City council to review Promenade redesign concepts

3.0: Plans to redesign the Promenade would make the area less street-like with improved infrastructure.

After adding colorful seating, lawn games, play structures and art installations to the Third Street Promenade over the past year, the team behind Promenade 3.0 is moving forward with the next phase of the project: a comprehensive redesign of the street that is intended to give consumers who increasingly shop online a reason to visit the Promenade.

The Santa Monica City Council will give feedback Tuesday on concept plans for Promenade 3.0, a project the city of Santa Monica and Downtown Santa Monica, Inc., the district's business improvement district, have undertaken to reimagine the Promenade for the 21st century. Tuesday will be the first time that the Promenade 3.0 team show the public what that could look like.

The proposed plans call for new seating areas, event plazas, concession stands, stages and a dedicated zone for the Santa Monica Farmers Market, as well as aesthetic elements such as water features, landscaping and art installations.

"We want it to function more than it has in the past as a space for community events," said Alan Loomis, an urban designer for the city who has been leading Promenade 3.0.

That will require removing the Promenade's curbs and levelling the street, Loomis said. Depending on how much funding the city council and property owners decide to commit to the project, some or all of the sidewalk and paving could be replaced.

"It's configured kind of like a conventional street, and that limits

Registration for a local program that helps low-income seniors pay their rent opens Monday.

With its warm weather and sandy beaches, Santa Monica isn't a typical city where residents can enjoy snowball fights and other traditional winter-weather shenanigans.

Experts predict local temperatures to remain in the mid-to-high seventies throughout next week but Downtown Santa Monica got a little cooler on Friday night when the city's annual ice skating rink opened for business for the first time this holiday season.

Ice, the 8,000 square-foot rink, is

Factory Butte lawsuit

DEAR EARTHTALK: WHAT IS THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE FACTORY BUTTE LANDMARK IN UTAH THAT HAS ENVIRONMENTAL GROUPS FILING LAWSUITS? – M. JENSEN, TAOS, NM

The kerfuffle over Factory Butte, a 6,300-foot peak in Wayne County, Utah about 25 miles east of Capitol Reef National Park, stems from the on-again, off-again nature of federal rules about whether Off-Road Vehicles (ORVs) should be allowed to roam the 5,400 acres of wild desert surrounding it.

Named by white settlers in the mid-19th century who thought its almost-architectural stature resembled a Provo, Utah woolen mill, Factory Butte is the latest flashpoint in a long timeline of disputes over what constitutes fair and proper use of federally managed desert wildlands in Utah and across the Southwest.

Grand Staircase-Escalante and Bear's Ears have been in the news lately given efforts by the Trump administration to ease restrictions on development, but Factory Butte has remained out of the spotlight since a George W. Bush-era ruling to close it to ORVs given potential risks to fragile desert soils and endangered species. But in May 2019, after some 12 years of protection, Trump's Bureau of Land Management (BLM) opened up the desert around Factory Butte to ORVs once again despite protests.

"The agency's decision ensures that one of Utah's most recognizable landscapes will be defaced and damaged for years to come," reports the Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance (SUWA), a Salt Lake City-based conservation group leading the fight to keep ORVs out of fragile desert wildlands. "Contrary to popular myth, these tracks don't simply disappear after the next rain!"

"Faced with public pressure and well-documented damage to the natural resource values of the areas around Factory Butte, the BLM disallowed ORV use in the area in 2006," reports the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), a leading environmental non-profit working with SUWA in suing the BLM over the move in hopes of getting it overturned. "BLM indicated in its environmental impact analysis that the area around Factory Butte should remain permanently closed to unrestricted cross-country travel."

Furthermore, environmental advocates are incensed as to how BLM re-opened the Factory Butte desert to ORVs—that is, without any new environmental reviews of feasibility, and in secrecy without soliciting or considering public comments. "By failing to update earlier environmental analyses, the BLM violated the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) when it failed to, at the very least, conduct a supplemental environmental analysis to account for the significant changes that have occurred in the Factory Butte area over the past decade, including the significant changes being wrought by the climate crisis," says NRDC.

This violation of NEPA is a central tenet of the lawsuit the two non-profits are jointly filing against the Trump administration for opening up the area to ORVs once again. "Unrestricted ORV use in this area is simply incompatible with its fragility. Those who hope to appreciate its awe-inspiring beauty would instead confront a vast web of tire ruts carved into the desert," adds NRDC. "And the area faces a potential loss of its highly vulnerable desert species. We hope our lawsuit once again demonstrates these facts and brings renewed protection of this iconic western landscape."

the scale and the size and the types of events we can stage on the Promenade," he said. "Removing the curbs will give us far more flexibility."

