HALLOWEEN: Esters Wine Shop & Bar will host its first Halloween celebration Thursday.

BRENNON DIXSON
SMDP Staff Writer

With Halloween falling on a Thursday this year, many parents may opt to enjoy some spooktacular fun on the weekend instead of a busy workday.

To help make sense of the dozens of local parties, parades and bashes occurring in the coming week, the Santa Monica Daily Press has compiled a roundup of events to help you decide on the right activity for your loved ones.

MAIN STREET'S HOWL-O-WEEN

Monsters and their furry friends are welcomed to participate in a free costume contest for pets at Main Street's 4th Annual Howl-O-Ween event. This year's celebration will also feature local vendors, a scavenger hunt, pumpkin decorating, food trucks and pet-friendly exhibitors. Guests can pick up clues for the event's first-ever scavenger hunt or register their pet for the parade beginning at 3 p.m. Sunday. Mutts will then have the opportunity to win a cash prize while they strut their stuff in front of hundreds of spectators during the pet parade and costume contest occurring from 5-6 p.m. The event will be held at Pacific Street Dog Park, which is located three blocks south of Pico Boulevard at 2100 Main St. in Santa Monica.

California utility admits it may have ignited fire

BY ROBERT JABLON AND JOCELYN GECKER
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California's biggest utility admitted its electrical equipment may have ignited a destructive wildfire spreading through the state's wine country Friday, despite blackouts imposed across the region to prevent blazes.

The disclosure came as firefighters simultaneously battled flames in both Northern and Southern California: the fire amid Sonoma County's vineyards, and a wind-whipped blaze that destroyed homes near Los Angeles.

Facebook launches a news section – and will pay publishers

BY BARBARA ORTUTAY AND TALI ARBEL
AP Technology Writers

Over the course of its 15 year history, Facebook has variously ignored news organizations while eating their advertising revenue, courted them for video projects it subsequently abandoned, and then largely cut their stories out of its newsfeeds .

Now it plans to pay them for news headlines — reportedly millions of dollars in some cases.

Enter the "News Tab," a new section in the Facebook mobile app that will display headlines — and nothing else — from the Wall Street Journal, the Washington Post, BuzzFeed News, Business Insider, NBC, USA Today and the Los Angeles Times, among others. Local stories from several of the largest U.S. cities will also make the grade; headlines from smaller towns are on their way, Facebook says.

Tapping on those headlines will take you directly to publisher websites or apps, if you have any installed. Which is one thing publishers have been requesting from Facebook's news efforts for years.

It's potentially a big step for a platform that has long struggled with both stamping out misinformation and making nice with struggling purveyors of news. Though media watchers remain skeptical that Facebook is really committed to helping sustain the news industry.

Facebook declined to say who is getting paid and how much, saying only that it will be paying "a range of publishers for access to all of their content." Just last year, CEO Mark Zuckerberg said he wasn't sure it "makes sense " to pay news outlets for their material.

But now, as Zuckerberg told The Associated Press in an interview, "there's an opportunity to set up new long term, stable financial relationships with publishers."

The Associated Press is not participating in the initiative.

News executives have long been unhappy about the extent to which digital giants like Facebook make use of their stories — mostly by displaying headlines and short summaries when users post news links. A bipartisan bill introduced in Congress this year would grant an antitrust exemption to news companies, letting them band together to negotiate payments from the big tech platforms.

"It's a good direction that they're willing for the first time to value and pay for news content," said David Chavern, head of the News Media Alliance, a publisher trade group. "The trouble is that most publishers aren't included."

Zuckerberg said Facebook aims to set up partnerships with a "wide range" of publishers.

"We think that this is an opportunity to build something quite meaningful here," he said. "We're going to have journalists curating this, we are really focused on provenance and branding and where the stories come from."

At an event Friday in New York, Zuckerberg was asked why Facebook isn't paying all publishers in the news section. He replied that the initial focus was on building a broad set of content and figuring how to compensate publishers with paywalls. The next step will be to add local and international sources to the tab, he said.

In a statement, the Los Angeles Times said it expects the Facebook effort will help expand its readership and digital subscribers. The New York Times said it was a "welcome first step."

Facebook killed its most recent effort to curate news, the ill-fated Trending topics, in 2018. Conservatives complained about political bias, leading Facebook to fire its human editors and automate the section until it began recycling false stories, after which the social giant shut it down entirely.

