NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

Lawyer Cindy Baker's client, Mike Koster, was charged with methamphetamine and marijuana possession and set for trial in October in Berryville, Ark., but he was also charged with possession of a bomb. Baker's trial strategy was to downplay the latter charge by bringing the actual bomb into the courtroom as evidence, but the horrified judge cleared the building and put out a call for the nearest bomb squad, and according to a source for the Carroll County News, the bomb was taken away and detonated. The judge also declared a mistrial and set a contempt of court hearing for Baker.

All four of the Seminole County, Fla. (suburban Orlando), judges who hear drunk-driving cases have routinely tossed out all challenged breath-alcohol readings since January (a total of more than 700), according to a September Orlando Sentinel story, because the judges believe the defendants should be given access to the machines' computer code. (Without the readings as evidence, about half the DUI defendants go free.) The Florida Department of Law Enforcement says the machines are accurate and that, anyway, manufacturers protect the codes as trade secrets.

City Council allows temporary exiting from SMC campus

Move essential to tri-party agreement

BY RYAN HYATT

Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL — Santa Monica College gained a victory last week in its ongoing political gridlock with City Hall when elected officials agreed to let the educational institution continue to have restricted access to its Bundy campus.

After hearing comments from more than 40 members of the public over the course of a nearly four-hour debate, the Santa Monica City Council decided to move forward with a tri-party agreement between City Hall, SMC and West LA that had been discussed, but not approved, during previous meetings among the three groups.

The agreement will allow students to continue to have access to SMC's 10.4-acre satellite campus, located at 3171 S. Bundy Dr. Specifically, the council will allow students to continue to park at the Santa Monica Airport lot — as construction on the new Airport Park will permit — and walk across the street to attend classes at Bundy until Dec. 20, the end of the fall semester.

In return, SMC will be required to make its Bundy campus as insular as possible to prevent traffic flow through residential neighborhoods to and from its main campus at 1900 Pico Blvd. The City Council authorized limited right-turn-only vehicular exiting from the Bundy campus onto Airport Avenue until the end of the spring semester, as long as West LA is able to fulfill its terms of the agreement. West LA must install a half-turn signal on northbound Bundy Drive before the end of the spring semester, which will allow student motorists to more safely exit the satellite campus.

As part of the agreement, SMC — whose legal representatives attended the meeting — must waive any property right claim to an easement from Airport Avenue to the Bundy Campus and indemnify the city from liability related to provid-

MID-WILSHIRE — A suspected bank robber was nabbed by police Saturday after he attempted to use a taxi as his getaway car.

Gkur Shawn Skylark, 26, of Wilmington was arrested by Santa Monica Police shortly before noon after he allegedly robbed the Union Bank in the 2000 block of Wilshire.

"What an idiot," said one passerby who watched the scene unfold on the sidewalk in front of Cellular Fantasy.

According to the preliminary investigation, Skylark entered the bank, displayed what appeared to be a handgun and demanded money. After receiving

Kirra Kehoe: Santa Monica's singing surfer girl

BY JASMIN PERSCH

Special to the Daily Press

When Sean Kehoe named his daughter after Kirra Point — a world-famous surfing spot in Australia — he knew she was destined to become a surfer girl.

And at age 11, Kirra Kehoe now holds the West Coast title for longboarding in her age group.

She "kind of" remembers her first surfing experience, at 3 years of age, riding, or rather clinging to, the nose of her father's surfboard while wearing a life jacket.

"Pictures and video tapes help [remind me]," Kirra said.

A strong swimmer since she was 8, Kirra switched her focus to surfing last year, her father said. She has collected top titles in the numerous competitions she has entered since then. Last year, she won a West Coast competition and became a champion at the California State Games.

Kirra surfs every day in the summer and trains on land in the winter. She keeps busy with the many surfing competitions held from December through October.

