Students take on LGBTQ advocacy through musical production

MUSICAL: "The Prom" is currently running at the Morgan-Wixson Theatre as part of the Y.E.S. program.

THOMAS LEFFLER
SMDP Staff Writer

With more Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District representation than ever before, the teenage cast of a local theater production is jumping at the chance for weightier roles.

Every weekend through Dec. 7, the Morgan-Wixson Theatre's Youth Education-Entertainment (Y.E.S.) series returns for its first show of the season, tackling the musical "The Prom." The musical follows the story of a high school student who takes on opposition from her school's Parent Teacher Association for wanting to take her girlfriend to the prom.

With a message of LGBTQ+ advocacy along with catchy tunes, "The Prom" was a hit with Y.E.S. students that suggested the production to director Eve Keller and her creative team. Keller stated that this is "the perfect time" to do the show after a 2024 election cycle where LGBTQ+ rights were a major topic.

"We wanted to do a show that was a musical, but (that) has a really strong, important message," Keller said. "A lot of musicals are lovely, they're great stories, but this one has a message that is so grounded in common good and tolerance, and we felt that message … needed to be heard and told."

Adding that her students "wanted to dig their teeth into something" with more mature themes, Keller stated that she was able to walk her 13-17 year olds through acting analysis of adult characters, making the cast consider character backstories to support them "from that acting perspective."

Another step up on the maturity scale was the implementation of an intimacy director on the show, tasked with walking the teens through a show that has a little more "direct contact" than just simple hand-holding. While still safe for the stage and for the cast to handle, the coordinator still make sure they were "safe and valued" and that "their voices are heard."

"They choreograph these intimate moments, it's not just how (the cast) wants to do it … it's like, nope, you put your hand here, you lean in this way to do this, so it's all very choreographed so everybody feels respected, honored and safe," Keller said. "And our kids responded really well to that."

The 28-person cast is chock-full of SMMUSD talents, a goal

Bringing global flavors to the table this Thanksgiving

KRISTEN WOOD
Associated Press

Thanksgiving brings together family and friends over dishes like buttery mashed potatoes and sweet pumpkin pie. This year, add these international flavors to your Thanksgiving traditions and celebrate with diversity on your table.

The popular story of the first Thanksgiving tells of Native Americans and Pilgrims coming together to share the bounty of harvest. Over a feast, people of different cultures and beliefs celebrated together.

In 1863, Abraham Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving a national holiday. According to State Representative, Wayne Rosenthal, this was the result of a campaign by Godey's Lady's Book to promote unity during the midst of the American Civil War.

Today, Thanksgiving remains a time to come together. It is the busiest travel week of the year, notes the United States Embassy, as families travel across the world to be together. Friendsgiving, feasts on college campuses and celebrations for members of the armed forces stationed abroad bring together those who may not be able to spend time with family over the holiday.

With more people celebrating Thanksgiving from several diverse cultures, new traditions are becoming more common at the holiday table. Turkey, stuffing and pie remain Thanksgiving favorites, but international dishes and flavors are also more at home on a modern Thanksgiving table. This year, bring these global twists to Thanksgiving dinner and celebrate coming together through food.

Thanksgiving traditions around the world

Many countries celebrate their own Thanksgiving holiday. Initially, these holidays began as harvest celebrations, says GoAbroad, giving thanks for a bountiful harvest much as America's first Thanksgiving did. In the years since, these celebrations have taken on their own unique traditions.

For example, in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, people celebrate Erntedankfest on the first Sunday of October. Religious services and lantern parades accompany this holiday. "Mohnstriezel" - a sweet bread with poppy seeds - is a popular treat during the festivities.

Malaysians celebrate Kadazan in May to honor the sacrifice of the goddess Huminodun, whose death provided for an abundant rice harvest. Their celebration is filled with feasting, rice wine, games and music.

Ghanaians celebrate "Homowo" - meaning hooting at hunger - to honor those who died in a historic famine, usher in a bountiful harvest and celebrate the arrival of the new year in Ghana. The people prepare "kpokpoi," a dish made of corn meal, palm oil and seasonings. In addition to eating kpokpoi, local chiefs sprinkle it around the town as an offering.

These traditions and dishes, as well as those from other countries, can be a fun addition to your own Thanksgiving celebrations. Adding African, Asian and European food, and other cuisines to your menu is a great way to learn more about other cultures or welcome an international guest with a taste of home.

