New rules to encourage water conservation

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Water conservation remains a priority at City Hall, as the council has approved several changes to municipal code recently with an eye toward water savings.

Changes have been made to water meter requirements for affordable housing units and the city has revised rules for landscaping to encourage conservation.

At their Nov. 10 meeting, council took three actions related to revising water meters.

First, council approved changes to the code requiring individual meters for projects of less than six units and sub meters for larger projects. Second, council approved a discounted water rate for affordable housing projects that were previously exempt from the individual meter requirements. Third council approved $84,000 a year to cover the new subsidy.

Santa Monica has required individual water meters in new multifamily construction since 1990. However, a separate city code requires those meters be placed in a public right of way such as an alley. Staff said the two codes create a conflict, as the public space is frequently too small to accommodate multiple meters. The old code also exempted affordable housing projects from the requirement.

The new rules still require individual city owned meters for projects of six or fewer meters. However, large projects will install a single city owned master meter and individual units will have privately owned sub meters. Landlords will be responsible for paying the master meter bill and it will be up to the property manager/landlord to decide how they use the submeter information.

Part of the new rules remove the exemption for affordable housing projects. To offset the increased cost of installing submeters, a new discounted water rate has been established for units

Baseball: Samohi shortstop signs with Nevada

McLaughlin excited to extend family legacy on diamond

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

If Jaylon McLaughlin didn't have baseball in his blood, he certainly had it in his eyes.

Born when his father was playing the sport in college, McLaughlin was around the diamond from a very young age and quickly took a liking to it.

Indeed, baseball strengthened a bond that has blossomed over the years into a good-natured father-son rivalry.

"We're really competitive," said McLaughlin, a senior shortstop at Santa Monica High School, "so I always try to one-up him."

McLaughlin made progress toward achieving that goal this month by signing a letter of intent to play at the University of Nevada.

The talented infielder was also recruited by Long Beach State, University of the Pacific and New Mexico State, but he verbally committed to the Wolf Pack in mid-September and ultimately kept his word.

"It's what I've always wanted," he said, adding that he chose Nevada because of the vibe he got from the coaching staff, the atmosphere of the Reno school and its proximity to Lake Tahoe. "My goal is to play professionally, so this puts me one step closer."

McLaughlin will join a Nevada program that competes in Division I as a member of the Mountain West Conference. The Wolf Pack compiled a 41-15 overall record last year under then-coach Jay Johnson, capturing its first-ever outright conference title with a 22-

Panjo raises $4.6 million in Series A financing

On Nov. 12, Panjo, the marketplace for automotive and sport enthusiasts announced the closing of a Series A funding round of $4.6 million to help continue the growth of the company's marketplace. This brings the total investment in Panjo to $6.7 million.

Panjo rescues buyers and sellers from the friction and fragmentation that cost them time and money. Unlike alternatives, Panjo's community-based approach promotes the inspiration and discovery that drives enthusiast commerce. Among Panjo members, buyers live an average of 1,500 miles from the items they purchased. When the closest person with the part you need or want is that far away, in person exchanges are not an option. By aggregating supply, adding identity verification, and facilitating payments, Panjo saves and protects buyers and sellers.

The company plans to use this round of funding to expand the team. New community manager positions in a variety of verticals will ensure the continued quality of Panjo's assemblage of community marketplaces. Panjo will continue releasing features that benefit buyers and sellers through reduced transaction costs.

"Panjo has built a strong community of enthusiast buyers and sellers, particularly in areas like automotive and sports," says Andrew Parker, General Partner at Spark Capital. "Opening up their API will give devoted experts across many more areas of interest access to their technology and existing community."

The company is also excited to open its platform to communities and clubs of all stripes. Panjo's newly released API and marketplace platform enables community groups, clubs, and publishers to quickly launch peer-to-peer, mobile-optimized marketplaces.

The start-up company, founded by Chad Billmyer, Juan Vasconez and Tom Gerken continues to grow its community marketplace among some of the most devoted enthusiasts in the automotive and sports arena. On average, panjo.com members are buying and trading nearly $10 million in goods a month; some of the more popular items include wet shaving razors, Tesla Model S modifications, and Audi A5 parts.

"We are seeing more and more people using the marketplace as their go-to source for rare and hard to find items," said Chad Billmyer, CEO of Panjo. "It's humbling and a pleasure to serve the world's foremost subject matter experts in a variety of auto, sport, and hobby categories. I learn something new from one of our community marketplace members everyday." He added, "We maintain a file at Panjo called, 'That's a thing' which helps us keep track of the obvious and non-obvious community marketplace requests and suggestions that flow into us on a daily basis."