But what happens when the sprawling social network plays news editor? An approach that sends people news based on what they've liked before could over time elevate stories with greater "emotional resonance" over news that "allows public discourse to take place," said Edward Wasserman, dean of the graduate journalism program at the University of California-Berkeley.

"It deepens my concern that they'll be applying Facebook logic to news judgment," he added.

The social network has come under criticism for its news judgment recently. In September, it removed a fact-check from Science Feedback that called out an anti-abortion activist's video for claiming that abortion is never medically necessary. Republican senators had complained about the fact check.

And when asked at a New York event why Breitbart, a right-wing outlet that has been accused of running racist stories, was included in the news section, Zuckerberg replied that the company wants a "breadth of content."

Facebook says a small team of "seasoned" journalists it employs will choose the headlines for the "Today's Story" section of the tab, designed to "catch you up" on the day's news. The rest of the news section will be populated with stories algorithmically based on users' interests.

That sounds similar to the approach taken by Apple News , a free iPhone app. But Apple's effort to contract with news organizations has been slow to take off. Apple News Plus, a $10-a-month paid version, remains primarily a hub for magazines; other news publishers have largely sat it out.

Apple's service reportedly offered publishers only half the revenue it pulled in from subscriptions, divided according to how popular publishers were with readers.

Zuckerberg said Friday that he hopes to have 20 to 30 million people in the U.S. using the news section over a few years.

CITY OF SANTA MONICA
NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING BEFORE THE SANTA MONICA CITY COUNCIL

SUBJECT: Report of Water Quality and Public Health Goals

DATE/TIME: December 10, 2019 / 5:30 PM

LOCATION: City Council Chambers, Second Floor, Santa Monica City Hall
1685 Main Street, Santa Monica, California

A public hearing will be held by the Santa Monica City Council to receive and file the 2019 City of Santa Monica Report on Water Quality Relative to Public Health Goals.

Each year the City of Santa Monica publishes its Annual Water Quality Report which includes details about the water that Santa Monica residents and businesses use every day. Along with information regarding important current water issues, the annual report includes information required by the Federal and State governments to illustrate how the quality of the water at the consumer's tap compares against established water quality standards. These water quality standards are established by Federal and State regulations as MCLs (Maximum Contaminant Levels). Consistently, Santa Monica's water is shown to be in full compliance with all regulatory water quality standards.

Every three years, all water agencies in California are required to prepare a Public Health Goal (PHG) report. A PHG is the concentration of a contaminant in drinking water that poses no significant health risk if consumed for a lifetime. PHG standards are lower than Maximum Contaminant Levels (MCLs). The purpose of this report is to provide consumers with information on levels of contaminants even below the enforceable MCLs to inform them of whatever risks might be posed by the presence of these contaminants at levels below the MCLs.

Details about Public Health Goals, how they were developed, what they mean, and the current state of the City's water quality are included in the 2019 City of Santa Monica Report on Water Quality Relative to Public Health Goals. The report will be received and filed at a public hearing by the Santa Monica City Council on Tuesday, December 10, 2019. Public comments can also be heard at this time. This report is available for public review at the City Clerk's office in City Hall, the Main Library, the Water Resources Division office, and online at the Water Resources Division website at:

Tally of children split at border tops 5,400 in new count

BY ELLIOT SPAGAT
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO (AP) — U.S. immigration authorities separated more than 1,500 children from their parents at the Mexico border early in the Trump administration, the American Civil Liberties Union said Thursday, bringing the total number of children separated since July 2017 to more than 5,400.

The ACLU said the administration told its attorneys that 1,556 children were separated from July 1, 2017, to June 26, 2018, when a federal judge in San Diego ordered that children in government custody be reunited with their parents.

Children from that period can be difficult to find because the government had inadequate tracking systems. Volunteers working with the ACLU are searching for some of them and their parents by going door-to-door in Guatemala and Honduras.

Of those separated during the 12-month period, 207 were under 5, said attorney Lee Gelernt of the ACLU, which sued to stop family separation. Five were under a year old, 26 were a year old, 40 were 2 years old, 76 were 3, and 60 were 4.

"It is shocking that 1,556 more families, including babies and toddlers, join the thousands of others already torn apart by this inhumane and illegal policy," said Gelernt. "Families have suffered tremendously, and some may never recover."

