Nonprofit puts on free improv classes for local seniors

SENIOR CENTER "If it's hot, there's a lot of booze and somebody named Big Daddy. You're on pretty firm footing."

Perhaps not what you'd expect to hear walking into the Santa Monica Senior Center on Ocean Avenue, but professional actor Brian Hamill is not emceeing Tuesday afternoon bingo.

Most Tuesdays between the hours of 12:30 and 2 p.m., Hamill transforms the northern end of the center into an improvisational comedy workshop for one and a half hours of mind-bending activities that keeps his troupe of senior actors on their toes.

That afternoon, two members of the group stood in front of the class, one with a

TAKING IT TO THE HOUSE: Samohi's Sebastian LaRue returns a kickoff for a touchdown on Friday against Channel Islands.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS

Samohi's LaRue overwhelms Channel Islands

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA
Managing Editor

CORSAIR FIELD It was that kind of night for Samohi's Sebastian LaRue.

The junior wide receiver scored all four of Santa Monica High School's touchdowns en route to a 28-20 win over Channel Islands on Friday at Santa Monica College to advance to the second round of the CIF-Southern Section Western Division playoffs.

The win sets up a matchup with undefeated Ventura on Friday at SMC.

LaRue's first score came on a kickoff following a Channel Islands touchdown. The junior being recruited by Boise State took the kick at his own five-yard line, breaking tackles along the way to a 95-yard score that tied the game at 7-7.

Channel Islands responded with a field goal that gave them a short-lived 10-7 lead.

But, LaRue wasn't done.

On the ensuing Samohi possession, senior quarterback Christian Salem hooked up with the speedy LaRue for an 85-yard touchdown strike that put the Vikings up for good.

LaRue would connect with Salem for two more touchdowns before the night was through.

"They were covering me one-on-one all night," LaRue said. "They must not have wanted to win."

The final score was closer than the game played out. The Vikings were up 28-10 late before allowing Channel Islands to score 10-straight fourth quarter points that gave the Raiders hope.

Led by senior running back Kori Garcia, Samohi was able to pick up a first down on the ground with time winding down that secured the win.

"They shut down our run all night," Samohi head coach Travis Clark said. "I came into it knowing we were going to throw and that's what we did. We were happy to get a couple of big throws."

The late scores certainly didn't please Clark, who told his team following the game that mental mistakes could spell the end to the Vikings' playoff run. He warned them to be mindful to play four quarters next week against Ventura.

‘Breaking Dawn’ scares up $283.5 million debut

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES “The Twilight Saga” has staked out another huge opening with a $139.5 million first weekend domestically and a worldwide launch of $283.5 million.

The domestic total gives “The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn — Part 1” the second-best debut weekend for the franchise, after the $142.8 million launch for 2009’s “The Twilight Saga: New Moon.” “Breaking Dawn” did more than half of its business, $72 million, on opening day Friday, while the movie’s debut weekend was the fifth-best on record.

Opening in 54 overseas markets, “Breaking Dawn” pulled in $144 million internationally, according to studio estimates Sunday.

But the Warner Bros. dancing penguin sequel “Happy Feet 2” stumbled in its debut, pulling in just $22 million over opening weekend. That’s barely half what the first film in the animated franchise earned in its 2006 opening.

The comparison is even worse considering the original did not have the sequel’s price advantage for 3-D screenings, which cost a few dollars more than 2-D shows.

The previous weekend’s No. 1 movie, Relativity Media’s action tale “Immortals,” fell to third-place with $12.3 million, raising its domestic haul to $53 million.

George Clooney had a great start with Fox Searchlight’s comic drama “The Descendants,” which broke into the top-10 despite playing in just a handful of theaters.

“The Descendants” finished at No. 10 with $1.2 million in 29 theaters, averaging a whopping $42,150 a cinema. That compares to an average of $34,351 in 4,061 theaters for “Breaking Dawn.”

Directed by Alexander Payne (“Sideways”), the film stars Clooney as a distressed dad tending to his daughters after his wife falls into a coma from a head injury. The film expands to about 400 theaters Wednesday.

In an industry whose main audience is young males, “Twilight” is a rare blockbuster franchise driven by female viewers. Distributor Summit Entertainment reported that women and girls made up 80 percent of the audience for “Breaking Dawn.”

