Medical pot dispensary hits roadblock

BY MELODY HANATANI
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL They look more like grandmas than the aspiring owners of a medical marijuana dispensary.

But despite their small frame, silver hair and soft-spoken matronly disposition, they aren't and they are.

Long-time friends Judith Eton, 67 of Brentwood, Harriet Simon, 75 of Encino, and Judy Uhrman, 65 of Encino, came into Santa Monica with dreams of opening an herbal and holistic pharmacy that would have the city's first medical marijuana dispensary, hoping to give patients from nearby Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center and Saint John's Health Center a means to acquire cannabis without having to step into Los Angeles.

"It sounded like a good idea," Eton said. "It turned out to be way harder than you think."

What they learned recently is the reason why there are no dispensaries in Santa Monica while a proliferation of them has taken place in the city to the east where there's supposedly more places to buy medical pot than grande soy lattes.

It's simply just not allowed in Santa Monica.

They received a reminder last week when after waiting through a nearly seven-hour meeting the City Council informed the women that they could not take action on their request for a conditional use permit to open a dispensary because there is nothing on the books regarding the type of business.

Instead several councilmembers said they would like to wait until the Land Use and Circulation Element — a new comprehensive city planning document — is completed some time next year after which medical marijuana dispensaries could be considered when officials review the zoning code for changes.

Santa Monica officials said they also want to wait and see the outcome of the medical cannabis issue in Los Angeles where the City Council there is about to consider a new stringent ordinance that would dramatically cut the number of dispensaries which some estimate to be more than 1,000.

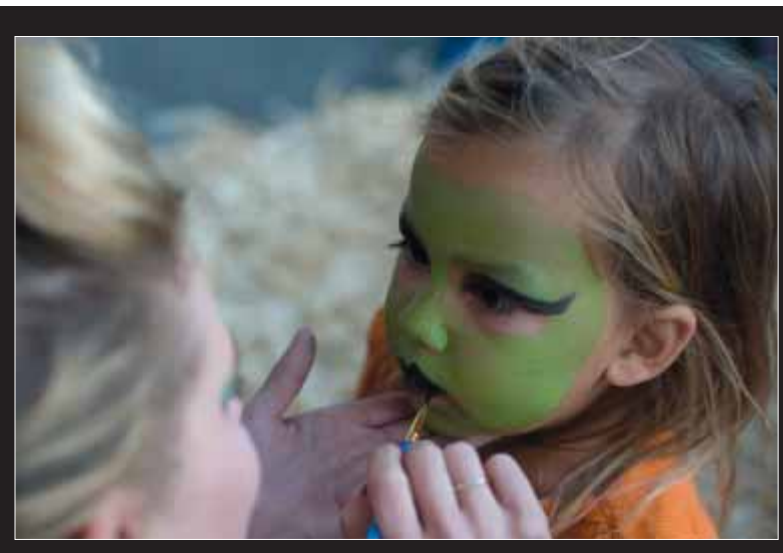

"We need to learn from the city of Los Angeles' experience which has been disastrous because they didn't think through the process and have all sorts of craziness going on now," Councilwoman Gleam Davis said at the meeting on Oct. 27.

Vikings ignite too late against Culver City

BY WILL WEISS
Special to the Daily Press

CULVER CITY Going into their third Ocean League contest, the Samohi Vikings had expected to face a challenge. The team traveled to Culver City to battle the Centaurs, then 8-1 and, like the Vikings, undefeated in league play at 2-0.

What the Vikings didn't expect was to find themselves on the wrong side of a 28-0 mountain with four minutes remaining in the first half, outrun, outblocked and outmatched by the talented Centaur squad, and still an entire half game's length away from what would become a 49-28 road loss for the Vikings, bringing their league record to 2-1.

"We couldn't give up big plays. We had to tackle well and we didn't do that early," said Samohi Head Coach Travis Clark. "I told myself and I told my team if we can hold them to 30 or under then we'll be fine. But we can't give them 49 or we're in trouble."

Samohi planned ahead for the game, expecting an aerial assault from senior quarterback Marquel Carter. But the Vikings

Life is more than a game

BY CARLEE JENSEN
Special to the Daily Press

MONTANA AVENUE It's easy to think big.

To dream of becoming a professional athlete, traveling the world, or helping to cure an incurable disease can be a snap. What's harder, though, is turning grand ambitions like these into reality. It's a feat that few people can boast of.

One exception, though, is Santa Monica resident Murphy Jensen. Following a high-powered career as a tennis player and, later, a television personality, Jensen is using his fame in a new fight: Helping find a cure for prostate cancer.