GLOBAL TWISTS ON THE MAIN DISH

At an American Thanksgiving, turkey is often the main dish of choice. Many traditional recipes call for baking, roasting, frying or even smoking the turkey, often with fresh herbs, salt, pepper and vegetables for flavor.

But turkey's mild taste also makes it a perfect dish for more adventurous flavors. Jamaican jerk turkey combines spices like cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves with herbs and chili for a warm and flavorful dish. Alternatively, a turkey marinade with Chinese five-spice powder - cinnamon, cloves, star anise, fennel and Sichuan peppers - infuses your turkey with fall flavors and a bit of heat.

These marinades are an exciting way to introduce global flavors, but they are only the beginning. Earthy za'atar seasoning from the Middle East, a warm berbere spice blend from Ethiopia or bright herbs de Provence from France can all be inventive additions to turkey.

Turkey mole combines mole, the national dish of Mexico, with your turkey for a rich, chili flavor. Make your own mole or purchase a high-quality sauce to add to roast turkey. You can also try pavo a la brasa, a twist on Peruvian roasted chicken, by marinating your turkey with a sauce with cumin, paprika and other aromatics.

EXOTIC SIDES AND DESSERTS TO EXPAND YOUR THANKSGIVING MENU

Side dishes and desserts are a great way to introduce global influences to a feast with plenty of room for experimenting. Try spicing up traditional sides with international ingredients. Adding shishito peppers to green beans gives the veggies a Japanese flair or you can switch out the sweet potatoes for a delicious yam casserole.

International sides can also bring a nice contrast to common Thanksgiving foods. A Korean cucumber salad is refreshing, spicy and tangy. With a mild heat from the gochugaru pepper flakes, the salad makes a great starter or palette cleanser between courses.

Vegetable korma is a flavorful way to serve veggies at your meal, infusing Thanksgiving with Indian spices. The creamy cashew, yogurt and coconut milk sauce with the korma goes great over turkey and potatoes.

For dessert, bring a twist to classics with pumpkin empanadas or baklava filled with walnuts for a nutty treat. Other exotic desserts, like Chinese moon cakes or melomakarona from Cyprus, both traditional holiday desserts, are great at an American Thanksgiving as well.

FLAVORFUL CONDIMENTS WITH INTERNATIONAL FLAIR

Cranberry sauce and gravy are Thanksgiving staples. This year, add interest with a variety of condiments. Salsa Lizano, a sauce made with vegetables, cumin and pepper, is a Costa Rican condiment that is perfect on the table or in a rice and bean dish like gallo pinto.

Asian flavors like sriracha or gochujang give a delightful spice to meat and vegetables. Indian mango chutney or the Georgian plum sauce tkemali are sweet alternatives to cranberry sauce.

Serve these condiments alongside the Thanksgiving meal and let your guests tailor

New LA police chief's resistance to Trump deportation plans has little to do with liberal politics

BY JIM NEWTON

Ballots in Los Angeles were still being counted last week when the resistance to President-elect Donald Trump began to take shape. By Friday, the city's incoming police chief, Jim McDonnell, was promising the Los Angeles Police Department would refuse support for Trump's much-ballyhooed deportation schemes.

"The national election has caused many Angelenos to feel a deep, deep fear," McDonnell said in a statement to the city council, which was debating — and ultimately approved — his nomination.

"I want to be unequivocal," he added. "LAPD will protect LA's immigrant community. We will not cooperate with mass deportations."

McDonnell's statement responded in part to a lurking concern about his record: During his time as Los Angeles County sheriff, that department, which operates the jails, cooperated with federal immigration authorities who would deport people after they were arrested. Although the number of prisoners turned over to the feds fell during McDonnell's time in that office, some immigrant advocates equated his participation with support. That concern was only ratcheted up by Trump's election and the sudden fear that Washington's long arm was about to reach into this city's longstanding embrace of immigrants.

Mayor Karen Bass, who chose McDonnell for the job, wasted no time in asserting her authority over this closely watched matter of police policy.

"My message is simple," she said. "No matter where you were born, how you came to this country, Los Angeles will stand with you, and this will not change."

Those policy pronouncements place Los Angeles squarely at odds with the Trump campaign's immigration rhetoric, with its shrill insistence that it will launch "mass deportations" on the false theory that illegal immigrants are causing a spike in crime. (In fact, illegal immigrants offend much, much less frequently than people born here) Trump has been spouting versions of that fabricated argument since he launched his first campaign in 2016, and he shows no signs of letting up.

