Business growing for new products made from old sails

BY NICK SALAZAR
Daily Press Intern

Two brothers are working to eliminate waste from discarded sailboat sails by innovating new uses for the recycled material. Mathew and John Paul "JP" MacDonell, founders of Urban Barrels, have expanded their product line and hired interns to increase the number of sails rescued from local landfills.

The brothers launched a successful Kickstarter campaign in the summer of 2014, raising $21,000 to create a backpack constructed in part from recycled sailboat sails.

"It's been about a year since we launched our Kickstarter and now we're kind of full throttle, Mat and I are working full time," said JP, "We've just grown since we ended that Kickstarter campaign, month over month."

The brothers credit this growth in part to their recycled sailboat sail program, which make their products both sustainable and unique.

"A lot of our products are one of a kind," said JP, "We're making production runs that are limited, from one to 25 to 50."

The process begins when a sailboat sail is damaged.

"Once a sail is ripped or torn, if it can't be repaired it will just literally be thrown away, which will then be taken to a landfill," explained JP, "Our motivation was to get ahead of this process."

The brothers have worked to spread the word about their recycling program along the California coastline.

"We've just really gotten around, reaching out to sail shops up and down the coast, and with friends and family that have boats in different marinas," said JP. Urban Barrels' has found a receptive maritime community enthusi-

Samohi grad quitting job to volunteer abroad

Amy Valdes could continue living Santa Monica, climbing the career ladder and enjoying a measure of stability.

Or she could ditch it all to satisfy her longtime desire to travel abroad and help people in underserved communities.

"If I don't do it now, I'm never going to do it," she said.

Valdes, a 22-year-old Santa Monica High School alumna, has weighed the options and made up her mind.

She'll soon be quitting her job as a customer service supervisor at Whole Foods and heading to Thailand for a two-week volunteering program that will kick off what she anticipates to be six months of personal growth, new cultural experiences and unforeseen challenges.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," she said. "It's still a little scary. I'm leaving my family and my home and my boyfriend. I'm going on a whim. But I feel like it's something I need to do."

Valdes is part of a millennial generation that has shown an increased interest in volunteerism, according to several studies. Statistics from the Corporation for National and Community Service show that 20.5 percent of Californians ages 20-24 donated their time to nonprofit causes in 2013.

Valdes is going to Thailand on a program run by International Volunteer HQ, a New Zealand-based organization that places volunteers in countries around the world. The group has coordinated volunteer trips for more than 40,000 people in more than 30 countries since its inception in 2007.

Valdes said she knows there are numerous volunteer opportunities in the U.S. but that she wanted to go somewhere where her impact would be even more powerful.

She is planning to participate in an outdoor work program in the Chiang

Lobbying rules miss the mark for a second time

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Santa Monica officials hope the third time will be a charm for the City's proposed lobbying ordinance.

At their Oct. 27 meeting, Council heard the ordinance for the second time and the City Attorney's office said they would need to bring the law back for a third hearing at a future date to accommodate the second set of revisions.

Council took a first pass at rules for regulating local lobbying in July but deemed the original proposal too complicated. Instead, they asked for a revision with direct reference to the rules already in place in West Hollywood. The City Attorney's office presented the revised rules last week.

"The revised ordinance is basic and simple," said the staff report. "It would merely require lobbyists to register with the City, disclose minimal information about their lobbying activities, and pay a fee to cover costs of the registration program. Disclosure requirements relating to lobbyists' compensation, prohibitions on certain activities by lobbyists, exemptions, and reme-

Hospital animal-assisted therapy program embarks on crowdfunding campaign

At UCLA Health, patients are offered a special kind of therapy that does not involve needles, medicine or high-tech machines.

It's the healing power of animal-assisted therapy. Studies have shown that it can bring about physiological benefits such as decreased blood pressure, and lower heart and respiratory rates.

One of the most comprehensive programs in the country, the People-Animal Connection (PAC) at UCLA Health has been offering companionship and warmth to patients for more than 20 years. PAC's 70 human/dog volunteer teams visit more than 1,000 pediatric and adult patients each month.

However, the program is completely donation-based. That means all of the costs associated with running the program come from the generosity of donors.

To help support this vital healing program, PAC is embarking on an online crowdfunding campaign. The UCLA Spark (https://spark.ucla.edu/PAC) campaign will run from Oct. 30 through Dec. 6. The goal is to raise $25,000.

"We wholeheartedly believe that visits with our animal assisted therapy teams directly contribute to patient's' healing process," said Erin Rice, director of the UCLA Health PAC program. "We encourage everyone to check out our campaign site, watch the heartwarming video and donate to our program."