Raised on a Christmas tree farm in northern Michigan, Jensen and his siblings grew up as "barefoot country kids." He took up tennis at the age of four, crying the first time he picked up a tennis racket "because I was so scared."

The fear left him quickly enough. By the time he was 18, Jensen was playing tennis for the men's team at USC — a short-lived endeavor, as he left school at 22 to play professionally.

Jensen spent his tennis career playing doubles with his brother, Luke. They became known for their colorful and sometimes outrageous behavior on the tennis courts; behavior that they called "Rock 'n' Roll Tennis."

The brothers won the men's doubles title at the French Open in 1993, an experience that Jensen lists among the most fulfilling of his life.

"Winning the French Open with my brother — with my mother in the crowd and my grandma and grandpa … crying over the phone back in Michigan — it was such a huge feat," Jensen said.

After his professional tennis career ended, Jensen began to pursue a career in television, confident that he could succeed because, "I could entertain people on the tennis court, which was really just a huge stage."

He worked with two successful television shows: "Open Access," an inside look into the lives of various famous tennis players, and "Murphy's Guide," in which Jensen led viewers on not-for-tourists tours of some of the world's most illustrious cities.

Prostate cancer made its first appearance in Jensen's life when his father was diagnosed with the disease. "I became his right-hand man through the treatments," said Jensen, who recently celebrated his 40th birthday by taking his father to chemotherapy.

About a year after his father's diagnosis, Jensen participated in a fundraiser held by Santa Monica resident Michael Milken, founder of the Prostate Cancer Foundation. It proved to be a pivotal event in Jensen's life. After meeting Milken, he became extremely involved with the Prostate Cancer Foundation, using his tennis fame to help spread awareness about prostate cancer and raise funds for research.

Jensen said watching his father's struggle

Service set for SMC'S Taylor

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

SMC A special service honoring long-time football coach Robert Taylor has been set for this week, college officials said.

Taylor, who passed away late last month was head football coach at Santa Monica College from 1994 until early this season. The cause of death has not been announced.

School officials are urging mourners to gather at the pavilion on the SMC main campus on Tuesday at 2 p.m. The service will be free and all are welcome.

Taylor first came to SMC in 1984 and served as an assistant until 1994 when he was named head coach. During his tenure with the school, he coached the team to three bowl victories and was instrumental in developing a number of players who later went on to star in the National Football League.

Before coaching at SMC, Taylor spent time on the sidelines for L.A. Southwest College, L.A. City College, John Muir High School in Pasadena and North Carolina A&T.

Parking a pain in San Francisco

EVELYN NIEVES
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO This city's most popular neighborhoods are night owls, streets that come alive when the restaurants and pubs set the mood and light their candles. But try parking in these hot spots: no fun.

Now, in a move some cities have tried and others are considering in these hard times, San Francisco's transportation agency, anticipating a multi-million dollar deficit, is proposing a plan it says will help ease parking snafus. It wants to extend parking meter hours — up to midnight in the trendiest neighborhoods, and on Sundays everywhere.

Those who already find it hard to park on the streets in the day time are not happy.

"It's putting the penalty on the people who can least afford it," said Peter Govorchin, a music teacher for the San Francisco public schools who said he already averages $500 in parking tickets each year.

The move would raise more than $8 mil-

Debunking health care myths

Editor:

We've heard a lot about health care reform all summer long, from Sarah Palin's "death panels" to Republicans ranting that the new health plan is actually a secret code for killing granny. The president keeps telling Americans over and over what is in the new proposed legislation but it seems to go in one ear and out the other for most people.

For Republicans, Democrats and inattentive bystanders here is what is being considered in the current health care plan:

Keep the health care you have if you so desire; continue to see the doctor of your choice.

The plan equitably shares costs and contains costs between the public, large and small businesses, and government, and enables small businesses (under 50 employees) to afford to provide health care for its employees.

It increases the quality of care for all Americans and reforms the insurance market so that you never lose your coverage. The plan keeps what works in health care and repairs what's broken.

It forces private plans to be more competitive on both price and quality.

Tax credits would be given to citizens at or below three times the federal poverty line, on a sliding scale, based on income and what you can afford.

This plan specifically prohibits government funding of health care for illegal immigrants and for abortion services.

It pays for, but does not mandate, voluntary discussions with your doctor about what level of end-of-life care you want (private insurance does not currently pay for these discussions).

Under this plan, it would be illegal for insurance companies to deny coverage based on pre-existing conditions or to cancel coverage when you become ill or injured.

The plan pays for preventive care, such as cancer screenings (prevention is cheaper than treatment).