The popularity of “Twilight” has left many men scratching their heads, even those involved in releasing the movies.

“I’m 53 years old, and I haven’t figured it out yet,” said Richie Fay, head of distribution for Summit.

ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON Police departments around the country are working to shield their radio communications from the public as cheap, user-friendly technology has made it easy for anyone to use handheld devices to keep tabs on officers responding to crimes.

The practice of encryption has grown more common from Florida to New York and west to California, with law enforcement officials saying they want to keep criminals from using officers’ internal chatter to evade them. But journalists and neighborhood watchdogs say open communications ensure that the public receives information that can be vital to their safety as quickly as possible.

D.C. police moved to join the trend this fall after what Chief Cathy Lanier said were several incidents involving criminals and smartphones. Carjackers operating on Capitol Hill were believed to have been listening to emergency communications because they were only captured once police stopped broadcasting over the radio, she said. And drug dealers at a laundromat fled the building after a sergeant used open airwaves to direct other units there — suggesting, she said, that they too were listening in.

“Whereas listeners used to be tied to stationary scanners, new technology has allowed people — and especially criminals — to listen to police communications on a smartphone from anywhere,” Lanier testified at a D.C. Council committee hearing this month. “When a potential criminal can evade capture and learn, ‘There’s an app for that,’ it’s time to change our practices.”

The transition has put police departments at odds with the news media, who say their newsgathering is impeded when they can’t use scanners to monitor developing crimes and disasters. Journalists and scanner hobbyists argue that police departments already have the capability to communicate securely and should be able to adjust to the times without reverting to full encryption. And they say alert scanner listeners have even helped police solve crimes.

Say no to big box stores

Editor:

I'm tired of reading the complaints of people who want big box stores here in Santa Monica. Barbara Barnard ("Shopping less and less in town," Letters to the Editor, Nov. 18, 2011) and all those other people who want Target, Costco, Trader Joes, or any other big discount store in our town are way off the mark. Westwood is a dying shopping center that has been in distress for several years. Of course they want more business and it makes sense, I guess, to locate bigger stores there. But the traffic getting to and from Westwood is horrific – all day, every day. I don't want travel there to shop. I doubt that Barbara will find it all that convenient. It's always been a hassle going through Wilshire and Westwood boulevards. Hasn't she noticed the congestion that's been caused with the ever-ongoing construction on the 405? And parking is far more onerous in Westwood than here in Santa Monica.

This is a relatively small city and we don't need more traffic congestion that would come with these stores. I prefer to spend my limited funds on stores here. The Third Street Promenade and many shops along Wilshire and Montana have a wide variety of upscale and lower-scale stores. Santa Monica already has all the major supermarkets (with more than one site in most cases); several drugstores; Denny's and other lower priced restaurants; McDonalds, Jack-in-the-box, and other fast food joints if that's your preference. There's good old Sears, every electronic outlet store you need, coffee shops galore, several chicken restaurants, and just about every ethnic variety restaurant you could ask for. No, there's no Macy's, Trader Joes, or J. C. Penney, but they are not very far away – in Culver City, Century City, or the Westside Pavilion, for that matter, with lots of parking and several other large department stores. Barbara doesn't have to shop at Trader Joes on Olympic Boulevard, with its weird, limited parking. She should try the one on Washington in Culver City with lots of parking.

And with a huge Costco on Washington Boulevard, in Venice, I don't see why we need another one here.

SMMUSD's big gamble

ON THURSDAY NIGHT THE SANTA Monica-Malibu Unified School District Board of Education reviewed the district's gift giving policy. The issue is how gifts and donations to the district should be placed into one pot and distributed among schools based on some sort of "need" formula that has yet to be determined.

Individuals and school PTA groups now primarily raise funds for individual schools. It seems that supporters of wealthier neighborhood schools are more adept at fundraising and secure far more money than their counterparts in poor and middle class neighborhoods.

This disparity in fundraising leads to less resources for some schools and, according to some experts, lower test scores — often referred to as an "achievement gap."

To level the playing field, the school board is considering "Robin Hood" policies that will essentially end gifts to individual schools and possibly clubs, activities and/or other school organizations as well as prohibit school PTAs from funding auxiliary programs at their schools.

