TV Academy to consider expelling Harvey Weinstein

Associated Press

The Television Academy has voted to begin disciplinary proceedings against disgraced film mogul Harvey Weinstein.

The academy, which bestows the Emmy awards, said a hearing has been set for November to consider "action up to and including termination of academy membership."

Weinstein, who recently has been accused of multiple acts of sexual harassment and assault spanning decades, has been fired from The Weinstein Co., a TV and movie film production company he co-founded with his brother Bob. He has been expelled from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the Producers Guild and the British Academy of Film and Television Arts.

He is now facing criminal inquiries in three cities after an Italian actress told Los Angeles detectives the disgraced film mogul raped her in a hotel room in 2013.

Police confirmed Thursday they are looking into the woman's allegations, and her attorney said he would give additional details about them at a news conference outside a downtown Los Angeles courthouse on Friday afternoon.

The unidentified woman is an Italian model and actress, according to an announcement of attorney David M. Ring's press conference. In addition to talking to detectives, the woman and Ring spoke to the Los Angeles Times on Thursday, telling them Weinstein bullied his way into her hotel room, refused to leave and raped her.

Sallie Hofmeister, a representative for Weinstein, said in a statement that Weinstein "unequivocally denies allegations of non-consensual sex."

The Los Angeles investigation comes after announcements last week by police in New York and London that they are taking a new look at allegations involving the Oscar-winner. New York police are

California billionaire launches ads urging Trump impeachment

BY KATHLEEN RONAYNE
Associated Press

California billionaire Tom Steyer announced Friday that he will dump at least $10 million into a national television advertising campaign calling for President Donald Trump's impeachment.

In the ad, Steyer argues Trump should be ousted from office because he has edged the country toward nuclear war, obstructed justice at the FBI and threatened to shut down news organizations he does not like. He urges viewers to call their members of Congress and tell them to bring articles of impeachment.

"People in Congress and his own administration know this president is a clear and present danger who is mentally unstable and armed with nuclear weapons," Steyer says in the ad. "And they do nothing."

Steyer plans to spend eight figures to air the television ads nationally, but he would not give an exact amount. His investment comes as he considers running against U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein, a fellow Democrat, and as Democrats in Washington argue over whether efforts to impeach Trump are smart or worthwhile.

Plans move forward for former Jerry's Liquor store on Wilshire

PROPOSAL: Plans to redevelop the parcel at 2919 Wilshire were presented to officials this week.

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

After nearly a decade of detailed plans that ended up in the dumpster, the fate of the former Jerry's Liquor on Wilshire Blvd has nearly been sealed.

On Monday, The Architectural Review Board reviewed new plans at 2919 Wilshire Boulevard for a two-story building hosting a variety of restaurants and cafes, complete with 52 underground parking spaces. The building can house as many as eight different restaurants, according to a staff report by Rather Duong. The ARB asked the applicant to come back with better landscaping plans, but overall liked the design.

A mock-up of plans reveals large, open windows, two stories of outdoor seating and vines that twist along a gated patio. A large, square, bronze deck juts out of the second story, giving the building a modern, modular look. The massive design firm DLR Group is the architect behind the building. The signage concept has been designed by Beck & Graboski Design Office, the same firm responsible for the signage at the Santa Monica Public Library and Civic Center parking structure.

"The design is unique as it weaves in and out and use of open railings creates a pedestrian-oriented design," reads a staff report to the ARB by associate planner Gina Szilak. "The corner is designed at grade with the sidewalk, and the open railing with vines is a nice way to handle the grade change, providing an open feel. The outdoor dining activates the street on both Wilshire and Stanford elevation(s)."

A listing for the property boasts it is close to half a million people within a 5-mile radius and a daytime population of about 48,000 within one mile. The advertisement says it is an "ideal location for retail, restaurant, or finan-

Southern California gets brief rain but heat on the way

A weak cold front is bringing rain showers to parched Southern California but forecasters say there will be a quick turnabout as Santa Ana winds develop during the weekend, followed by possible record heat.