Finally, the plan increases communication and cooperation between hospitals, clinics and doctor's offices to reduce overhead, contain costs and improve quality of care.

What's not to love about this plan? For conservatives it has fiscal restraints and denies illegal immigrants health care and bans government-funded abortions. For Democrats it offers universal coverage to almost everyone and brings health care up to date.

So why are Republicans, insurance and pharmaceutical companies and the Medical monopoly fighting this new plan tooth and nails?

Looking a gift horse in the mouth

THE SANTA MONICA-MALIBU UNIFIED School District's Equity Fund is the latest flap to hit our schools. The scheme was drafted by former Superintendent John Deasy to help close the achievement gap between rich and poorer schools and to equalize the academic playing field for all. The Board of Education approval came in early 2004.

The program establishes a voluntary 15 percent surcharge, or tax, on monetary donations to schools, activities and programs. The money collected from the Deasy Tax is put into a common pot or Equity Fund and redistributed by the board using a weighted formula based on need. "Scholarships or small in-kind donations, like a computer, would be exempt from the collective pot, but large donations, like money for a playground, would not," Deasy said at the time.

The net result of this socialistic policy is that well-off schools subsidize schools with lesser resources. The thinking is that students attending under-supported schools will benefit from the infusion of cash. But, nobody talks about how removing resources from even well-endowed schools may hurt their students.

In essence, it's comparable to allowing total strangers to take $15 out of your $100 donation to your favorite charity and siphon it off to another charity of their own choosing without even your OK.

Within months of its implementation, a major contributor to John Adams Middle School's music and arts programs withdrew its support. Thousands of dollars in annual revenue were lost. The contributor informed JAMS that they were only interested in supporting music and arts programs, and if that couldn't be accomplished, they would walk no matter how worthwhile other programs were. How many other contributions have been lost for similar reasons is unknown.

A report presented to the board on Oct. 15 stated that a total of $362,232 had been contributed to the fund in fiscal year 2008/2009 — the bulk of the money coming from various PTA organizations.

A lot of parents are very angry about the district's new get tough policy on collecting the controversial Deasy Tax. Postings on Malibu High School parents' Yahoo site discuss withholding money to the PTA, but say it's OK to give hard goods to skirt the gift fund.

Three Malibu schools contributed nothing to the fund in 2007/2008 but received money from it. People are asking when these schools will make up for the year they contributed nothing?

Multiple sources tell me that Chief Academic Officer Sally Chou said the district cannot force schools to give, however, she was involved with a new, punitive policy of curtailing field trips unless contributions are made. I asked Chou and she responded, "I did not single-handedly make the decision to cut off all field trips since my job was to monitor the implementation of the Equity Fund." In a subsequent e-mail, she emphasized, "I did not make that decision [to cut field trips]."

The Santa Monica Band Parents Association hadn't paid the controversial Deasy Tax because they thought it didn't apply to them. Their May 4 meeting minutes note, "The current superintendent insists on compliance as per district regulations." After a number of SMBPA board members resigned, replacement board members have promised to pay up for the entire five years.

The Deasy Tax should be jettisoned. Robbing Peter to pay Paul is just bad business and divisive.

What's faster, trains or busses?

Friends4ExpoTransit cheerleader Darrell Clark and I disagree on which is better: mass transit (Expo Light Rail) on its own, exclusive right-of-way, or operating in the middle of crowded city streets?

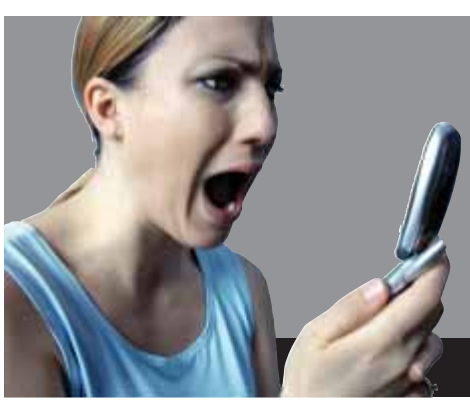

Clark wrote in a letter to the editor two weeks ago chiding me, "How would trains following regular traffic signals in their own dedicated lane cause 'lengthy traffic delays' at intersections any more than current buses do?

In addition to requiring removal of two traffic lanes on Colorado Avenue, 270-foot long, Expo Light Rail trains running at street level will block all cross streets intersections for 40 to 45 seconds. With traffic signal priority for trains, there will be lengthy red cycles and long delays on cross streets intersecting with Colorado (or any light rail cross street). Unsignalized intersections will experience similar delays. A bus can cross an intersection in four or five seconds — far less time than the lengthy delay required by a train.

