Lawmakers push for building boom ahead of population growth

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

The population in Los Angeles County will grow by more than one million people over the next twenty years, according to a preliminary forecast by the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG). SCAG unveiled the new estimate at a meeting of lawmakers and business leaders in Los Angeles to talk about fixing the state's housing shortage.

SCAG forecasts the population will grow from its current level of 10.2 million residents to nearly 11.2 million by 2035, according to the study released at the 16th annual Mayoral Housing, Transportation and Jobs Summit.

"What we cherish the most – our region's quality of life – is at stake if we cannot build more housing or build and maintain the transportation infrastructure necessary to accommodate this growth," said Hasan Ikhrata, SCAG's executive director.

At the meeting, developers and architects praised a new law that requires local jurisdictions to report their annual increase in housing stock to the state. Every city is allocated a percentage of new housing to build in a Regional Housing Assessment. SCAG produces the assessment for Los Angeles County.

In the past, there have been no consequences for cities that fail to keep up with their allocations. That's about to change Jan. 1.

Under SB 35, municipalities that fail to reach certain state-mandated goals will find their local agencies overruled by a state streamlining process to get devel-

Amid the tourists and street performers who pack the Santa Monica Pier day after day, you may bump into local entrepreneur Sara Hicks walking with one of her employees.

Hicks prefers to take one-on-one meetings with her employees to the beach. Tech companies are notoriously concerned about office culture, and the founder of Reaction Commerce is no exception. The former Vice President at Etsy believes the sight of some sand and the sound of ocean waves creates a calming backdrop for her growing e-commerce company.

"I think walking resets the mind," Hicks said in an interview with the Daily Press in her office on Main Street. "You're forced into a different zone or energy by being out in nature. There's something that reduces the tension so if there's a conversation where you have to give more direct feedback it makes it a little less challenging."

Hicks' start-up, Reaction Commerce, is tucked away in an office building above Tim Clark Design, Inc. A recent visit found empty chairs in front of widescreen computers in the creative office space. Hicks explained her employees were in town visiting from around the world and enjoying a Hollywood Bus Tour of Los Angeles at the moment.

The start-up is gearing up for some big growth after raising $8.5 million in venture capital. Hicks will soon be hiring more developers, engineers, marketers and sales reps. The CEO allows many of her employees to work remotely around the world, acknowledging it means meetings can be a tad "time zone challenged." It's a

City hands out Fitbits to get Mid-City and Pico neighbors moving

Manny Serrano was focused on his computer when he felt a buzz on his wrist. It was his Fitbit Alta reminding him to move.

The Pico neighborhood resident finished up what he was doing, turned off his laptop and took a walk.

"I wouldn't say I'm obsessed but I'm checking it three or four times a day," Serrano said of the fitness tracker that is counting his steps, estimating the amount of calories he's burned and tracking his sleep at night.

As one of about 200 volunteers in a new program by the City of Santa Monica, Serrano isn't the only one tracking his data. It travels to the cloud and makes its way to digital research firm Fitabase. The San Diego-based company has worked with universities and medical research institutes from around the world to use Fitbit devices to study health, but Santa Monica may be the first municipality tracking the step counts of its own citizens.

The program launched last Saturday with the first wave of 100 Fitbit Altas wrapped around the wrists of volunteers like Serrano, his older brother and his mom. The study is in response to the City's 2017 Wellbeing Index, which found only 38 percent of locals are active for twenty or more minutes a day. Residents of the 90404 zip code were 35 percent more likely to say the city doesn't have accessible options to keep fit, according to Public Information Officer Constance Farrell.

L.A. Metro Expands All-Door Boarding on Metro Rapid 720 and 754 Lines to Improve Speeds for Bus Riders

The Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro) Board has approved the expansion of all-door boarding for Metro Rapid lines 720 (Wilshire Boulevard) and Metro Rapid 754 (Vermont Avenue) to provide speedier trips for riders and reduce the time buses have to dwell at bus stops.

Riders will be able to board at any door of a bus – front, middle or rear – and will pay their fare by using the TAP fare validator installed at each door. Riders will no longer need to line up and wait to board at only the front of the bus. Metro will implement all-door boarding on Metro Rapid Line 754 in June 2018 and on Metro Rapid Line 720 in December 2018.

