The Great American Relay ends in Santa Monica

Brennon Dixson

FINISH: The Great American Relay and its 379 stages came to an end in Santa Monica this week. It's been more than a month since runners started with the baton back in Boston.

BRENNON DIXSON
SMDP Staff Writer

The Great American Relay has crossed the designated finish line in Santa Monica and come to an end after 36 continuous days of runners racing together across the country.

The one-of-a-kind relay began back in Boston on Sept. 15. The race was broken up into 379 stages and allowed participants to pass a real baton off to their peers in places like Philadelphia, St. Louis and many, many others.

Each stage was between 5 and 22 miles but most were around 10, according to the relay's race director Vince Varallo, who had to run a couple dozen miles himself after a no-show one morning.

Most of the time though, Varallo was trailing racers in a rental car that took him across the country for the event after COVID-19 forced the cancellation of so many marathons and 5Ks.

Drati is expected to give a similar presentation regarding elementary school reopenings on Monday Oct. 26 and the School Board will take action on a plan on Nov. 12.

"The options were developed through analysis of the safety protocols set by the state and L.A. County Department of Health, recommended models by the L.A. County Department of Education,

HATE CRIMES

Hate crime reports have risen every year since 2013 and this year there was a 38 percent increase in white supremacist crimes compared to earlier this decade. Racially motivated crimes are the largest category of hate crimes committed in L.A. County where African-Americans make up 9 percent of the population but 47 percent of all hate crime victims.

"Black people are disproportionately represented on the low end of several indices of social and economic well-being, including homelessness, COVID-19 fatalities, and joblessness. Sadly, racially motivated attacks are no different," said Supervisor Mark Ridley-Thomas. "For those who believe that racism is no longer a problem, I invite you to review the examples this report provides of these vile and cowardly crimes, more than 70% of which were classified as violent in nature."

The 2019 report also marked the largest number ever reported of anti-transgender crimes, which rose from 25 in 2018 to 41 in 2019. Ninety-two percent of transgender hate crimes involved violence, which is the highest rate for any victim group.

"I am deeply saddened by this year's report, including recording the largest number of anti-transgender hate crimes ever, and I am hopeful that new national leadership will put this nation back on track to recognizing every person's fundamental human rights," said Supervisor Sheila Kuehl.

In response to the rise in hate seen over the previous six years the L.A. County Human Relations Commission launched the "L.A. vs. Hate" initiative in Aug., which is designed to prevent and respond to hate incidents. This campaign created the first government hotline (via 211) for reporting acts of hate and directing assistance to victims.

"While the L.A. vs. Hate Campaign we launched in August has increased awareness around the importance of reporting hate and helped connect hate victims with supportive services, we have a lot more work to do make sure all of our residents know that the County is taking action to protect them from this growing threat – especially in light of the coronavirus pandemic. Hate has no place in LA County. If you witness a hate crime, report it by calling 2-1-1 right away," said Supervisor Janice Hahn.

The L.A. vs. Hate campaign also established a network of community agencies that work to prevent instances of hate crime and provide rapid response to victims. This has been accompanied by a robust marketing campaign driven by community leaders and activists that encourage residents to unite against hate.

Since its June 2020 launch "L.A. vs. Hate" content has been shared to a social media audience of over 7 million. This has helped publicize the hotline which went from receiving 60 calls in June to 118 in Sept.

"I'm proud that the County launched the innovative LA vs. Hate campaign to urge residents to stand against hate. But this year's hate crimes report show that we have more to do," said Los Angeles County Supervisor Hilda L. Solis. "While the annual hate crimes reported remain steady this year, this number is still too high. Marginalized communities continue to be targeted and discriminated against. LA County must continue to combat racism, homophobia, transphobia, xenophobia, and white supremacy."

SCHOOL REOPENING

and what a majority of school districts across the state and the county will be using for reopening," said Drati.

The earliest reopening date the district is looking at is January 5 and this is dependent on L.A. County entering the red tier of infection rates. In order to do this, the county will need to maintain a test positivity rate of less than 8 percent and a daily new case rate of 7 per 100,000 residents for two weeks.

The proposed hybrid model will divide classes into two cohorts and half the students would attend class in-person six feet apart while the other half would join via livestream. Cohorts would either alternate day-by-day or week-by-week and there would be an option for students to participate in distance learning only.

The District is exploring different technology that can facilitate simultaneous in-person and livestream teaching. One of these is the Swivl camera system which follows voice fluctuations in the classroom. When a teacher is speaking the camera will focus on them, but if a student in the classroom asks a question the camera will zoom in on them so livestream students can follow the conversation.

In the second model students would continue in distance learning as it ran in the fall and there would be opportunities to come on campus for select activities such as arts, labs, sports teams, special education programs, and clubs. This would be the least expensive and safest model, but it does not offer the benefits of providing child supervision and in-person learning.