The Justice Department declined to comment.

The count is a milestone in accounting for families who have been touched by Trump's widely maligned effort against illegal immigration. The government identified 2,814 separated children who were in government custody on June 26, 2018, nearly all of whom have been reunited.

The U.S. Health and Human Services Department's internal watchdog said in January that potentially thousands more had been separated since July 2017, prompting U.S. District Judge Dana Sabraw to give the administration six months to identify them. The ACLU said it received the last batch of 1,556 names one day ahead of Friday's deadline.

The administration has also separated 1,090 children since the judge ordered a halt to the practice in June 2018 except in limited circumstances, like threats to child safety or doubts about whether the adult is really the parent.

The ACLU said the authorities have abused their discretion by separating families over dubious allegations and minor transgressions including traffic offenses. It has asked Sabraw to more narrowly define circumstances that would justify separation, which the administration has opposed.

With Thursday's disclosure, the number of children separated since July 2017 reached 5,460.

The government lacked tracking systems when the administration formally launched a "zero tolerance" policy in the spring of 2018 to criminally prosecute every adult who entered the country illegally from Mexico, sparking an international outcry when parents couldn't find their children.

Poor tracking before the spring of 2018 complicates the task of accounting for children who were separated early on. As of Oct. 16, the ACLU said, volunteers couldn't reach 362 families by phone because numbers didn't work or the sponsor who took custody was unable or unwilling to provide contact information for the parent, prompting the door-to-door searches in Central America.

Since retreating on family separation, the administration has tried other ways to reverse a major surge in asylum seekers, many of them Central American families.

Tens of thousands of Central Americans and Cubans have been returned to Mexico this year to wait for immigration court hearings, instead of being released in the United States with notices to appear in court.

Last month, the administration introduced a policy to deny asylum to anyone who passes through another country on the way to the U.S. border with Mexico without seeking protection there first.

US budget deficit hits nearly $1 trillion. Does it matter?

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Trump administration reported a river of red ink Friday.

The federal deficit for the 2019 budget year surged 26% from 2018 to $984.4 billion — its highest point in seven years. The gap is widely expected to top $1 trillion in the current budget year and likely remain there for the next decade.

The year-over-year widening in the deficit reflected such factors as revenue lost from the 2017 Trump tax cut and a budget deal that added billions in spending for military and domestic programs.

Forecasts by the Trump administration and the Congressional Budget Office project that the deficit will top $1 trillion in the 2020 budget year, which began Oct. 1. And the CBO estimates that the deficit will stay above $1 trillion over the next decade.

Those projections stand in contrast to President Donald Trump's campaign promises that even with revenue lost initially from his tax cuts, he could eliminate the budget deficit with cuts in spending and increased growth generated by the tax cuts.

Here are some questions and answers about the current state of the government's finances.

WHAT HAPPENED?

The deficit has been rising every year for the past four years. It's a stretch of widening deficits not seen since the early 1980s, when the deficit exploded with President Ronald Reagan's big tax cut.

For 2019, revenues grew 4%. But spending jumped at twice that rate, reflecting a deal that Trump reached with Congress in early 2018 to boost spending.

WHY DOESN'T WASHINGTON DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT?

Fiscal hawks have long warned of the economic dangers of running big government deficits. Yet the apocalypse they fear never seems to happen, and the government just keeps on spending.

There have been numerous attempts by presidents after Reagan to control spending. President George H.W. Bush actually agreed to a tax increase to control deficits when he was in office, breaking his "Read my lips" pledge not to raise taxes.

And a standoff between President Bill Clinton and House Speaker Newt Gingrich did produce a rare string of four years of budget surpluses from 1998 through 2001. In fact, the budget picture was so bright when George W. Bush took office in 2001 that the Congressional Budget Office projected that the government would run surpluses of $5.6 trillion over the next decade.

That didn't happen. The economy slid into a mild recession, Bush pushed through a big tax cut and the war on terrorism sent military spending surging. Then the 2008 financial crisis erupted and triggered a devastating recession. The downturn produced the economy's first round of trillion-dollar deficits under President Barack Obama and is expected to do so again under Trump.

SHOULD WE WORRY?

