Fresh Finds: A Chef Goes to Market

TATIANA BLACKINGTON JAMES
Special to the Daily Press

Tatiana Blackington James

CHEF: One of only a handful of chefs ever awarded four stars in the Los Angeles Times, Alain Giraud now cooks privately. He also offers cooking classes and tours of the farmers markets.

The Wednesday Santa Monica Farmers Market has no shortage of personalities: the lavender man urging you to "treat yourself, girlfriend;" Tomas, the smiling purveyor of Lily's Eggs and lavish compliments; at the entrance, the shy, bearded busker playing jazz melodies for all.

Visit weekly and you start to notice the regular customers as well. Many are chefs for whom no supplier can replace the experience of market day, and they usually cluster around the most enthusiastic denizen of all, chef Alain Giraud. On a recent sunny morning, the congenial Frenchman was sourcing ingredients for a private dinner.

"I was looking for the garnish for my veal and I found zucchini flowers. It's almost the peak of the season and I think they'll be fantastic," he said excitedly.

Other items he'd come looking for – leeks for a scallop dish and Cara Cara oranges for a chocolate dessert – were nowhere to be found, but Giraud didn't sound disappointed.

"I've been doing this market for 30 years and it's a mix of seeing beautiful people and enjoying the season. It's good to have the limitation. You have to substitute what's the best. Two weeks ago it was tomatoes everywhere but now you feel the switch of the seasons with the squashes."

Giraud's daughter is a vegetarian, and when she visits, squash is one of his go-to ingredients. "We sauté. We do a vegan soup with coconut milk and Indian spice."

It's safe to say that 20 years ago, a classical French chef touting a vegan squash soup was rarer than Cara Caras, but Giraud, never a snob, has always kept up with the times. A veteran of haute cuisine (Bastide), he had no problem opening a brasserie that served French fries (Anisette). Before it was mowed down by Rick Caruso's Palisades Village mall, his eponymous restaurant (Maison Giraud) was an all-day joint that served simple pleasures from croissants to charcuterie. Now he cooks privately and seems perfectly happy doing it.

More blackouts possible as fire danger looms in California

BY CHRISTOPHER WEBER
Associated Press

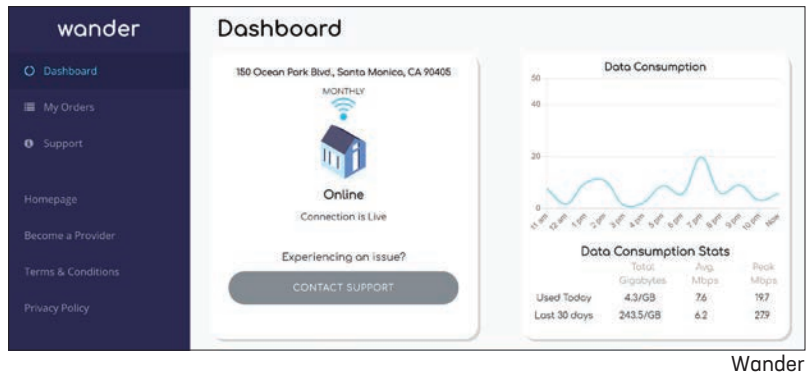

Less than two weeks after blacking out much of Northern California, the state's largest utility warned that dangerous fire weather could prompt another power shut-off to about a half-million people.

Pacific Gas & Electric notified customers that it could begin precautionary shut-offs to parts of 16 counties as soon as Wednesday, mostly in the Sierra foothills and north of the San Francisco Bay Area.

Blackouts would last at least 48

WANDER: A startup will offer internet at half the price of competitors.

MADELEINE PAUKER

Santa Monica will be the first city to get Wander, a startup that aims to undercut behemoth internet companies with reliable internet service at $25 per month.

Starting Wednesday, Wander will offer households from Ocean Avenue to 26th Street an alternative to Spectrum and Frontier, the main internet service providers in Santa Monica. The startup has installed infrastructure in several apartment buildings in the area that will rebroadcast internet to about 20,000 potential subscribers, said co-founder and CEO David Fields.

LA County wins $134 million lead paint settlement, will use funding to remove lead from 4,000 homes

On Tuesday, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved a motion by Chair Janice Hahn and Supervisor Kathryn Barger to use a recent $134 million settlement to remove lead paint from thousands of homes in LA County, thus protecting children now and for generations to come from toxic lead poisoning.