"Metro is committed to getting passengers to their destinations as quickly as possible – while making sure that safety is always our top priority," said Los Angeles Mayor and Metro Board Chair Eric Garcetti. "These improvements will expedite ride times and ease congestion on some of Metro's most popular Rapid Bus lines."

Those paying with cash or tokens will be able to board at the front door, where they will also be able to buy a TAP card and load it with fare. To encourage more people to use TAP cards, Metro will be handing out 50,000 free TAP cards on the 720 and 50,000 cards on 754 Metro Rapid lines during their respective launch months.

"This expansion of all-door boarding is just one of the many improvements we're making to the customer experience on Metro," said Los Angeles City Councilmember Mike Bonin, a member of the Metro Board of Directors and chair of Metro's Ad-Hoc Customer Experience Committee. "By decreasing wait times, the Metro Rapid service will attract even more customers and help take cars off the roads."

"As part of our promise to reimagine our bus services, all-door boarding is one of our strategies that will help these two lines operate much more efficiently," said Metro CEO Phil Washington. "By streamlining the boarding process, we will be helping save the precious commodity of time for the tens of thousands of riders who depend on these services on a daily basis."

Metro Rapid Line 720 on Wilshire Boulevard carries about 29,019 boardings on the average weekday. Metro Rapid Line 754 line on Vermont Avenue carries about 20,674 boardings.

All door boarding began last year on the Metro Silver Line, where it has helped increase on-time performance by 10 percent.

New survey seeks to uncover what matters to Ocean Park residents

The Ocean Park Association has created a survey so that residents can express their opinions on what matters to them in Ocean Park in particular, within the context of Santa Monica as a whole. The survey looks at modes of transportation and the popularity of local events, as well as issues of concern for the residents, whether they're renters or home-owners, recently arrived or long-settled.

The survey, which takes only few minutes to complete, can be found on OPA's home page: oceanparkassociation.org

Board Member Roger Swanson said "We really want to hear what matters to local people, so we can shape OPA's activities accordingly. We've done this before, when looking at the rehabilitation of Lincoln Boulevard, and attitudes to the Santa Monica Airport land, and it was very helpful both times, so we have high hopes and expectations. Unless we hear from people, the Board can only follow its own predilections, and that's not always going to be helpful. If you live here, you have an opinion on Ocean Park, so please share it, that's the key message".

There will be a prize drawing, with prizes to be announced once the survey is complete.

The Ocean Park Association is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, volunteer group of neighbors dedicated to working for the interests of all residents of Ocean Park. It holds regular monthly meetings on the second Monday of each month, usually downstairs at the Ocean Park Library.

Green transit

Dear EarthTalk:
What are planners and designers doing to solve the so-called "last-mile" problem regarding transit?

Ginny R.

SOLVING THE "LAST MILE" (or "first-mile") problem—that is, getting transit riders from their bus stop, train station or ferry terminal "the last mile" to the doorstep of their home or workplace—has plagued urban planners since the dawn of public transportation.

"Most people in the United States are 'comfortable' walking less than a quarter mile to or from public transit stops," says Alex Gibson of TransLoc, which works on solutions to transit problems using app-based technologies. "The problem arises when a potential rider is further than a 'comfortable distance' to the necessary fixed-route stop."

Widespread suburbanization across the U.S. is part and parcel of the problem, given that fewer and fewer of us now live within walking distance to public transportation options. The result is more private cars on the road (and the accompanying carbon and air pollution) and underutilized public transit systems.

So, what can be done to overcome this last-mile hurdle? Some municipalities and counties run feeder buses that circle the 'burbs and bring riders right from their homes or a nearby corner to a transit hub. Likewise, Uber, Lyft and other ridesharing services can help transit riders fill in this gap, especially in a pinch. But these are hardly the most cost- or energy-efficient fixes to the last-mile problem.

One time-tested solution is bicycles. Many regions have stepped up their commitment to installing more bike lanes accordingly. While a bike, either the traditional kind or one of the new battery-assisted models, works fine if you have somewhere safe to lock it up or can bring it inside, folding bikes may be a better option for "intermodal" commuters (who pair biking with a bus or train or ferry). Hip London office workers swear by their folding Bromptons. Another increasingly viable option is hopping on a pay-as-you-go share bike which you can pick up in one part of town and drop off in another. Beyond bikes, e-scooters — check the Stigo E-Scooter and Segway's new MiniPro — are gaining traction and market share across the country.