As far as most of us can tell, the huge deficits don't seem to threaten the economy or elevate the interest rates we pay on credit cards, mortgages and car loans. And in fact, the huge deficits are coinciding with a period of ultra-low rates rather than the surging borrowing costs that economists had warned would likely occur if government deficits got this high.

There is even a new school of economic theory known as the "modern monetary theory." It argues that such major economies as the United States and Japan don't need to worry about running deficits because their central banks can print as much money as they need.

Yet this remains a distinctly minority view among economists. Most still believe that while the huge deficits are not an immediate threat, at some point they will become a big problem. They will crowd out borrowing by consumers and businesses and elevate interest rates to levels that ignite a recession.

What's more, the interest payments on the deficits become part of a mounting government debt that must be repaid and could depress economic growth in coming years. In fact, even with low rates this year, the government's interest payments on the debt were one of the fastest items in the budget, rising nearly 16% to $375.6 billion.

HAVEN'T ECONOMISTS BEEN MAKING THESE WARNING FOR DECADES?

Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell says the day of reckoning is still coming but isn't here yet. Most analysts think any real solution will involve a combination of higher taxes and cost savings in the government's huge benefit programs of Social Security and Medicare.

ANY SIGN THAT WASHINGTON MAY TAKE THE POLITICALLY PAINFUL STEPS TO CUT THE DEFICIT?

In short, no. There has been a major change since the first round of trillion-dollar deficits prompted the Tea Party revolt. This shift brought Republicans back into power in the House and incited a round of fighting between GOP congressional leaders and the Obama administration. A result was government shutdowns and near-defaults on the national debt.

But once Trump took office, things changed: The president focused on his biggest legislative achievement, the $1.5 trillion tax cut passed in 2017. This appeared to satisfy Republican lawmakers and quelled concerns about rising deficits.

Democratic presidential candidates have for the most part pledged to roll back Trump's tax cuts for corporations and wealthy individuals. But they would use the money not to lower the deficits but for increased spending on expensive programs such as Medicare for All.

SO THE DEFICITS WON'T ANIMATE THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN?

It doesn't seem likely, though former Rep.

oriented activities during the day and scarier events for a more mature audience in the evening.

The highlight of Marina del Rey's Spooktacular is L.A.'s haunted pirate ships. Tours of the pirate ships will run all day; guests can expect close-up encounters with zombie pirates on board. Recommended for ages 13 and up after the sun sets, guests can board the ship if they have a wristband and liability waiver.

New this year, two escape rooms will be set up to challenge visitors to get out within ten minutes. Teams of six can try Lavinia's Den: The Trespasser's Curse or Mr. MacGuffin's Halloween Party. The escape rooms are recommended for guests over 10 years of age. Also new is a "scare zone" filled with scary special effects. For guests looking for an even more intense escape experience, the Haunted Blackout Maze of Terror is an immersive haunt filled with jump scares and terrifying twists and turns.

Visitors who prefer family-friendly events can enjoy a graveyard scavenger hunt, walking through a graveyard filled with spooky props, scheduled daily from noon until 5 p.m. on the hour.

On the main stage, free shows will be playing throughout the day, culminating with the Spooooktacular Halloween Stage Show at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Highlights include magical escapes, psychic ghosts, and "The Head Chopper of Doom." Prior to the main show, visitors may stop by at 2 p.m. for a children's magic show hosted by the Master of Magic & Illusion.

Other sites to see at the park include master juggler Jack Skellington, roaming the park between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m., and JAM sessions provided by the Ford Theatre at 1 and 3:30 p.m. Saturday, visitors can view and participate in Kalpulli Teotlalli Tepeyolotl (Aztec dance), while on Sunday, the Ballet Folklorico Ollin (a Mexican Folk dance) will be featured.

Other activities throughout the park include pumpkin decorating, carnival games, an obstacle course, a giant slide, face painting, a DIY costume station, a live DJ, food trucks and free giveaways.

Attendees can enter into the Marina del Rey Halloween photo contest by taking a photo on the festival grounds and uploading to social media with the hashtag #mdrhalloween. Categories include Best Ensemble, Best Kid Costumes, and Best Pet Costumes; winners will receive a Marina del Rey swag bag with a dining gift card to Tony P's Dockside Grill.

This is the second annual Spooktacular festival, hosted by the Los Angeles County Department of Beaches and Harbors. Prior to this, Marina del Dey featured "Harvest Days and Haunted Nights" in 2016 and 2017.