"I'd like to first remind everybody about the factors we will ultimately use to make our decisions. These are first and foremost the safety of our students, and secondly, the quality by which we are able to deliver instruction, and lastly, the fiscal constraints that we are under," said Drati.

Under both reopening plans anyone who enters campus is required to pass a health screening questionnaire and a temperature check. There will be isolation rooms on all campuses if anyone starts experiencing symptoms or finds out they were in contact with COVID-19 while on campus.

General cleaning will take place once a day and high touch surfaces like doorknobs, elevator buttons, and handrails will be disinfected up to three times a day. Outdoor learning will be encouraged, most windows will remain open, and air filters will be upgraded to MERV 13 efficiency.

Per County requirements the District and each campus will form COVID compliance taskforces that are responsible for establishing and enforcing all COVID-19 safety protocols and ensuring students and staff receive education about COVID-19. The compliance teams will meet with the County Department of Public Health on a weekly basis and enact an exposure management plan if there is a case at school.

Between Oct. 27 and Nov. 2 the District will survey parents, staff, and students for feedback on the two reopening models. Questions, suggestions, and concerns can also be submitted by going to www.smmusd.org/superintendent and clicking on school reopening input.

events in the running group were canceled so I started this relay because I wanted to do something for the runners that was an actual event," Varallo said, mentioning the relay also allowed participants an opportunity to raise money for the American Association for Cancer Research.

More than 1,000 people across the country followed along with the race happenings on Facebook and some participants found themselves emotional when it came to a close.

Before the group of local finishers settled on the bluffs to pose with each other, sign a commemorative banner and celebrate with the baton in the Pacific Ocean, Suzanne Barron said she was glad to be involved in the race.

"We can all feel good about what we're doing out here. I mean, there's many reasons to — we're out here being good to our bodies by running, which is something that most of us Boston Buddies haven't been able to do in the pandemic. So, we're so fortunate to be not only be able to run, but at the same time, we're raising money for something so important that touches everyone's lives."

Fellow Westside resident Leslie Cohen agreed with the sentiment, stating, "It was absolutely amazing to be part of something like this. And another part that made it special was being able to do it completely on our home turf."

"This is an area that our team pretty much runs every day so to take an everyday thing and turn it into such an iconic run was epic," Cohen said, "And then, at the same time, seeing it through the eyes of others back on the East Coast was also beautiful."

Cohen thanked her group of fellow runners, which included Barron, Ashley McLeish, Emily Nguyen, Lydia Munoz, Lilia Gonzalez, Lucy Torres, Jill Fischer, Amy Chavez, Linda Whitehead, Deike Peters.

"We couldn't have done it without the racers who ran before us too," Cohen said. "We all had to rely on each other to bring it home."

Doing Service With Rotary

By Lisa C. Alexander

Gratitude is an antidote to hard times. I know this is true. As a Rotarian, I'm finding things to be grateful for in my Club. We may be tired of Zoom, but I'm finding the good. First, during our Zoom meetings, I can see everyone's smiling faces, not just the backs of their heads the way it was in the banquet room. And, I can chat and catch up with everyone, not just the friends sitting next to me at our usual lunch meetings.

Second, we can attract fantastic speakers from all over the country. There's no travel required, and the only inconvenience might be a time difference. And, attendance is up for the same reason. There's no drive time to get to our meetings. Building connections with others helps maintain well-being during difficult times. I'm grateful for the many ways Rotary keeps us connected to our friends. Our activities may be virtual, but our calendar is fuller than ever with more opportunities to have fun together. We started a Book Group. We've done wine tastings and cooking classes. We just did a group painting class, each of us creating a masterpiece painting of the Santa Monica Pier.

The Rotary motto is "Service Above Self." Rotarians are actively giving service donating blood, making comfort calls to our elderly neighbors, cooking meals for the Salvation Army, and collecting food for local food banks. The news is full of endless need in our community. We may not be able to solve all the world's problems, but Rotarians do what we can. I'm proud to say we "get stuff done." And, service is a form of gratitude as we pay it forward.

If you would like to join us for a Zoom meeting, contact Savi at rotaryclubofsantamonica@verizon.net for more details.

Meet Our Lion Member Gail Litvack

By Linda Levee

In our column, we are introducing you to our members. Gail Litvack recalls that, "It was late in the summer of 1991 when Lion Carol Ann Wright stopped by my office to ask if I might like to attend a Lions meeting. I was looking to become involved in the Santa Monica community, so I said yes.

Since that time – now almost 30 years later – I've never regretted joining in this wonderful organization of men and women from the Santa Monica area. I've been involved in several Lions activities over the years, including holding several offices within the Club and in the District.