According to her father, her greatest accomplishment was

Preliminary investigation indicates that four Hispanic men were standing in front of a house when the suspect's vehicle drove into the area. One of the suspects in the vehicle fired several shots at the men, police said. One victim was shot in the arm and the hip area. The wounds were not serious, and he was transported to a local hospital.

The suspects' descriptions varied. They were either described as Hispanic or black males. The suspects' vehicle is described as a white or silver Honda Accord or Civic.

Anyone having information regarding the incident is encouraged to contact the robbery/homicide unit of the SMPD at (310) 458-8451 or the watch commander's office at (310) 458-8426. Monday the NW backs off, dropping size to waist to chest high at best. Some SW is due as well with similar size: waist to chest. Santa Ana could really be kicking into gear on Monday with winds possibly reaching 15 mph along the coast from the ENE. Also, tide will be an issue to work around with extreme highs early on, which will likely dampen size at most breaks, especially the reefs and points.

A peace of profitability

Editor:

What do I tell my children about Cheney-Bush and Co. who lied and misled us to justify the U.S. military occupation of Afghanistan and Iraq? Integrity is missing throughout all the branches of our U.S. government. Today is the time for action to remove the corruption and secrecy and hold those accountable for crimes against humanity.

Mr. Nixon was ousted by the Watergate affair, a simple break in of Democratic headquarters. No one was killed, maimed or tortured by this cover up. It is definitely high school compared to the graduate work surrounding the Cheney team (WHIG), together since Iran contra days. When Bill Clinton was caught with his pants down in the Oval Office, the Republican Congress spent a lot of tax dollars to investigate and impeach his "crime." Start with Cheney. Let the voice of integrity reign.

The budget conversation inside the beltway says cut funded programs across the board. "Defense spending" is a likely target because it sucks up billions of our taxes. Yet only a tiny amount of Star Wars funding is on the table.

To bring home at least half of our 159,000 troops from Iraq by the end of 2005 would save bunches of billions. Our mission as a populace is to gradually lessen the influence and domination of the military, industrial, prison complex which now controls much of our media reporting, advertising venues, television news casters, legislators, judges, law enforcement. We can do it. How can we make peace more profitable than war?

Landlords and renters wage war on each other

MY WRITE

BY BILL BAUER

Real estate prices have gone through the roof. Savvy investors are coming to town and buying up older apartment buildings. Eager to see investments pay off quickly, many new landlords are determined to maximize their return, so they're waging war on rent-control tenants who pay below market rate.

There are tenants who shortchange landlords by using subterfuge and misrepresentation to maintain their low rents. Santa Monica's rent control law essentially says a tenant is not eligible for reduced rent if his/her rent controlled apartment is not the primary residence.

This newspaper reported (SMDP, Nov. 3, page 1) about a Santa Monica renter who lost her right to reduced rent when the Rent Control Board determined that her primary residence was actually a house in Simi Valley.

In a similar instance, less than two years ago, Patrick Davies purchased a five-unit, mid-city apartment building and occupies one unit. Davies told me that one of his tenants, a city of Santa Monica employee working with affordable housing, rents a $446-month studio, but occupies it only three nights a week and returns to his real home in San Clemente. So, Davies requested a rent increase.

Davies' tenant fought the increase and, according to a complaint Davies sent to the city on March 30, resorted to harassing him by acting as a city building inspector and intimidating workers remodeling the property.

Davies' tenant also complained repeatedly about lead paint. The Los Angeles County Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program inspectors and an independent environmental testing agency retained by the tenant found only a very minor violation (on one downspout scheduled for replacement) after numerous inspections.

The county environmental health inspector even sent a memo to the city complaining that the tenant was "utilizing his position as a city employee to influence inspections on a private property and that in their department this would be a conflict of interest."

In a letter dated Nov. 7 to Davies, the Santa Monica City Attorney's office disagreed and opined that his tenant was just

"uncivil" and "acted unprofessionally." Davies will probably let the Rent Control Board determine an appropriate rent.