To register for free admission and download a copy of the liability waiver, interested parties can visit https://www.visitmarinadelrey.com/events/halloween-marina-spooktacular or call Marina del Rey's Convention and Visitors' Bureau at (424)-526-7900.

burned at least 49 buildings and 34 square miles (65 square kilometers) and prompted evacuation orders for some 2,000 people.

It was driven by the strong winds that had prompted Pacific Gas & Electric to impose sweeping blackouts affecting a half-million people in Northern and Central California. Power was restored to most people by Thursday evening, PG&E said.

PG&E resorted to shut-offs after equipment malfunctions and trees blowing into power lines were blamed for sparking several blazes in recent years that killed scores of people, burned thousands of homes and ran up billions of dollars in claims that drove the utility into bankruptcy.

However, PG&E said Thursday it didn't turn off a 230,000-volt transmission line near Geyserville that malfunctioned minutes before the fire erupted. The utility reported finding a "broken jumper" wire on a transmission tower Wednesday night.

PG&E CEO Bill Johnson said it was too soon to know if the faulty equipment sparked the fire. He said the tower had been inspected four times in the past two years and appeared to have been in excellent condition.

Investors were leery, though, and PG&E stock fell more than 20 percent during the day.

In shutting off the electricity, PG&E cut power to the distribution lines that supply homes, but not to its long-distance transmission lines.

Meanwhile, an estimated 50,000 people were under evacuation orders in the Santa Clarita area north of Los Angeles as hot, dry Santa Ana winds howling at up to 50 mph (80 kph) drove the flames into neighborhoods.

The cause of the fire was unknown, but Southern California Edison said it had cut off power to the area five hours before it broke out Thursday afternoon.

At least six homes were burned, and officials said the number was expected to rise as they took a more thorough look. No immediate injuries were reported.

"I'm literally seeing sticks and fire of what used to be our home," Alejandro Corrales told KCBS-TV. She said the fire also took her mother's ashes, other belongings and possibly a pen full of pet sheep.

"Everything in the house is gone," Corrales said. "The panels on one of the pens where we have some rescued sheep was too hot for my daughter to open, and so she couldn't let them out. ... So I'm probably sure that we lost them, too."

Firefighters on the ground and in the air struggled to protect homes surrounded by trees and brush as the fire grew to 4,300 acres (1,740 hectares).

Sean Malin, 27, evacuated from Santa Clarita along with his mother and their two dogs after police officers drove down their street, telling them to leave.

"It's a huge inconvenience," he said. "On the other hand, I know that the worst thing we could possibly do is get in the way of a firefight that needs to happen."

Some residents tried to fight the blaze with garden hoses. People rushed to rescue dozens of horses, donkeys, goats, a pig and an emu.

Officials said a firefighting helicopter was grounded after its windshield was damaged by a collision with a bird.

High winds were expected to taper off by late afternoon. Southern California Edison, which shut off electricity to more than 31,000 customers on Thursday, said it was considering additional power cuts to more than 386,000.

The huge Los Angeles school district closed all its schools in the San Fernando Valley, citing poor air quality and other safety concerns.

While the high winds in Northern California had died down by Friday, they were expected to pick up over the weekend, with gusts of 40 to 60 mph in many places, and PG&E warned it may black out an even larger region.

PG&E chief meteorologist Scott Strenfel said Northern California could be in for the strongest offshore winds in years.

Gecker reported from San Francisco. Associated Press writers Janie Har and Juliet Williams in San Francisco and John Antczak and Christopher Weber in Los Angeles contributed to this report.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON OCT. 17, 2019 AT 4:48 P.M.

Officers responded to the area of 1600 Ocean Front Walk because a male transient threw a bottle at a young girl, striking her in the head. Witnesses surrounded the suspect but he was still able to leave the area. Responding officers located the suspect, who resisted arrest while being taken into custody. Marco Antonio Carmona, 43, was booked for assault and resisting arrest. His bail was set at $30,000.

TRUNK OR TREAT

Dwell Church Los Angeles invites local residents to enjoy an evening of fun at McKinley Elementary School from 4-6 p.m. Sunday. The church's Trunk or Treat event will feature games, free tacos and allow children to go from themed trunk to themed trunk trick or treating, according to the event's Facebook page. "We'll also be hosting a free raffle to win a movie gift basket, complete with a Fandango gift card and snacks!"