The gross merchandise volume of sales increased 600 percent since the last round of financing. The key marketplace indicators have been steadily growing 10 percent week over week through 2015. Some new partners for Panjo include: TeslaMotorsClub.com, HobbyTalk.com, Audizine.com, BushcraftUSA.com, and more than 100 additional enthusiast community sites.

The idea for Panjo came about when Billmyer was buying and selling with frustration inside a hybrid car enthusiast community and realized the need for a safe community for passionate hobbyists to share and sell specialized items.

The company has official partnerships with web-based communities that serve Tesla, Audi, BMW, Porsche, Toyota and other enthusiasts in the sports and hobby categories.

The formation of 'green' PACs

Dear EarthTalk:

Are green groups using the campaign finance system like other "special interests" through Political Action Committees (PACs) or otherwise?

Wilson McClave
Washington, DC

AS A MATTER OF FACT, GREEN POLITICAL Action Committees (PACs) emerged as major funders last fall in the run-up to the 2014 Congressional elections, and look to play an even larger role in next year's Presidential and other races. According to the Center for Responsive Politics (CRP), PACs are political committees, typically representing specific business, labor or ideological interests, organized for the purpose of raising and spending money to elect and defeat candidates. They must register with the Federal Election Commission and are limited to donations of $5,000 to any given candidate per election-but can also contribute $5,000 annually to any other PAC and up to $15,000 annually to any national political party. PACs can receive as much as $5,000 from any one individual, PAC or political party per calendar year.

Meanwhile, so-called Super PACs aren't beholden to fundraising or spending limits, but can't make contributions directly to candidates or political parties like regular PACs. "They do, however make independent expenditures in federal races-running ads or sending mail or communicating in other ways with messages that specifically advocate the election or defeat of a specific candidate," reports CRP, which produces the OpenSecrets.org website scrutinizing what PACs are spending and on what.

The biggest among the new breed of green PACs is billionaire hedge-fund manager Tom Steyer's NextGen Climate Action super PAC, which poured some $50 million toward battling climate "deniers" in races across seven key states in 2014. NextGen has already committed upwards of $5 million into the 2016 election cycle, with much more likely to come over the next several months in an effort to "disqualify" presidential candidates who deny that climate change is real or caused by human activity.

"The effort will be called Hot Seat, and NextGen Climate says it will involve media and on-the-ground campaigns in key electoral states aimed at linking Republican deniers to the Koch brothers and other interests that seek to undermine climate science," reports Kate Sheppard in The Huffington Post. "The idea...is to force candidates skeptical of climate change to defend their views right out of the gate."

Another big player is the League of Conservation Voters' super PAC, which pledged $25 million alongside NextGen in 2014. The next two biggest green super PACs to date are the Sierra Club's Independent Action and the Environment America Action Fund, both which spent roughly $1 million to influence 2014 elections. The Defenders of Wildlife Action Committee spent $350,000 on 2014 elections.

As for regular PACs, those already amassing their funding war chests for 2016 include the League of Conservation Voters, the Center for Coastal Conservation, Ocean Champions, Environment America, The NRDC (Natural Resources Defense Council) Action Fund, Defenders of Wildlife Action Fund, Environmental Defense Action Fund, and the Sierra Club. Other green PACs are expected to join the fray.

While not a PAC per se, Crowdpac gives everyday people the ability to research candidates based on their own values and priorities and provides an easy online mechanism for making direct campaign donations. The website's founders view Crowdpac as a tool for democratizing the U.S. election and campaign finance processes. Maybe you don't have to be a billionaire to influence politics in America?

Pedestrian Action Plan filled with rhetoric

TWO YEARS AGO, I WAS ASKED BY THE former gym director at the Santa Monica YMCA to fill out a three or four page questionnaire on pedestrian safety. The Y was assisting the city's effort to improve pedestrian mobility and encourage the use of safe walking. I speculated that this community survey, like most community surveys from City Hall, was basically seeking public endorsement of conclusions and recommendations already cobbled together by city department heads, planning staff and the usual "finger in every pie" politicians.

When I received the survey, it appeared that many questions were soliciting specific conclusions. Questions involving pedestrian use of the streets seemed to be aimed more at selling certain design aspects rather than dealing with real pedestrian issues. The lack of questions about traffic enforcement was a dead giveaway.