With two dozen Expo trains per hour during rush hour, traffic will be gridlocked for many blocks on either side of the Expo Line, especially during peak periods. Even the Expo Construction Authority acknowledges negative traffic impacts. Therefore, Clarke's statement that Expo "trains won't create 'lengthy traffic delays' at intersections any more than current buses do" is utter nonsense.

Clarke and other transit advocates would do the public a better service by being honest and advocate for completely grade-separated routes so trains don't interfere with existing street traffic and can operate totally independent of clogged surface streets and in complete safety.

Your representatives should make you mad

IMAGINE A WORLD EXEMPT FROM parking tickets, where gym membership is free and health care is second-to-none. In order to receive these benefits, you also only have to work two, maybe three days a week — a time period during which you will be shuttled around in a nice car. The other days of the week you can spend at home with your family. Luckily, every weekend is a long weekend and you won't have to be back at work until Tuesday evening.

This job description might seem too good to be true, but for our so-called "representatives" in Congress who enjoy incredible job perks ranging from free meals to membership in swank health clubs, all at taxpayer expense, it seems that there is such a thing as a free lunch — literally and figuratively!

Congressional salaries are certainly generous enough, with members of Congress receiving $174,000 a year on average, and people in leadership positions making more. However, for many Congressmen who belong to the so-called "Millionaire's Club," this is negligible in comparison to their net worth. (Senator John Kerry (D-MA), who heads up the club, has a net worth of $167.8 million, while Senator Herb Kohl (D-WI), at the lower end of the spectrum, boasts a net worth of $5.6 million dollars.)

Incredibly, American taxpayers are underwriting lavish perks for these very same millionaires, as well as their congressional cohorts.

For example, while veterans were being forced to suffer poor service and deplorable conditions at Walter Reed Army Hospital, politicians were being whisked up to Ward 72 at the very same hospital via a "golden elevator," where they can enjoy medical treatment surrounded by chandeliers, fine china and original artwork. Should members of Congress or their staff not be able to make the trip to Ward 72, a private, on-call doctor is also on hand at the Capitol.

On top of their six-figure salaries and the millions in taxpayer dollars spent to maintain offices in their home state and in the nation's capital, Congress also enjoys other benefits such as free life insurance, a generous retirement plan for life, 32 fully reimbursed road trips home a year, and travel to foreign lands.

Unfortunately, there's more. While more than 15 million Americans are currently out of work and the rest of the nation is laboring longer hours for less pay, Congress enjoys a three-day, Tuesday-to-Thursday work week. Believe it or not, since returning to session, the only time the House of Representatives has actually voted on a Friday was when they approved a 5.8 percent increase in their own budget.

Then there's the way Congress manages the nation's checkbook, running up deficits and spending outlandish sums of money on pork barrel projects. If you or I were to manage our finances this way, we'd quickly find ourselves out on the streets.

Pork barrel spending, hastily passed legislation, partisan bickering, a skewed work ethic, graft and moral turpitude have all contributed to the public's increasing dissatisfaction with congressional leadership. Thus, it is little wonder that a recent CNN poll shows Congress with a 29 percent approval rating.

Congress should be America's representative body, yet too many of its members bear little resemblance to those they have been elected to represent. Many of our politicians live like kings. Chauffeured around in limousines, flying in private jets and eating gourmet meals, all paid for by the American taxpayer, they are far removed from those they represent.

Does this make you mad as hell? It should. There is no reason why the American people should be taking this kind of abuse from people who supposedly are representing them.

The average American understandably feels helpless and disconnected, yet whose fault is it really? As the old maxim goes, people get the government they deserve. For too long, Americans have failed to hold their elected representatives accountable. Thus, the onus is on us, "we the people."

Let this be the starting point for you to turn the television sets off and do something about these problems. Keep track of what they're doing and how they're voting. Make your voices heard to the representatives who are doing a poor job of representing you, and if they don't listen, take action and remove them from office.

TEEMING WITH LIFE? Various environmental factors are taking their toll on plankton the world over. This is bad news because, besides serving as a primary food source for many fish and whales, plankton plays a crucial role in mitigating global warming. Pictured: Microscopic phytoplankton from McMurdo Sound in Antarctica.

Tiny critters and the giant problem

Dear EarthTalk

Why is the plankton in the oceans dying? And what does this mean for the health of the oceans and marine life?