In 2018, the County of Los Angeles and nine other local public entities won a landmark legal victory against three former manufacturers of lead paint. After 19 years of litigation, the Court found that these companies created an ongoing public nuisance by advertising lead paint use in homes while having knowledge of the toxic hazard to human health. Of the $305 million settlement, the County of Los Angeles will receive $134 million.

"Children are still being poisoned by the lead paint these companies profited off of for decades," said Supervisor Janice Hahn, who authored the motion. "I applaud the aggressive efforts of our litigation team in their pursuit of environmental justice. We are going to put this funding to work removing lead paint from thousands of homes in LA County so that we can protect children now and for generations to come from lead poisoning."

The Board of Supervisors voted today to use the $134 million settlement to create and fund a new and comprehensive Lead Paint Hazard Mitigation Program in partnership with the LA County Department of Public Health and the Los Angeles County Development Authority. Over the next eight years, this program will allow for the removal of lead paint from an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 homes.

The program will target residential properties built before 1951, in low-income communities with a high prevalence of children under the age of six. Services will be completely free to those who qualify and will include testing for and remediation of lead paint hazards in both indoor and outdoor surfaces of homes. The program will also provide resources and education on lead hazards and how to prevent childhood lead poisoning.

"All of our children deserve to live in homes and communities that are free from environmental hazards," said Barbara Ferrer, PhD, MPH, MEd, Director of the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health. "The proposed program is critically needed to ensure that low-income families with young children can live in housing free from lead paint hazards."

"We are pleased to partner with the Department of Public Health to address lead hazards in older homes and provide solutions to protect our most vulnerable residents for generations to come," said Monique Viehland-King, Executive Director of the LACDA.

Lead paint is the most significant environmental hazard for children in Los Angeles County and in California. Lead is a neurotoxin and exposure of children to lead can cause severe and permanent damage to the developing brain, including learning disabilities, deficits in attention and concentration, memory, comprehension, and impulse control. Even though lead paint was banned in the United States in 1978, nearly 3,000 children are still diagnosed with lead poisoning each year in Los Angeles County.

Landlord to pay $120,000 fine for renting affordable housing at market rate

Santa Monica landlord, Marble One, LLC, has agreed to a judgment and court injunction under which it will pay $120,000 to the City of Santa Monica and hire a third-party property manager after the City Attorney's Office threatened legal action for failure to abide by the terms of a deed restriction protecting the unit for affordable housing.

In City of Santa Monica vs. Marble One, LLC, Los Angeles Superior Court Case No. 19SMCV01540, the Consumer Protection Division of the City Attorney's Office alleged that Marble One, LLC rented a deed-restricted unit to an ineligible tenant and collected monthly rent above the amount allowed. After an investigation and referral from the City's Housing Division, the City Attorney's Office made known its intent to litigate to enforce the deed restriction. The parties then negotiated an agreement which includes a stipulated injunction and judgment against the defendants by Superior Court Judge Elaine Mandel.

Pursuant to the judgment, Marble One, LLC must pay the City $120,000 in damages and fees. This sum represents approximately double the excess rent alleged to be collected by Marble One, LLC during the unlawful tenancy. Judge Mandel also ordered the defendants, who denied liability, to hire a City-approved third party to manage the unit. Future violations of any income restriction or related law or administrative rule will subject Marble One, LLC, to a minimum penalty of $10,000 per violation.

"These two allegations—renting to a tenant who is over-income and then charging more than the rent cap allows—are the two most common types of owner violations in these cases," said Deputy City Attorney Gary Rhoades. "In nearly all of the City's income-restricted units, these acts would be violations of both the deed restriction recorded against the property and the City's Affordable Housing Production Program Ordinance."

The City Attorney's Office said that this result appears to be the first judgment and injunction in California, stipulated or otherwise, in a suit brought to enforce the terms of deed-restricted affordable rental housing. (There have been past results in cases involving low-income homeowners.)

"This lawsuit and judgment protect the City's investment in affordable housing," said City Attorney Lane Dilg. "The City has secured income-restrictions on over 1,000 rental units and we will fight to preserve each and every one for the low-income tenants they were intended to house."

The money paid by Marble One, LLC will go to the Housing Trust Fund to fund future affordable housing.