One of his first announcements as president-elect was to name Tom Homan as his new "border czar." Homan promptly endorsed Trump's deportation plans and, in language aimed squarely at local officials, warned cities and states to "get the hell out of the way."

That's just bombast, because what may be most striking about Los Angeles' defiance is that it is not the product of an emerging liberal agenda. In fact, the effort to keep LAPD out of the business of enforcing immigration law is neither new nor liberal. It has its roots deep in LAPD's history, dating from a time when a very conservative chief headed the department, and President Jimmy Carter was in the White House.

And in a city that has fought over every aspect of its policing, it is one that leaders of all types have come to embrace.

SPECIAL ORDER NO. 40

In the fall of 1979, LAPD Chief Daryl F. Gates, who was later known for launching gang sweeps and using a battering ram to knock down crack houses among his many "achievements," issued a standing order to the police officers under his command. The directive, known as Special Order No. 40, specifically commanded that "officers shall not initiate police action with the objective of discovering the alien status of a person." It also barred officers from arresting or booking anyone for a federal immigration code violation.

That did not, as some critics suggest, establish Los Angeles as a "sanctuary city." People in the country illegally, including those living in Los Angeles, could be and were arrested and deported. But the LAPD recognized that it could not protect and serve the whole of Los Angeles if it was seen as the agent of immigration enforcement.

As Gates and other city leaders understood, allowing the LAPD to play that role would undermine trust. Witnesses would be afraid to come forward to report crimes or testify against criminals. Criminals would then go free. Victims in immigrant communities would suffer, and so would those outside those communities, as crimes went unsolved and innocent people were victimized.

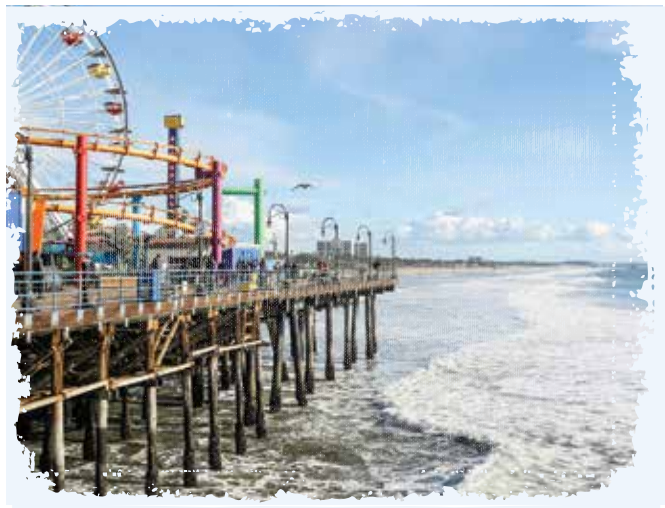

There is a principle at work in all of this that is worth noting, even if it won't affect the policies or programs of an utterly unprincipled president driven chiefly, or perhaps solely, by personal aggrandizement.

It derives from Catholic teaching and was influential in the thinking of Gov. Jerry Brown, who studied for the priesthood as a young man. It's called "subsidiarity," and it argues that responsibility for addressing social problems generally should flow to the most local organization or unit — that the parish understands its needs better than the diocese.

Or, in this case, that a city understands its residents better than Washington.

It's not an argument for localizing everything. Basic human rights transcend locality, which is why we don't permit slavery in some areas and not others, for example. But it recognizes the life of communities and their distinctive qualities. It appreciates that experience is personal, not abstract.

of "The Prom" producer and John Adams Middle School social studies teacher Cori Goldberg. She stated that her involvement with Y.E.S. evolved when her daughter became involved in shows, taking on a goal of increasing the diversity of the program to better reflect the community, particularly the Pico neighborhood.

"As a parent and as a teacher, I think this program is amazing because it supports the kids so much," Goldberg said. "It gives them an incredible sense of community, it teaches them so much (and) gives them self-confidence. It helps with literacy, it helps with problem solving (and) developing social skills. It is just remarkable for what it does to help development of kids."

In the past, Goldberg would typically only see one or two SMMUSD students in shows, and has been working to increase outreach through her JAMS position. The Y.E.S. troupe also expanded its SMMUSD network through donation-based workshops, making theater skills lessons affordable for local parents. Keller called this a "great ripple effect," attracting top talents in the district for shows.

