City establishes street parking for scooters

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Electric scooters and bikes are getting a share of Santa Monica's coveted street parking.

Riders can park their devices on the side of the street in four new zones the City installed last week in the Ocean Park neighborhood along Main Street. 19 off-street parking zones have been installed since September, and the City plans to continue the momentum by building by installing more street parking in the coming weeks.

"We're excited to see the city redefine its infrastructure to make space for scooters and bikes," a spokesperson for Uber, which owns e-bike company Jump, said.

A white rectangle defines the zones with stencils marking it as scooter/bike parking. Few users seem to be using the new spaces yet, however – Main Street's sidewalks remain covered with bikes and scooters.

"Over time, we intend to work with the scooter and bike companies to put the drop zones in their apps and add incentives to use them," said Mobility Manager Francie Stefan.

The parking is being installed in tandem with the City's Shared Mobility Pilot Program, which launched in September and authorized 2,000 scooters and

Professional homecoming for skaters at ICE opener

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Two young ice skaters who learned their sport at Ice are preparing to leave for their first sectional competition as thousands flock to the rink for its Grand Opening on Thursday.

Ian Brown, 14, and Ava Mae Leslie, 13, first took to the ice – at Ice – when they were three. By the time they were seven, they were skating as a pair, and two years ago, they skated in the rink's opening show. Now, they're getting ready for the biggest competition of their careers: the Pacific Coast Sectional in Salt Lake City, which will take place from Nov. 13 to 17.

"They're pure, homegrown, Ice at Santa Monica skaters," said Ian and Ava's coach, Randy Gardner, who runs the Randy Gardner School of Skating at Ice. Ian and Ava are the first skaters at the school to advance to a sectional competition, he said.

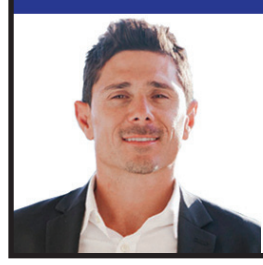

The two see the sport as a way to blend art and athleticism, and their approach to figure skating has become increasingly competitive as they mature. Before they set their sights on sectionals, they focused on smaller goals, such as completing a test or a competition, Ian said.

"Now that we're older, I think we can understand more of the mental game that you need in ice skating," Ava said. "We definitely have learned how to figure out what we're going to do and how we're going to achieve it."

Ian and Ava's other coach, Jennifer Don, said she and Gardner have seen an exponential improvement in the teenagers' skill in the past two years. They were not yet competing at the juvenile level earlier this year and had to pass a series of tests to 1,000 bikes from Bird, Lime, Uber, and Lyft to roam the streets of Santa Monica. Two of the new street parking zones were installed next to stations allotted to the City's bike share program, Breeze.

"This creates a logical place for people to leave the devices," Stefan said. "They are also more likely to find one when they want one."

Prior to the pilot program's launch, the City had impounded 35 scooters, written almost 700 traffic and administrative citations, and recorded 16 collisions. It also received numerous complaints from residents regarding sidewalk riding and careless parking.

The program requires companies to educate riders about safety, share data with the City and respond to user and resident complaints. It also requires areas be kept clear and prohibits companies from distributing vehicles in areas where they have been banned.

qualify, which meant Don and Gardner had to significantly increase the difficulty of their training program.

The pair have risen to the challenge, Ava said, and have continued to improve day after day on their way to sectionals. They both acknowledge the pressure is mounting, but their bond helps relieve the stress. Ava and Ian have known each other since Ava was born, and have been close friends ever since.

"When you're skating on the ice alone, there's so much pressure ... but when it's two people you can remind yourself 'this is fun,'" Ian said. "We can just look at each other and smile and forget all the stress."

This time of year is typically relaxing for Ian and Ava. When Ice is open, they don't have to travel all over Los Angeles to find rinks for practice – Ian was born and raised in Santa Monica, and Ava lives just across Wilshire Boulevard's Santa Monica arch. They know Ice's staff and the people who skate there so well that they feel like family, Ian said.

"We practice all year and it gets really exhausting," he said. "We come here and we're still practicing, but it's like a mental break."

Younger skaters at Ice often ask Ava and Ian to show them how to do pivots or spins. Ava said one little girl who saw her perform in Ice's 10th anniversary show told her she wanted to grow up to be just like her. The pair are happy to practice at a rink where they can serve as role models, Ian said.

For the person who comes to Ice a couple times each year to try their hand at skating, watching the pros practice can be daunting. But Ian and Ava encourage patrons to try jumps or spins, or even just skate away from the wall.

"As long as your skates are tight and your knees are bent and you're leaning forward, you'll have a solid base," Ian said.