Marilynn Block
Portland, OR

AS THE LOWEST LINK ON THE MARINE food chain, plankton — that tiny aquatic plant, animal and bacterial matter floating throughout the world's oceans — is a vital building block for life on Earth. Besides serving as a primary food source for many fish and whales, plankton plays a crucial role in mitigating global warming.

Indeed, the ocean is the world's largest "carbon sink": As much as one-third of man-made CO2 emissions are stored in the oceans and therefore do not contribute to global warming. This is because its plant component, phytoplankton (its animal component is called zooplankton), pulls massive amounts of carbon dioxide (CO2) out of the atmosphere as it photosynthesizes.

But various environmental factors are taking their toll on plankton the world over. The U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) reported recently that marine phytoplankton is declining across the oceans. Even Canadian cod fishermen are noticing that the plankton-feeding fish they catch are often nearly starving as a result of lack of this crucial food source.

A 2007 study published in the scientific journal Nature found that human-caused increase in CO2 pollution is altering the pH (acidity) levels in the oceans. This change in chemistry is expected to have adverse effects on the entire ecosystem. More acidic ocean water inhibits the ability of shell-forming marine organisms — from plankton to mollusks to corals — to form properly. Smaller and less healthy populations of plankton would be bad news for all the other creatures above it on the ocean's food chain.

Higher water temperatures, also attributable to our fossil fuel addiction, can also have a devastating effect on plankton. A recent report in the Journal of the Marine Biological Association of the United Kingdom noted that, in the Adriatic Sea cooler winter conditions — which are less frequent in a warmer world — are needed for plankton production and nutrient availability. Furthermore, warmer sea temperatures can cause "blooms" of other sea life (such as happens with algae), resulting in oxygen starvation in the water, a condition that is devastating to plankton and other marine creatures and organisms.

In other situations, blooms of phytoplankton themselves — the tiny plants can gorge on the nutrients from the run-off from farms and lawns on land — can lead to oxygen starvation in the water. "The decomposition of these multitudes of phytoplankton removes oxygen from seawater, creating oxygen-poor 'dead zones' where fish cannot live," reports Carly Buchwald, a researcher at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

Satellite imagery shows that these "dead zones" are expanding. Some scientists are advocating "iron fertilization" — the spreading of large amounts of iron across the world's seas — to spur plankton growth. But others worry that such tinkering with complex ecosystems could have potentially harmful effects.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Parking Structures 1-6 Façade Improvement Project
Artwork installation work is ongoing in parking structures 2, 4 & 5. Expect delays upon exit.

Annual Street Improvement Project
Bus pads will be replaced at various locations along Santa Monica Boulevard between 16th and 18th streets, and between Stanford and Franklin streets; and along 28th Street between Colorado Avenue and Exposition Boulevard. Bus pad replacement will involve lane closures. A water line repair on Euclid Court at Washington Avenue will require lane closure(s) in the area of Washington and Euclid Street. Sidewalk replacement will take place on 17th, 18th and 19th streets between Montana Avenue and San Vicente Boulevard. Also, there will be limited parking on 14th, 15th and 16th streets between Idaho and Marguerita avenues.

Big Blue Bus Campus Expansion (1620 Sixth. St.)
No parking along the west sidewalk of Seventh Street between Colorado Avenue and Olympic Boulevard until March 2010.

Parking Structures 1-6 Façade Improvement Project
Artwork installation work is ongoing in parking structures 2, 4 and 5. Expect delays upon exit.

Street and Park Lighting Project
The most disruptive underground work is done. There will be some temporarily lost parking at many various locations throughout the city.

Council wants to see what L.A. does first

up in Los Angeles during a two-year moratorium ranges from several hundred to over a thousand, allowed to proliferate despite the halt because of what many describe as poor enforcement and the hardship exemption under which many of the businesses were presumably allowed to open.

"Los Angeles could write a textbook on how not to handle this issue and for god's sakes, I hope Santa Monica does not copy Los Angeles," said Bruce Mirken, spokesman for the Marijuana Policy Project in Washington D.C.

Mirken points to the cities that have put together regulations after which Santa Monica city officials could model a local law, including Oakland and San Francisco.

"They set up a fairly detailed set of regulations that include everything from security and disability access to requirements of minimum distances to schools," he said. "They managed to sort through neighborhood concerns and concerns of patients to come up with a model that seems to work."

Eton, Simon and Uhrman are motivated by personal experiences, having seen family and friends suffer from cancer and benefit from medical marijuana.

The problem is that many of the dispensaries in Los Angeles are uninviting, secured in some cases by armed guards and metal detectors, Eton said.

"They look very creepy and I think for the people who need it, they wouldn't go into it," Eton said.

