The Best Thanksgiving Turkey Method

FROM RAPHAEL LUNETTA

Editor's Note: The Daily Press worked with the Santa Monica Farmers Market to produce a series of recipes from local chefs and vendors. The recipes were collected into a standalone guide distributed in the paper and those stories are reprinted here in advance of the big meal. Content was created by Daily Press Editor Matthew Hall.

A turkey can be an intimidating bird to cook.

You need one large enough to feed your holiday guest list, but small enough to actually fit in your oven. It needs to be cooked through but kept moist on the inside, preferably with a crispy exterior. The white and dark meat cook at different temperatures and yield different flavors, but there are specific expectations for each.

It's enough to bedevil a professional let alone the casual home cook but local chef Raphael Lunetta has a solution: dismember the bird.

He said turkey is the centerpiece of the Thanksgiving meal and as an absolute comfort food it offers great leftovers. Separating the cuts allows each piece to be cooked properly and provides a better overall experience.

"It came about around 2006 at JiRaffe," he said of his approach. "We wanted to make the dark meat the star. We worked hard to develop a method that would yield the juiciest dark meat possible."

He said his approach delivers juicy breast meat, incredible dark meat that is full flavor and creates the base to the best gravy your guests will ever have.

"Even a chef like myself finds himself or herself pulling their hair out when trying to cook both dark and white meat to perfection," he said. "My deconstructed turkey will set you up for success ? and rave reviews among friends and family."

Lunetta suggests starting with at least an 18-pound turkey but suggests outsourcing some of the hard work to a professional.

"Make things easy by having your local butcher handle the deconstruction of your bird," he said. "Order extra dark meat from butcher. One bird never yields enough for all guests and it always

Chicken A La Russe

FROM SEA WIND ORGANICS

Editor's Note: The Daily Press worked with the Santa Monica Farmers Market to produce a series of recipes from local chefs and vendors. The recipes were collected into a standalone guide distributed in the paper and those stories are reprinted here in advance of the big meal. Content was created by Daily Press Editor Matthew Hall.

Holidays are about traditions, passed down from one generation to the next and along the way there are some habits that become cultural touchstones. Turkey at Thanksgiving, a Christmas Ham, pumpkin or perhaps a pecan pie.

However, sometimes a new dish becomes its own tradition as is the case with Sea Wind Farms' Chicken a la Russe.

The chicken/green bean combination was developed by several generations of the family and has been passed down to become a favored holiday treat.

"It is a dish that has been in the family as long time and makes us feel like we are holding onto the family tradition," said current recipe guardian Montana Lewis. "It isn't the most traditional holiday dish but in our family, it has become one of our traditions, so to us, when we indulge on the Chicken a la Russe, it reminds us of the Holiday Season."

Lewis said the dish is "absolutely mouthwatering" and makes a great alternative for someone who wants to skip the more expected turkey or ham. It also utilizes the best seasonal vegetables.

He said those seasonal flavors, the color change in the leaves, the crispness in the air, and the warmth of family gatherings that are near are all key reminders that holidays are something to be savored. Like many families, Lewis has dreams of a white Christmas but as a farmer he ties his holiday memories to the work in his fields and the kinds of produce that will only grow at this time of year.

"It's very important, because that is what makes the time of year special. Our senses are memory triggers," he said. "Certain vegetables only grow

City charges forward with plan to encourage electric vehicles

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

Electric car drivers in Santa Monica can look forward to seeing the City triple the number of public charging stations in the next three years, now that the City Council has approved an aggressive plan to encourage drivers to shift to electric vehicles (EVs) to reduce carbon emissions in the city.

The plan focuses on expanding charging spaces away from the downtown area and into neighborhoods to encourage more apartment tenants to abandon their gas-powered cars. The expansion will bring chargers to a crucial yet neglected market for electric cars – almost three-quarters of Santa Monicans are renters.

"We are moving forward on all fronts," Senior Sustainability Analyst Garrett Wong told the Council Tuesday.

The $2.4 million plan calls for expanding the network of charging ports from just under 100 to 300 by 2020 – they will be installed along curbs, hooked up to LED streetlights and placed in parking lots. To encourage private development, the plan increases requirements for EV-ready parking spaces in new construction and offers rebates to support new infrastructure. For the first time, staff will explore fees to recoup the cost of electricity and maintenance to the city.

