Restructured boards and commissions won't include Council families

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

After a heated discussion on when the policy should apply, City Councilmembers nonetheless voted unanimously to enact an ordinance barring close family members of sitting City Councilmembers from serving on any City board, commission or task force.

This policy suggestion came out of a City Council Ad Hoc Committee staffed by Councilmembers Kristin McCowan, Phil Brock and Gleam Davis, which is dedicated to reexamining the structures of boards and commissions.

In the most recent Nov. 9 City Council meeting, members also discussed several other points emerging from the Ad Hoc Committee including reducing the membership of and potentially consolidating certain boards and commissions.

The anti-nepotism policy was first brought up in a May 11 Council Meeting and is roughly based on a similar ordinance in place in Beverly Hills. It is designed to reduce undue influence of City Council members on the recommendations made by boards and commissions.

While the concept of an anti-nepotism policy was universally approved by Councilmembers, the speed at which it must be applied was the subject of controversy.

The debate centered around the

Mask rules likely to persist unless vaccination rates increase

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Current vaccination rates will not allow Los Angeles County to lift masking restrictions by the end of the year according to data released by the public health department last week.

About 44,000 people are becoming fully vaccinated per week in Los Angeles County but that number has to increase to about 70,000 per week to hit the County goal of vaccinating 80 percent of its population by the end of the year.

About 62 percent of all Californians are fully vaccinated compared to about 72 percent of County residents (80 percent have received at least one dose).

Los Angeles County Department of Public Health Director Barbara Ferrer said increasing the vaccination rate is doable if residents act with a sense of urgency right now because there is ample supply and she said it's important to pre-plan in advance of Thanksgiving before cold weather creates a potential surge in cases.

"While we hope the preventive measures we're taking blunt the rise of cases in LA County," she said. "We do acknowledge the risks that come to cooler weather and indoor gatherings and perhaps some waning of vaccine effectiveness. Getting vaccinated, getting your boosters and masking up indoors and in crowded outdoor spaces remains critical as we confront the real possibility of a winner search. Certainly around the country and across parts of the world, the colder weather has already brought significant increases in cases and unfortunately in hospitalizations. It would be foolish to not heed the warning inherent in these increases. Our ample supply of vaccinations allows us to offer the initial series to everyone five and older with boosters for those with waning protection, putting us in a better position to prevent the tragic heartbreak we experienced last winter."

On Nov. 11 last year, the county reported 22 deaths, 7,216 total deaths, 2,152 new cases, 327,964 total cases, 3,302,004 residents tested with a positivity rate of 5.6 percent, 7-day daily average case rate was 19.7 and 903 people were in the hospital.

New hearing, same arguments for splitting SMMUSD

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

In the third hearing to debate cleaving the local school district into Malibu and Santa Monica specific agencies both sides hardened their battle lines but little new information emerged to clarify the ongoing dispute.

The city of Malibu is asking County officials to split SMMUSD in two. The proposal has been contentious from the start with the Malibu community accusing SMMUSD of neglect and SMMUSD supporters arguing the proposal will decrease the quality of education across the region.

The Los Angeles County Committee on School District Organization previously met in September and agreed with a staff recommendation that said more time was needed to evaluate Malibu's proposal to split the Santa Monica Malibu Unified School District.

That meeting followed the release of a preliminary report that said the proposal submitted by the City of Malibu, failed to meet eight of nine conditions. Proposals should meet standards for enrollment, community identity, division of property,

Preparing for the Best Case Scenario: The City of Santa Monica's Involvement in the Storage and Sale of Leaded AvGas

As discussed in a prior article in the Santa Monica Daily Press entitled, "Santa Monica Airport (SMO), Leaded Avgas, and Childhood Blood Lead Levels: Profound Pediatric Health Consequences," what is clear is that:

1. Avgas is the largest source of lead in air in the United States.

2. SMO sells leaded avgas and allows aircraft using leaded avgas into its airport.

3. Blood lead levels in our children near the airport has profound and drastic short and long-term health consequences."

What is not commonly known is that the City of Santa Monica is facilitating and promoting the sale of leaded AvGas at SMO. The common facade the city has hid behind is something called the Consent Decree, which represents an agreement between the City of Santa Monica and the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) made in 2017. Part of this agreement states that. "Nothing in this agreement shall allow the City to restrict the sale of leaded aviation fuel for as long as the FAA authorizes use of such fuels within the United States."