The fundraiser will support a variety of costs including training materials, education, lab testing for the dogs, uniforms and keepsake photos for patients. It will also help the program realize its goal to expand so that even more patients can experience a PAC visit.

Started in 1994, the UCLA People-Animal Connection program has been a vital source of comfort for thousands of in-hospital patients. In addition, PAC is involved with other innovative programs including:

City National's Reading is the Way Up, a reading program for pediatric patients that helps children learn to read and allows them to gain motivational and social skills through interaction with dogs.

The PetPal Program which reunites hospitalized patients at Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center with their own pets in an outdoor setting adjacent to the hospital.

The Stressbusters Program at Powell Library, which strives to provide stress-relieving dog visits with UCLA students during the crazy bustle of finals week.

Dog visits with patients and families of UCLA Health's Operation Mend program which provides medical services to our nation's wounded warriors.

To learn more, watch a video and support the PAC crowdfunding campaign, please visit www.spark.ucla.edu/PAC. UCLA Spark is an online crowdfunding platform that provides critical fundraising support for campus programs, faculty research and student group projects.

A city awash in alcohol

WHEN CITY COUNCIL APPROVED THE Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE) zoning code updates, there were a number of issues that didn't sit well with residents.

The decoupling of parking requirements, renovation height bonuses for historic buildings and operation of child daycare centers in single family neighborhoods were cited for being too business/developer friendly and harmful to neighbors.

One code update that inflamed neighborhood leaders and that was strongly criticized in this space concerned alcohol conditional use permits (CUPS). City Council's change to the code did away with public review of alcohol applications and made the granting of alcohol permits an administrative function under the discretion of a zoning code administrator and/or the Director of Planning.

The new "fast track" code states that prior notice of an alcohol application is no longer required. Now, here's the kicker: residents living near the applicant address are "informed" that a permit to serve alcohol was approved, after the fact, via US Mail.

That determination is a standard form letter and not required to provide details relevant to the application including specific findings or conditions that led to the granting of a permit.

It appears that the city planners and both the Planning Commission and City Council demonstrated a zero concern for the welfare of residents. In the "Drunkest City in California," (Roadsnacks.net, Oct. 1, 2015) our council has made it easier for our boulevards to be jammed with even more alcohol outlets. Well done, guys!

Previously, a public hearing was required on alcohol applications. Residents could comment about the application. Input on conditions such as times alcohol can be sold and even the kinds of alcohol sold – beer and wine or full bar -- were on the table before an alcohol CUP was issued. Not anymore.

By the way, City Hall approval of alcohol sales/service is precursor to obtaining a mandatory California Department of Alcohol Beverage Control (ABC) license to dispense alcoholic beverages. State law mandates that an ABC license is tied to an address, not a property or business owner.

Neighbors or interested parties can appeal the decision to grant an alcohol sales permit. However, an appeal must be filed with the city planning department no more than 14 days from the time the permit was officially approved. And the cost to appeal? $458.66. Keep in mind that neighbors and potential appellants never had an opportunity to be heard on the application to begin with.

All of this came to a head, recently with the approval of an Alcohol Exemption (15ADM-0033) Permit for Mendocino Farms at 631 Wilshire Boulevard. The application was approved by Acting Zoning Administrator Paul Foley on October 14. The location was previously a low-traffic hair salon.

Incidentally, staff was late in mailing notices to neighbors of an October 13 Montana Avenue determination which made it virtually impossible for impacted parties to file an appeal before the appeal deadline. Again, another planning screw up.

The "Alcohol Exemption Zoning Conformance Permit Determination," for 631 Wilshire states that a "request for a Type 41 (on-sale beer and wine) in conjunction with the establishment of a limited service restaurant (Mendocino Farms) with 78 indoor seats located in the 'mixed-use boulevard' zoning district" is approved."

Among the 26 conditions noted in the "Determination" is that alcohol only be served in conjunction with food service. "Hours of alcoholic beverage service shall be 9 a.m to 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday… Alcoholic beverages must be removed from outdoor dining area no later than 10 p.m. (Sunday through Thursday and 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday).

Other conditions implemented require ABC employee training, marketing restrictions (no pub crawls) and prohibitions on entertainment, amusement games and disposable cups. The operator is also responsible for controlling "noisy patrons leaving the restaurant."

While I feel that Mendocino Farms will be a good and responsible operator, the issue here is lack of public input on something that has a potential to greatly diminish the quality of life for adjacent neighbors. Remember, the state issued ABC permit goes to an address and if Mendocino Farms leaves and an irresponsible or inept operator takes over the license, there could be big trouble.