The City of Santa Monica intends to prepare a Recirculated Environmental Impact Report/ Environmental Assessment (REIR/EA) for the Santa Monica Pier Bridge Replacement Project. In accordance with Section 15082 of the State CEQA Guidelines, the City of Santa Monica has prepared this Notice of Preparation to provide Responsible Agencies and other interested parties with information describing the project and its potential environmental effects. Potential environmental effects to be analyzed in the REIR/EA include but are not limited to: Aesthetics, Air Quality, Construction Effects, Cultural Resources, Economic/Social Impacts, Geology/Soils, Greenhouse Gas Emissions, Hazards/Hazardous Materials, Hydrology/Water Quality, Land Use/Planning, Noise, Public Services, Recreation, Transportation/Circulation, Utilities/Service Systems, Tribal Resources, and Mandatory Findings of Significance.

PROJECT APPLICANT: City of Santa Monica
PROJECT LOCATION: The project site is located in the western portion of Los Angeles County, in the City of Santa Monica, beginning at the intersection of Ocean Avenue and Colorado Avenue and extending west to the Santa Monica Pier.
PROJECT DESCRIPTION: The Pier Bridge was constructed in 1939 and is near the end of its useful life, with a sufficiency rating of 17 out of a possible 100. The project would entail demolition of the existing Pier Bridge structure and replacement with a new structure constructed to current seismic standards. Eight build alternatives are collectively under consideration and are presented in pairs (Alternatives 1 & 2; 3 & 4, etc.). For these alternatives, the basic design parameters are the same, with the differences being primarily related to the north-south placement of the various paths for access by vehicles, bicycles, pedestrians and those with limited mobility. Among the eight alternatives under consideration, Alternative 4 has been identified as the "locally preferred alternative" and is therefore, for purposes of the REIR/EA, designated as "the Project." The project location map, project description and summary of alternatives are contained on the following website: www.smgov.net/smpierbridge. Upon completion of the review process for the REIR/EA and in consideration of the comments received during the public circulation of the draft REIR/EA, a final determination to either adopt the Project (Alternative 4) or select another among the remaining alternatives, will be made.

REVIEW PERIOD: As specified by the State CEQA Guidelines, the Notice of Preparation (NOP) will be circulated for a minimum 30-day public review period through November 26, 2019. The full NOP can be found online at the website referenced above. The City welcomes agency and public input during this period regarding the scope and content of environmental information that must be included in the REIR/EA. Comments may be submitted, in writing, by 5:30 p.m. on November 26, 2019 and addressed to:

Rotary Club works to eradicate polio worldwide

Oct. 24 is World Polio Day! Rotary Club of Santa Monica works with Rotary International's campaign to eradicate polio around the world. There is no cure for polio, but the virus can be stamped out through regular doses of an oral vaccine. The only three countries where polio still has a presence are Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Nigeria.

The virus was thought to have been eliminated in Nigeria, but there was an outbreak in 2016. However, no new cases have been reported since, and Nigeria is now on track to be certified polio-free in 2020.

Polio is making a troubling comeback in Pakistan due to an anti-vaccination movement that has turned political. Two years after health officials declared that they were on the verge of eradicating polio from Pakistan, one of the last countries where it remains an endemic, at least 58 children tested positive for the virus since January of this year. This is a major setback for a $1-billion-a-year global eradication campaign that is spearheaded by Rotary Campaign. Three-quarters of the new polio cases have been found in the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province and the adjacent tribal belt along the border of Afghanistan. These are the only two countries where the disease continues to infect children. Afghanistan has reported 13 cases this year. The low transmission season is in November and December, this is when most rounds of vaccinations are performed.

Rotary International leads the PolioPlus Campaign, and they are doing so much more than eradicating polio. The "plus" is something else that is provided as a part of the polio eradication campaign. It might be a hand-operated tricycle for someone who has already been paralyzed by polio or access to water. It might be additional medical treatment, bed nets, or soap. A 2010 study estimates that vitamin A drops given to children at the same time as the polio vaccine have prevented 1.25 million deaths by decreasing susceptibility to infectious diseases. The Global Polio Eradication Initiative (GPEI), of which Rotary is a spearheading partner, funds 91% of all immunization staff in the World Health Organization's Africa region. The polio surveillance system is not only used to detect new cases of polio and determine where and how they originated, it is also used to find people with symptoms of yellow fever and Ebola. Using this technology, 8 million people were vaccinated during a yellow fever outbreak in 2018 and Ebola was contained to 19 reported cases during the 2014 outbreak. In Borno, Nigeria, malaria kills more people than all other diseases combined. To prevent its spread, insecticide-treated bed nets are distributed for free during polio immunization events.