Rios Clementi Hale Studios, the design firm the city hired to develop Promenade 3.0, has also proposed raising the streets that break up the Promenade — Broadway, Santa Monica Boulevard and Arizona Avenue — to the level of the sidewalk to encourage motorists to slow down and overhauling the electrical infrastructure underneath the street.

"The light on the trees today are powered by extension cords that run into the nearest light pole, and for every event, we have to run extension cords everywhere," he said. "We would want at least one event space to be plug-in ready, with all the audiovisual and lighting infrastructure already there."

Loomis said the project is projected to cost $45 to $60 million. Construction would not be able to begin until 2023 or 2024 and would take one to two years.

The city is still exploring funding models, but Loomis said money for the project will likely come from both property owners and the city. A similar funding model was used to construct the Promenade in the 1980s, he said.

"Property owners would need to vote on some sort of assessment district to pay for this, and if they vote no, there's no project, so we need to make sure that partnership between downtown property owners and the city is workable if this is to move forward," Loomis said.

Even if the costs were split 50/50, the city would still need to contribute $20 to $30 million. That could be tricky, given that the city is trying to eliminate millions of dollars in spending over the next 10 years to compensate for ballooning pension costs and eroding revenues from traditional sources like brick-and-mortar retail sales tax.

On the Promenade, total taxable sales rose 4.2% last year after falling 8.2% between 2015 and 2017 as many stores closed due to competition from online retailers. But the Promenade is still peppered with vacant storefronts, and visitors who were surveyed last December identified other issues with the shopping district, such as homelessness and an overly corporate identity.

Loomis said he believes the city and property owners will see the project as an investment that will help the Promenade compete with other shopping destinations in the Los Angeles area.

"Those three blocks do generate 15% of the city's sales tax revenue, so the Promenade is a important component of the city's economic sustainability strategy," he said.

The city council will meet Tuesday, Nov. 5 at City Hall, 1685 Main St.

completed a trial version of the Preserving Our Diversity (POD) program that subsidized rent for 22 seniors.

POD allows the city to keep low-income residents housed at a fraction of what it costs to build affordable housing. The total budget of the program would fund three to four new affordable apartments, based on what it costs the Community Corporation of Santa Monica, the city's largest provider of affordable housing, to build an apartment.

A person living alone who participates in POD will have a minimum monthly after-rent income for $700 and a two-person household will have $1,225 — enough to pay for basic necessities.

Seniors aged 65 or older who have lived in a Santa Monica rent-controlled apartment since before 2000 are eligible for the program. They must have an annual household income less than or equal to $36,550 for a one-person household or $41,800 for a two-person household.

Eligible applicants may register for an application online at santamonica.gov/pod or by calling the Santa Monica Housing Authority at (310) 458-8743 from Monday through Thursday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

All applications will be placed on a waitlist and selected by lottery on a rolling basis over the next year.

The city will hold regular workshops to help with the registration and application process. The first two will be held Nov. 6 at Virginia Avenue Park from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. and at the Santa Monica Main Library from 6 to 8 p.m.

The pilot program began in November 2017 and concluded in January, although 17 remaining participants still receive cash assistance. Five seniors exited the program since 2017. Three started receiving housing vouchers, one moved to another city and another died.

The new phase of POD will provide different amounts of cash assistance to three groups of seniors and raise the eligibility age from 62 to 65, which aligns with federal entitlements like Medicare.

Out of a $2 million total budget, the program will allocate $700,000 to renters who only need up to $250 in subsidies, $1 million to those who need between $250 and $500, and $30,000 to those who need between $500 and $700. The program will serve between 248 and 436 seniors, depending on how many live alone or in two-person households.

An additional $160,000 will fund a limited-term housing specialist position and as-needed staff assistant hours.

located at the intersection of Fifth Street and Arizona Avenue.

The rink will be open until Jan. 20, 2020, and the "winter wonderland" is guaranteed to provide a magical setting for a date or an outing with family and friends, according to organizers.

Interested residents are invited to a community grand opening celebration of Ice at Santa Monica that will feature complimentary ice skating on the illuminated rink, hosted refreshments and a few meal options from the local establishment Social Eats on Thursday, Nov. 7 from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The event will also feature live music and is free to the public.

A skate rental and all-day admission is $15 and locker rentals are available for an additional $5.

Every Sunday, beginning Nov. 10, 2019, until Jan. 19, 2020, the Plaza at Santa Monica will present its new event, Ice Breakers, which will offer free musical performances that will have the whole family on their feet and feeling the groove, according to the website. The rink also offers party cabanas and catering options.

Residents who don't feel confident skating by themselves can choose to purchase private or group lessons that will be taught by instructors with the Randy Gardner School of Skating.