The plan has a long-term goal of 1,000 chargers by 2025.

The City Council hopes the expansion will encourage more residents to buy EVs – aiming to increase ownership from 2 percent to 15 percent by 2025, which would result in 9,000 fewer gas cars on the road. In emissions terms, it would save 26,000 metric tons of

Encouraging bicycles

Dear EarthTalk:
What are some ways we can encourage more commuters to ditch their cars in favor of bikes?

Dennis Northrup
Avon, CT

ONE OF THE BEST THINGS WE CAN DO as individuals to fight climate change is to reduce the number of miles we drive in our fossil-fuel powered cars. But replacing those car rides with more fuel-efficient options isn't so easy, especially if you don't live near a transit hub. Given all the new bike lane infrastructure across the country and the availability of battery-assisted bicycles to help you around, there's never been a better time to ditch the car in favor of pedal power.

If you've only got a short way to go, your good old bike might work just fine. But if you need to get further than you're comfortable riding under your own power, why not upgrade to something with battery assistance? You can retrofit your current conventional bike with a battery-powered rear wheel, such as Superpedestrian's Copenhagen Wheel ($1,499), lovingly referred to as the "Two-Wheeled Tesla," given its sleek design, Bluetooth connectivity and biometric monitoring. Or DIYers might prefer to spend their weekend tinkering with Aosom's battery-powered rear-wheel replacement kit ($219) instead.

If you're ready to buy a new electric-assist bike, there's a lot to choose from. Some top choices include Stromer's ST2 ($6,500), Elby's 9-Speed ($3,700), the Espin Sport 350W ($2,000) or Raleigh's Superbe iE ($1,700). City slickers might prefer Brooklyness' CMYK 5.0 Folding Electric Bike ($999), which pedal-assists for 50 miles per charge and can fold up into a neat little 25-pound bundle when you get there. Brooklyness is also getting ready to release the first production models of its new helmet design, the Classon, which has sensors built in to detect cars approaching your blind spots, motion-activated brake and turn signals to keep drivers and pedestrians in the know about where you're going, and a video camera to document your adventures.

Another way technology is facilitating bicycle commuting is through the release of various apps to help riders optimize their routing. For instance, Lanespotter aims to be the Waze of cycling by providing riders with real-time data to find bike lanes and trails nearby, filtering mapping options based on other cyclists' routing choices and safety recommendations. If you live in Atlanta, Minneapolis, New York City, Philadelphia, Portland (Oregon), San Francisco, St. Louis or Washington DC, you can download and start using Lanespotter (free) today.

And then there's bike sharing, a growing phenomenon from coast-to-coast whereby riders can pick up a bike in one part of town and drop it off in another to speed up their commute. New York-based Motivate has designed and implemented bike share networks in nine U.S. cities to date, with the largest in New York (10,000 bikes) and San Francisco (7,000 bikes). A typical ride on one of Motivate's bikes costs $3, and many of the systems are integrated with larger transit networks. For instance, Bay Area riders can pay for their "GoBike" using the same refillable Clipper card that gets them onto BART trains and MUNI buses.

Go Ellis

Editor:

Keyser Marston Associates' report proves that when landlords use the Ellis Act to remove rental units from the market, Santa Monica benefits.

1. The report says that Ellis Act withdrawals create "downzoning." Many rental units are replaced by a few condos or single family homes. Excellent! This reduces density, traffic, water usage, school over-crowding, and strains on city services, resulting in a greener, more sustainable city. And progressives complain?

2. The report says that developers are replacing old buildings with new buildings that are sold for "a tidy profit." Fantastic! This means that our city and schools are likewise raking in massive windfall tax profits.

How so?

Developers pay hefty taxes and fees during construction (while providing good jobs for the economy). But the real windfall for city and schools is from property tax increases. Prop 13 only allows property values to be reassessed when a property is sold or improved. (According to Zillow, some houses north of Montana only pay annual property taxes of about $2,000.) But demolish an old building, sell the new one for $6.8 million (a number cited by Keyser Marston), and the annual property tax jumps to about $85,000.

Considering how well-paid are our city and school employees, and all those school bonds that must be repaid (with interest), those windfall tax profits are certainly welcome.