The women saw Santa Monica as a prime location for their pharmacy, a city that has world-class medical and research facilities but no dispensary.

Knowing little about cannabis, the business partners decided to do their research, learning more about the benefits of medical marijuana and becoming more convinced of its need in Santa Monica. They found an ideal location on Wilshire Boulevard that once housed an old rare coin shop, coming already equipped with bullet proof glass, security cameras and a system of doors in which one doesn't open until the other closes.

The women said they understand some of the apprehension concerning dispensaries but note they don't fit the profile of the traditional "pot dealer." Eton, originally from Boston, was a long-time interior designer before moving on to become a motivational speaker for Weight Watchers. Her husband is a dentist in Beverly Hills and together they raised three children.

Simon worked in the nonprofit sector for 19 years handling financial services . She was born in Ohio but spent most of her schooling years in California where she and her husband, an attorney, raised three children. Neither have any grandchildren.

A former teacher and mother of five children, Uhrman facilitates and participates in caregiver support groups. Her husband, an attorney, suffers from multiple sclerosis.

"I think (Santa Monica officials) don't want to deal with the bad element," Eton said. "Their argument is they don't need one because anyone in Santa Monica can go into Venice where there are loads of them."

"But they leave the revenue that comes in," Simon added. "The other part of our business would be holistic and there's certainly sales tax generated from that."

State law prohibits marijuana sales for profit.

The women said they plan to wait and see whether dispensaries will be allowed in Santa Monica before considering another city.

Mayor Ken Genser said that if the zoning ordinance is changed to allow dispensaries, he would make sure that the business licenses are not transferable to future owners who might not be as honest in their operations.

He notes as an example a business that would be licensed as a family restaurant but then after changing hands in ownership, would serve alcohol and appeal more to a college crowd.

"Some of the places that I have seen just by having gone to businesses near them look pretty unsavory," Genser said.

Councilman Bob Holbrook said he is opposed to opening any dispensaries in Santa Monica, believing they aren't necessary in the city because there are several of them located within feet of the Santa Monica-Los Angeles border.

He said the businesses can be problematic, requiring armed guards and attracting dealers who hang out in front of the store and offer to sell marijuana for even cheaper.

Holbrook, who attended a seminar that discussed issues of medical marijuana dispensaries, said some businesses take in $5 or $6 million in cash from cannabis sales.

"I know people think there is nothing wrong with marijuana use but I am concerned about all of that cash," Holbrook said. "I do support marijuana use for people who absolutely need it because of medical conditions ... but I would like L.A. to figure out a way you can do that without supplying to drug abusers."

Samohi falls to 2-1 in Ocean League

were short on the tools to defend against the pass without the help of sophomore cornerback Kori Garcia, who was suspended for Friday's game after throwing a punch at a Beverly Hills player the week before.

"(The Centaurs) pass 45 times a game, so we'll have to be ready for that," said Chris Featherstone in anticipation after the Vikings' win over Beverly Hills.

For the most part, the Centaurs didn't pass for long yards; screen passes, five-yard outs and short dumps composed a large portion of their passing gains, but even these modest movements made a big difference.

Helped by receptions from senior wide receivers Edwin Tillman, Ijumaa Armstrong and Devin Sylvester, the Centaurs put up four unanswered touchdowns before the half was even close to ending.

Samohi's only points of the first half came a few minutes later when senior quarterback Garrett Safron hammered one in from the 2, propelled across the plain by a push in the back by junior running back Brandon Taylor. The Vikings finished the half down 28-6.

After the break, things didn't improve much.

The Centaurs scored three more touchdowns on big passes to Tillman, Sylvester, and on a Tidwell fumble recovery off a dropped pitch to Taylor, in that order.

But with the start of the fourth quarter came a change in luck for the Vikings who defied their 49-6 deficit and scored three touchdowns in three minutes. The first resulted from a 5-yard touchdown run by Donovan Citrowski, the second from a 63-yard completion to senior half back Luke Zelon, and the third on a Safron scramble, bringing the score to its final count with two minutes remaining.

"I thought we had a pretty good game plan," said Clark after the game. "We marched down the field pretty well on them all day but we struggled in the red zone; some frustrating turnovers again killed us. You know, we can't turn the ball over against this team, obviously. We've got to keep up with them."

Though hurt by the loss, Clark also expressed pride in his players for their strong push at the end, remaking on how much of an improvement he's seen in attitude and output since the team's late-game rollover against Morningside earlier this season.

"I think the most disappointing part was we were really confident coming in to the game. We really thought we had these guys," Zelon said.