However, Alan Levenson (Founder of No Jets and Environmental Activist) and other Activists who have researched our agreements note that while the city cannot restrict the sale of leaded fuel nothing in the agreement states that the City of Santa Monica must sell leaded AvGas or provide tanks for lease to sell this toxic fuel. Though the City of Santa Monica should do everything possible to stop the sale of leaded AvGas at SMO the consent decree still permits other private agencies such as Atlantic Aviation to sell leaded AvGas at SMO. Therefore the fuel storage tanks owned by the City of Santa Monica can be restricted to only the sale of unleaded AvGas and 80% of the SMO fleet can use this unleaded fuel.

Seldom is it an issue to prepare for the "Best Case Scenario," so it is crucial to consider how to best consider the risks associated with the storage of fuel underground at SMO. We really don't get any advance warning when an earthquake might take place and Environmental Protection Agencies note that "following a substantial earthquake it is important to examine all underground storage tank (UST) systems for damage. A damaged or improperly operating UST system can pose a significant risk to human health, safety, and the environment."

In fact the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) cautions that "natural disasters – such as tornadoes, hurricanes, tsunamis, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, and fires – are often unpredictable, cause significant damage, and can be costly to mitigate. Underground storage tank (UST) systems can be vulnerable to damage during natural disasters and can even release regulated substances into the environment."

California is particularly susceptible to earthquakes and fuel storage accidents as witnessed in San Francisco in 2019 and Los Angeles in 2015. Given the problems at underground gas storage facilities, a 2014 United States study by the National Agricultural and Rural Development Policy Centre determined that "... underground natural gas storage activities bear risks that are substantial enough to affect nearby residents, and that these impacts are more severe in proximity, concentration, and for properties without access to public water."

One aspect of earthquakes and fuel storage is the possible leaks and adverse affects to our aquifers, which are our main sources of water. Contaminated aquifers can affect water availability and subsequent health issues for decades or even centuries. A study by the EPA investigating lead emissions from piston-engine aircraft using leaded aviation gasoline noted that ethylene dibromide may "enter underground aquifers via leaking underground storage tanks or fuel spills. Studies demonstrate that ethylene dibromide may persist for long periods of time in certain groundwater environments.

Due to the seriousness of this possible environmental emergency the EPA Office of Underground Storage Tanks (OUST) and Office of Research and Development's National Risk Management Research Laboratory (NRMRL) in association with the Association of State and Territorial Solid Waste Management Officials (ATSWMO) have formed a team to evaluate the potential for public health and welfare effects attributable to ethylene dibromide from past or present fuel leaks and spills.

These agencies found that "water samples for this study were provided by State agencies to EPA between October 2005 and July 2007. Of the 802 groundwater samples provided from 102 sites, ethylene dibromide was detected in 54 samples, 43 of which had ethylene dibromide concentrations above the Maximum Concentration Level." It is important to note that could have been much worse since these sites did not include the analysis of groundwater at airports.

But the City of Santa Monica, might ask are we immune from issues of fuel storage leaks? A review of the recent past, suggests otherwise. For instance, a spill in the Charnock Sub-Basin led the EPA to investigate the cleanup of methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE), a gasoline additive, from a groundwater basin formerly used for drinking water by the City of Santa Monica, California.

Another illustration is the extensive clean up of drinking water contamination needed at Santa Monica's Olympic Well field, where an aquifer is located that underlies Olympic Boulevard and surrounding areas in the eastern part of the City, and represents the City's second largest groundwater supply.

A story in the Daily Press said "Contamination in Santa Monica has come from several sources. Locations of suspected and known soil and water contamination are tracked and cataloged by the Regional Water Quality Control Board (RWQCB), Saint John's Physician Partners, aligned with Providence Saint John's Health Center, recently received the 2021 Excellence in Healthcare Award from the Integrated Healthcare Association for top performance in clinical quality and cost measures. The physician group also was rated the top 10 percent for patient satisfaction.