3. Finally, new, more expensive buildings, with lower density, raise nearby property values, further increasing windfall tax profits for city and schools – for the children! – when those buildings are sold.

Less congestion. Higher property values. More tax revenue. Go Ellis!

carbon dioxide.

"I just came back from the U.N. climate conference in Bonn. I can't emphasize enough the importance of doing this fast and furiously," a jet-lagged Mayor Ted Winterer said at the Nov. 14 meeting. Earlier in the night he warned about the "imminent and dangerous impacts of too much carbon in our atmosphere."

The conference was the first time the U.S. had not paid to participate in the global climate talks. Instead, an alliance of local governments, businesses and universities attended the conference – the group, calling itself "America's Pledge," has an economy larger than Japan and Germany combined.

"I thought it was important to be there to take part in the U.S. presence and show the rest of the world that while the federal government is not pursuing these policies, that the measures various cities and states are taking will very much help us reach the standard set by the Paris Agreement," Winterer said, echoing the words of Governor Jerry Brown in Germany who reassured activists "we are doing real stuff in California."

The plan anticipates the introduction of lower cost, long-range EVs such as the Tesla Model 3, 2018 Nissan Leaf, and Chevy Bolt will increase demand for charging in Santa Monica. Cities and utility providers have developed rebate programs to encourage drivers to switch to electric.

The City plans to install new, smart charging stations to help city staff monitor usage and eventually develop a fee schedule for charging that will help pay for system maintenance. The smart chargers will allow the City to charge penalty fees to drivers who leave their electric cars in parking spots after they have finished charging.

"We need people to move off of these chargers," Councilmember Sue Himmelrich said, who drives an electric car and charges it nightly at her home in the North of Montana neighborhood. Himmelrich says she often charges her car while running errands around town. "It's really frustrating to know there's a charger there that's fully charged a car and you can't get to it."

The Office of Sustainability worked extensively with local group Drive Clean Santa Monica to draft the plan, which is organized by former City Councilman Kelly-Richard Olsen.

"This overall goal is unprecedented, and if achieved, it will be the most significant thing any City Council in the history of Santa Monica has done to reduce pollution in our community," Olsen said after the Council approved the plan. "This is going to be an incredible challenge for the City. But, we are confident that under the City Manager Rick Cole's leadership, his talented and dedicated staff can pull this feat off."

The plan was passed by Winterer, Himmelrich, Councilmember Tony Vazquez, and Mayor pro-tempore Gleam Davis. Councilmember Terry O'Day excused himself from the discussion because he is Vice President at EVgo, an electric vehicle charging company. Councilmembers Kevin McKeown and Pam O'Conner were not present at the meeting.

The deconstructed bird hits several bases for Lunetta, it capitalizes on seasonal eating and takes a new approach to a classic dish.

"Seasonality is at the heart of every dish. Plus, it's a fun challenge to incorporate seasonal ingredients. My favorite part of any meal is going to the farmer's market and seeing the abundance of fresh herbs and different fruits and vegetables. It inspires and stimulates me to put a twist on a recipe," he said. "I always make roasted root vegetables and great sauces for my own family. I'm always trying to come up with something new."

As a longtime restaurateur, Lunetta spends many of his holidays at work feeding guests but that doesn't stop him from enjoying the winter festivities.

"I'm an avid surfer, so I love driving up the coast to Ventura/ Oxnard and seeing all the farmland lush with fall squash and gourds. Also, the sunsets are most incredible this time of year. There's something very special about fall light," he said. "In my opinion, fall and winter are the best time of year in Southern California because. We have the most amazing sunsets and offshore winds. The best time for surfing is October through December, so it's heaven for me."

for short periods of time which makes cooking in holiday season unique, tasty and delicious. It wouldn't feel like it was Thanksgiving or Christmas if we were munching on watermelon."

Lewis said the holidays are a time for special dishes and his family utilizes a pot luck system that distributes the work brings a variety of dishes to the table, even tastes that don't appeal to everyone.

He said despite the presence of the beans in the family's chicken dish, a plate of nothing but beans isn't universally welcomed at their table, especially when served as the traditional green bean casserole.

"For some in the family, they absolutely despise the flavor of green beans and that is a dish that others love which is something that is cooked and brought to every holiday party. So usually half the room is fighting over the green beans while others are plugging their nose when nearby," he said. "The Chicken a la Russe also has green beans, but usually those that aren't fond will just pick them out."