Rotarians' contributions to PolioPlus help fund planning by technical experts, large-scale communication efforts to make people aware of the benefits of vaccinations, and support for volunteers who go door to door. Volunteer community mobilizers area a critical part of vaccination campaigns in Nigeria's hardest-to-reach communities. They are trained by UNICEF, one of Rotary's partners in the GPEI, and then deployed in the community.

Addressing a critical long-term need such as access to clean water helps build relationships and trust with community members. Rotary and its partners funded 31 solar-powered boreholes to provide clean water in Northern Nigeria, and the effort is ongoing. Supplying clean water to vulnerable communities is a priority of the PolioPlus program not only in Nigeria, but also in Afghanistan and Pakistan- the only other remaining polio-endemic nations. The polio virus spreads through human waste, so making sure people aren't drinking or bathing in contaminated water is critical to eradicating the disease. Installing the boreholes has also helped prevent the spread of cholera and other diseases. Communities with a reliable source of clean water enjoy a reduced rate of disease and a better quality of life. Rotary's Nigeria PolioPlus Committee recently ordered 150 hand-operated tricycles from Musa Maaji, a disabled polio survivor.

PolioPlus is creating jobs in addition to their mission of eradicating disease. The GPEI also provide jobs that are uniquely suited to polio survivors: educating others about the effects of the disease by taking part in the door-to-door polio vaccination campaigns. UNICEF data shows that polio survivors have a remarkable success rate persuading reluctant parents to vaccinate their children- on average, survivors convince seven of every ten parents they talk to. In places where misinformation and rumors have left people hesitant to vaccinate, such is the case in Pakistan, the survivors' role in the final phase of the eradication effort is critical.

Eighteen million people around the world who would have died or been paralyzed are alive and walking because of the polio eradication campaign. PolioPlus is more than eradicating a deadly disease from the planet- it's also building a stronger health system that provides better access to lifesaving interventions for the world's most vulnerable children.

The polio eradication campaign needs your help to reach every child. Thanks to the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, your contribution will be tripled. To donate, visit endpolio.org/donate.

THE GOOD, THE BAD AND THE UGLY

Holy cliche, Batman! How many times have lazy, lousy, lame writers used that crutch phrase? (1,000,000.) (+1, now.) But sometimes, it just fits the bill.

I hadn't sat through a full school board meeting for a while. Not that I don't follow closely what they do, who votes for what and what they said, and what sources tell me they say outside the room. But let's be honest, no one shows up and stays up, sometimes past midnight, unless they're a reporter or their ox is about to be gored.

They were considering goring the much-loved and supported iconic, environmental 41-year-old Muir Woods mural painted on two sides of the Olympic High School building at the very busy intersection of Lincoln and Ocean Park. The original agenda item would have immediately destroyed it, no alternative, no discussion.

Note: many people don't differentiate, but SMMUSD is our school district (teachers, administrators, staff), and the school board is seven elected officials charged with making our schools the best they can be, with authority to make and enforce rules and procedures for SMMUSD.

Jane Golden

MUIR WOODS: Artists paint the John Muir mural in 1978.

THE GOOD

The revised agenda item was better than that mean-spirited, furtive first one. But the end result would be the same: paint it over for a blank wall featuring the new Obama school banner, remaining art to be determined later. The revised agenda at least gave us a chance to be heard (if only for 1-3 minutes each, not much after 5-½ years of waiting).

The board had a long back and forth on this one, finally acknowledging that the mural had become part of the community and a final decision had to include community input, thus far lacking. I was delighted at how fair, open and positive the discussion seemed. They finally voted unanimously to replace that execution order, with a stay.

SITTING THROUGH ALL THE OTHER BUSINESS

I was reminded that the school board deals with a lot of complex and technical information, for decisions important to our city. You have to be current on things like educational philosophies, building design and construction, political realities, legal ramifications, finance and budgets, social and urban trends and much more.

I salute them! It's a challenge and responsibility most people would not take on. The time put in away from the bi-monthly board meetings must be prodigious, not to mention service on committees and all the political and social obligations. It's a full-time job (on top of their regular jobs), for which they get paid very little.