My favorite projects are the Student Speakers Contest and the Community Recognition Event. I've chaired both of these activities several times over the years. And, of course, who can forget the Pancake Breakfast? Santa Monica's very own almost recurrent event for the past 65 years.

Thank you, Carol Ann, for inviting me to be part of this wonderful Santa Monica Lions Club."

Jerry's Memoir is on the Market

By Jack Neworth

Jerry Rosenblum, who'll turn 99 in January, just had his first book published, An Angel On My Shoulder. (Jerry's already joking about a sequel, An Angel on My Other Shoulder.)

Spanning from 1922 to 2020, Angel contains 98 fast-paced chapters, one for each year of his life. Born and raised in Brooklyn, Jerry still remembers the inexplicable excitement of Lindbergh's landing in Paris in 1927 and feeling comforted by FDR's fireside chats in 1933.

The book is often touching, funny and filled with colorful characters Jerry has met. Many are famous, like Muhammad Ali, and some infamous, like mobster union official Alan Dorfman, who wound up with a bullet in his head. (Ouch!)

He also writes about his father's passing when Jerry was 12 and his having "to be the man of the house" with two or three after-school jobs to help support his family. When they were eventually evicted during the Great Depression Jerry recalls his sadness in seeing their furniture piled on the sidewalk. Jerry also remembers in vivid detail the

Pride in Our History

By Susan Barry

Celebrations across the country marking the 100th anniversary of the 19th Amendment were cancelled this summer, another casualty of the pandemic. Women of the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club were especially disappointed to not have the opportunity to celebrate our pride in historically being a significant player in the long fight guaranteeing all women the right to vote in the United States.

Beginning in 1848, women across the country actively campaigned for suffrage. While some Western states passed equal suffrage, including California in 1911, the movement to pass a federal guarantee was slow to gain support.

In 1900, the National American Woman Suffrage Association began to recruit the leaders of Women's Clubs to the cause. The General Federation of Women's Clubs (GFWC) was the largest and most important women's organization in the country. Members included many prominent suffragist leaders, but only a majority vote of the representative delegates at the 1914 GFWC biennial convention would give the movement the credibility it needed to push forward.

On June 14, 1914, the GFWC approved a resolution stating, "The General Federation of Women's Clubs give the cause of political equality for men and women its moral support by recording its earnest belief in the principle of political equality regardless of sex." The official endorsement affirmed that suffrage was an accepted cause for women across the country and did much to invigorate the movement forward.

The history of the fight for suffrage was far from over, however, and included imprisonment and the inhumane treatment of nonviolent protestors, and the dedication of countless women ceaselessly petitioning Washington and their state representatives. This is

Update On COVID-19 in Dogs and Cats

By Dr. Frank Lavac MS, DVM,VCA

In September, the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association published an update on SARS-COV-2 in dogs and cats. The following is a synopsis of their findings.

Twelve dogs and 10 cats have been confirmed infected with the SARS-COV-2 in the U.S. All animals with confirmed infections were exposed to people with known or likely COVID-19 infections according to the USDA.

The predominant clinical sign was respiratory disease. All these animals showed evidence of severe underlying conditions. Based Ion the limited information available, the risk of animals spreading COVID-19 to people is considered low.

For further information, please see this page on CDC's website: https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/daily-life-coping/pets.html.

Dr. Frank Lavac can be reached by calling 310-828-4587.

Brain Matters

Will and Cary Singleton Donate $40 Million to Pacific Neuroscience Institute's Brain Health Center for Alzheimer's Treatment and Research

The Pacific Neuroscience Institute (PNI) is excited to announce that a $40 million donation from Will and Cary Singleton will support the PNI Brain Health Center at Providence Saint John's Health Center as it pursues novel and effective treatments for patients with Alzheimer's disease and related memory and cognition disorders.

Alzheimer's disease has been an immensely difficult challenge with more than five million Americans living with the disease. Unfortunately, to date, there are no effective treatments, and more than 200 clinical trials of potential treatments for Alzheimer's have failed.

"At PNI, we have a long track record in advancing novel approaches and conducting innovative clinical trials. The Singleton gift will greatly accelerate our efforts to transform clinical data into discovery, and develop new standards of care for Alzheimer's and related disorders," said PNI founder and director, Daniel Kelly, MD.

The gift is the largest single donation received at PNI and it will be used to support improving early detection, identifying risk factors, reducing risk and helping those already suffering from dementia and cognitive decline.

The Singleton family has been supportive of Saint John's for generations and their donation will inspire other philanthropists to join PNI's quest to cure difficult diseases across all the neurosciences.

"We are immensely grateful for this transformative gift," said Saint John's Health Center Foundation president and CEO, Bob Klein. For more information, please call the Pacific Neuroscience Institute Foundation | Melissa Coleman at 310-582-7615.