More often than not, it's the landlord who abuses tenants to further their own financial interests. Some property owners are evicting tenants and redeveloping. Others are offering low-rent tenants financial incentives to voluntarily vacate. Less scrupulous landlords are harassing and intimidating tenants to get them to move out.

In the weeks ahead, I'll be writing about a man and his disabled mother whose eight-unit building was recently purchased by a young Los Angeles businessman. The day he bought the building, the businessman made it known that it was going to market rate. By tripling the building's rental income, he could more than double the building's value — great incentives to get rid of low-rent tenants.

City Hall's tenant harassment ordinance spells out the acts that constitute tenant harassment. For example, when a landlord uses lies or intimidation intended to make a tenant move out, tries to evict a tenant with false charges, refuses to accept a rent payment, eliminates parking, laundry or other amenities provided in the lease or intentionally disturbs a tenant's peace and quiet or privacy — with malice — the city attorney's office gets involved. But, such cases are often hard to prove in court and the city takes on very few of these cases and then only the most egregious ones.

Many low-rent and low-income tenants don't have the financial resources to fight a determined, well-heeled landlord. A Santa Monica landlord group and its legal advisors are actively working with apartment owners to develop strategies for eliminating low income producing renters and maximizing rents — in addition to exploring ways to overturn the city's rent control ordinances.

In future columns, I'll also be looking at the City Attorney's office, Rent Control Administration and Legal Aid to find out how they are protecting renters from abusive landlords.

Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights seems to be more interested in building new affordable housing than protecting the existing low-rent housing stock or helping low-rent Santa Monicans fight the big money onslaught. I'll take a fresh look to see what they're really doing these days, if anything, to protect their base constituency.

As they say, stay tuned.

The shotgun house has moved from Santa Monica Airport to the former Fisher Lumber yard.

This old house moving again

By Daily Press staff

14TH STREET — One of the city's oldest houses was on the move again this weekend, this time finding a temporary home at the former Fisher Lumber yard.

The last remaining, intact shotgun house in Santa Monica, built in the 1890s, was moved to the city-owned plot of land just after dawn on Sunday.

"Friends" of the house, which had been parked at the Santa Monica Airport for the past three years, scrambled last month to find a new location because the construction of a new park prevented the house from staying there. The shotgun house was taken to the airport by preservationists in July of 2002 to avoid demolition.

The Santa Monica City Council recently voted to store the house at Fisher Lumber for two years to give a newly forming nonprofit organization, "Friends of the Shotgun House," time to secure a permanent site and raise funds to rehabilitate it. The cost of the move was underwritten by concerned residents who are committed to saving the house in light of its historic significance.

After an hour and a half of preparation, the house mover drove the house east on Airport Avenue, north onto Bundy, west on Ocean Park Boulevard, north on Lincoln Boulevard, then east to the corner Colorado Avenue and 14th Street. The circuitous route was necessary because the house, once raised on a special truck, can't fit under the freeway underpass. The house is approximately 12 feet wide, 39 feet long and 14 feet high.

Some of those involved in wheeling it across town are hoping to raise enough money to bring it back to Ocean Park, specifically, to a small community garden on the north end of Main Street.

It cost an estimated $7,000 to move the house to the Fisher Lumber site. The group will have two years to raise money to move it to a permanent site and renovate it at an estimated cost of $450,000.

Students want better SMC parking access

ing the egress. Further, the City Council authorized a six-month extension of the south beach lots for student shuttle parking. Los Angeles City Councilman Bill Rosendahl — whose constituents live in Mar Vista and are affected by SMC traffic — spoke at the Nov. 8 meeting. Rosendahl said he was willing to push for the traffic signal, against some of his constituents' wishes, in order to alleviate a safety crisis he feels is underway around the Bundy campus.

"The issue is out of hand," Rosendahl said. "(Students) making a left-hand turn onto Bundy are looking at a car crash."