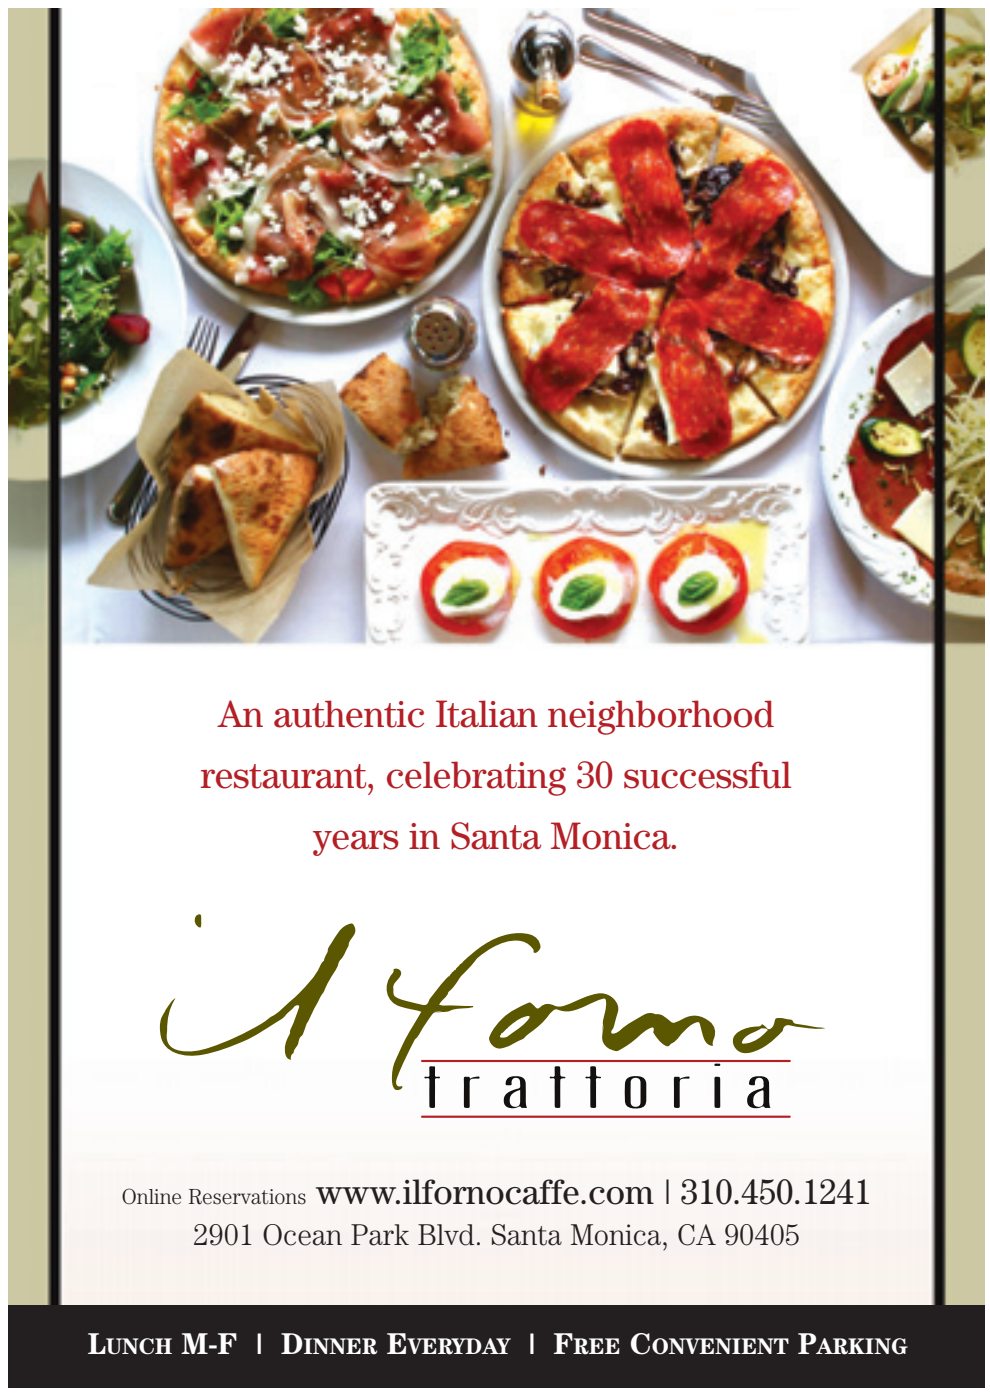

SEA WIND ORGANICS sells at the Saturday, Virginia Ave. Park market.