After being queried about landscaping, crosswalks, wider sidewalks and the like, the last items (as I remember it) was something like "What would you suggest?" I wrote in one word: "Enforcement!"

I walk a lot in Santa Monica to and from my apartment near 14th Street and Idaho Avenue to 20th Street and Santa Monica Boulevard weekly and to/from downtown Santa Monica a couple times a month. When my car is in the shop, I walk to/from Lincoln Boulevard and Sunset Park and Montana/14th - four or more times a year.

I regularly stroll "North of Montana" and walk to Vons and Rite Aid once or twice a week often carrying groceries home. Plus, I occasionally take other walks. So, I've seen and experienced it all.

Motorists and bicyclists cut me off in marked and unmarked crosswalks on a regular basis. I've been deliberately "run at" at intersections and in parking lots by distracted drivers. And, best of all, I've been cursed at and "flipped off" by nut bags and ill-tempered motorists and bike riders so often that I'm starting a petition to make the upraised middle finger, "The Official City Bird of Santa Monica."

I'm a careful, cautious and courteous pedestrian. I avoid un-signalized intersections because I regard them as unsafe. I wave oncoming traffic on before stepping into the street. I look both ways and always yield to drivers and bicyclists because I don't expect them to stop or yield for me even though I may have the "legal" right-of-way.

Center medians, wider crosswalks, enhanced street furniture and all the landscaping in the world won't address the number one flaw in the system: curbing rude, unsafe, aggressive drivers and bicyclists who drive irresponsibly without impunity.

For example, I was recently crossing 18th Street at Arizona Avenue in a marked crosswalk when a middle-aged male driving a maroon SUV deliberately cut me off. When I shot him a dirty look, he shouted, "Ae." We exchanged "F.U.s." The moron drove off knowing that he could get away with his dangerous and illegal driving because enforcement is nil.

The draft Pedestrian Action Plan (PAP), downloadable from the city's website, is a 219 page document. I've only had time for a quick review of its content; nevertheless, it appears to be more of the same old failed, ideological-driven, traffic mismanagement policies to me.

It's based on Vision Zero, a national movement to eliminate preventable deaths and serious injuries that result from traffic collisions. Vision Zero emphasizes shared responsibility among all road users, street design that promotes safety and minimizes risks, and better enforcement and education to prevent unsafe behavior. What a concept!

The city's PAP promises to prioritize safety in the city's transportation planning and design efforts and coordinate efforts and concentrate on the elimination of traffic injuries and fatalities - and world poverty and global warming.

The PAP obligates the city to consistently prioritize road user safety and call for accountability from all users of the roadway. That includes defining and constructing projects to improve safety for people using the street, implementing changes to reduce vehicle speeds, supporting walking, biking and driving safety, promoting walkable environments and finally, encouraging safe behaviors for all road users.

The PAP engages community leaders to promote safety including enforcement of distracted and unsafe vehicle operation.

It's obvious this is another attempt to further slow traffic speeds, increase congestion, make motorists more frustrated and further diminish the ability for most of us to get around in a timely manner. But, hasn't City Hall been trying to force us out of our cars since the "Traffic Calming" days in the 1980's - without success?

Bus Stop improvements continue

Finally, nothing shows City Hall's ineptness and arrogance like the new Big Blue Bus stops. At 14th and Idaho, a neighbor made a big improvement at the new Crosstown stop. Finally somewhere to sit while waiting 20 minutes for a bus.

7 mark in league play.

McLaughlin will aim to help the program build on its recent success under T.J. Bruce, who was hired in June to replace Johnson. Bruce, who was a standout shortstop at Bellflower-St. John Bosco, served as an assistant coach at UCLA when the Bruins won the 2013 College World Series.

As an out-of-state recruit, McLaughlin is bringing his skills to a program that currently features 20 other players with California ties.

McLaughlin, who said he's been swinging a bat since he was 3 years old, started playing organized baseball at age 6. He began his prep career at Westchester High School, batting .358 as a sophomore with 16 runs, nine stolen bases and four RBI in 22 games.

McLaughlin also took the opportunity to play baseball for a couple weeks in Australia that year through the Goodwill Series, an international sporting event for teenagers. That's when the longtime second baseman realized how much he enjoyed playing shortstop.

"I like being a field general," he said, "and I've always wanted to be like Derek Jeter."