Almost all giving would go in an equity fund — such as the one now used for the current 15 percent "Deasy tax" on donations.

A Superintendent's Advisory Group comprised of parents, community members, and SMMUSD staff will "create opportunities for community members to hear from other districts that have successfully moved into this model" and, along with the superintendent, create a process and timeline for a transition from school site to a districtwide policy. All this will deliver "a premium learning environment at each of the SMMUSD's schools," promised a Nov. 17 school board meeting report.

The nonprofit Santa Monica-Malibu Education Foundation will become the central fundraising entity while the fund itself will be administrated by the district's Education Services Department. Details of how the new policies will be implemented need to be worked out

The staff report ominously notes, "While appreciating acceptable donations, the Board discourages any gifts which may directly or indirectly impair its commitment to providing equal educational opportunities for all district students."

Discourage donations? Indeed! I find this to be a stunning statement coming from a district that is always begging for funding. It also confirms to me that its social and economic agenda once again threatens school fundraising, the utilization of gifts and, quite possibly, overall educational excellence.

Opponents claim gifts to schools will dry up. Fearing a drop in academic quality in the better schools, they also predict parents will remove their high achieving students from the district, thus triggering a reduction in state support.

With the loss of top students, overall district rankings and test scores will decline. They claim poorer schools will not be helped by preventing successful PTAs from supporting their own schools.

The centralized gift policy has been endorsed by the powerful Santa Monicans for Renters' Right political group. Six out of seven members of the school board are SMRR endorsees which may explain the political agenda that has taken precedent and threatened academic quality for decades.

Centralized fundraising is a big gamble despite the Pollyanna optimism of SMMUSD administrators. It remains to be seen if taking from the rich and giving to the poor will actually help narrow the achievement gap. If so, there could be positive benefits, after all.

It will take a few years before the district can determine whether their new policy has paid off. But, if "narrowing the gap" is achieved by lowering achievement levels at the district's top schools, the damage could take years to repair.

In the meantime, the district will have shot itself in the foot and a generation of our best students will have paid a heavy price.

PIER CHANGES FOR THE BETTER

City Hall is considering changes to the way the Santa Monica Pier is managed. Currently the oversight for the pier is accomplished by 11 citizens appointed to four year terms on the Pier Restoration Commission by the City Council

Among the recommendations under consideration is shrinking the PRC to seven members and allowing the Convention & Visitors Bureau, Chamber of Commerce and Pier Lessees Association to each appoint one person to the "new" PRC. The City Council would appoint the remaining four persons.

It sounds like a very positive move. First of all, it would de-politicize the PRC — long a favorite reward for politically connected insiders and SMRR cronies. This would allow the pier to be run more like a business — one not dependant on annual multi-million dollar City Hall subsidies.

It's imperative that the pier be made more attractive to more people — visitors and locals alike. Eliminating much of the cheap, carnival atmosphere would help as would fine-tuning and adding to the mix of businesses (attractions) on the pier.

The current PRC is not up to the job. Persons familiar with and experienced in entertainment, tour and travel related attractions and food/drink establishments are vital to the pier's future success.

It's time for a change.

Connecticut officials rethink costly fuel cells

STEPHEN SINGER
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. After spending millions of dollars to run a state complex with fuel cells, partly to boast of their size and also to tout a homegrown industry, Connecticut officials concede privately that the cost is too high and they're looking to get out of a complicated, long-term contract.

The state spends $1.4 million every year for the fuel cells at its 10-year-old juvenile center, an amount that Connecticut's energy commissioner, Daniel Esty, called excessive in an email Sept. 6 to the governor's budget chief.

"The fuel cells installed were oversized for the facility to be able to 'brag' about it being the largest fuel cell installation in the world" at that time, he wrote in the e-mail that was obtained by The Associated Press in a Freedom of Information request.

He was responding to a message from the budget chief, Benjamin Barnes, who said removing the fuel cells would save that $1.4 million each year — "real money by any measure."

But state officials have been reluctant to remove the cells "because of the appearance that we were renouncing green technology and because it was launched with some fanfare," Barnes wrote. "This position deserves at least reconsideration."