No registration is required, and more information can be found at bit.ly/TRICKorTRUNK.

HALLOWEEN BASH

Little monsters and their mummies can head to the corner of Canal Street for a night of music, face painting and plenty of treats on Halloween night. The event is free and will occur from 5-8 p.m. at Venice Community Housing, which is located at 200 N. Venice Blvd.

More information can be found at bit.ly/HallBAsh and residents with questions should contact artscsquared@vchcorp.org.

HALLOWEEKEND FRIGHT NIGHT PUB CRAWL

Residents who miss Saturday's HalloWeekend Fright Night Pub Crawl can catch the second go-round happening on Halloween Day. Featuring $4 draft beers, 50% off wells and $5 shots, this year's pub crawl offers a number of specialty drink options at the various bars that are participating in the crawl.

Every establishment is within walking distance of one another and participants will receive a map when they register. Registration lasts from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. and tickets are $30 for a single ticket and $25 for groups of 5 people.

Visit pubcrawls.com/events/halloween/santa-monica/official-pub-crawl/ for more information on the upcoming event.

SPOOKTACULAR 2019

The Santa Monica Police Activities League will hold its Spooktacular 2019 event on Thursday from 5-8 p.m. at the PAL Youth Center, which is located at 1401 Olympic Blvd. in Santa Monica. The Halloween Day celebration will feature a number of free treats, including a maze, candy and more.

Interested families can contact 310-458-8988 for more information or head down to the center on the day of the event to enjoy a night of fun.

HALLOWEEN HAPPY HOUR

Esters Wine Shop & Bar will host its first Halloween celebration on Thursday with an all-night Happy Hour from 3 p.m. to midnight. The event was described as a classy joint, where costumes aren't required and one can sip on Happy Hour-priced drinks and bites throughout the evening. However, if someone's inclined to dress up and wear a costume, then they'll be rewarded with a free Mystery Cocktail with the purchase of any food or drinks.

Esters Wine Shop & Bar is located in Downtown Santa Monica at 1314 7th St., and more information on the upcoming event can be found online at esterswineshop.com/calendar/#halloween-happy-hour.

ASTRO DOUGHNUTS & FRIED CHICKEN

Customers who turn up in costume to Astro Doughnuts & Fried Chicken in Santa Monica on Thursday, Oct. 31 are eligible for a complimentary pumpkin spice doughnut. The local trick or treaters who visit on Halloween to claim their doughnut can also take a photo on the patio, which has been transformed into a cozy pumpkin patch where patrons can enjoy eating their exclusive pumpkin spice fried chicken and doughnut specials.

Those who post their photo on Instagram with the tag @astrodoughtnutssocal have a chance to win a box of four of each month's special doughnuts for an entire year, according to staff. More information on Astro's Halloween festivities can be found at facebook.com/events/402625207048948.

DÍA DE LOS MUERTOS FIESTA

Tallula's, a local Mexican cantina from Zoe Nathan, Josh Loeb and Jeremy Fox, is preparing to host its inaugural Día De Los Muertos Fiesta on Saturday, Nov. 2 and residents of all ages are invited to participate in the fun.

A beautiful altar created by Gardenia Ramirez at Lola y Tula will be on-site to commemorate loved ones who have passed. A face painter for kids and those who are kids at heart will also be available from 4-7 p.m. Those in the mood for food can enjoy traditional holiday dishes like a chile relleno with crab and black mole, flan with candied walnuts and tlayudas with potatoes, refried black beans, escabeche and crispy bacon.

The restaurant will also have buckets of beer served with assorted housemade salts and cocktail specials like mexican chocolate martinis with mezcal and a spicy, tropical tequila-number called the "Charred Island."

Walk-ins are welcome but booking a table is suggested so your spot is guaranteed. More information on the celebration can be found at tallulasrestaurant.com/calendar/

DEFICIT

Mark Sanford, who has mounted a long-shot Republican campaign against Trump, is urging Republican voters to return to their historic concerns about the high deficits.

And economists note that today's huge deficits are occurring when the economy is in a record-long economic expansion. This is unlike the previous stretch of trillion-dollar deficits, which coincided with the worst recession since the 1930s.