Chicken A La Russe

3 medium/large carrots, peeled, cut into 1" slices
6 small potatoes (we use russian) close in size, peeled
6 oz green beans
4-5 chicken breasts, skinned and boned
1/4 cup flour
2 tbsp olive oil
1/4 lb fresh sliced mushrooms
1 egg yolk, lightly beaten
2 tbsp mayonnaise, room temp
1/4 cup sour cream, room temp
2 tsp lemon juice
1/2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp pepper

Place a rack in a wok or rack in a metal pan over two burners. Pour water into wok until 1" below rack. Bring water to gentle boil of medium high heat. Place carrots and potatoes on rack. Cover. Steam until vegetables are tender when pierced with a knife, about 22 minutes. Cool slightly. Cut into quarters. Set aside. Place green beans in a shallow 9" baking dish. Place a rack in wok. Add water, cover, steam until tender, about 10 minutes. Set aside.
Pound chicken until ?" thick and cut into 1/2" strips. Sprinkle with salt. Roll strips in flour. Heat oil over medium high heat. Add strips and cook until firm and white, 4 – 5 minutes. Add mushrooms and stir fry for two minutes. Add cooked potatoes, carrots and green beans to mixture. Stir until hot, remove. In small bowl, combine remaining ingredients. Pour over vegetables/meat. Place over low heat and stir until sauce thickens, about two minutes.

Providence Southern California hospitals awarded 106 honors for quality Healthgrades hospital ratings

A report released by Healthgrades, a national independent source of hospital quality ratings, recognized all six Providence Health & Services, Southern California, medical centers for excellent clinical outcomes. Each year, Healthgrades evaluates hospital performance at nearly 4,500 hospitals nationwide for 34 of the most common inpatient procedures and conditions.

Providence St. Joseph Health Southern California medical centers received 106 awards and recognitions in a variety of specialties including critical care, pulmonology, cardiology, labor and delivery, patient safety and orthopedics.

"Our physicians, nurses and all caregivers do everything with one goal in mind: providing the best possible care, while staging the best possible experience, resulting in the best possible outcomes – across all our specialties," said Sylvain Trepanier, DNP, RN, CENP, FAAN, Chief Clinical Executive for Providence St. Joseph Health, Southern California Region. "All our caregivers should feel accomplishment in these awards from Healthgrades, which measures quality and patient safety based on outcomes and complication rates."

In addition to the awards, Healthgrades bestowed its prestigious Distinguished Hospital Award - Clinical Excellence award on Providence Tarzana Medical Center for 6 years running as well as Providence Holy Cross Medical Center and Providence Saint Joseph Medical Center for the fifth straight year. Recipients rank among the top 5 percent across the nation for patient safety.

Healthgrades provides a consumer website that allows consumers to review hospitals for quality.

For its analysis, Healthgrades evaluated approximately 45 million Medicare inpatient records for nearly 4,500 short-term acute care hospitals nationwide to assess hospital performance in 32 common conditions and procedures, and evaluate outcomes in appendectomy and bariatric surgery using all-payer data provided by 17 states. Healthgrades recognizes a hospital's quality achievements for cohort-specific performance, specialty area performance, and overall clinical quality. Individual procedure or condition cohorts are designated as 5-star (statistically significantly better than expected), 3-star (not statistically different from expected) and 1-star (statistically significantly worse than expected) categories. The complete Healthgrades 2018 Report to the Nation and detailed study methodology, can be found at www.healthgrades.com/quality.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 20)