The National Weather Service says Friday morning's precipitation will be short-lived, with clouds clearing through the day.

The weather then turns gusty, dry and increasingly hot, with a significant warming trend Monday and Tuesday, and critical fire danger.

An excessive-heat watch will be in effect Monday morning to Tuesday evening. Temperatures are expected to be in excess of 100 degrees, with the highest readings on Tuesday.

On the Central Coast, forecasters are warning of 12- to 18-foot surf Friday, with some sets to 20 feet on northwest- and west-facing beaches.

16 charged in Southern California animal trafficking sweep

From a baby tiger cub to monitor lizards and a macaw, authorities have seized dozens of animals and filed charges against 16 people as part of what they say is the largest wildlife trafficking sweep in Southern California.

Federal authorities call the sweep "Operation Jungle Book."

Among the animals seized are king cobras, turtles, fish and a Bengal tiger cub that a California man said he bought on the streets of Tijuana, Mexico, for $300.

Luis Eudoro Valencia has pleaded not guilty to smuggling the kitten into the U.S. after border officials found the cub lying on the passenger-side floor of his car in August.

If convicted, Valencia faces up to 20 years in prison.

The cub now lives at the San Diego Zoo.

Dodgers expect Seager to be ready for World Series

Corey Seager is expected to be in the Los Angeles Dodgers' lineup for the opener of the World Series after missing the NL Championship Series because of back pain.

Seager, an All-Star shortstop, watched from home as the Dodgers eliminated the defending World Series champion Chicago Cubs in Game 5 on Thursday night.

Manager Dave Roberts says Seager is "doing everything he can to get healthy" and the Dodgers "expect him back for Game 1."

As anticipated, Clayton Kershaw will pitch the World Series opener against the Houston Astros or New York Yankees on Tuesday night. The three-time NL Cy Young Award winner held Chicago to a run over six innings on Thursday night and will pitch Game 1 on regular rest.

Bannon brings message of Republican revolt to California

BY MICHAEL R. BLOOD
Associated Press

Former White House adviser Steve Bannon wants to oust Republican senators he feels are disloyal to President Donald Trump. But when he comes to Southern California on Friday, he'll be in a state Trump lost by over 4 million votes and where Republicans have become largely irrelevant in state politics.

There wasn't even a Republican on the ballot in last November's U.S. Senate runoff — it was two Democrats. And in Orange County, where Bannon will be speaking, several Republican House members are trying to hold onto their seats in districts carried by Hillary Clinton in the 2016 presidential contest.

Bannon is scheduled to deliver a keynote speech at a state Republican convention in Anaheim, just days after leveling a blistering attack on Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell and other top Republicans at an Arizona fundraiser.

Protesters plan to gather outside the hotel where Bannon will speak. He's called for an "open revolt" against establishment Republicans, and is promoting a field of primary challengers to take on incumbent Republicans in Congress.

But in California, the GOP has been fading for years.

The state has become a kind of Republican mausoleum: GOP supporters can relive the glory days by visiting the stately presidential libraries of Ronald Reagan and Richard Nixon, but today Democrats control every statewide office and rule both chambers of the Legislature by commanding margins.

With the GOP relegated to the bleachers in Sacramento, Bannon's message is likely to receive a warm response from the conservative activists who tend to dominate at the GOP conclave.

"Steve Bannon is a natural fit for a party that is hungry for a revolution, and the party in California is definitely hungry for a revolution," former Orange County Republican leader Scott Baugh said.

Not all Republicans are glad to see Bannon. In a series of tweets last week, former state Assembly Republican leader Chad Mayes said he was shocked by the decision to have the conservative firebrand headline the event.

"It's a huge step backward and demonstrates that the party remains tone deaf," Mayes tweeted.

