The new exhibit at the California Science Center (700 Exposition Park Drive, Los Angeles) will open in November.

warriors, lunchtime waste sorting program," Toyama said. "Energy detectives, which is a classroom, energy conservation program, teaching behavioral changes, and the importance of conservation, as well as current initiatives that we've been working on."

The district continues to implement green building design standards for new construction as well. A lot of SMMUSD's new buildings feature sustainable designs like solar arrays on the roof, energy-efficient HVAC systems, natural ventilation, and electric vehicle charging stations.

Energy efficiency and renewables is an area of focus that led to retrofits for all outdoor and indoor lights in the district. The pandemic also provided a silver lining by reducing energy consumption by over 20%.

Currently, SMMUSD is receiving 40% renewable energy from the Clean Power Alliance, which is the local community choice aggregate for renewable energy. The district was receiving 100% renewable for all of their sites, up until March of 2021 when costs increased.

With the entire state of California in a major water drought, SMMUSD shifted their eyes to water and waste. About 80% of the district's water costs is represented by outdoor irrigation and thus represents the biggest opportunity for savings. The district is working with the City of Santa Monica's water neutrality program to install high-efficiency toilets, urinals and faucet aerators that will help reduce daily water use for the remaining indoor 20%.

"You know, student and staff training is a major component of solid waste, and it remains a challenge to really get everyone on the same page, using the same recycling methods and adhering to our district standards for recycling and waste sorting," Toyama said. "So, education and engagement is ongoing."

Encouraging environmentally friendly ways to arrive at school were discussed too. There was a recent transportation demand survey at Santa Monica High to decrease single-occupancy vehicles, promote biking, walking and busing to school.

SMMUSD is in talks with LA Metro to allow the district to purchase tap cards for students at a discounted rate, and it would enable students to ride for free on the Big Blue Bus and Metro.

COUNCIL

Cities Council of Governments, of which Santa Monica is a member, discuss joining an Orange County lawsuit protesting these numbers. The Orange County Council of Governments believes that recent RHNA calculations were grossly overinflated and bases this on evidence shown in studies by Freddie Mac and the Embarcadero Institute.

Regardless of the ongoing controversy over the accuracy of RHNA allocations, the City and Councilmembers have maintained a strong commitment to meeting Santa Monica's allocation through the Housing Element plan.

The Housing Element is designed to increase housing production, protect tenants from displacement, incentivize housing near to services and schools and overcome historic patterns of segregation by diversifying housing choices in high cost areas.

The meeting will start with closed session at 5:30 p.m. on Oct. 12 and can be viewed live at youtube.com/user/Citytv16santamonica.

Vaccination Linked to the Reduction of 22,000 COVID-19 Cases, 9,700 Hospitalizations, and 3,800 Deaths Among Seniors in California

A new report from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) shows that COVID-19 vaccinations may have helped prevent roughly 22,000 new COVID-19 infections and 3,800 deaths among seniors in California during the first five months of 2021. The study, which was conducted by researchers with HHS's Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation (ASPE), also found that nationally, vaccinations were linked to a reduction of approximately 265,000 COVID-19 infections, 107,000 hospitalizations, and 39,000 deaths among Medicare beneficiaries between January and May 2021.

"This report reaffirms what we hear routinely from states: COVID-19 vaccines save lives, prevent hospitalizations, and reduce infection," said HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra. "The Biden-Harris Administration has prioritized getting vaccines quickly to pharmacies, nursing homes, doctors' offices and even provided increased reimbursement rates for at-home COVID-19 vaccinations, so that seniors and others can easily get vaccinated."

The report reflects the devastating effect COVID-19 has had on our vulnerable seniors and demonstrates that efforts to prioritize and vaccinate this group directly correlate to saving lives. More than 352,000 lives were lost during the first nine months of the COVID-19 pandemic. Prior to the availability of vaccines, nearly 80 percent of these deaths were among people 65 and older who were also Medicare eligible. For the period of January to May 2021, when vaccination grew from one percent to 47 percent among adults 18 to 64 and from one percent to 80 percent among seniors, the study found an 11-12 percent decrease in weekly COVID-19 hospitalizations and deaths among Medicare beneficiaries for every 10 percent increase in vaccination rates.