Both skaters have learned many new skills at Ice, from skating backwards to a difficult throw axel and they believe others can do the same.

"No matter whether it's coming here to skate for the first time or learning how to skate competitively, it's all a way to have the most fun you possibly can," Ava said.

AFM Rocked The City

The American Film Market took over the city for the past week, and its effects were felt in the boom in hotel rooms, restaurant wait times and the crowded sidewalks. I know many people have a love/hate relationship with the huge number of travelers that come to town during this week of movie business excess, but let's face it – it's very good for the city in the long run.

Having a huge number of people become de facto tourism ambassadors for the ease of life here, and the great restaurants is a boon, and one that they paid us to learn about! That is called genius marketing.

The Market as a whole seemed to be very well attended event this year from my perspective, the Loews Santa Monica Beach hotel was swarming with buyers and sellers all week. Security was tight, getting in to the hotel but this year in a pleasant change there were fewer guards and the flow was easier throughout the eight floors of offices.

I had chance to drop in on my friend Jason Brubaker of FilmMakingStuff.com fame as he was representing Distribber.com. As usual the ever changing film business has many new changes coming down the road, and giving filmmakers the ability to distribute their films more easily and cost effectively is what Distribber is all about.

One of the many nice things about being a regular at the American Film Market is that you see people you met last year. There were many of these reunions happening and it's a testament to the "community aspect" of what the market represents. Even though there are loads of new faces, I saw many that I recognized from years past.

The umbrella effect of the Market is that the city has a bustling feel to it, and we experienced that on Saturday night as a couple friends and I went to see Bohemian Rhapsody. As a bio-pic of one of the greatest singers of all time, I have to say that I feel the movie did great justice to Farrokh Balsora or Freddie Mercury after he changed his name. Rami Malek was astounding as the effervescent, tragic and brilliant Mercury. He captured for me the innate insecurity of Mercury, and yet, managed to also create the staged electricity for which he was known.

Mercury was incandescent as an artist, and his personal life troubles were in an odd way a beacon of hope to this young gay man as a teen. This was the mid to late 80's when being gay was a death sentence, more so than today. The world was still grappling with the criminality of being gay, let alone the loss of humanity to AIDS.

Thankfully Bohemian Rhapsody deals with this tragic loss in a respectful but not consuming way. It's a truthful depiction of the era and what the diagnosis meant both medically and socially. The storyline though doesn't dwell on it, rather recites it as a fact and moves on to the genius of the man, and the power of forgiveness when Queen reunites for the Live Aid concert.

We caught the early show, and then went to grab dinner, and this is where the AFM crowds caused me consternation. I wanted to go to North Italia on Second Street for some of their radiatori with short ribs and horseradish sauce. Alas, there was a 40 minute wait and that was just not going to happen with our crowd, so we headed over to the King's Head for some fish and chips. They were pretty crowded in the bar, but as we wanted food the back rooms were a bit less busy and we were seated quickly.

It seemed oddly appropriate upon reflection to be seated in a British Pub and Restaurant after seeing the genius Brits who made Queen, Queen. All things considered it was another great night, and as we bid farewell to the American Film Market for another year, I think I'll head over to North Italia and see if I can sneak in early...

Southern California to stay foggy until Santa Anas return

Fog that has been shrouding parts of Southern California will continue into mid-week before a return of Santa Ana winds.

The National Weather Service says areas of coastal low clouds and fog may spread into some valleys Wednesday night into Thursday before offshore flow brings clearing.

The dry and gusty northeast winds will be produced by surface high pressure over the Great Basin.

It's still not clear, however, just how strong the winds will be.

The weather service says one model indicates moderate or stronger Santa Anas while another model indicates weak to moderate winds.

Musk tweets new video of LA-area transportation test tunnel

Elon Musk has tweeted a new video of a tunnel constructed under a Los Angeles suburb to test a new type of transportation system.

Musk tweeted Saturday that he walked the length of the tunnel and commented that it is "disturbingly long."

The tunnel runs about 2 miles (3.2 kilometers) under the streets of Hawthorne, where Musk's SpaceX headquarters is located.

Musk envisions a transportation system in which vehicles or people pods are moved through tunnels on electrically powered platforms called skates.

He plans to show off the test tunnel with an opening party on Dec. 10 and offer free rides the next day.

Musk has proposed a tunnel across western Los Angeles and another between a subway line and Dodger Stadium.

Democrats look to add congressional seats in California

JANIE HAR
Associated Press

Thousands of volunteers knocked on doors and dialed phones Monday while candidates across California made their final arguments to voters in an election where Democrats look to keep their stranglehold on state offices and add to their advantage in the 53-seat congressional delegation.