And let's not forget about the oldest last mile option of all: walking. Denver, Nashville and Los Angeles have made strides in fixing infrastructure to encourage transit riders to go the extra mile on foot. "Because most riders in high ridership systems walk to catch buses and trains, transit stops must be supported by well-designed streets and sidewalks," reports the Transit Center, a foundation that supports transit reform advocacy. "Yet many cities in America have built streets without sidewalks, or allowed property owners to encroach on or neglect them."

Even more important than spiffing up sidewalks would be macro-level changes to how municipalities manage development. "Transit-oriented development and zoning changes are other highly effective strategies that put more people within walking distance to transit," reports Angie Schmitt of StreetsBlogUSA. "Removing barriers to walking and transit-oriented development are likely to yield better ridership and financial return on investment than others designed to draw transit riders from suburban environments—the transportation equivalent of swimming upstream."

Santa Monica History Museum Announces New Exhibit of Hospital's History

The Santa Monica History Museum has to announced it will display an exhibition of the history of Saint John's Health Center from Friday, November 17, at the Santa Monica History Museum at 1350 7th Street.

In recognition of the 75th anniversary of Providence Saint John's Health Center, the Santa Monica History Museum will host an exhibit detailing the Health Center's founding and development to open on Friday, November 17. The exhibit, Saint John's Health Center: 75 Years of Healing, Discovery and Service to the Community, will display unique artifacts and photographs from the Center's archive, which has been carefully tended by the Sisters of Charity since the 1940s. Highlights include the contents of time capsules, the first of which was interred behind the hospital's first cornerstone in 1942, as well as original correspondence, photos and artifacts such as a Bing Crosby recording dedicated to Saint John's.

In 1938, medical professionals from Santa Monica partnered with the Sisters of Charity to build a new hospital. Opening its doors during World War II in October 1942, Saint John's initially faced challenges due to wartime shortages. The postwar baby boom in the mid-1940s, however, was a blessing to the young facility—earning it the nickname, "Maternity home by the sea." As it expanded, the hospital consistently recruited leading doctors from a wide variety of specialties and backgrounds. As a nonprofit, fundraising was and continues to be essential for sustaining Saint John's. Hollywood stars Irene Dunne and Jimmy Stewart, in particular, were integral in sharing news about the wonderful community at Saint John's and in recruiting additional supporters.

The museum, and this exhibit, are open to the public Tuesdays and Thursdays noon to 8:00 PM, and Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The museum is closed Sundays and Mondays. General admission for adults is $10 and $5 for seniors & students. Veterans, active-duty military, children 12 and under, and Santa Monica History Museum members receive free admission. Please direct questions to John Klopping, Museum Manager, at (310) 395-2290 or info@santamonicahistory.org.

Santa Monica Joins 26 Local Governments and the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Filing Amicus Brief Seeking to Halt the Termination of the DACA Program

The City of Santa Monica today joined a national coalition of 26 U.S. cities and counties in filing an amicus brief seeking to halt the termination of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. Together, with cities including Los Angeles and New York, we are urging a nationwide injunction against the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), which would prevent DHS from ending the DACA program or using information obtained from DACA applicants for deportation proceedings.

"While the federal government turns its back on hardworking citizens, Santa Monica will continue to fight for our resident and student Dreamers," said Mayor Ted Winterer.

The amicus brief states that local jurisdictions will suffer direct economic harm if DACA is rescinded due to the removal of hundreds of thousands of workers, business owners, and taxpayers from their respective economies. The brief also states that ending DACA will make communities less safe and would lead to DACA recipients being much less likely to report criminal activity to law enforcement out of fear of deportation.

This diverse multi-city and county coalition argues that in terminating DACA, DHS acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner, failing to comply with the requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act (APA). Neither the Attorney General nor DHS provided supportable rationale for their decision to terminate DACA. To the extent that they did cite reasons for ending the program, those reasons are disproven by clear evidence.

DACA was created by DHS in 2012 to allow undocumented individuals brought to the U.S. as children the opportunity "to come out of the shadows" and live, study and work openly in our country. Since obtaining deferred action, DACA recipients have made substantial contributions as business owners, educators, researchers, artists, journalists and civic leaders. Tens of thousands more DACA enrollees are attending our local schools, studying to become our newest medical professionals, educators, lawyers and entrepreneurs.

Jurisdictions joining the brief have more active DACA recipients collectively residing in their metro areas than the combined active DACA populations of 45 states.