All racial and ethnic groups and all 48 states analyzed experienced reduced numbers of COVID-19 deaths, hospitalizations, and infections, linked to vaccination rate increases. Texas and Hawaii were excluded from this analysis due to data reporting limitations. American Indian and Alaska Native Medicare beneficiaries saw the largest vaccination-related percentage decrease in SARS-CoV-2 infections, hospitalizations, and deaths. The study also found that vaccines were linked to a reduction of about 5,600 deaths among nursing home Medicare beneficiaries, a group that was disproportionately impacted by the pandemic.

The report further underscores why it's critically important to get all eligible individuals living in the United States vaccinated against COVID-19. The study found that high vaccination rates for all adults were even more protective for Medicare beneficiaries than just a high elderly vaccination rate on its own. The COVID-19 vaccines protect communities by reducing infections, deaths, and hospitalizations.

Recently, Secretary Becerra issued a directive, effective September 25, authorizing all CDC COVID-19 Vaccination Program providers to make available and administer Pfizer-BioNTech booster doses to all people who are eligible. This includes seniors over age 65. The science has demonstrated this authorized booster can provide added protection to seniors. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services also issued a reminder to Medicare beneficiaries that all COVID-19 vaccines, including the authorized booster will be covered without cost-sharing.

Flair Cares 3rd Annual Cancer Fundraiser October 1 through October 31

Flair Cleaners, Southern California's leading eco-friendly dry cleaners, announced its 3rd Annual Cancer Fundraiser, which will take place throughout the month of October. Customers may donate to Flair Cleaners in Santa Monica, 720 Montana Ave. (between 7th and Lincoln), and designate which of three nonprofits to support, the National Breast Cancer Foundation, ZERO - The End of Prostate Cancer, and CURE Childhood Cancer.

"Every year these diseases impact thousands in our communities, including our family, friends, and customers," said Gary Futterman, Flair Cleaners Owner. "That's why we are dedicating October to building awareness, raising funds, and supporting efforts to find cures for breast, prostate, and childhood cancers."

100% of customer donations go directly to one of these nonprofits. Flair Pickup and Delivery customers can email FlairCares@FlairCleaners.com or call Flair for information on ways to donate. Flair will match the total donations up to $5,000 for the campaign.

• National Breast Cancer Foundation - providing help and inspiring hope to those affected by breast cancer through early detection, education, and support services.

• ZERO - The End of Prostate Cancer - working to end prostate cancer, advance research, and improve the lives of men and their families.

• CURE Childhood Cancer - raising funds to advance research, lobby important legislation, and provide support to thousands of childhood cancer patients and their families.

For more information on Flair Cleaners, its community service or its green environmental practices and awards, visit FlairCleaners.com, follow us on Instagram, or like us on Facebook.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (OCTOBER 11)

Your cosmic birthday gift is superior risk assessment. Your accurate sense of what you can accept, surrender to and dwell in will have you doubling down on the very things that will repay you many times over in joy, money and more. Guided by your competitive spirit, a key victory will be yours before 2022. Cancer and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 33, 19, 40 and 1.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It's much easier to go the distance in comfortable shoes. This will be true figuratively and literally. Life is hard enough; your attire needn't be. What can you do to take the stress away?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Any problem requiring you to be more than you were is a gift. So, all problems are a gift. Even so, don't feel too bad if you look at today's problem and wonder if there's a way to regift it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Peer pressure will be subtle, powerful and omnipresent. This is the main reason you should spend as little time as possible with people who undervalue you. You wouldn't want to start thinking along those lines!

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll surprise yourself by being strong without any of the things you thought were making you strong -- proof of the untapped well of resources deep within you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Sometimes it's better to act than to waste time with the procedures and protocols. This is not one of those times. You really will need permission, and not just from one person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's your project, so you care the most. That's why everything needs to go through you. Be careful what you delegate. Put safety systems in play that ensure you get the final say.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It will feel as though you're working on what should have been finished a long time ago. Strike the "should" from your thoughts and suddenly you're just working, doing your diligent best in the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Stick with what you know and you just may be able to achieve flawless work, but you'll also be uninspired. It's the novel challenges that light you up. New territory equals new passion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Be careful about what you glamorized and who you raise up. You will become more like the entity on the pedestal, so be sure it's worthy of you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Any effort you make to share your projects will be favored by the fates. You won't know who your fans are until you put your work into the world.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). When you don't know who is on your side, first make sure you are on your own side, then amp up that support. Be your own advocate, and people will eventually join in.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). An idea seems to go against everything you thought before. Maybe you were wrong, or maybe there is more than one way to be right. Acceptance and flexibility of mind give you different options.