Many of the available instructors have competed in various international competitions and had roles in Hollywood blockbusters like "Blades of Glory," according to the company website. Gardner himself is a two-time Olympian and is inducted in the U.S. Figure Skating Hall of Fame.

Residents can book instructors online by visiting the website downtownsm.com/ice-at-santa-monica.

"We are so excited for the return of the Westside's favorite outdoor ice skating rink and are thrilled to be able to provide an outlet for the community to enjoy and glide into each holiday season," said Mackenzie Carter, director of marketing & communications for Downtown Santa Monica Inc. "Every year we bring a little ice to our beachside community of Santa Monica for lasting memories to be made and holiday fun to be enjoyed between neighbors, family and the community."

Officials added the ice rink will operate if it rains but it will close should conditions become dangerous to skaters or staff. Residents should call the Ice team at 310-260-1199 for more information.

THE RINK'S GENERAL HOURS OF OPERATION ARE:

Monday-Thursday: 2 p.m. to 10 p.m.
Friday: 2 p.m. to midnight
Saturday: 10 a.m. to midnight
Sunday: 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (NOVEMBER 04)

Though you can't totally control what and who attracts you, there are deep forces within you are unfailingly on your side this year. You continually reach for what's really good for you. New places inspire excellent work. Someone sees your talent and helps you develop quickly and in a lucrative direction. Libra and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 45, 3, 28 and 31.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You don't really think about whether you are attracted or repelled by a situation. You just are. You can trust this intrinsic and intuitive knowledge. It resonates from your core.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Strong feelings usually demand attention, while mild ones hum along in anonymity. It's easy to move through feelings when you know what they are. The simple way is just to ask, "What is this feeling?"

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The perception of you that should matter most is your own. Even so, thinking "I'm doing great" is far less confident an inner dialogue than no inner dialogue at all. True confidence needs no validation, including from the self.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Striving to be something you're not is either a silly goal or a stroke of genius. How are you going to know who you are and who you're not unless you dare to stretch your self-concept and try different things?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The secret to telling a good story is starting at the beginning and stopping at the end. A common mistake is to start the story way before the true beginning and end it long after the optimal conclusion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). What does it mean to believe in yourself? Certainly, taking excellent care of yourself is part of it, as is recognizing your need for novelty and challenge, especially socially.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It would be easy to judge those we don't know, understand or agree with. Instead of trying to stop that instinct, get curious about the person's motivation and the need to judge will naturally fall away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The one who takes initiative always has a well-earned advantage because making the first move takes extra energy and vision and it also incurs more risk. Be first today. It will be worth it for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Relationships can balance without being equal in measure. Much depends on where the fulcrum is placed, which is a mysterious, deeply rooted agreement that both parties make often in complete unawareness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). People with spicy goals attract and intrigue. However, when it comes to conversation, the topic doesn't need to be all that exciting in order to make a fun conversation out of it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Easygoing relationships are the most comfortable, but not always the most memorable or conducive to personal growth. As frustrating as difficult people can be, they are usually the ones who make you better.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'd like to think that you're still deciding how you feel about a situation, but the fact is that you don't get to decide. The feelings come whether you tell them to or not. Your first job is to figure out what they are.

Intellectual Moon

The intellectual Aquarius moon would like to remind us that the stories in our heads have much more to do with our happiness than anything that's really going on. It's not hard to consciously change the story, but don't be surprised if your subconscious takes a while to catch up. New narratives have to be retold many times before they become our own.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTION

"I'm a 39-year-old Virgo. On the outside, I'm a dutiful wife, a thoughtful friend and a good mother. I smile whenever I'm around people. But as soon as the door shuts, I have to admit that life is overwhelming to me. Sometimes I think I can't handle it, even though I know that it's everything I wished for since I was a small child. I have everything I always wanted, and I'm not enjoying it because of this constant, exhausting self-talk." Virgos have a tendency to make their analysis a god, obeying the dictates of the constant ticker tape going through the head – This is good... That is not good... You must please this person at the expense of your own happiness... etc. Some of these thoughts are distortions, many are outright lies, and much of the content is just plain unnecessary and unhelpful to daily life. Experiment with methods of calming your thoughts. Hard exercise will do it. Meditation works for some. For others, committing to a very difficult challenge has a way of aligning thought, purpose and attention to leave the "monkey brain" behind. It can also help to simply accept yourself, mental chatter and all.

COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND

A cameo by Matthew McConaughey in the "Between Two Ferns" movie proves he can be serious about his work without losing his sense of humor. True to his Scorpio nature, McConaughey is a master of transformation, whether losing weight to play a dying man or losing layers of darkness to light up a romantic comedy. McConaughey has natal moon and Pluto in disciplined Virgo. Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.