Saint John's Physician Partners is a medical foundation that maintains more than 40 treatment locations in Southern California, employing more than 200 physicians, including primary care physicians as well as medical and surgical specialists.

A key component of IHA's statewide Align. Measure. Perform. (AMP) Program, the Excellence in Healthcare Award recognizes provider organizations that perform in the top 50 percent in all three major AMP areas: clinical quality, patient experience, and total cost of care.

Of the nearly 200 provider organizations statewide participating in the AMP Program, just 21 attained Excellence in Healthcare Award performance standards for 2021, based on AMP results for measurement year 2020. The award was presented on Nov. 3 at IHA's Annual Stakeholder Conference.

"The pandemic has presented us all a number of incredible challenges, but thanks to our amazing family of physicians, nurses and employees, we have collectively risen to the occasion and met each challenge with the utmost faith, compassion and dedication to provide our patients the highest-quality and affordable healthcare," said Katie Kerr, associate vice president of the SJPP.

"We are proud to receive these awards for clinical excellence and patient satisfaction. Saint John's Physician Partners is a young organization, but from the beginning we have been inspired by our patients to deliver outstanding care and service, and we are thankful to our staff and physicians who dedicate every day to being the best," added Mark Needham, M.D., family medicine physician at SJPP.

IHA President and CEO Jeff Rideout, M.D., commended the top performers, saying, "IHA is proud to recognize provider organizations that are truly leading the way to high-quality, affordable, patient-centered care."

On Nov. 11 this year, there were 25 reported deaths, 26,838 total deaths, 1,344 new cases reported, 1,509,073 total cases, 9,222,168 people tested for a daily positivity rate of 0.98 percent, the 7-day daily average case rate is 7.7 and 633 people are currently hospitalized.

Ferrer said expanded eligibility for vaccines and boosters are a boon to efforts.

"Many children have told us how much they can't wait to be able to see their vaccinated friends indoors and to hug grandparents this holiday season," she said. "And so many parents have told us how relieved they are that this child is protected not only from the health effects of the virus, but from the learning disruptions and mental health effects that often follow up in the wake of school outbreaks, quarantine and isolation."

She said anyone who can receive a vaccine booster based on the timing of their original shots should consider doing so.

"Here in California and in our county boosters are available for all adults six months out from their second dose of Pfizer or Moderna and two months out from receiving J&J," she said. "Getting boosted before the holidays is important. Particularly if you're gathering with others or you're traveling. You can visit our vaccination planning site at vaccinatelacounty.com to find a place to get vaccinated near you. It also makes common sense to get tested before gathering with people who are at high risk for bad outcomes of a COVID infection including elderly folks, immunocompromised people, or people who have not yet been vaccinated."

On Anniversary, the Malibu City Council Votes to Extend Woolsey Project Fee Waivers Again to Help Residents Rebuild

On the three-year anniversary of the worst wildfire in the City's history, the Malibu City Council voted during its virtual meeting on Monday, November 8, 2021 to extend the permit fee waivers that the Council enacted to help homeowners rebuild properties destroyed during the Woolsey Fire.

"On the anniversary of the Woolsey Fire, we are reminded that so many in our community are still suffering the loss and trauma of this natural disaster, and they still need our help," said Mayor Paul Grisanti. "I want them to know that their City Council and staff are committed to doing everything possible to help them through this painful, slow, expensive process. I urge anyone in Malibu who is struggling with their rebuild project to contact City Hall for one-on-one personal assistance. We are here to help you."

The fee waiver deadline was extended for another 18 months to June 30, 2023. All required Planning Department applications for a project must be deemed complete by June 30, 2023. All required building permits must be pulled by December 30, 2023. Fees will not be waived after December 30, 2023.

The City's Rebuild website and forms have been updated and are available at Malibucity.org/RebuildFees.

The Malibu City Council has made Woolsey Fire rebuilding its top priority after ensuring public safety starting in the Fiscal Year 2019-2020 Budget, and has voted unanimously every year to extend the fee waivers, which now account for a total of approximately $5 million in Woolsey rebuild assistance. To date, 56 homes destroyed during the fire have been rebuilt and their owners received their Certificate of Occupancy to be able to move in, and 317 homes burned in the fire have been approved by the Planning Department.