The complete list of entities signing the brief is:

The City of Los Angeles, California; the City of Austin, Texas; the City of Boston, Massachusetts, the City of Cambridge, Massachusetts; the City of Chelsea, Massachusetts; the City of Chicago, Illinois; Cook County, Illinois; the City and County of Denver, Colorado; the District of Columbia; the City and County of Honolulu, Hawaii; the City of Houston, Texas; King County, Washington; the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota; the City of New York, New York; the City of Oakland, California; the City of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; the City of Portland, Oregon; the City of Providence, Rhode Island; the City of Sacramento, California; the City and County of San Francisco, California; the City of Somerville, Massachusetts; the City of Rochester, New York; the City of Santa Monica, California; the City of Seattle, Washington; the City of Tucson, Arizona; the City of West Hollywood, California; and the United States Conference of Mayors.

Reaction Commerce is a global software engine used by retailers to get their products from digital shopping carts to buyers' doorsteps. The software is free and open source. The company makes money by offering customer assistance to take some of the work off business owners' hands.

"We've been building the core platform and the core technology for the last four years and we're continuing to see interest in what we're building," Hicks said, "but it really feels like right now, with the new capital being raised, that we're just starting out in some ways."

Hicks has a deep connection to the City by the Sea – it's where she was born and where she launched her career in technology at GeoCities in the 1990's. The Santa Monica-based company was the third-most visited site on the web in 1999 when Yahoo! bought it and Hicks moved to San Francisco. Her career took her outside the state to work at Etsy. Now she is back, running her own company where her life and career began.

"I always knew I would come back to family and vibrancy here in Santa Monica," Hicks said. Like many entrepreneurs choosing Silicon Beach over Silicon Valley, Hicks sees the diversity of industry here as a major advantage. To Hicks, it's not just the proximity to the beach but the size of the proverbial pond.

"I think we can be a bigger fish in a smaller pond here in Los Angeles."

out an email to everyone in the 90404 zip code to participate," Farrell said, "because it's an educational opportunity, we were able to use emails from voter records."

Fitabase donated the Fitbits for the project and will work with the RAND Corporation to sift through the data to look for patterns. Fitabase says it does sell or offer access to the information they collect on the behalf of their customers to other companies. The researchers involved with the project can track the users' stats and tie them to their age, gender, and other data points.

"There's a lot of ways to slice and dice (the data) and this gives us the opportunity to see the connections between these variables and people in the community," Julie Rusk, who leads the City's Wellbeing Department, said.

For example, the data may help the City parcel out the best times of day or neighborhoods to offer certain activities.

"Getting active is tied to our social interactions," Rusk said, "and we know it really matters if people are connected to each other."

Serrano, a former collegiate soccer player, has set the bar high for himself, aiming to walk 15,000 steps every day. The San Francisco State graduate just returned to Santa Monica after getting his degree in kinesiology. After reading so many studies about fitness, he's excited to participate in one.

"I think it's great," Serrano said. "I'm a huge advocate of a healthy lifestyle and the fact the City is interested in how active the residents are is a huge thing. I definitely want to live somewhere where people are active."

"The philosophy is, if you're not building enough housing we're just going to help you," said Senator Scott Weiner (D-San Francisco), the bill's co-author, at the summit Friday. The city reports will include the number of market-rate and affordable housing constructed.

If a city fails to submit a housing report two years in a row, the development process in that municipality will automatically become streamlined, according to Weiner. For example, under the mandated process, proposed affordable housing projects within a city's zoning code will not need CEQA, Conditional Use Permits or Development Review Permits.

"This bill also limits the amount of parking that a local government can require of a streamlined development," according to a report by the Assembly Committee on Housing and Community Development. "A local government cannot require more than one parking space per unit for streamlined developments. In addition, the bill would prohibit a local government from imposing any parking standard for streamlined projects that are within one-half mile of public transit, within an architecturally and historically significant district, where on-street parking permits are required but not offered to occupants of a development, or where there is a car share vehicle located within one block of the development."

Under the new law, a development proponent can also request the state step in and mandate the streamlined process for a specific parcel.

"It's not punishment," Weiner said. "Having enough housing is a benefit, it's not punishment."

About twenty cities in Los Angeles County currently meet their housing needs, including the City of Santa Monica. In fact, in the previous cycle, Santa Monica built 233 percent of its SCAG allotment.