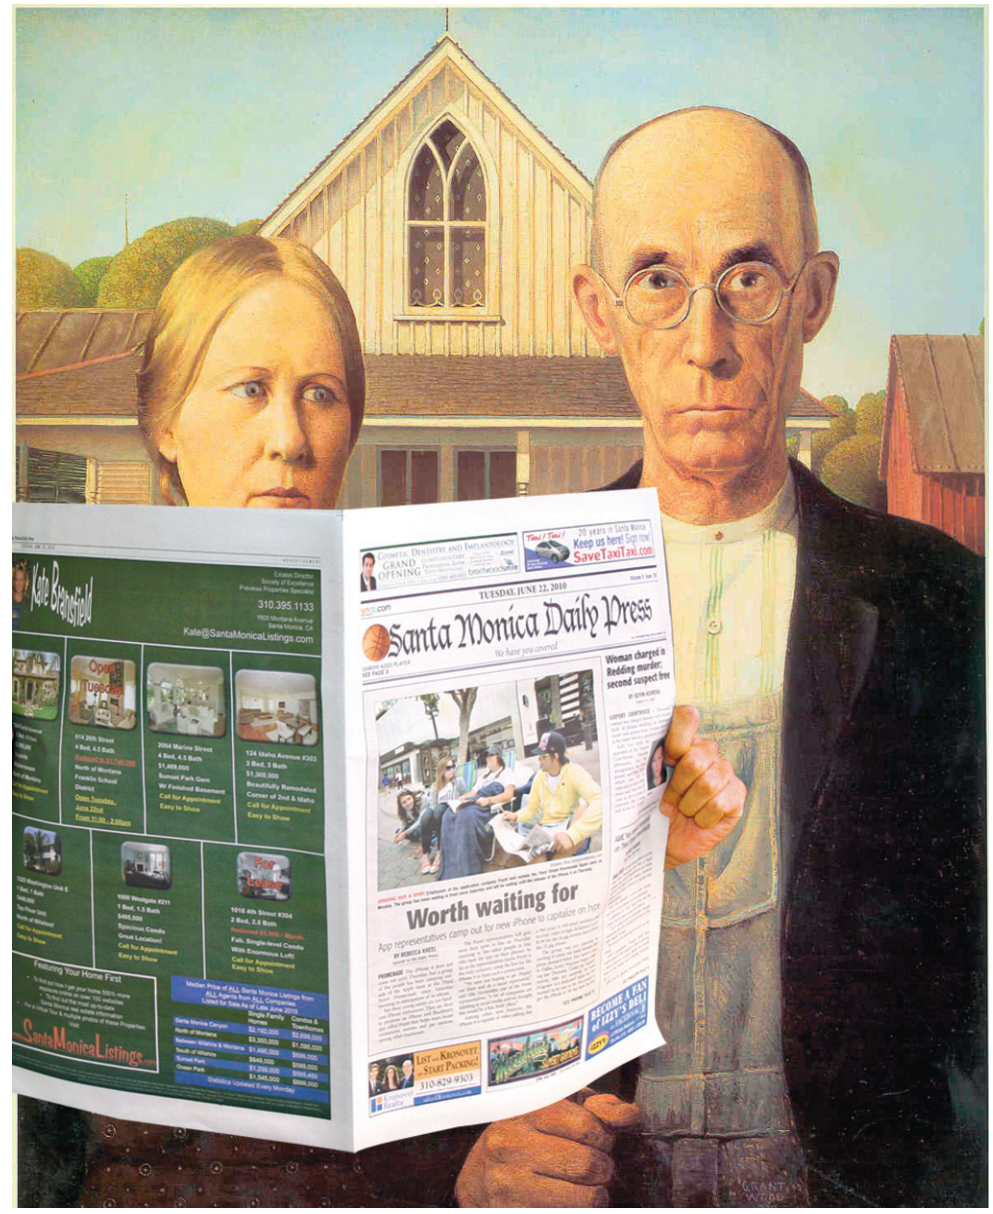

He transferred to Samohi as a junior, hitting .338 with 17 runs and 13 RBI this past season. One of the highlights of his campaign came in the second round of the CIF Southern Section playoffs, when he hit a two-run single in the ninth inning of the Vikings' 3-1 win over Irvine-Northwood.

The senior is hoping to add to a family legacy that his father, Jason McLaughlin, cemented by playing baseball at what is now known as Colorado State-Pueblo. The elder McLaughlin hit .345 with 34 runs and 15 RBI in 2000 and batted .315 with 45 runs and 22 RBI in 2001.

But McLaughlin's father, who has worked as an instructor in the MLB Urban Youth Academy, didn't get the chance to play in the professional ranks.