California Republicans have bickered for years over what direction to turn — toward the political center or to the right.

Most of the state's governors in the 20th century were Republicans, and state voters helped elevate a string of GOP presidential candidates to the White House. But the party's fortunes started to erode in the late 1990s after a series of measures targeting immigrants, which alienated growing segments of the state's population.

In 2007, then-Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger warned party members that the GOP was "dying at the box office" and needed to move to the political center and embrace issues like climate change to appeal to a broader range of voters. In 2011, a state Republican Party committee blocked an attempt by moderates to push the state GOP platform toward the center on immigration, abortion, guns and gay rights.

The decline continued. Republicans are now a minor party in many California congressional districts, outnumbered by Democrats and independents. Statewide, Democrats count 3.7 million more voters than the GOP.

U.S. Rep. Darrell Issa is among four GOP House members whose districts fall partly or completely within Orange County, once a Republican stronghold in Southern California but increasingly Democratic. All four are seen as targets as Democrats seek to regain a House majority.

Republicans retain about a 4-point registration edge in the county, but nearly 1-in-4 voters is aligned with no party, and those independents tend to vote like Democrats.

Political scientist Jack Pitney, who teaches at Claremont McKenna College, said he doubted the speech would color the 2018 congressional contests, which remain far off for most voters.

More broadly, he said Bannon's politics would hurt the GOP, including among affluent, well-educated voters who play an important part in county elections.

"Inviting him was a moral and political blunder," Pitney said in an email.

"If Democrats want to appease the far left and their liberal mega-donors by supporting a baseless, radical effort that the vast majority of Americans disagree with, then have at it," said Michael Ahrens, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee.

Republicans will focus on "issues voters actually care about," such as the economy and cutting taxes, he said.

The White House did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Steyer also said he will spend seven figures on an accompanying digital ad campaign.

An impeachment resolution brought last week by Democratic U.S. Rep. Al Green of Texas died before coming up for a vote. Green has vowed to try again.

But Democrats such as House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi of California think impeachment attempts are not worthwhile because they will fail in the Republican-led Congress and could energize GOP voters heading into the next election.

Steyer has poured his wealth into a variety of political efforts, mostly focused on stopping climate change.

FILM REVIEW

BREATHE

Released October 13

There are so many variables beyond our control in how our life will be lived. The film Breathe illustrates the great personal depths where we can find courage when it seems nothing more can be done. This is the true story of Robin Cavendish, who survived catastrophic illness to thrive in spite of devastating disabilities. Cavendish, through resourcefulness and perseverance in the face of almost insurmountable odds, and through the dedication those close to him, not only survived. He embraced life and spent years helping others with similar disabilities to lift the quality of their lives as well.

Cavendish's story is told in a simple straightforward way in this film. The story itself is the centerpiece. It's an old-fashioned biography and extraordinary love story. Cavendish at 28 was a handsome English tea broker and adventurer married to a beautiful British socialite. He had served for seven years in the British army. The couple had just given birth to a son. It was at this point that trajectory of his life changed profoundly and seemingly tragically.

Breathe tells the story of how, in spite of the changes to his reality, Cavendish is able to recapture the adventure of life that he so loved. He and his best friend, who was a professor at Oxford, invented and developed devices that would enrich the lives of severely disabled people.

Director Andy Serkis is better known to audiences as "Gollum" from the Lord of the Rings movies and as "Caesar" in the Planet of the Apes franchise - or for his skill as a musician, a writer or as an innovator in motion capture technology. Breathe is Serkis's first feature film as a director. He is an actor's director. That's what makes this film work, as the story is driven completely by the actors. Claire Foy (The Crown), who plays "Diana Cavendish" in the film, noted that Serkis' style as a director drew amazing performances from his cast. She also explained that she and star Andrew Garfield, who plays "Robin Cavendish," have different acting styles. Foy noted that she likes to research and study her character and then just to let herself become the character in the scene. Garfield is exacting in his preparation, with complete immersion into the soul of his role, staying in character on set even when he's not on camera. His was an extremely difficult role – all of his feelings had to be communicated through the face and eyes alone. Another notable performance is that of Tom Hollander who plays both twin brothers of Diana. The brothers appear in scenes together throughout the film and Hollander endows each with a unique personality.