Mar Vista: Neighbor to Neighbor

What's Up in Mar Vista?

By Tesi Treuenfels

Here we are into fall. Mar Vista is still socially cool. We're practicing social distancing. We're wearing our masks to protect each other. For me? I'm still pretty much housebound except for exercise, so I guess I'll share a little bit about how I'm spending my time.

Zoom! Yes, I have been zooming. It's easy to find like-minded people on Zoom. Almost all events are online now. There's an art tour of various museums around the world daily, "For Love & Art." Ventura Boomers hold a round table to talk about a movie each week on Wednesdays. I stop into a 5 p.m. happy hour called Quarentini a few times a week. It's for women 50 years and up. Tuesdays is the Funny Bone Toastmaster's meeting. Funny thing with this quarantine, people are dropping in on local zoom "meetups" from all over the world. We've had visitors from Australia, Georgia, and England at our local Culver City Toastmasters.

Speaking of England, I'm keeping up with my bridge game on a wonderful site out of England. It's a well-behaved group that plays the game for fun. Recently, I tracked down an app to help me with my bidding at bridge. My game is improving. I miss my women friends at the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club. I think they are virtually playing bridge in Colorado. It's a wonderful world.

Routines have been invaluable. I'm learning to navigate our new normal. Ralph's Market has a wonderful pickup program for shopping online, and it's free! Our Grand View Market on Venice is open for business. They sell pretty much everything you need and are never crowded. It's in and out in no time. Stay safe and happy, everyone.

dangers of his Navy service at Pearl Harbor during WWII. But, he adamantly feels overcoming these challenges have contributed to his longevity and wonderful life.

Jerry and I met because he was a regular follower of my columns in the Santa Monica Daily Press and hoped that maybe I would read a draft of his memoir manuscript. I'm embarrassed to say, but I was thinking of a polite way to pass when Jerry mentioned his 50 years in the men's clothing business. My late father was in the same business for 30 years, so I couldn't say no. (And, am forever glad I didn't.)

When Jerry eventually got a commitment from a small publishing company, we worked six days a week rewriting his book. A year later when we finally finished, Jerry commented, as only he could, "Jack, what I wrote was the cloth. What you wrote turned it into a fine suit."

Readers often ask if Jerry is still sharp. Get this, he has 50 songs, many from Broadway musicals, he knows by heart that he'll sing at a drop of a hat. (You don't even need the hat.)

For me, knowing Jerry has been nothing short of inspiring. As explained in the book, he's friends with Congresswoman Alexander Ocasio-Cortez who says, "Jerry spreads joy wherever he goes."

day? Can you believe that this floating hotel is one of the most haunted places in America? Pulled right from history, these ghostly tales will change the way you see the RMS Queen Mary, and have you sleeping with the light on! The Ghostly Tales of the Queen Mary was adapted from Ghosts of the Queen Mary by Brian Clune and Bob Davis.

This book is one of a new series, Spooky America, put out by Arcadia Publishing. They explained that their specialty is local history, and the Spooky America books are no different. While readers are wrapped up in hair-raising tales, they're also immersed in the history of a specific place, and learning about its people, its way of life, and its evolution. Other areas to be explored are Long Island, Connecticut, Charleston, Pittsburgh, Savannah, and New England. The books are recommended for readers, ages eight through 12, but adults should enjoy the stories as well.

A Letter From Lidia at the Santa Monica Family YMCA

Dear Readers,
Last month, the Santa Monica Family YMCA joined Welcoming America and other YMCAs and organizations nationwide to celebrate the contributions of immigrants to communities in a spirit of unity.

We had a successful event for our first time. Nat Trives, our Board Member, welcomed everyone with a wonderful speech.

We provided three healthy cooking classes, two Stress Management classes during the Pandemic, two Fall Prevention presentations, a Cholesterol Education seminar by the USC School of Pharmacy, two UCLA Health seminars, the SM YMCA virtual older adult program and Chronic Disease Prevention Programs, plus nine exercise classes, including yoga, chair yoga, Latin dance, Brazilian dance, and Bollywood Boom Jam.

We received 101 event participant registrations. About 175 people attended our week's activities, including the UCLA Health educational seminar participants. Ten children from the Y's Child Development Center joined me for the Brazilian and Multicultural dance session. It was great.

Also, 55 youth from diverse backgrounds participated last week for the SM YMCA's Youth-Led Civic Engagement meeting with Erika Altshule, YMCA's Youth and Family Department Director.

I received a good response from those who attended our Y's event sessions, and they are looking forward to future event presentations.

Exercise classses are now being held outdoors at Fifth and Arizona. To get details, please call me, Lidia Magarian, at the Santa Monica Family YMCA at 310-393-2721.