Everything coming from SMMUSD seems slanted toward putting something else on that wall, something "new," "different," something "more modern," "for the students," something "representing climate crisis, but ... different." Check my recent columns for rebuttals to all that.

It is only recently that the issue of lead paint was raised. Residents have asked for documentation but it was denied until after the meeting. For years we were told by school officials that the wall itself had deteriorated and had to be replaced. There was $62,000 line-itemed from Bond BB for that purpose, but ... it disappeared.

OK, we said, we'll rebuild the wall and then repaint the cherished, important mural just as it was. Then we were told very recently that lead paint was peeling from the mural and falling into the soil and merciful heavens going straight into our Pacific Ocean. A few weeks ago someone at SMMUSD ordered the peeling paint scraped off — so now a mural already deteriorating because of 41 years of neglect by SMMUSD looks even worse. "An eyesore," it's been called. Well, yeah, now.

Then they sealed it in a clear coating to "prevent further contamination." So why wasn't it just sealed, rather than scraped? I can tell you, I knew where all the peeling paint was and the areas scraped are much, much more extensive.

And — recently we were told by an SMMUSD official that the lead is not in the mural paint but in the coat of paint below it. When something doesn't make sense to me,

WANDER

Fields said he started Wander because he was frustrated that most parts of the United States have only a few ISPs to choose from. The Federal Communications Commission's repeal of net neutrality — which required ISPs to offer equal access to all web content — gave ISPs even more power over the market, he said.

Startups like Wander that offer cheaper, more transparent service have recently become possible because of advances in wireless technology and the growing popularity of cord-cutting, Fields said.

"There's fiber infrastructure in almost every city, but connecting it to homes has been the expensive part and has led to monopoly players in most markets," he said. "Now, wireless has really reached a tipping point where you can push gigabit speeds over the air for a fraction of the cost."

But Wander will prioritize service over speed, Fields said, citing recent studies from Princeton and the University of Chicago that show that most households don't need nearly as many megabits per second as internet service providers say they do.

Spectrum starts at 100 mbps for about $50 per month and Frontier starts at 6 mbps for about $30 per month. The startup Starry also launched in Santa Monica last December, offering speeds of 200 mbps for $50 per month.

The average household uses less than 15 mbps during peak hours, Fields said.

"Speed is something that we see the ISPs pushing so they can justify ever-escalating prices," he said.

Wander offers 50 mbps and subscribers will be able to monitor how much data they use, Fields said. The company also uses software to anticipate and resolve performance issues and provides real-time information on network connectivity. He said he believes Wander is the first ISP to build that level of transparency into its service.

"If my network is down at home and I turn the router off and on again and it's still down, my two options are to call my ISP and wait on hold for two hours, or check with my neighbors in person or on social media," he said. "On our dashboard, you can see if the network is experiencing an issue and there are ETAs for your service to get back up."

Fields said the company chose Santa Monica for its initial launch after testing the service in Van Nuys because the city has lots of cord-cutters and the right density for its wireless network. It plans to expand to similar markets in the coming months, he said.

"We're using data to inform where we go with our service, looking at demographics and cord-cutting trends," he said. "We also put on our website a way for consumers to demand internet in their area — we want to go where consumers feel there's a lack of choice and affordability."

BLACKOUTS

hours, the utility said.

The utility is concerned that winds forecast to hit 60 mph (97 kph) could throw branches and debris into power lines or topple them, sparking wildfires.

PG&E equipment has been blamed for igniting several of California's deadliest and most destructive fires in recent years. The utility, facing billions of dollars in potential claims, was forced into bankruptcy.

However, CEO Bill Johnson said shutdowns are about safety, not money.

"The sole intent is to prevent a catastrophic wildfire," he said.

A huge portion of California is under high fire risk amid unpredictable gusts and soaring temperatures.

In San Bernardino County, east of Los Angeles, three homes were heavily damaged, and six others received minor to moderate damage Monday evening from wind-whipped flames

A family of two adults and two children was treated for smoke inhalation and minor burns suffered during an evacuation. Two firefighters were treated and released from hospitals.

Earlier in the day Los Angeles firefighters beat back a blaze as it raced up canyon walls toward more than 300 multimillion-dollar ocean-view homes on a coastal ridge. None were seriously damaged or destroyed.

Firefighters were on the lookout for hotspots in anticipation of Santa Ana winds predicted to begin Wednesday night.

"This could be one of our most critical weeks of the fall season for fire weather due to very warm temperatures and bouts of Santa Ana winds," the National Weather Service said in a statement.