Breathe is a testament to a band of friends and family who refused to back down in the face of incredible adversity. We may sometimes feel that we are alone in our existence. This movie is a story of how immense an effect we can have on each other's lives, in many ways. An important note before you see the film: pay close attention to the name of the producer on the end credits.

KATHRYN WHITNEY BOOLE has spent most of her life in the entertainment industry, which is the backdrop for remarkable adventures with extraordinary people. taking a fresh look for complaints involving Weinstein and the department has encouraged anyone who may have information about abuses by the producer to contact the department. London police are investigating allegations of sexual assault against him made by two women.

More than 40 women have accused Weinstein, 65, of harassment or abuse. Actresses Gwyneth Paltrow, Angelina Jolie and Lupita Nyong'o have all accused Weinstein of harassment, while actresses Asia Argento and Rose McGowan have accused the film mogul of raping them.

Nyong'o accused Weinstein of several incidents of harassment in an op-ed piece published by The New York Times on Thursday, including a 2011 incident in which she said the mogul tried to give her a massage at his Connecticut home. She refused, instead giving the mogul a massage and leaving when he said he wanted to take off his pants, Nyong'o wrote.

Also on Thursday, a group of about 30 staffers for The Weinstein Company stated in a letter published online by The New Yorker that they didn't know they were "working for a serial sexual predator."

The employees say they knew of Weinstein's "infamous temper" and that he could be "manipulative," but didn't know "that he used his power to systematically assault and silence women."

"We know that in writing this we are in open breach of the non-disclosure agreements in our contracts," the letter stated. "But our former boss is in open violation of his contract with us - the employees - to create a safe place for us to work.

Representatives for Weinstein and The Weinstein Company didn't immediately return a request for comment on the letter Friday.

The stories of harassment and abuse dating back decades has led to the total downfall of a producer who once ruled Hollywood's awards season with a string of contenders including "Shakespeare in Love," for which he shared an Oscar, and films such as "The King's Speech" and "Silver Linings Playbook."

Since The New York Times published its initial expose on Oct. 5, honors conferred on Weinstein by Harvard University and the British Film Institute have been rescinded, and several Democratic lawmakers have donated political contributions they received from Weinstein to charity.

Ring said in a statement Thursday that the breadth of accusations against Weinstein compelled his client to speak to police.

"My client is grateful to all the courageous women who have already come forward to finally expose Weinstein," Ring said. "These women may not have realized it, but they gave my client the support and encouragement to hold Weinstein accountable for this horrible act."

cial institutions."

If approved, it will mark the end of an eight-year saga over the future of the 1940's era property. In 2009, a developer planned to put apartments on the site, with a LEED Silver-rated, four story, mixed-use complex with 26 apartments and a grocery store. Strong opposition developed to the project after a draft Environmental Impact Report found no way to mitigate the traffic impact of an additional 644 daily car trips generated by the proposed apartments and store. The report found the resulting traffic impact "significant and unavoidable."

The project resurfaced again in 2012 as a five-story mixed-use property with 83 units. The application for a Development Agreement was eventually withdrawn. The land went up for sale once again.

Jerry's Liquor remained open despite the murky future. Last year it even sold a winning Powerball ticket worth $638,000 with five matching numbers (but no powerball). For decades, returning customers went to Sammy for their chosen vice, whether it be booze, cigars, ice cream or caviar. The store is now closed.

In 2016, Cadence Capital Investments bought the property for $10.5 million, or $470 a square foot, according to a report from The Real Deal. An attorney involved in the sale said the liquor store's expiring lease drove up the price – calling the final bid price "aggressive."