The fee waiver includes all City planning and building permit fees for properties that are being rebuilt as a "like-for-like" or "like-for-like plus 10%" rebuild and were used as a primary residence by the property owner as of November 8, 2018.

For rebuilding information, forms, deadlines and other resources, visit www.MalibuRebuilds.org. To request one-on-one personal assistance with your Woolsey Fire rebuild, contact the Fire Rebuild Team at ashah@malibucity.org or call 310-456-2489, ext. 385.

racial equity, cost to the State, educational outcomes, infrastructure costs, property values and ongoing fiscal health. However, staff said many of the failures were due to unanswered questions that may be resolved with additional research.

During their arguments, Malibu proponents said their proposal did meet the criteria and criticized SMMUSD for failing to answer required questions that would help Malibu address lingering questions.

"We've asked the district for this information and other information nearly a month ago, and they're trying to take six to eight weeks, sometimes more than that, before we get the simplest of information from them," said Malibu Deputy City Attorney Christine Wood. "So while they want to criticize whether we can show certain information in our preliminary report, don't let it be missed that they're not even willing to provide the city the information that we need to complete our feasibility study," she said.

She said the City has faith in the commissioners to make a fair finding but said the process so far hadn't done enough to allow Malibu to present information directly to County staff before recommendations were made.

"It's one thing to question the credibility of our findings. But the LACOE preliminary staff report seems to completely ignore things presented to the county committee as evidence that the petition has and will continue to meet the nine criteria," she said.

The District said Malibu's proposal simply couldn't meet the necessary criteria, no matter how much additional research was conducted.

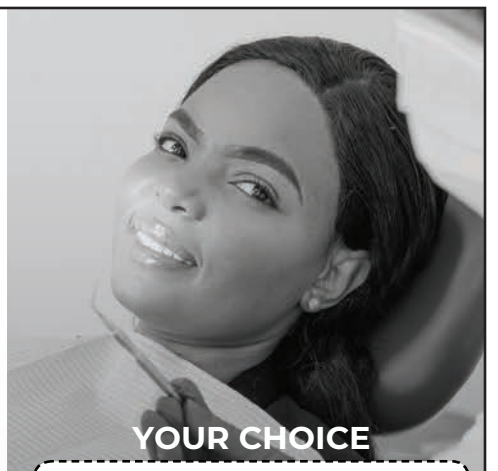

"This is the third hearing on this petition and still to this day, there's not one sentence explaining the city and its visions for an education program," said attorney David Soldani. "What is the city going to do with all that additional money that will improve a program that already has a 100% graduation rate? Instead of hearing about an education program, all they talk about is property tax. And that tells you everything you need to know about what's really behind this petition. In summary, the criteria simply cannot be met here. And there is no compelling reason to overlook any of the criteria, especially where the district is as high performing and successful as the Santa Monica Malibu Unified School District."

The hearing was part of a months-long process that will culminate in a decision in about March of 2022. The Committee could reject the proposal outright at that time or allow it to continue. If approved by the County, the proposal would enter a years-long review by the state and could culminate in a public vote.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (NOVEMBER 15)