A financial opportunity in the next 10 weeks will be your cosmic birthday gift. Nothing is holding you back from adventure in early 2018, so go on and fly. Your family members will cheer you on. Later, they'll also give you a new direction. Someone who loves you wholeheartedly will make a wish for you that comes true. Cancer and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 38, 12, 7 and 49.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
There's this little trap that happens — an unhelpful habit of mind. It has to do with thinking of happiness as a "then" thing or a "later" thing when happiness is pretty much always a "now" thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
There's a time to think carefully and thoroughly, but this isn't it. Don't take your thoughts too seriously. They're not who you are. One way to think less is to move more.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
Inner peace, evenness, satisfaction — it all comes from physical challenge today. Engage your muscles and your mind and spirit will get just what they need to help you feel right with the world.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You want to show up strong. Perception is important, and it does impact what opportunities you get. That being true, sometimes you make the strongest impression when you don't care so much about how you're being perceived.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
There's an opportunity in everything. For instance, miscommunication is an opportunity to get to know what another person really wanted or expected to hear. It's also a chance for better understanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
The restlessness you feel can be positively interpreted. Let restlessness be a leader that points you toward a more successful path. Otherwise, it becomes a tempter, increasing the allure of temporary fixes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You don't like what's going on, so start right away with the change. Don't worry too much about what to change exactly. A tweak of any degree to any part of the equation will make a difference to the outcome.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
There are very few people out there who can work everything out in their minds before they begin. Most people learn as they go. Don't worry if you don't know what you're doing. Trust the intelligence of movement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Much good will come of an attempt to assess and manage expectations. Yours aren't the same as theirs. Where are the discrepancies? What's not matching up?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Good interviewers don't worry too much about seeming smart and letting everyone know they did their research. What makes for a quality interaction is honest curiosity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
No one likes to misplace things. But if you find yourself losing the items of your daily life, it's a chance to get organized, downsize for simplicity's sake or determine what is truly important to you.

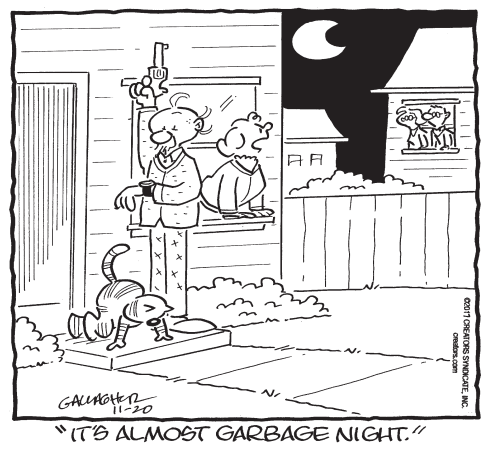

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
The difference between people you want to be around and people you don't want to be around will be immediately apparent in the way they deal with the annoyances of daily life.

Scorpio Sun Digs Down to Rise Up

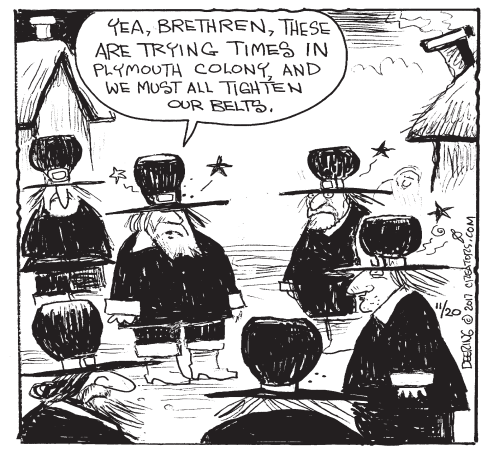

These are the last moments of this year's Scorpio sun. Make the most of them. Dig down past the pettiness that keeps us small. To think "this problem shouldn't be mine" or "this is below me" or "what a hassle" is to engage in an unhelpful and ultimately immature and diminishing mindset. All it takes to be bigger is to rise up.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Makena Buck

■ Take a couple of aspirin before you read this. Generic is OK.

■ For years, compound pharmacies – places where drugs can be mixed to meet specific patient needs – have made a drug that helps prevent preterm births. The generic cost of the therapy averaged $206 per pregnancy, according to the health news service STAT.

■ Then the FDA granted KV Pharmaceuticals permission to create the drug under "orphan drug" status, which ensures that it will be produced and sold in prepackaged versions under FDA supervision. In return, KV Pharmaceuticals was granted a 7-year exclusive right to market the drug, called Makena.

■ And how much does KV charge per Makena treatment: $10,917.

■ Chemically speaking, both Makena and the compounded generic version are essentially the same. The FDA has allowed pharmacies to continue compounding the generic drug, so at least women still have a choice.