The senior and captain added that the team had breakdowns on defense, especially in the secondary, that resulted in Centaur touchdowns.

"We just have to push through this and I know we can win," said Taylor, who carried for a handful of large gains even long after the Vikings had fallen hopelessly behind. "We had too many turnovers; we've just got to hold the ball and push through it. Our line was doing pretty good, I've just got to hit the holes harder. I can get it.

"Next week will be better."

Oakland council smarting after extending meter times

lion a year, free up more parking spots and help business, says the San Francisco Metropolitan Transit Agency. But San Francisco, always game for a good fight, is in for a battle royale if other cities that have proposed or enacted meter changes are any indication.

Just across the Bay Bridge, the Oakland City Council is still smarting after it extended parking meters by two hours and increased rates and fines. That led to such a revolt — including recall petitions — that the new rules were rescinded last month, three months after they took effect.

Earlier this year, when Chicago, desperate for revenue, leased its parking meter system for 75 years to Morgan Stanley for $1.15 billion, parking meter hours were extended, rates were quadrupled, citation fees were hiked and Mayor Richard Daley's approval ratings fell to their worst level, 35 percent.

Parking meters have become such a political issue that in St. Petersburg, Fla., mayoral candidates have run on proposals to either eliminate all parking meters downtown or reduce meter enforcement hours.

In San Francisco, where the SFMTA unveiled a 37-page study on extending parking meters on Oct. 20, the battle lines are being drawn.

On the nay side are small-business owners, residents who live in commercial areas, the anti-war group A.N.S.W.E.R. (for Act Now to Stop War and End Racism), the parking control officers union and Mayor Gavin Newsom.

On the aye side are environmental activists and members of the Board of Supervisors, as well as residents, who argue that San Francisco can never have a first-class public transit system if it continues to raise fares and cut service while cars get a free pass, at least at night.

SURF REPORT

Surf Conditions Water Temp: 66°

Swell Forecast

We should see another burst of southerly swell, bringing waist to chest high surf from 180-190 degrees with 14-second periods. NW wind swell is looking nil.

Long Range Synopsis

The southerly swell should back off to waist high. NW wind swell is looking weak so far, so west facing breaks would likely see just knee+ surf.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Jensen is 'living the dream'

with cancer has inspired him to commit his life to the Prostate Cancer Foundation.

"It breaks my heart ... that I can't tell him 'I've got it, I've got the drug for you, and you're going to be cancer-free within the year.' It's devastating. I don't want any other son or daughter to ever, ever have to do that," Jensen said. He is confident, he added, that "we can find the cure. It's not far off."

Jensen will continue working to bring the cure closer this month, working as a spokesman for Movember. This global movement, which is appearing in the United States for its third year, aims to fight prostate cancer through the unusual vehicle of facial hair.

Movember's name — contraction of "mustache" and "November" — tells all there is to know about the event. Around the world, men put down their razors for the month of November and allow their mustaches to serve as a "pink ribbon." Participants raise money for prostate cancer research through sponsors; more importantly, though, Movember promotes awareness about prostate cancer, which affects 1 in 6 men.

"When they asked me to help out with Movember, all I could think was 'What took you so long?'" said Jensen, whose mustache is already apparent on his face. "I can grow a great mustache. I'm thinking about dying mine."

As important as the fight against prostate cancer is to Jensen, it isn't the only thing occupying his mind. Even more important to him is William, his 10-year-old son.

Jensen said adapting to the responsibilities of fatherhood proved to be one of his most life-changing experiences.

"Learning to be responsible for someone else was huge for me," Jensen said, explaining that, "tennis is an extremely selfish sport ... It takes a real tunnel vision and extreme focus. I went from 'me, me, me,' to 'Billy, Billy, Billy.' Now it's all about what I can give to this little boy."

Now, though he remains firmly rooted in Santa Monica, Jensen regularly travels to Florida in order to spend time with his son, who is following in his father's footsteps, attending a tennis academy.

Jensen's work — in tennis, television, and now with the Prostate Cancer Foundation — has taken him around the world. However, he seems to have found his niche here in Santa Monica. Since moving from Hollywood four years ago, he has become a bona fide Santa Monican. He is a regular patron of the Main Street and Arizona Avenue Farmers' Markets, rides a skateboard around town running errands, and met "Kate the Great," his girlfriend of three years, on a walk down Montana Avenue. The city's laid back atmosphere is a perfect match for Jensen, who calls himself "the biggest 10-year-old in the world."

"In this town, you could go to a fancy dinner and wear surf shorts if you wanted to. That's a nice thing for a guy like me," said Jensen, adding, "I don't think I have a bad day living over here."