SCAG allocated 1,674 housing units to Santa Monica for the housing cycle from 2014 to 2021, instructing that 58 percent of those should be affordable.

In neighboring Los Angeles, Mayor Eric Garcetti has committed the City to construct more than 100,000 new residential units by 2021 as a way to combat a housing shortage.

Weiner said the vast majority of cities in California are not meeting their affordable housing requirements.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Stories for the Waiting Room

■ Comedian and actor Jerry Lewis, who died last month at age 91, was also famous for hosting the Labor Day telethon in support of the Muscular Dystrophy Association. He co-hosted the first telethon in 1956 with Dean Martin and continued alone until 2011. During that period, he helped raise nearly $2.5 billion for the charity, according to the Las Vegas Review-Journal.

Medical History

■ This week in 1999, the death of an 83-year-old man stung by a swarm of Africanized "killer" bees marked the first fatality by that cause in the state of California. The victim, Virgil Foster, was (ironically enough) a beekeeper who was mowing his lawn. He was stung at least 50 times by the highly aggressive bees, receiving a high dose of toxins. He was not breathing when paramedics arrived and went into cardiac arrest, which eventually proved fatal. Foster's three hives had been taken over by wild Africanized honeybees, which were first seen in the U.S. in Texas after migrating north from Brazil. Foster's death was preceded by several others in other U.S. states.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 6)

Rather than pine for a different reality as you once did, you'll embrace the current circumstances and work them to your best advantage. Your evolved stance will net you brilliant results in the next five weeks. You'll be able to assist your family as a result. There's a windfall in February, and you'll travel in April. Cancer and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 25, 41, 20 and 17.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

With so much competing for your interest, it will be rather easy to pass up the thing that obviously requires it. An interruption will be significant. Someone really does need your attention.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

This will be a day of unexpected obstacles. Your success strategy will include exclusive focus on that which you can control. There's something lucky between you and a Sagittarius.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)

Everyone wants to feel better, including you. Because you're already feeling strong, you're willing to do the hard work to feel better instead of going for a quick fix.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)

You've a special charisma, so don't be surprised if people stop and observe you to try to figure out that indescribable something that makes you so compelling.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Your luck will come in the form of another person – someone who is willing to listen to you, try your ideas, be available to your intelligence and be open to your whims.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You have heard enough complaining and don't wish to do any, nor do you care to leave a bad review. If you like something well enough, you'll say it's good. If you don't, you'll say it's interesting or call it a learning experience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Advertisements, wall art, media, friends – you're getting tired of people telling you what to do. Anyway, you already have a clear vision of where you're going next and what steps will take you there.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)

Your cosmic boon of the day is one that doesn't come around very often: a very generous ratio of effort to results. Minimal work will accomplish a maximum result. Enjoy!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

One way to avoid the very common tendency to eat and/or drink away difficult feelings this time of year is to agree to go ahead and feel them. They may be unpleasant, but only briefly. Before you know it, they're processed and gone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Each job comes with unique pressures. It would be naive to think that any role is superior to another. Anyway, the only position you can effectively work to your advantage is the one you're in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Your mind is sharp, and your body is strong. Furthermore, there's a wise teacher in your head leading your energies in the most effective and efficient ways.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

Ask for help, whether or not you think you need it. People will like helping you today, and they'll like you even more than they already do because helping will build a bond between you.

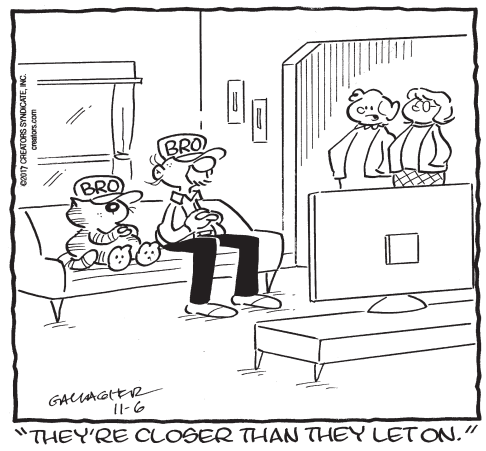

Cosmos Favors Commerce

Commerce will be going strong this Gemini moon with Mercury's recent move to the realm of expansion. Money is not the root of all evil, just a lot of it. Mistrust anyone who claims not to care about money, as this is either sadly naive or a ridiculous lie. Do business with people who have a healthy respect for money, not an obsession with it.