Rosendahl's willingness to move the agreement forward didn't come without its share of scrutiny by Santa Monica councilmembers, some of whom felt that if safety was the primary concern, there may have been more immediate steps that Rosendahl or other SMC officials might have made.

"Why hasn't (West LA) put a traffic control officer out there?" said Santa Monica City Councilman Richard Bloom. "If traffic was the real concern, why does it seem (no one thought of taking such steps)?"

Rosendahl's comment were followed by SMC's interim president Tom Donner. Donner focused his discussion on the fact that the Bundy site's previous owner, BAE Systems Inc., a defense contractor, had unrestricted access to the facility. Donner felt it was only appropriate that SMC have the same access that the defense contractor once did.

"All we ask is that the city re-open the fence it has made, which was available to other community members in the past," Donner said.

The site has a 100,000-square-foot, four-story building housing classrooms intended for nursing, teaching and community education courses. In addition, Bundy has a 30,000-square-foot, two-story building the college is not using, and a surface parking lot capable of holding 609 cars, which SMC officials said will meet the needs of expected campus operations.

However, vehicular access to Bundy is currently limited to college staff and the disabled. The satellite campus is buttressed against the city of Los Angeles to the east, with a small road that permits turning in and out of the site from Bundy Drive. The Bundy campus also is fronted by Los Angeles to the east — on the corner of which is Stewart Avenue, a north-south neighborhood street the college has agreed not to use for campus access, except in the case of emergencies.

Bundy is buttressed against the city of Santa Monica to the north, lined with commercial buildings City Hall leases, which separate the Bundy campus from Airport Avenue, a two-lane east-west road that leads to 23rd Street.

City Hall this summer prevented vehicular access onto the Bundy site from Santa Monica entry and exit points, in response to neighborhood complaints related to the college's expansion plans. City officials have said that restriction will be indefinite unless other agreements are made.

Meanwhile, college officials contend their plans for Bundy have been scaled back to accommodate neighborhood concerns. College officials want vehicular access to the Bundy campus, at entry and exit points located within Santa Monica and West LA to accommodate its students.

The speakers who followed Rosendahl and Donner were both proponents and opponents for Bundy access. They included neighborhood groups from Mar Vista, Sunset Park and Ocean Park as well as dozens of SMC students and staff.

Santa Monica resident Lorraine Sanchez urged the City Council to be firm in its dealings with the college, which she said has a history of bureaucratic bungling that needed to be addressed.

"No one seems to be holding the college responsible for wasting public money with poor planning," Sanchez said. "Please, hold the college responsible."

Jeff Jensen, representing the SMC student body, said that in his talks with fellow classmates their biggest concerns were parking and transportation. Once students arrive at school, he said their jobs become easier.

"Let us do what we do best," Jensen told the council. "Sit in a classroom and learn."

ing the money, Skylark allegedly left the bank and climbed into the awaiting cab. Officers responding to the scene saw the cab around the 2600 block of Wilshire and stopped the vehicle.

Police conducted several field show-ups at the corner of 26th Street and Wilshire Boulevard. Witnesses, who sat in a nearby police car, looked at Skylark from different angles before positively identifying him as the suspected bank robber. Skylark was led in and out of a police car, and was asked to stand at the corner of the intersection and face different directions. One witness asked that the hood on Skylark's jacket be put on his head for proper identification.

Forensic investigators combed the back of the cab for evidence. They found a duffle bag stuffed with a backpack, which contained a large Ziploc bag of cash. Only $1 bills were visible. A replica handgun was also recovered in the Skylark's possession.

The cab driver, who declined to give his name, said he got a call for a passenger pick-up near the bank. Skylark entered the back of the cab but didn't say where he wanted to go when the driver asked him.

"He just said, 'Go here and then turn here,'" the driver said, shaking his head in disbelief. "Why do this? He's a young guy, I don't understand this."

The cab driver, who's retired and was only driving the cab as a favor to a friend who recently suffered a heart attack, said his last day was Sunday.