Southern California Edison, which had warned of possible outages at any time, announced Monday evening that none would take place in the next 48 hours but warned that it was monitoring the weather.

"Weather conditions might be different for Thursday," and in that case, notification would be given Tuesday, Edison spokeswoman Sally Jeun said.

PG&E's phone, text and email warnings to 200,000 homes and businesses came about 10 days after more than 2 million people had their lights turned off by the utility in response to powerful winds.

Johnson promised that if blackouts are necessary, the utility will work to do better at communicating with customers and avoid the chaos of the previous shut-off, when the utility only gave about 10 hours' warning to customers. Its website crashed, maps were inconsistent, and call centers were overloaded.

Panicked residents stood in long lines at supermarkets, hardware stores and gas stations, rushing to buy ice, coolers, flashlights, batteries and gas for their cars.

California Gov. Gavin Newsom and others blasted PG&E for the unprecedented size of the blackout and the communication problems.

Andy Vesey, a PG&E executive, has said the utility underestimated the needs of its customers and local governments.

FAA allows aviation funds to be used for SMO pavement removal

On Monday, the Federal Aviation Administration issued a decision confirming that aviation funds may be used to pay for the removal of excess pavements at Santa Monica Airport that are no longer needed for aircraft operations. The determination was made in response to a complaint filed jointly by National Business Aviation Association, Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, and General Aviation Manufacturers Association vs. City of Santa Monica. In their complaint the aviation groups challenged the use of airport funds for the runway shortening project completed in December 2017 as well as the Excess Pavement Removal Project, which is scheduled to be completed by November 8, 2019.

"This is good news that comes as we complete the removal of the excess pavement and hydroseed the areas that are no longer needed for the safe operation of aircraft to our now shortened runway," said Mayor Gleam Davis. "The FAA determination clearly states that we are working in accordance with the Consent Decree and FAA rules, and the shortened runway ensures safe and proper aviation use until the airport closes in 2029."

The FAA's determination states that the "removal of the subject pavements, pavement pulverization and reuse, and the soil stabilization at SMO appear justified as an airport operating cost." It also includes that "SMO met all applicable standards prior to the pavement removal and the airfield remains compliant with all applicable standards following completion of the project."

The aviation groups filed the complaint on February 6, 2019. For more information, visit https://www.smgov.net/departments/airport/content.aspx?id=53687094979.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (OCTOBER 23)

It's not what but who you have in your life that matters -- an idea often reinforced this year as you make material and financial gain and share it generously. The joy of the sharing far outweighs the thrill of acquisition. Also this year, you'll proudly make a difference in the lives of strangers and animals, and in the health of the planet. Leo and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 6, 32, 10 and 27.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You disapprove of unnecessary drama and would prefer to remain unflappable, the sort that doesn't succumb to pressure, embarrass easily or betray oneself. To stay calmly on your own side is a mark of superior character.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You'll tie a number of loose ends and make some final decisions. Leave nothing for tomorrow. Either you'll handle it now or you'll decide it's not worth your attention after all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). If you give way to the first request, yield to the second and so on, it gets almost impossible to draw the line. You're better off being a challenge upfront. It sets a precedent and gives you more power later when you need it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). "Festina lente" is the classical Greek adage symbolized by a dolphin cuddling a boat anchor. The translation of this Latin is "make haste slowly," an oxymoron you'll master today as you move with thoughtful precision.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The honeybee can make life sweetly pleasurable with honey or sharply painful with a poisonous sting. With bees and people, much depends on your awareness and approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). To make a desired impression, you first must be sure you're present in that moment. You'll do this with your advanced awareness of timing and your ability to adjust your internal clock to another person's pacing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Physical strength varies with age and other circumstances. Moral strength is far less vulnerable to the influence of time, can be continually developed at every point of life and always matters more in the end.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). If you can't get yourself to comply with your own directives, try taking on the responsibility of leading others. Social expectation is a strong motivational factor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). When you think about the icons of cool in the movies, they are people who don't seem to be in any kind of hurry. You're like such an icon today as you let time do its work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Long talks are bonding if you have the time but can feel like a trap if you don't. Set a 50-minute limit. Most of what needs to be said will be expressed, and if it's not enough, you can always come back later for more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You love in different ways depending on what's needed and what you think you can give. You don't always need to pick the other person up emotionally in order to be helpful. Sometimes it's better to lie low and listen.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). What started as an interesting group of strangers is now becoming more of a unified group of like-minded people, maybe even a loose group of friends. Keep attending. This is just starting to get good.