The e-mails shed light on a pricey state subsidy and the cost of fuel cells at a time when policymakers want to wean energy users off such fossil fuels as natural gas and oil, and show the state's willingness to part with a long-promoted project to close its budget deficit in tough economic times.

The fuel cells were installed in 2001 at the Connecticut Juvenile Training School in Middletown, which was a debacle from the start. The contract to build it was corrupted in a scandal that took down a top adviser to then-Gov. John G. Rowland, who himself resigned after a corruption probe.

The fuel cells, chillers, boilers, switch gear and piping were installed as part of a 30-year deal, said Richard Ogurick, manager of plant operations for Ameresco, an energy services company that runs the fuel cell system.

"It was inconceivable they'd stop using fuel cells here," Ogurick said. "How can you on one hand be advocating for fuel cell development and be telling businesses that's what they ought to do and not do it at your own facility? It doesn't make very much sense."

Connecticut is home to two of the largest makers of fuel cells, UTC Power in Windsor and Fuel Cell Energy Inc. in Danbury.

Esty, who was a Yale University professor of energy and policy before Gov. Dannel Malloy appointed him to state government, gained a national reputation as an energy expert and has written extensively about how businesses can use environmental policy to improve their competitive advantage.

In an interview last week, he told the AP that his emphasis has been to promote "clean and cheap energy" and the Middletown site fell short.

"We want to be very careful how we use taxpayer and shareholder money," he said.

The fuel cell installation at the juvenile center was "not well thought-out and did not make sense," Esty said.

Backers tout fuel cells as energy sources that do not produce pollution or noise. A fuel cell makes electricity from chemical reactions involving hydrogen and oxygen, producing only water vapor as a byproduct. They're used for buses and recreational vehicles, heating and cooling systems for buildings and backup power.

Fuel cell manufacturing is labor-intensive, making fuel cells expensive in comparison with everyday fuels such as oil and natural gas, said Adam Weber, a staff scientist at Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory.

Publicly subsidized fuel cells to run buildings are rare. The Pentagon has a few at military bases and a few operate at courthouses and jails in California, he said.

In an interview, Barnes told the AP that the review of the power produced at the Middletown site reflects Connecticut's "tremendous cost pressures" rather than an effort to abandon an industry in the state.

"It does not have anything to do with our commitment to fuel cells," he said.

The Malloy administration, in office for about eight months when Esty and Barnes were discussing the fuel cells, was trying to close a budget deficit of more than $3 billion with tax increases and cost-cutting.

As part of a statewide tour to promote jobs, Malloy in August visited UTC Power, the United Technologies Corp. subsidiary that manufactured the fuel cells at the juvenile center.

Barnes cited "non-economic benefits" such as government supporting a Connecticut-based industry and a state agency taking the lead in using alternative energy. The Middletown site also was unaffected by the loss of power affecting hundreds of thousands of utility customers for a week or longer following the late October snowstorm.

The fuel cells produce electricity and the plant recovers heat that is used to make hot water and chill water, Ogurick said.

NATURAL POWER: Although there is no definitive proof, many studies seem to indicate that consumption of onions, garlic and other members of the allium family reduces the risk of certain cancers.

Tasty prevention

Dear EarthTalk

Given the preponderance of carcinogenic chemicals out there today, is it true that eating certain foods like garlic or onions can actually help prevent cancer?

M. Stone
Boston, MA

Natural healers have extolled the cancer-preventing virtues of garlic and onions for years, but only recently do we have enough scientific research to draw some conclusions. Several animal studies showing promising results using garlic and other members of the allium family (onions, leek, shallot, and chive) to prevent tumors have led to hundreds of studies involving human garlic eaters. While it is near impossible to pinpoint a direct link between garlic consumption and cancer prevention, the National Cancer Institute (NCI) reports that "several population studies show an association between increased intake of garlic and reduced risk of certain cancers, including cancers of the stomach, colon, esophagus, pancreas, and breast."

To wit, a multi-year study of 25,000 people from Switzerland and Italy found that those who ate the most garlic and onions were up to 88 percent less likely to develop various types of cancer (including cancers of the esophagus, mouth, throat, colon, breast, ovary, prostate and kidney) than those who said they ate little or none. "High onion intake, for example, was associated with a 56 percent lower risk of colon cancer and a 25 percent lower risk of breast cancer compared to no onion intake," reports Karen Collins of the non-profit American Institute for Cancer Research (AICR).