Polls will be open statewide from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, and early voters must have their ballots postmarked by Tuesday to have them counted. The secretary of state's office says 19.7 million people are registered to vote.

Democrats have chased Republicans from many California offices and are poised to hold that ground and perhaps gain more.

Democratic Lt. Gov. Gavin Newsom is the strong favorite over Republican businessman John Cox to succeed Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown. For the second consecutive general election, there isn't even a Republican on the ballot for U.S. Senate. This time, Sen. Dianne Feinstein has coasted against Democratic state Sen. Kevin de Leon.

In the Legislature, the question isn't whether Democrats will control the Assembly and Senate again — no one doubts that. It's whether Democrats get a veto-proof supermajority in the state Senate to add to their supermajority in the Assembly.

The status would allow them to raise taxes, suspend legislative rules and override vetoes without needing GOP votes.

Republicans hold just 14 congressional seats statewide, but seven of those districts were carried by Hillary Clinton in the 2016 presidential election and are battlegrounds this time around. Democrats don't appear in danger in any of the 39 districts they hold.

The trajectory of the election appears headed toward "the era of being a one-party state and the interesting internal conflicts that come with that," University of California, San Diego political scientist Thad Kousser said Monday.

He pointed out that the drama in the governor's race this year was during the primary between Newsom and fellow Democrat Antonio Villaraigosa, with Cox seen as a longshot from the start.

"What happens when you have one-party states? What you see is these fights within parties," Kousser said.

In San Francisco, Feinstein dropped off her ballot at City Hall, where the 85-year-old Democrat urged residents to vote.

"Of course, I hope more Democrats vote than Republicans, but in any event, everyone should vote," she said.

Democrats hold a 3.7 million edge in voter registrations, and Republicans are also outnumbered by independents, who in California tend to vote like Democrats.

Of 1.4 million new registrations this year, only 187,000 signed up as Republicans, or roughly 14 percent, according to an analysis by the nonpartisan research firm Political Data Inc. The largest group of new voters signed up as independents.

Just a generation ago, California was a reliably Republican state in presidential contests. But a surge in immigrants transformed the state and its voting patterns. The number of Hispanics, blacks and Asians combined has outnumbered whites in the state since 1998.

New voters, largely Latinos and Asians, lean Democratic.

Steve Poizner's candidacy sums up the state of the California GOP. He was a Republican but decided to run as an independent to regain his old job as insurance commissioner. If he wins, he'll be the first independent elected to statewide office.

President Donald Trump endorsed Cox, helping elevate him to second place in the June primary and a slot on the November ballot in the state that Trump lost to Clinton by over 4 million votes in 2016.

The president has kept up a steady campaign schedule in Republican-friendly states, but his absence in California this fall suggests he would do more harm than good for GOP candidates in tight races.

For months, Trump has been a leading character in Democratic ads that seek to link Republican candidates to his agenda.

That's especially the case in the seven U.S. House contests where Democrats are trying to flip seats as they seek to win 23 districts nationwide and regain control of the House.

Four of those seven California battlegrounds are in Orange County, once considered Republican heartland but where much has changed due to demographic shifts over the past two decades. Clinton was the first Democrat to win the county since the Depression era.

Among the Republicans looking to hold off tough challenges are Reps. Dana Rohrabacher and Mimi Walters, both closely tied to Trump. Rohrabacher is being challenged by Harley Rouda, a Republican-turned-Democrat businessman, while Walters faces law professor Katie Porter.

At a Democratic rally Saturday in Irvine, Assembly candidate Cottie Petrie-Norris summed up the party's optimism: "We have changed the face of Orange County," she said.

Among other prominent issues on the ballot, Californians are considering whether to repeal increased gas taxes and vehicle fees that Brown and the Legislature approved last year to fund transportation projects.

Brown, apparently headed for retirement after a lifetime in politics, made a rare campaign appearance last week to oppose Proposition 6. He called the proposal "a scheme and a scam."

Republicans have pushed the repeal as a way to motivate voters. They say the tax hikes are another burden on working families in a state that has some of the nation's highest taxes.

Other ballot issues generating attention would cap profits for dialysis clinics, expand rent control and require more space for farm animals.

Former Santa Monica Police Activities League Volunteer Charged with Child Sexual Abuse

A man has been charged with sexually abusing four boys when he was a volunteer at the Santa Monica Police Activities League, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Deputy District Attorney Karen Montoya said Eric Wess Uller (dob 9/1/68) of Marina del Rey faces three counts of lewd acts upon a child, two counts of oral copulation of a person under 18 and one count of continuous sexual abuse.

Uller pleaded not guilty to the charges today and is scheduled to return on Nov. 15 in Department W30 of the Los Angeles County Superior Court, Airport Branch. Case SA099228 was filed on Oct. 22.