City government has opened the door to a whole raft of potential problems – as has happened many time before in similar situations – especially when the permit holder is irresponsible. Look at "South" and "The Parlor"– both on Wilshire and now closed, "Busby's Sports Bar" that cleaned up its act. Nevertheless, complaints about alcohol-serving establishments are still major quality-of-life issues.

It's obvious that neighbor input should be included in the process before an alcohol permit is granted and not after when it becomes much more difficult or impossible to rescind or modify previously approved conditions.

Council's "OK" of the removal of public input on alcohol permits is an absolute travesty. What on earth were they thinking? Were they even thinking or was this another in a long series of bones negatively impacting residents that elected officials have been tossing to business interests?

Alcohol generates revenue for the city – application fees, business license fees, sales taxes and other forms of revenues fill city coffers. It's one reason why Santa Monica has one of the highest ratios of "alcohol outlets to residents" of any municipality in the state.

Who is going to be first on council to correct this? Who cares enough to give us a voice on alcohol permits?

astic about giving a second life to their sails.

"The response we've been getting is incredible. They're really excited about not throwing their sail away," said JP.

The recycling program has personal origins. "We reclaimed our first sail from our grandparents lake house in Grand Rapids, Michigan," said JP. "It was sitting in the garage in the lake house and about to be thrown away."

While the sail could no longer be used on a boat, the brothers realized there was great potential for this durable material.

"The sailboat sail works really well for building a really durable hat, bag or accessory," said Mat.

Urban Barrels currently uses the recycled sail for a waterproof pocket in their flagship product, the BagTowel, but the brothers are working on expanding their recycling program to include new products.

"We're working on products made completely out of recycled sailboat sail," said Mat. The brothers have continued to build their recycling program as the company grows, and foresee it as a significant component of their brand identity going forward.

"As our recycling program grows and we start to partner with sail manufacturers, we start to see that there are more uses for the sail," said Matt. "The recycling program is going to be a huge part of our program 10 years down the line," added JP.

With any luck, continued growth will allow these two brothers to continue saving damaged sails from landfills. For Mat and JP, their business is as much about work as it is about supporting the local lifestyle they have grown to love.

"That's why we built the product," said JP, "Taking advantage of where we live. Santa Monica is one of the coolest cities, the accessibility to the ocean is unrivaled. Providing this product to this community is awesome because it inspires and motivates people to head down to the beach."

COUNCIL

dies available to members of the public have all been removed from the proposal as per Council's direction. The definition of 'lobbyists' is worded to include contract lobbyists but exclude persons working for the City as employees or consultants."

City Attorney Marsha Moutrie said council concerns over disclosing communication between officials/staff and lobbyists was not part of the revised rules because the Council and City Manager have the ability to regulate those disclosures already.

Despite following past council direction, the new rules were not an immediate hit.

Santa Monica Coalition for a Livable City (SMCLC) said the revised rules would not promote good government.

"It does not serve the public good to have a weak and ineffective lobbying ordinance," said the group in a written letter to the council. "To enact a weak lobbying ordinance would only increase, not decrease residents' skepticism of their city government."

Councilwoman Sue Himmelrich said the rules needed to be more clear in defining some activities and stipulating enforcement.

"I think there are a few items that need to be included in this ordinance before it's ready for primetime," she said.

Council settled on three main revisions: that lobbyists be required to notify the city within 10 days of accepting new business, rules for disclosing expenditures be expanded and wording within the law make clear its application to lobbying at board/commission meetings.

Mayor Kevin McKeown said Council should avoid writing the legislation from their seats.

"What's happened here is the city attorney has come back to us with frankly exactly what we asked for last time but we may have rethought some things," he said.

Councilwoman Gleam Davis cautioned against over complicating the rules again, saying the law should provide the public with necessary information but avoid creating burdensome traps for residents or unduly damage the City's ability to govern.

"I don't want to impinge on people's first amendment rights and I don't want to impinge on the context that help the wheels of city government move," she said.

Expanded rules regarding disclosure of expenditures could cover a broad swath of activity, from the purchase of a cup of coffee to a full scale public relations campaign. However, Councilwoman Pam O'Connor pointed out that no matter how strict the rules might be, they would would be unable to capture advocacy by wealthy individuals who were acting out of personal interest, not financial obligation.