Your heart keeps getting fuller. Your choices will seem unconventional, but you've a keen instinct for what's good for you and will, as a result, lift your health, well-being and the quality of your life and relationships. You'll see parts of the world that are new to you, and yet your travels will seem to bring you home. Leo and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 10, 3, 20, 1 and 42.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Someone is pulling you down. Say goodbye for a while. The break will be a blessing. You'll get the pleasure of knowing where you stand as an individual outside of the context of a group.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You cannot control how many times a good thing crosses your path but you can seize the opportunity when it arises. If you can't use the resource in one place, you'll use it somewhere else.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're looking ahead to a time you'll be working in an entirely different scale. You don't currently have the resources to do what's required of you on the other side, but you'll attain them along the way.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll be interesting to the people around you. First, you'll get their curiosity, and then their continued attention. Over time you'll see evidence of your influence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your attitude and appearance speak for you. You don't have to say anything at all to tell the world about yourself. People's responses to you will surprise and inform you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The right move is often one that is more work than the wrong move, but not always. Today, you'll get lucky, and the right thing will also be the easy thing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your commitment to bettering yourself and creating better experiences for others will drive your choices. Note that improvement doesn't always require work. What's most needed now is rest and recovery.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Hyperbole won't help matters, so avoid exaggerations. When you stop looking for the best, worst, nicest or meanest, you will see life for what it really is.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The thing you do feels automatic, but in fact, it's a decision. Go back to the crossroads. Do not make a turn. Stand in contemplation. What choices have you been missing?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It's appropriate to be aggressive in the heat of the game, but this occasion so rarely comes up. You'll be ready when it does. In the meantime, you'll flex your mercy, compassion and empathy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Expect a variety pack of challenges — some logistical, others having to do with communication and a few that speak directly to what you've been working on. With your sporting attitude, this should be fun!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Go ahead and take on the hard task because much will be accomplished inside of the project. You'll conquer fear, transform a piece of your world and create a new habit, all in one go!

ANTI-NEPOTISM

sole individual—Michael Soloff—who will be immediately affected by the position. Soloff is a housing commissioner, who by the accounts of several City Councilmembers is highly effective in his position. Soloff is also Mayor Himmelrich's husband and although he was appointed to the Housing Commission prior to Himmelrich's City Council election, must step down from his position.

Councilmembers Brock and Negrete were sympathetic to his abrupt dismissal and favored having the policy apply to all new appointees immediately and to current appointees once they have finished serving their term.

"We're putting a nepotism policy in 146, 147 years after the City was founded," said Brock. "I think there is room to have some flexibility in this for the good of residents who have been involved all these years."

Councilmembers Gleam Davis and Kristin McCowan were strongly opposed to adjusting the policy on account of Soloff.

"I'm incredibly uncomfortable with the fact that this has been so overly personalized," said McCowan. "We cannot target a policy or when it takes effect based on one person. I don't understand this."

With the nepotism policy enacted, Council is turning its attention to other acts of reform and improvement to boards and commissions.

A public hearing was recently held by the Ad Hoc Committee to solicit opinions on term limits, board and commission consolidation, council members as liaisons, youth and diversity on boards and commissions, and input from commissioners on future appointments to those Commissions.

Based on that feedback and discussions at the Nov. 9 Council meeting, City Council is considering several changes, including recommendations that the Arts Commission be reduced from 11 members to 9 or 7 and the Urban Forest Task force be reduced from 9 to 7 members. Council members will continue to discuss boards and commission reforms both in the Ad Hoc Committee and future Council meetings.

AVGAS

a department of the California State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB), and by the California Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC). Leaking underground storage tanks of petroleum and other chemicals have allowed pollutants to seep into the soil and water in some parts of the Santa Monica Basin. Some sites are actively leaking or are in the process of being tested."

The primary groundwater producing areas for the Silverado aquifer are the City of Santa Monica's Olympic and Charnock Wellfields. At the west, the Santa Monica Airport also has a well, that feeds into the aquifer and the yields are approximately 300 gallons per minute. So safety is an important concern with leaded or even unleaded AvGas fuel underground storage and sale in and around SMO since there is a well at SMO that feeds into the Silverado aquifer.

Since lead in AvGas is one of the largest air and soil contaminant source in our environment the City of Santa Monica should immediately stop their sale of this toxic fuel. However it should also consider stopping their involvement with the storage of fuel underground at SMO. When we consider the health of our citizens and environment the risk of storing fuel that could lead to health risks affecting our aquifers warrants our serious attention.

As SMO and the City of Santa Monica are preparing to close the airport by 2029, according to the consent decree, it only makes sense that the city should stop the sale of leaded AvGas and eliminate the City's storage of underground AvGas Fuel. The consent decree allows other private agencies, other than the city, within SMO to store and sell AvGas fuel. This solution insulates the city from liability due to conceivable class action suits against the city for the sale of leaded AvGas and its social health consequences and eliminates the risk associated with underground fuel storage leaks.