"I feel lucky," he said, adding that he was going to try to capitalize on his good fortune by buying a lottery ticket on Saturday.

Skylark was booked at the Santa Monica Jail for bank robbery, kidnapping and parole violation. No bail was set. Detectives from the robbery/homicide unit of the Santa Monica Police Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation are handling the investigation.

earning a title last year at the National Lifeguard Championships, where she had to best her opponents in swimming, paddling and running. She won four out of the five events at the competition, which she nearly missed because she didn't have enough funding.

Her father ended up getting $1,000 to help send his daughter to nationals from a man whose daughter's life he saved when she fell from a freeway sign over Lincoln Boulevard.

"As soon as I saw her, I pulled underneath [the sign]. She fell on my van and rolled off the side of it," he said. The money Sean received from the grateful father helped foster the dreams of his own daughter.

Kirra has been in the junior lifeguard program since she was 9 and plans to stay in the program until she's 18 and can legally become a lifeguard.

"It has great benefits and salaries," Sean said. "It's always kind of been a back-up plan for Ki."

Kirra, or "Ki," has many other nicknames, including the alias Shirley Good — the name she uses when she raps.

Her singing career started at school talent shows, where she sang hit songs that she and her father rewrote to make the lyrics "childproof" and relatable to Kirra and her peers.

Now, she has a CD called "It's Shirley Good," featuring about a half-dozen songs. And this is no homemade album. Instead of producing songs from the family's computer, Kehoe's partner, a producer and a former musician, records the songs in his studio, Kehoe said.

Outside of surfing and singing, Kirra skateboards and snowboards, especially in the winter when finding good surf requires some traveling, her father said.

The Daily Press recently sat down with Kirra to talk about life as a little singing surfer girl.

What distinguishes you from other kids?

"A lot of other kids don't really do anything, you know. They're not interested in a sport or something. They just sit home. I go out and go surfing or go skating. In the winter, I go snowboarding. Last winter I did a fundraiser for breast cancer. And I raised about $500 and whoever raised the most money gets a snowboard. I got it. It was pretty good."

How did your singing career start?

"I was 7 when I started. My first song was 'Little Angel,' (a remake of Shaggy's 'Angel'). That was my first song when I was 7. I was listening to this love song, which was really getting on my nerves, 'cause it was all like eeew. I was listening to it and, I think, during that time 9/11 was happening. So, we decided because he (my dad) rapped and did comedy, that's what he did. We started rapping 'cause we wanted to make up a song about 9/11 that was about a little angel. It was for the kids to listen to . . . I started rapping because of talent shows at my school. And the second song I did, it was a remix of R. Kelly. It (my version) was called 'Give me a phat beat.' I did it at the talent show."

Do you have to time to hang out with friends?

"(I hang out with them) at school. Most of them I surf with. Those are the ones I usually hang out with the most because I have something in common with them. Because a lot of my friends if you hang out with them you just watch TV or something. But if I hang out with people (who surf) — if we spend the night, we surf the next day."

Do you have a favorite subject?

"PE, humanities and science. Oh, and music . . . Actually music is OK at my school. We just kinda sing 'Jingle Bell Rock' at my school. Humanities and PE are my favorite."

Do you have an idol?

"Lisa Anderson. She's a short boarder, rides for Roxy, a world champion, really good surfer. I mean she is throwing tail. I look up to her because she's really nice and really talkative. Her daughter's even more talkative."

What are your goals for the future?

"No. 1 — I have like 70. One would be a pro-surfer. No. 2: a rapper, be rich and own my own street and decorate the sidewalk. Pro-skateboarder, pro-snowboarder. Then, experiment with chemicals — become a mad scientist. Artist, producer, singer. Go to college in Pepperdine because it's in Malibu (and so I can surf there)."

What do you like about Santa Monica?