Private citizens have a constitutional right to communicate with government and all forms of that communication, whether it be a comment made at the grocery store or 10,000 mailers sent to neighborhood homes, are protected under the First Amendment. To be considered a lobbyist and subject to the proposed rules, that communication must be done in exchange for payment.

Moutrie had initially said the rules could be revised that night and while the asked for revisions were not overly complicated, she said her department would require additional time to ensure the rules balanced Council's concerns with free speech guarantees.

"Regulating lobbying is really hard because regulating around the First Amendment is always hard as you know," she said.

Rai province, where she could be asked to help with building schools and other facilities, improving residents' access to clean water, developing gardens and maintaining roads, among other tasks. She likely will also have a chance to work on a construction project while living with a local family.

Valdes expects the Thailand trip to be a starting point for ensuing volunteer opportunities in Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, Nepal and India. She's set six months as a target length but could stay longer or shorter depending on her financial situation.

Valdes has set up a crowd-funding account through the FundMyTravel website to raise money for her volunteering expedition.

"The decision to volunteer abroad is not an easy one to make," IHVQ program manager Margarete Lua said, "and Amy is working hard to ensure she can raise sufficient funds for her program fees, airfares, travel insurance and vaccinations."

Valdes started working soon after graduating from Samohi in 2011, but she kept thoughts of traveling in her mind the whole time. Through her job at Whole Foods she learned about the Whole Planet Foundation, which aims to alleviate poverty through micro-loan assistance.

She actually considered volunteering abroad through the Whole Foods foundation, but she wanted to have an extended period of time to immerse herself in the communities.

"It's definitely going to be a culture shock," Valdes said. "But that's what I'm looking for. It's just getting used to doing things a different way and respecting other people's cultures and values. ... I want to be in the raw, real places and get to know the people and have an appreciation for the things I have."

Valdes said she's interested in starting her own business when she returns home. With the photographs she's planning to take during her travels, she eventually wants to make shirts and match the clothing sales with microloans for the communities where the photos were taken.

"This is my starting step," she said. "I'm leaving everything, and I'll figure it out when I get back."

Valdes said she knows there will be language barriers and other challenges but that she's looking forward to a new chapter away from her comfort zone.

"I think a lot of my friends are like, 'Wow, you're actually doing it,'" she said. "With my family, at first they were like 'Good for you,' and now they're like, 'Holy [cow], you're going to be traveling by yourself.' There are mixed feelings of excitement and fear. My boyfriend is sad and worried. But they've all encouraged me to do it. They all know how much I want it."

LEGEND
DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ For an October report, Vice Media located the half-dozen most-dedicated collectors of those AOL giveaway CDs from the Internet's dial-up years ("50 Hours Free!"). Sparky Haufle wrote a definitive AOL-CD collector's guide; Lydia Sloan Cline has 4,000 unique disks; Bustam Halim at one point had 20,000 total, before weeding to 3,000. (The AOL connoisseurs file disks by color, by the hundreds of packaging styles, by number of free hours, and especially by the co-brands -- the rare pearls, like AOL's deals with Frisbee and Spider Man. Their collections, said both Halim and Brian Larkin, are simply "beautiful."

■ In 20th-century Chicago, according to legend, one did not have to be among the living to vote on election day, and a 2013 policy of the city's community colleges has seemingly extended rights of the dead -- to receive unearned degrees. City Colleges of Chicago, aiming to increase graduation numbers, has awarded a slew of posthumous degrees to former students who died with at least three-fourths of the necessary credits to graduate. (The policy also now automatically awards degrees by "reverse transfer" of credits to students who went on to four-year colleges, where they added enough credits, hypothetically, to meet City Colleges' standards.)

From 'Daily Show' to animal house

'Cause Celeb' with Colin Newton

Jon Stewart has always been something a political animal, but these days, he's putting the emphasis on the animal part.

The former host of The Daily Show and his wife Tracey, a former veterinary technician and author of Do Unto Animals, have opened an animal sanctuary in Middletown, N. J., which was already home to some previously mistreated pigs, sheep and other animals that have been rescued from factory farms.

If opening a sanctuary in rural New Jersey is a little more expensive and slightly more time-consuming than you can manage right now, there are plenty of other ways to help the creatures who walk the globe alongside us.

For one, you can shift to a more plant-based diet – not only does the factory farming industry treat animals badly, it's alarmingly unsustainable; it sucks up precious natural resources like land and water, and big beef – beef with a capital "B" – releases tons of methane into the atmosphere every year.

You can also check out some of the animal advocacy groups listed in the Causes directory at Giive.org and see if they could use a friendly hand, hoof or claw. There's no better resource for finding ways to help the fuzzier part of the world's population.