"My goal is to get drafted," McLaughlin said, "so I can one-up my dad."

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Santa Monica Housing Authority (SMHA) is pleased to announce that the application by Neilson Villa, L.P. has been selected for the SMHA Project Based Voucher Program. The Project Based Vouchers will provide housing subsidy for 79 units at Neilson Villa, located at 3100 Nielson Way in Santa Monica, CA. The provision of these vouchers helps to achieve the SMHA's goal of de-concentrating poverty and expanding economic and housing opportunities for low income families in the City of Santa Monica, CA. The SMHA will continue to accept proposals on an on-going basis from property owners interested in placing Project-Based Vouchers (PBV) in developments in the City of Santa Monica. The SMHA anticipates awarding up to approximately 200 Project-Based Vouchers. The Request for Proposals information and application form is available for download from the City of Santa Monica's Vendor Portal at http://www.planetbids.com/portal/portal.cfm?CompanyID=15167 or by contacting Patrick Gregorian at 310-458-2220 x5798. There is no deadline for the submission of proposals.

in 100 percent affordable housing projects. Those units will receive a discount of $1 per cubic foot, similar to the rate currently charged to single-family affordable projects.

State law prohibits ratepayers from covering the cost of the discount so council was required to approve a transfer of $84,000 per year from the general fund to cover the cost.

Council approved the changes unanimously but questions were raised about enforcement of the new rules.

Councilwoman Sue Himmelrich asked how the rules would impact inclusionary housing that is mandated as part of a larger, market rate development and asked if submetering those units would enable landlords to pass through costs to those units.

Staff said pending legislation at the state level will address landlord tenant interactions and that the city is monitoring that effort to understand how it will apply to local residents. However, if a unit is deed restricted affordable housing, those landlords would be prohibited from passing through water costs.

Councilwoman Gleam Davis had a similar question, asking if staff had considered the long term implications of giving individual water usage to landlords and what the landlord might do with that information.

"Is there some concern that a landlord may see a particular unit is using a lot of water, which, of course, is then driving up the landlord's water bill, and providing the landlord with an incentive to either, for lack of a better term, harass a tenant into using less water or try to get that tenant to leave?"

City attorney Marsha Moutrie said her office will look into those concerns and return to the council with additional information.

She said a general provision of the city's anti-harassment law might apply to the situation but that most of the complaints her office receives are from tenants who object to the landlord dividing the building's water bill equally among tenants. She said many tenants complain that they are being unfairly charged for water wasting neighbors.

"I think those tenants would actually be happier about individual water meters in their building, so that cuts both ways," she said.

Action on water meters followed previous revisions to landscaping rules.

Santa Monica has banned sprinklers for all new developments and prohibited new sprinkler systems for existing landscape. New projects for commercial properties are also prohibited from using high water use plants, such as turf. New residential properties can use high water plants, including turf, in no more than 20 percent of the total landscaping. Residents can have some landscaping but the total cumulative area of high and moderate water plants must not exceed 40 percent of total landscaping.

Some exemptions exist for public and private spaces for sports fields, active play areas and public gathering spaces.

According to the Office of Sustainability and the Environment (OSE), landscape rebates have been expanded. Money is available to help capture rainwater and rebates are available for specialized landscaping.

"Landscape Rebates include up to $4,500 for turf and sprinkler removal; up to $1,500 for replacing turf on parkways with climate appropriate plants; from $200 - $2,000 for installing rain barrels or cisterns as part of a rain harvesting system; $1,000 for installing rain gardens or rock gardens; and up to $40 per downspout for redirecting water from gutters," said an OSE press release. "Rebates can total up to $8,000 or more per property. Businesses, HOAs and apartment buildings may be eligible for additional rebate funding."

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

© 2013 Copyright Heal the Bay. All rights reserved. Printed on recycled paper (unless faxed).

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The Blackhead Whisperer: Upland, California, dermatologist Sandra Lee is a social media cult figure with a massive audience on YouTube, where her cyst- and pimple-popping videos (charmingly, soothingly narrated) have garnered 170 million views. (The "Popping" community, on the Reddit.com site, has more than 60,000 members.) Dr. Lee admits longing for "the perfect blackhead," which to her apparently means one that is photogenic and slides out easily from its snug epidermal home. Several "Popping" fanatics told a Washington Post reporter that watching the videos is therapy for anxiety, but one fan (a "Mr. Wilson") apparently gets his "therapy" by submitting videos of his own -- unsoothing -- oil-laden bursts.