"Participating in theater at both Morgan-Wixson Theatre and Santa Monica High School has provided me with a great range of opportunities to explore and grow my interest in singing, dancing and acting," Samohi 11th grader Sahar Aguilar said. "Morgan-Wixson is an inclusive place to learn and perform alongside other passionate kids in our community. I'm very grateful to live in a city that is so supportive of the arts."

The city has been extra supportive of "The Prom," as audiences from early showings have been amazed at the skill and maturity levels of the young actors and actresses.

"They found the humorous parts humorous, they found the heartfelt parts touching," Keller said. "They were cheering when we would hope they would be in our corner and (we) got a lot of positive feedback afterwards. A lot of people said this is a really different show, and they very much appreciated that we had chosen something that was different."

Olympics when she was only 15 years old, gave a breathtaking performance, followed by another by the actor Grace Wethor, who is herself a brain cancer survivor. Then the junior team of Culver Ice Productions gave an equally as impressive performance before the gathered crowd shuffled their way onto the rink.

Another survivor on the ice was current Teen Cancer America Board Member, Grace Wong, who experienced cancer as a young student herself. Even one of the vendors, Alyssa Gomez, with El Cristiana Tequila, is a cancer survivor

Music was provided by iHeart's DJ Von Bellows and there was a veritable bounty of hot food, snacks and even alcoholic beverages. Many vendors, such as Linda's Cookies, Aguas Locas and Charles & Company Organic Tea, were offering complimentary servings to guests.

Teen Cancer America engages and supports hospitals and outpatient facilities in the development of specialized and comprehensive Adolescent and Young Adult (AYA) care programs for ages 15-39. It has built AYA friendly environments, developed standards for age-targeted care, improved collaboration between pediatric and adult specialists and supported dedicated research to improve outcomes and survival rates.

"Last year was our first year, this is only our second year doing it," said Marni Ayers

Fundraising Manager for Teen Cancer America, adding, "But we sold more tickets this year, a significant number more actually ... Plus more performing skaters, cancer survivors and celebrity ambassadors, some of whom are survivors themselves. And many just want to give to the organization because of their personal reasons for caring about others who are going through cancer."

Interestingly, Teen Cancer America was the brainchild of legendary musician, actor and humanitarian Roger Daltrey, founder and frontman of the English rock band, The Who, along with lead guitarist and primary songwriter for the band, Pete Townshend. After over a decade working with Teenage Cancer Trust in the UK, the duo decided to bring their passion across the pond in 2012 and make a difference in the lives of teens and young adults with cancer in the United States.

To learn more about getting involved with Teen Cancer America's events, email info@teencanceramerica.org or visit teencanceramerica.org. Teen Cancer America's next big community event will be Rock 'n' Polo VI, a family-friendly polo match, concert and festival at Will Rogers Polo Field in June.

gallons of stormwater and urban runoff for reuse.

The SWIP was recognized nationally and internationally earlier this year as the National Water Environment Federation's Project Excellence Award winner and the Global Water Award's 2024 Distinction Award for Water Reuse Project of the Year.

"This award recognizes the top project in the United States for its excellence and innovation in the water sector. Congratulations to the Water Resources Division and thank you for all of your hard work moving the city closer to its water self sufficiency goals," said David White, during the City Manager's report in Monday's City Council meeting.

Located beneath the Civic Center parking lot in Santa Monica, the SWIP is a first of its kind project that provides a new, sustainable and drought-resilient water supply for the city.

It opened on November 17, 2022 and was designed to become a key component of the city's goal of increasing water resiliency by bolstering local supplies and reducing the city's reliance on imported water. Three integral elements work together to produce up to 1,680 acre-feet per year, or roughly 10% of the city's demand, of high-quality purified water.

Those three elements are:
1. Stormwater, dry weather urban runoff treatment and reuse

2. Stormwater and municipal wastewater treatment and potable reuse

3: Stormwater harvesting

"Santa Monica is on the forefront of implementing strategies for water resiliency," Water Utilities Manager Sunny Wang said in a statement. "The SWIP is a prime example of how municipalities can take a holistic view of their water supply portfolio and develop innovative solutions to deliver a climate-resilient water supply for our community."

This wasn't the only award winner announced in the meeting as the city of Santa Monica's

Safe Streets project for 17th Street and Michigan Avenue was commended by the Southern California Chapter of the American Public Works Association (APWA) in the transportation category of its BEST Project of the Year winners.

The APWA awards celebrate projects that advance Public Works in Southern California across areas such as building, facilities, storm water quality, and more. Fifty-three agencies submitted 97 entries this year, a record number of entries. The five projects that won in the transportation category advance the safety, connectivity and efficiency of our transportation networks.