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Medical History

■ This week in 1890, President Benjamin Harrison signed the first U.S. law requiring inspection of meat products, specifically export shipments of salted pork and bacon and imported cattle, foods and drinks. The act was prompted by European nations banning American meat exports due to fear the products were infected with trichinosis. Those nations removed the restrictions the next year.

Medical Myths

■ The myth that people use only 10 percent of their brains has a long history. It's been bandied about for at least a century. Modern imaging studies, however, show that no area of the brain is completely silent or inactive. Next on the list of things to study: Whether some people use even 10 percent of their brains.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 21)

You're onto something totally inspired. Just remember that "almost there" isn't "there." Keep going until you reach the goal, even if it takes the entire solar return. Your loved ones will build their lives on the rock of your steadfast care and attention. Because people trust you, you'll be promoted and well-paid. Capricorn and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 27, 31, 28, 50 and 11.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
The hand you were dealt is but one of many factors that are influencing the game, some of which you can control, most of which you can't. So you'll dive into all that's within your control and play daringly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
There are reasons to root for the underdog, choose the road less traveled or quest for impossible outcomes. Sometimes those reasons are good enough, but today not so much. Take on the battle you know you can win.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
If you don't feel like making an effort to reach out, fit in, deliver the goods, etc., well, that's telling you something, too. Maybe this situation is no longer for you, if it ever was.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You don't have to be merciless about getting your way. But if you're going to be relentless at anything, be relentlessly charming. Why force anyone's hand when you can cast a spell on it instead?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
That kindly baby sitter called time, which is supposed to keep everything from happening all at once, does not seem to be doing her job. It's like she's checked into her phone and suddenly it's a free-for-all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
As is usually the case, much can be accomplished through hard work and continuous improvement. It does take a long time, and it's not the most exciting way, but it's the best way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
There's always a way to look at life that is cause for alarm. And there's always another way of finding the sweetness and charm in it. You do the latter, and you're so attractive because of this that you won't know whom to choose.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
You were uncertain, and now you're an expert. You were new in the group, and now you're a leader. You were filled with nervous anticipation, and now it's old hat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
There are those who will go out of the way to tell you what you didn't ask to know. They're not to be believed, and in fact the truth is probably the opposite of what they say. Of course you know this. It's not your first rodeo.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Question traditional gender roles and other aspects of life in which you could be automatically playing out the script. There's a danger in slavishly following the way things have always been done.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Pay attention to what the others don't understand and subsequently ignore or cast off. With your creativity you can easily make something glorious out of the items, jobs and relationships that others can't value.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
You keep putting your feelers into the situation and coming out with the same information: You're here because it worked once. But don't be afraid to reach out and explore other situations that could work even better.

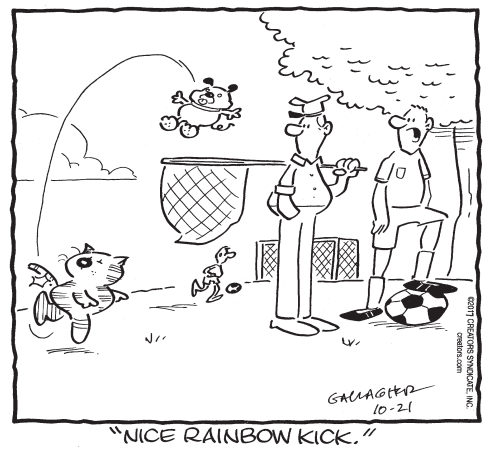

Libra Sun's Last Day

Once the flower opens completely, it immediately begins moving to the next phase. The petals wither; the fruit forms; the fruit falls. Knowing this, there is no reason to rush to the new stage. Let life unfold for you slowly. The sun is about to change stations. There won't be a day exactly like this. Savor each part of the cycle.