And, speaking of fuzzy creatures – loving the beard, Jon

Visit with a pal, Gem

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ A conversation points you in a new direction, which allows for more creativity and freedom. Tension builds only because you are set on achieving a certain result. Listen to constructive feedback, and allow your imagination to soar. Tonight: Don't act like it is Monday night.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Others won't hesitate to give you feedback. Pay attention to which areas of your life are being discussed. Do you think that perhaps you need to make an adjustment to one or more of them? Emphasize security and long-term concerns. Tonight: Your home is your castle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Keep reaching out to others, especially if you need some help or advice about an important decision. A different perspective will be useful. Listen carefully to the goings-on of others' lives in the process. Don't allow too much chaos to run through your day. Tonight: Visit with a pal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You have very different creative ideas from those of others. You also might note that your audience becomes more critical and smaller as the day goes on. Be expressive and authentic in a conversation with a younger person. Tonight: Do some early holiday shopping.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might resent someone close to you, who could be tripping you up. You seem to be able to accomplish what you want, and you'll add your special finesse to whatever you do. Don't be too invasive when trying to find out what's wrong with a loved one. Tonight: All smiles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You'll make a great effort to get past an issue that you might choose not to share. Perhaps you just are tired or feeling down. A partner is likely to trigger your imagination in order to help you see a situation more realistically. Tonight: Take some much-needed private time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ The emphasis is on success, but you're only successful because you have taken the lead. A meeting could prove to be a hotbed of ideas that are great but costly. Play devil's advocate. You might discover some intriguing ideas for how to gather more funds. Tonight: All smiles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You have done enough research to be able to take the lead in a project. Use caution in an important decision that could be costly or might not come to fruition quickly. A meeting is likely to point you in a new direction. Tonight: Count on hanging out till the wee hours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Reach out to someone who is an expert in his or her chosen field. You'll want to hear a different point of view and detach. You could be overthinking an issue or a conversation by replaying it over and over again in your mind. Tonight: Surf the Web.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You could be amazed by how strong someone else's argument is. You are likely to agree with this person once you understand his or her vision. Nevertheless, you still might want to test out his or her ideas on others. Trust yourself. Tonight: Go along with a loved one's plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ You are able to gain a new perspective when speaking with others. Your immediate knee-jerk response could be off. A partner will invest a considerable amount of time trying to help you find the right path. Express your appreciation. Tonight: Check in on a friend.

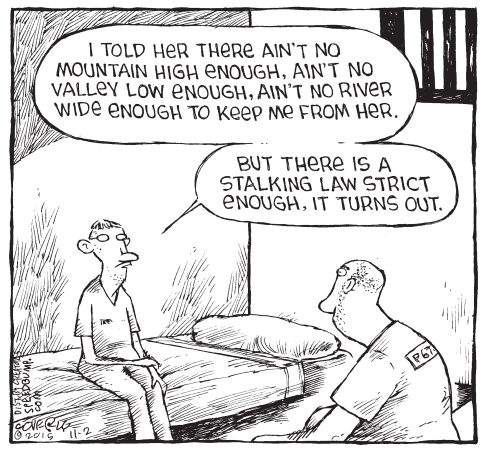

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Others flood the airwaves with their caring ideas and suggestions. Focus on completing what you must, and don't get distracted before you are done. Set aside time for meaningful conversations that are likely to touch you. Tonight: Exercise away your stress

Monday, November 2, 2015

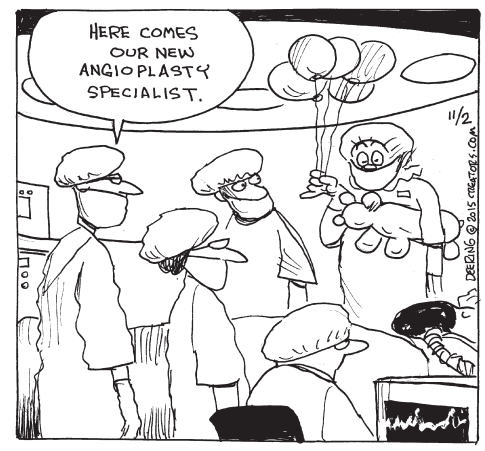

This year you might be concerned about your finances. No matter how much money you have, you will always want more. Your circle of friends and acquaintances expands to allow greater possibilities in your life. If you are single, you will meet someone or several people through your inner circle whom you might want to date. Don't push a relationship to move too fast. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy going out together. You also treasure your time alone as a couple. LEO knows how to trigger you.