Living in a city he loves and working for a cause he is passionate about seems to be enough to make Jensen happy.

"I'm living the dream," he said. "I'm absolutely living an amazing dream."

Put on some music tonight, Aquarius

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Pressure builds financially. You might not be able to handle a problem and stay at a certain level without getting more out of control. You will feel generally out of control. You see an either/or situation evolve. Tonight: Get a different perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You are more in control than you realize. Recognize when you can no longer evoke a strong response. Others feel wacky and out of control, and until they process and settle down, you won't be able to gain an understanding. Tonight: Claim your power, even without support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★ You could feel as if you dropped several balls at once, and they are all rolling around in different directions. Your ability to communicate and dot your i's and cross your t's helps solidify your mind-set. Tonight: Talking up a storm.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You are juggling friends and goals. Somehow the juggling doesn't work, and different pieces of the puzzle seem to be unavailable. Know when to let go and move on. It might be a hard realization. Tonight: Get together with friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Your ability to understand what is happening within a relationship helps many, though they could be reactive. Know when you have had enough or are barking up the wrong tree. Rather than get angry, just move on. Tonight: A must appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You might want to understand what is happening with others, as suddenly events toss you topsy-turvy. You are upset and reflective at the same time. Do little and understand more. This is the only policy. Tonight: Reach out for more information.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Deal with others directly if you want results. You might not get a completely positive answer. You might need to rethink a situation carefully before launching into action. Be willing to see another point of view. Only then will you find a solution. Tonight: Togetherness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Others challenge you, perhaps more than you'd anticipated. Your way of handling a matter might change radically because someone challenges you. Your sense of justice leads you to a different perspective. Tonight: Let your hair down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Dive into work without a thought of stopping or slowing down. Know what is enough and what is acceptable. Listen to news that comes forth. Investigate the options presented, but don't miss a beat! Tonight: Oh yes, the easy chair, and your favorite one at that.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Keep focusing on the creative approach and the dynamic way of handling a situation, project or problem. A brainstorming session, though challenging, still could bring many unthought-of ideas. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Pressure builds, and no matter which way you go or what you think, steam keeps building. Yes, you are in the proverbial celestial pressure cooker. Hang in there -- relief is around the corner. Tonight: Put on some music.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Even if others go up in smoke with today's pressures, you feel much better than you have in a while. If you are in the right mood and up for a change and a little flash, today is a great day. But remember, not everyone is having as good of a time as you. Tonight: Rolling along.

Happy birthday

This year, flexibility is a must if you want to make headway and feel good about yourself. Others are often tense and uptight. You cannot change their mood, but you can change how you approach them. Misunderstandings happen too easily, so relax with the moment. Confirm communication and double-check meetings, and everyone will be happier. Others will present many different ideas. If you are single, the issue is not if or when, but who you will choose! If you are attached, allow for more differences, and respect them. The strength of your bond will evolve through that attitude. TAURUS zeros in on you.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from ★ (easiest) to ★★★★★ (hardest).

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) A 40-year-old man accidentally fatally shot himself in Imperial, Mo., in September while teaching gun safety to his girlfriend. The gun fired when he was quizzing her to recognize whether a gun's safety mechanism was engaged or not. (2) Tom Elton, 54, and Brenda Blondell, 59, both convicted murderers who became prison-rights activists, eventually won parole, continued their community work together in the Vancouver, British Columbia, area, and married each other. However, in June, police arrested Elton and charged him with murdering Blondell.

■ In August 2006, the St. Petersburg Times profiled Michael Wiley, 39, of Port Richey, Fla., an enthusiastic driver despite having lost both arms and half a leg in a childhood accident. Wrote the Times: "He guides the key into the ignition with his mouth. Turns it with his toes. Shifts with his knee. Bites the headlight switch. Jams his stump of a left arm into the steering wheel and whips it around." On the minus side, his license was revoked long ago, and reckless driving charges flourish, including the latest, one day after the Times story ran. (And three weeks later, he was charged with domestic assault, using his forehead.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

1772 American Revolutionary War: Samuel Adams and Joseph Warren form the first Committee of Correspondence.

1783 In Rocky Hill, New Jersey, US General George Washington gives his "Farewell Address to the Army".

1795 The French Directory succeeds the French National Convention as the government of Revolutionary France.

1861 American Civil War: Western Department Union General John C. Fremont is relieved of command and replaced by David Hunter.

1868 Time zone: New Zealand officially adopts a standard time to be observed nationally

1914 Russia declares war on the Ottoman Empire.