Uller is alleged to have abused the victims between the ages of 12 and 16 years old from 1986 to 1995, the prosecutor said.

Bail is set at $750,000. If convicted as charged, the defendant faces a possible maximum sentence of more than 23 years in state prison.

The case remains under investigation by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Fireharms

■ In 2016, more than a quarter-million people worldwide died from firearm-related injuries, according to a new study published in the JAMA Network. The good news is that the global death rate from guns has decreased a bit less than 1 percent per year since 1990. The bad news is that half of all 2016 firearm deaths occurred in just six countries in the Americas: Brazil, Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela, Guatemala (all notable for chronic or severe social unrest and crime) and the United States.

■ Each year, more than 33,000 Americans die firearm-related deaths, a total that is rising.

■ In 2016, 64 percent of global firearm mortality was due to homicides, with 27 percent attributed to suicides and 9 percent to accidents.

CREATORS SYNDICATE © 2018 STANLEY NEWMAN STANXWORDS@AOL.COM 11/6/18

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (NOV. 6)

You'll do a fantastic job of keeping your group tight. The benefits of being on a winning team will carry you forward in many aspects of life. Your horizons will expand to accommodate a new presence. The investment you made months ago will start to pay off in January and increase steadily. Capricorn and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 20, 15 and 25.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Today is the day you can finally come to a deal. If you wait, the terms will change -- and not in your favor. Sign now and be done with it. Your energies are best spent in moving on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
The excitement isn't something that happens to you, nor is it something you will make happen. The excitement will be a product of experimentation. Push the boundaries, try new things, and suddenly life is fascinating.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
There's really no sense in looking back. Even if you could clearly see what you could have done to make things better, you'd be ignoring all the reasons you had back then for doing what you did. Forward is the only way.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You can accept your animal impulses without acting on them. Of course, restraint is necessary to live peaceably in society. But recognizing the wisdom of impulse leads to a more confident and intuition-guided existence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Your need to connect will culminate in some mischief. This isn't about rebellion, nor is it a cry for attention. It's a product of your playfulness and sincere desire to entertain people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Don't ask yourself to do too much in a day. It's just mean. You wouldn't push other people you love that way. You're strong, but you have your limits, and pushing them on the regular can only lead to burnout.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
A proper evaluation of life can't happen from only one perspective. We are not the only ones living in our lives. Enhance your self-reflection by asking for feedback from others, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
Your mental powers are strong, making this an ideal time to visualize positive people coming into your realm, arms outstretched, ready to give you the love and assistance you need and deserve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Give yourself a pep talk before you socialize. Include a goal for your interactions, for instance, approaching two new people or asking a question that draws someone out or helps you learn the truth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
It's said that how you do anything is how you do everything. Do you think it's true? And if it is, what's that saying about you? What is it saying about the person you're trying to get to know today?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
More and more you consider yourself a global citizen. There's nothing like traveling to open the mind and broaden the perspective. But when travel isn't the priority, you still seek knowledge of other cultures and places.

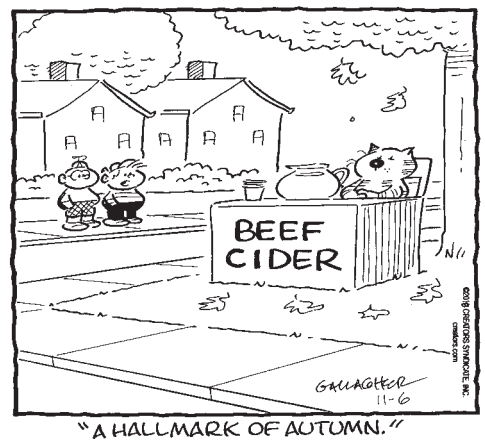

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
If you're to get unstuck, there are cords that need cutting. The tool that will snip them like freshly sharpened scissors is a sharp mind making a clear decision to do so.

THE URANUS CONSOLIDATION PROJECT

The number of flowering plant species in the world was more than a million until scientists noticed that many species were named in duplicate. A rose by any other name is still rose, but to name it twice only creates confusion. As Uranus moves into Aries, make a power move to consolidate the duplicates and eliminate redundancies.

For Safe and Modern Schools

While Santa Monica schools have great teachers and academics our 60 to 100-year old classrooms do not meet today's security and emergency safety standards. Measure SMS will deliver critically needed funding to:

- ✔ Install the latest campus security technology throughout our schools
- ✔ Retrofit classrooms to meet current fire and earthquake standards
- ✔ Remove lead and asbestos and improve air quality in classrooms
- ✔ Repair leaky roofs, deteriorating floors, and unhygienic bathrooms