Santa Monica's Safe Streets for 17th St and Michigan Ave project was created in response to increased pedestrian and bicycle traffic on 17th Street stemming from the opening of the Metro E (Expo) Line in 2016.

To make the street safer for all users, the city added a protected bikeway, pedestrian scale lighting, curb extensions and upgraded ADA ramps, updated pedestrian and bike crosswalks and protected intersections between Wilshire and Pico boulevards. On Michigan Ave, the project included curb extensions, new and upgraded curb ramps and mini traffic circles.

"Santa Monica has been working hard to improve safety on 17th Street and Michigan Avenue for all community members, and it's an honor to have this project recognized by APWA," Director of Public Works Rick Valte said in a statement. "The Safe Streets project is just one of the many ways the city is working to promote a safer and more accessible urban environment for bicyclists, pedestrians and motorists alike."

This is the latest of several acknowledgements for the Safe Streets for 17th St and Michigan Ave project. It also received the 2024 Outstanding Local Streets and Roads Project Award from the League of California Cities and was named one of the best new US bike lanes built in 2023.

POLITICS

Indeed, that same principle is at work in federalism, an idea that was appealing to conservatives when some states were more conservative than the federal government, but whose appeal passed as soon as conservatives seized power in Washington.

It's worth considering here. Los Angeles prioritizes public safety, and the city has long realized that safety is enhanced by treating people who live here as equally entitled to the protection of the law — regardless of how they got here. That's a time-tested value in LA, whose adherents stretch from Daryl Gates to Karen Bass.

Los Angeles does not need Donald Trump or Tom Homan to tell it how best to protect its residents.

If resistance to Washington is going to be effective over the next four years, that's the form it needs to take — not pouting or performative displays of anger but retrenchment to values and the stalwart defense of them in the face of broad and ill-considered acts of vengeance or retribution.

Los Angeles has a right to safety, and it has gone through a long, thoughtful struggle to achieve it. It has no obligation to let anyone, even a president, deflect it from that course.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 18)

You'll choose your paths with clarity and confidence, feeling grounded in your decisions and knowing that each step is taking you toward a richer, more fulfilled life. Some routes feel circuitous, which is only so you can learn them better. More highlights: Family bonds deepen, a project brings you public recognition, and love flourishes in unexpected places. Cancer and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 16, 3, 18, 9 and 31.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You don't feel the need to be in the spotlight all the time, and if it were required of you, it would only drain your creativity. Instead, you focus on what's happening now and let your work naturally find a home, whether it's in the light or behind the scenes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Every human has an ego. You usually try to keep yours in check, but if it's fighting you, there's a reason. It needs more attention. Get ahead of this. Giving yourself what you need will prevent you from leaning on others to fill your cup.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). It takes experience to realize when expectations are set appropriately. Even so, unreasonable expectations made by someone who doesn't know any better can be just the thing that makes magic unfold.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). The ebb and flow of emotions is the undercurrent of every relationship. "You can steady your own boat, but you can't control the tide" is a statement that is true for many, but because you're a moonchild, you have special magnetism pulling for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You've helped others with your wisdom, touch and kindness. Trust that the same healing power is moving through you now. Also relevant: Your body built itself in the womb, and there's no reason to doubt its natural ability to fix itself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). While it may be appropriate to consider the value you create for a company you work for or a community you are a part of, note that this has nothing to do with your inherent value as a person, which is something you don't have to create because it is your birthright.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Measurements are all relative. Someone will always have more or less of what you desire, but the quantity really doesn't matter. Happiness, effectiveness and success are about things like fit, meaning and how it all connects in the bigger picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). In your world, waiting around isn't a thing. You're always filling in the so-called downtime with a productive task — for instance, organizing the pictures in your phone. When it's time to take a breather, really take one. Don't fill it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Expectations are the foundation of every interaction. The power move today is to manage your own expectations well and get ahead of other people's expectations to guide how they set them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're in the mood to cut the dead weight, clear your energy and chase a single burning goal. It's easier to be tenacious when you're well supported in other areas of life and not hauling emotional baggage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It takes maturity to get comfortable with gradual progress, but the more you count the small wins, the more they count. Day-to-day movement forward will contribute more to your success than a sudden sweeping victory.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The problem of the day is new to you, but don't be too quick to call in the expert. A small amount of research will bring you three solutions to try before it's worth it to consult a stranger and pay for the answer.