Scorpio Solar Journey Start Date

The sun takes on a new intensity of purpose on this day, the start of the Scorpio solar sojourn. Scorpio energy swirls around the kind of topics one might avoid in polite conversation. Then again, there wouldn't be a context for polite conversation if not for the energies that Scorpio rules -- life, death, regeneration... so, basically, all of existence.

ENTER THE SOLAR SEASON OF SCORPIO

Scorpio energy is often misunderstood. As the sign of death and regeneration and a highly capable sign, the handling of serious matters can be a mundane task. The phrase associated with Scorpio is "I desire." And while this is a fitting statement for a sign that's about knowing very clearly what to want, I think Scorpio energy also says, "Whatever it is, bring it on. I can handle it," in the way a seasoned doctor is no longer phased by the internal workings of the human body. The fearlessness comes from experience and an unequivocal acceptance of reality. Scorpio energy is often described as being intense and passionate, and yet there is nothing too big and outrageous about the way this energy operates. When we embrace honesty and seek the truth, the ensuing action resonates with a high level of intensity. When we are not impeded by falsehood or defrayed by having to please anyone, the magnetism gets turned up. That's what Scorpio transits are all about -- helping us face and accept the bare-bones truth.

COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND

At age 14, Ryan Reynolds landed his first movie, which happened to be filmed in Sri Lanka. Three months in the war-torn country without his parents instilled courage and self-reliance in this intuitive Scorpio. Reynolds has traveled extensively and expressed his love of new places -- no surprise, as his natal Venus and dreamy Neptune are both in the sign of travel: Sagittarius. Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.

FRESH FINDS

an idea. "I'm making a smoked salmon gravlax tonight. Maybe I'll buy one as a garnish, season it with vinegar or yuzu and salt. It's visually exciting."

The Harry's Berries strawberries had already sold out, which came as no surprise. In October, the harvest starts shrinking and the fruit is tarter. Chefs are notoriously cost conscious, but Giraud says Harry's are worth the steep price, more than double what he pays for ordinary varieties. "They have a lot of integrity the way they grow them. Next week I have a client that is dreaming about them."

In the kitchen, Giraud moves fast, but Wednesday mornings are a leisurely affair. Sometimes he stops for coffee with other chefs. He knows the farmers by name and greets them warmly.

"I'm going to see my friend, Peter (Peter Schaner of Schaner Farms), for the citrus. He's so nice. I buy all my orange juice from him. Et voilà Camille!" he said, spotting his daughter strolling with a friend.

In addition to visiting Peter, there was the matter of a basil corn velouté to source, but Giraud stopped to chat with the girls. Camille was in town on a rare break from medical school, and the chef's modus vivendi is the same as his market strategy: always savor the moment.

Santa Monica has four weekly farmers markets including the Wednesday Downtown market on Arizona Avenue between 4th and Ocean from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., the Saturday Downtown market on Arizona Avenue between 4th and 2nd Streets from 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., the Saturday Virginia Ave. Park market at 2200 Virginia Avenue from 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., and the Sunday Main Street market at 2640 Main Street from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

CURIOUS CITY

I figure somebody's got an agenda and they are making up silly stuff in place of the facts they are hiding.

BAD PHONE CALL

After our Save committee agreed some years ago to a two month mediation process with reps from Olympic High School, which resolved nothing because we were not willing to cut the baby in half, both sides agreed not to contact the original muralist Jane Golden, who now leads a massive mural program for the city of Philadelphia. She told us at that time that she loved that mural and would love to come out to help restore it and wrote a letter to that effect, but then she got conflicting communications from SMMUSD reps and, understandably, said I don't want to be in the middle of some controversy, you folks settle it.

We have kept to that agreement but a Board member recently called her, on his own. That phone call was improper and we hope going forward that the public opinion process for repainting that wall will indeed be open and transparent, fair and unbiased.

THE UGLY?

Am I paranoid or prescient? Why do I suspect the wheels are turning to unfairly load the "public input" toward axing Muir Woods?

Charles Andrews has lived in Santa Monica for 33 years and wouldn't live anywhere else in the world. Really. Send love and/or rebuke to him at therealmrmusic@gmail.com