"I like the promenade. I love the pier. The rollercoaster and ladder you climb up. I love Malibu. I like the Cove (Santa Monica's new skate park). I like the Boys and Girls Club, SMC's pool . . . Iowa communities rushing to shut out child molesters

BY TODD DVORAK

Associated Press Writer

IOWA CITY, Iowa — One after another, cities and towns across Iowa are rushing to shut the door to child molesters.

In the past month, nearly two dozen cities and counties, from Des Moines to the little town of Garrison, have approved or considered restrictions on where convicted sex offenders may live.

The rush came after a federal appeals court, in the first such ruling in the nation, upheld a 2002 Iowa state law that bars sex offenders from living within 2,000 feet of a school or day care center. Emboldened by the ruling, Iowa cities and towns are drawing their own buffer zones around parks, playgrounds, trails, swimming pools, libraries and school bus stops.

"We've seen similar responses in Florida and New Jersey, but what's happening in Iowa may be a bit more extreme, simply because they are going beyond the state law," said Scott Matson, research fellow with the Center for Sex Offender Management, a branch of the U.S. Justice Department.

The new restrictions have had — or will have — the effect of making entire small towns off limits, and several sex offenders have already been forced to move.

Some experts are warning that the restrictions will only make sex offenders more desperate and more dangerous, by making it harder for them to establish stable lives and relationships and hold down a steady job.

"They might as well just exile all of them ... banish them from the state," said Don Santee, a 30-year-old registered offender who was forced to move out of the Shellsburg home he shares with his wife and three children because he was convicted at age 17 of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse. "I am being punished again. I'm trying to keep this in all good faith. But I'm waiting for the world to wake up and realize this isn't the way to deal with sex offenders."

In the meantime, the Iowa Civil Liberties Union is challenging the Iowa statute in what could become the first U.S. Supreme Court test of sex offender residency laws now being used in some form by as many as 14 states.

Iowa lawmakers from both parties have said they will fight any attempt to water down Iowa's law, already considered one of the toughest among the states with such laws.

"If the result is sex offenders leaving Iowa, we think that's good news," Senate Democratic Leader Mike Gronstal said.

Last month, Ely, a town of 1,500 without a single school or day care center, became the first Iowa city to pass tougher new rules. It banned sex offenders from living near the city park, playground and library — in effect, making nearly the entire town a sex-offender-free zone.

"We felt a little vulnerable," said Chris Johnson, an Ely resident and mother of two. "For a lot of towns like ours, we can become the only place available for sex offenders."

Garrison, a town of just 413 people about 20 miles northeast of Cedar Rapids, made it illegal for sex offenders to live within 2,000 feet of the city's only park and playground, library and two school bus stops. Des Moines, the state's biggest city, drew a line around parks, swimming pools and recreational trails.

Over the summer, several cities and townships across the nation tried to restrict where sex offenders can live after a series of child abductions and murders. In Florida, Miami Beach created a 2,500-buffer zone around schools, day care centers and parks, making nearly the entire city off limits.

"What happens is almost a competition among communities for more restrictive laws," said Jill Levenson, professor and researcher on sex offender and criminal justice policies at Lynn University in Boca Raton, Fla. "The trouble is as we create all these new obstacles, we may be making them more dangerous."

Iowa modeled its law after Alabama's, which shares the 2,000-foot restriction with Arkansas and Oklahoma. The ICLU later sued on behalf of more than a dozen sex offenders, arguing that the rule infringed on the right of offenders to live where they want and punished them after they had paid their debt to society.

A federal judge agreed and blocked the law, but the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals disagreed over the summer, saying Iowa lawmakers had the authority to set limitations to protect its residents.

Iowa prosecutors and police began enforcing the law in September after giving offenders living inside the buffer zones time to find new housing.

Last month, the ICLU filed an appeal to the Supreme Court, which has not yet decided whether to hear the case.

Gay priests struggle with serving church

BY RACHEL ZOLL

AP Religion Writer

The Rev. Fred Daley, a gay, Roman Catholic priest, had grown increasingly disturbed by Vatican pronouncements over the years that homosexuals were unfit for the clergy.