But analysts warn that if the economy does go into a recession, the huge deficits projected now will expand significantly — possibly to a size that would send interest rates surging. Such a development, if it sparked worries about the stability of the U.S. financial system, might produce the type of deficit crisis they have been warning about for so long.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (OCTOBER 26)

It's seems like a basic thing, but the simple act of breathing easier and more deliberately will open you to connection, relaxation and good fortune. A fun crew is featured through the holiday season. You'll enjoy influencing one another. A game that takes months to master will bring you financial and personal reward. Virgo and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 20, 17, 23 and 44.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). That thing you were expecting from a loved one may be causing more trouble than it's worth. Erasing the expectation will be like a magic spell lifting the gloom. Suddenly, the best sort of surprises are in store.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It used to happen every night, but we are so far from the tribe and fire now that any dance seems like a special occasion. Tonight should be so much fun that you'll vow to make this happen more often.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You may have given too much of the wrong thing up front because you didn't know better. You'll now make adjustments that have to do with what you're willing to give to get what you want, or to simply to stay in the game.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It's a strange feeling to learn that you misunderstood something and held the wrong belief for a very long time, but such is life. Many never reassess what they know for accuracy's sake. In this way, you're ahead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Once you tested the boundaries without realizing what you were doing, and now you're quite deliberate about it. It comforts you to know the limits, though that won't keep you from pushing past them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The spiritual and the scientific will coexist quite nicely in your mental processes today. Whatever you're not able to make logical sense of will possess some poetic or emotional quality that pulls your attention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Memories are dynamic ideas that get rewritten each time they are revisited. Today, you'll think of how you'd like to remember something as it's actually occurring.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Love is all the power you need in the situation. You don't have to believe this for it to work. Ask what part of the situation you might flow more love to, and then do it and watch things start to shift.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). It would take a long time to clear all paths of rocks, but with good shoes, the terrain that would cut and destabilize us is not a problem. It's much easier to protect your vulnerabilities than to change the whole world.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Those who don't have a lot of truth at their disposal will cling to a few beliefs with tenacious certainty. With more truth comes more intelligence; with more intelligence comes greater flexibility of thought.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Because you're so modest, sometimes you have to be talked into accepting and appreciating yourself. If you need a good reason, how about loving yourself just so that you can give more love to others?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The ability to recognize beauty where other people don't is a sign that there is great beauty inside of you. You wouldn't be able to see such loveliness if it weren't resonating inside the chambers of your heart.

New Moon Preshow Party

We may experiment, go disguised, play around with our identities, but the core of who we are remains. In fact, knowing that core is solid is what makes us feel free to try new things today, the biggest night of the month for Halloween parties. Any alter ego we try will only help us become more of the person we already are.

HALLOWEEN BY ELEMENT

The WATER SIGNS tend to enjoy this macabre holiday the most (that's Scorpio, Cancer and Pisces), as they appreciate the deeper spiritual and psychological implications. We're born. We live. We die. Halloween celebrates that cycle by acknowledging the last act in a way we usually try not to in day-to-day life. AIR SIGNS (Gemini, Aquarius and Libra) prefer to gloss over the deadly aspects of Halloween and focus on the social possibilities. These signs are all about the parties and fun. They may even prefer everything that happens pre-Halloween to the actual night. Putting up decorations, creating costumes, discussing spooky plans -- it's a chance to focus on enjoying friends and loved ones. For EARTH SIGNS (Taurus, Capricorn, Virgo) it's about the food. Not just the candy, though a good deal of thought may go into the decision of what to pass out to trick-or-treaters, but also the planning of interesting, festive party food, seasonal delights and the like. The sense of community and trust that goes into the trick-or-treat tradition is also a strong focus. FIRE SIGNS (Leo, Sagittarius and Aries) are compelled by the theatricality of Halloween. Constructing adrenaline-rushing scenarios and memory-making experiences is their favorite part of the deal. Also, fire signs are voted the most likely to wear surprisingly sexy costumes.

CELEBRITY PROFILE

In her first 100 days of being secretary of state, Hillary Rodham Clinton reportedly traveled over 70,000 miles in order to listen to the comments and concerns of leaders all over the world. Clinton has natal sun, Mercury and Venus in intuitive Scorpio with a highly empathetic Pisces moon. Her Jupiter, the planet of luck, is nestled in the sign of travel and foreign culture -- Sagittarius. Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.