■ While hopeful Italian surgeon Sergio Canavero seeks funding to perform the first ever head "transplant" (with a patient already lined up), Australian doctor Geoff Askin (the country's "godfather of spinal surgery") recently successfully "reattached" the head of a 16-month-old boy who was badly injured in a traffic accident. The toddler's head was described as internally "relocated" and reset onto the vertebra, using wire and rib tissue to graft the head back in place. (Nonetheless, the operation was widely regarded as a "miracle.")

Richard Gere wants us to talk about homelessness

Cause Celeb with Colin Newton

A recent photo of actor and humanitarian Richard Gere went viral, liked 1.6 million times and shared more than a half a million more. The pic showed Gere unshaven and in torn clothes, and it came with a story that he'd spent a day handing out $100 bills to homeless people in New York.

Well, not quite.

Gere took to his co-star Jena Malone's Facebook page to refute the rumor. The photo was a still from the recently released movie Time Out of Mind, in which Gere plays a homeless man navigating the streets of New York and dealing with the confusing bureaucracy of social support.

Last month, Gere hosted a Q&A on Malone's Facebook page about the impact of homelessness. Good for you, Richard. Homelessness becomes life-threatening in winter. More than half a million of our fellow Americans will be sleeping outside or in shelters this winter.

There are so many ways you can help. Food banks and homeless shelters can always use donations, but why not check out the Causes directory at giive.org and see what nonprofits could use a helping hand this winter? Remember, when you donate and volunteer, you're not just feeding organizations ... you're feeding people.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You are likely to surprise people today. Your optimism comes through with those you deal with on a daily basis. Others verbalize their needs and desires. You feel unusually responsive to one specific person, which will please him or her. Tonight: Are you working too hard?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Keep reaching out to others for more information. You will hear many different versions of what is going on. You might gain a sudden insight as to what is going on with a friend. Your creativity is likely to emerge once you relax. Tonight: So what if it is Monday?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your optimism carries you over quite a few hurdles. Others respond well to your energy, also. You would be well-advised to move forward with an investment involving your home. A conversation with a respected friend points you in a new direction. Tonight: Play it easy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Others will be busy, and getting their attention could take a lot of effort. Heartfelt communication is the key. You might not appreciate going to such extremes at first, but later you'll be glad that you did. A child plays a big role in making you smile. Tonight: Stay centered.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Get as much done as possible, despite being distracted. If you can, work from home. Be aware that you could be working with outdated technology. If someone makes a suggestion, be sure to listen carefully. This person will be very helpful. Tonight: As late as you can go.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Others might feel the heaviness of Monday, but you will meet any challenges head-on. Be careful with how flirtatious you are, and with whom. Someone might misread your playfulness. Approach situations with a sense of humor. Tonight: Do what you most want to do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Be aware of a family member's expectations. Only you can choose whether you want to meet them. Be careful about committing to any ideas before you understand the total cost involved. There easily could be a hidden agenda. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ You will choose the right words at the right time. You might energize a friend who will watch your back without you even asking. Communication will be more important than you realize with someone outside your inner circle. Tonight: All smiles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could be in a situation where you feel much better than you have in a long time. Understand your limits, and try not to get involved in any financial schemes. Otherwise, you could be sorry. Your instincts will take you down the right path. Tonight: Be silly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Keep reaching out to someone you care a lot about. This person might challenge you to detach and look at the big picture. This quality might be one of the reasons you are drawn to this person. Try to understand where someone else is coming from. Tonight: Let the fun begin!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Step back and try to get out of the limelight. Handle something that is important yet private. Once you do, you might want some time to reflect on a personal situation. Often, you push yourself too hard; don't do that at this point in time. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20
★★★★ A group of friends will cheer you on no matter where you go. Stay upbeat and pursue your chosen course. Some people might want to follow you. Make an important long-distance call to someone you don't often see. Don't put it off any longer. Tonight: In the whirlwind of living.

Monday, November 16, 2015

This year you are ready to take the next step on a long-term project or situation. You'll need to complete this step by Sept. 1, 2016, and you'll be quite pleased once you do. Your ability to communicate seems to expand and support you in your endeavors. If you are single, you will meet someone of significance through one of your friends. This interaction most likely will occur before fall. If you are attached, the two of you will focus on an important step in your relationship. For some couples, it could involve buying a home; for others, it might be more meaningful. CAPRICORN can be very difficult.