Then the situation escalated — some church leaders suggested that gays were responsible for the clergy sex abuse crisis. Daley was so angry, he did something last year that almost no other gay Catholic cleric in the country has done: He came out to his bishop, parishioners and his entire community to show that homosexuals were faithfully working in the church.

"I'm as much a member of the church as anybody else," said Daley, of St. Francis de Sales Church in Utica, N.Y., who was ordained in 1974 and said he has never considered leaving the priesthood. "I love being a priest."

Researchers have estimated that thousands of homosexual clergy across the United States have dedicated their lives to a church that considers them "intrinsically disordered" and prone to "evil tendencies." Soon, the Vatican will back up that teaching with a document that could set new restrictions on candidates for the priesthood — a pronouncement U.S. bishops may discuss in private during their national meeting starting Monday in Washington.

Yet, through decades of consistent signals from the Vatican that they are unwelcome, homosexuals have continued to join the priesthood, raising questions about how they can devote themselves to an institution that so questions their ability to serve.

"As I have, through the years, become more comfortable with who I am, it seemed the institutional church and its decrees and its pastoral letters from the Vatican seemed more harsh and almost mean-spirited," said Daley, who didn't realize he was gay until after he was ordained and has remained celibate. "But what I find on the grass-roots level is vibrant, alive communities of faith in my everyday ministry."

Several other gay clergy, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they feared retribution from their superiors, said in recent interviews that they were only vaguely aware of Vatican pronouncements on homosexual priests when they applied.

"I was pretty naive," said a West Coast priest, who began studying for ordination in the 1980s. "I knew the church had ill feelings about it, but I didn't know a whole lot else."

A key 1961 Vatican document on selecting candidates for the priesthood made clear homosexuals should be barred. But the instruction, and others that followed, have clearly not been enforced in many American seminaries and religious communities. Estimates of the number of gays in U.S. seminaries and the priesthood range from 25 percent to 50 percent, according to a review of research by the Rev. Donald Cozzens, a former seminary rector and author of "The Changing Face of the Priesthood."

A gay priest who had been worried that he would be expelled if seminary administrators discovered his sexual orientation said his disclosure was welcomed instead. He said his spiritual director told him, "I'm grateful for your honesty."

Historically, many gays and lesbians chose religious life partly because it was a socially acceptable alternative to marriage and protected them from questions about why they were single, Cozzens said. But the gay priests interviewed for this story insisted they were not hiding out. They said they found religious communities where they could be relatively open with fellow clergy.

"My superiors encouraged me to keep talking about it as a way to help me understand how to better live a celibate life in a real healthy way," said a gay priest, who attended seminary in the 1980s and refused further identification.

Such support may be harder to find after the new Vatican guidelines are released.

The Italian newspaper Il Giornale reported Friday that the document from the Congregation for Catholic Education will bar from seminary men who "support" gay culture or have "deeply rooted" gay tendencies. The newspaper said the instruction will be made public Nov. 29.

The document would not apply to homosexuals who have already been ordained, but gay priests said it would challenge anew their decision to work within a church whose pronouncements they consider discriminatory.

Anticipating the Vatican pronouncement, some gay priests are discussing collectively staying away from pulpits on a Sunday to show how much the church relies on them. Other priests said they were considering revealing their sexual orientation to parishioners. Some are contemplating "outing" gay bishops who would be called upon to enforce the new guidelines.

Any new restrictions would be "discouraging," said the West Coast priest, but "I prefer to work for justice in this area within the church structure."

Another gay priest said the new restrictions would amount to the church telling him, "to sit on the back of the bus."

"But this is my family," he said. "You don't leave your family if there's a problem. I feel God has called me here and that takes precedence over everything else."

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Joseph Spektor be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

HEARING on the petition will be held on November 30, 2005 at 9:15 AM in Dept. No. 5 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250.