According to Collins, another study found a 32 percent lower colon cancer risk among Iowan women who ate at least one garlic clove a week compared to others who ate one once a month or less, while an analysis of several studies worldwide "linked a 31 percent lower risk of colon cancer with consumption of about four to five cloves of garlic weekly." And the results of several studies conducted in China show that that those who eat five cloves of garlic a week are half as likely to develop stomach cancers than non-garlic-eaters. Meanwhile, AICR reports that isolated components of garlic have shown the ability to slow or stop the growth of tumors in prostate, bladder, colon, and stomach tissue.

Just how do allium plants prevent cancer? "Like many vegetables, onions and garlic contain antioxidants that can block highly reactive free radicals from damaging cell DNA and starting the cancer process," reports Collins. "Laboratory studies have shown that onion and garlic compounds can increase enzymes that deactivate carcinogens in the body, enhancing our ability to eliminate carcinogens before they do any damage."

Some researchers, however, say that study limitations-that is, the accuracy of reported amounts and frequency of garlic consumed and the inability to compare data from studies that used different garlic products and amounts-make a definitive declaration on the topic unlikely anytime soon. And without such definitive conclusive proof of a causal link, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration will not allow food purveyors to state the health benefits of the garlic in their products on their labels.

NCI would like to see better-designed human dietary studies using predetermined amounts of garlic to discern potentially effective intakes as well as more studies directly comparing various garlic preparations. "Given this protective potential, the challenge now is to identify amounts that will provide optimal effects," says Collins. In the meantime, don't skimp on the garlic and onions.

By 3 p.m., 1.42 inches of rain had fallen on the Sepulveda Pass, which connects the Los Angeles Basin to the San Fernando Valley.

Mud and water poured onto Interstate 405 in the area.

Lanes were also flooded on Interstate 10 and Highway 101 in Hollywood, and high water was reported on surface streets in the area as well. At Los Angeles International Airport, more than a foot of water accumulated in the northbound Sepulveda Boulevard tunnel under the southern runways, according to the fire department.

Stores on Melrose Avenue, Hollywood's famed shopping strip, saw several inches of water flow in when storm drains clogged and overflowed, leaving merchandise damaged and forcing several of them to shut down.

"We had to get all the stuff out of the window display," Jessica West, an employee at the Dr. Martens store, told KABC-TV. "I didn't expect it to keep rising, but it came all the way through to the back of the store."

Gusty winds combined with snowfall contributed to poor visibility on mountain routes, including on Interstate 5 in the Grapevine area, which saw slowed traffic but no lane closures as of 7 p.m.

Chains were required on some mountain roads near Ojai in Ventura County, where some of the heaviest downpours were reported.

Besides LaRue's pair of long touchdowns, Porter said his team could have escaped with a win. Instead, the Raiders will be going home for the season.

"We're fighters," Porter said. "We never quit, but those big plays were just too much for us to answer."

He tipped his hat to Samohi, but couldn't help but wonder what could have been.

"They were as good as I thought they were," Porter said. "But, we could have got past them if it wasn't for those big gains."

The victory continues a season that has seen Samohi do big things. They won their first Ocean League title in a decade and hosted its first playoff game in that same period. Fittingly, it was 10 years ago that the Vikings won its last CIF-SS crown. A second home playoff game has Clark and company thinking a championship could be in the offing.

Coincidentally for Clark, Ventura eliminated Samohi from the third round of the playoffs 25 years ago when he was one of the Vikings' stars.

"I was hoping that we would face [Ventura]," he said. "When I first saw the brackets that's all I could think about."

For his players, they are just happy to be playing this late in the fall.

"Coming up as a sophomore three years ago, picking up bags, I can't describe how it feels," said senior defensive back/wide receiver Dylan Muscat of the win. "Now that I'm a senior, leading the team is all that matters."

SENIORS

book in her hands and the other testing out a southern drawl. The goal: for one to read lines from a random page in a random play while the other reacted as though in a Tennessee Williams novel.

Hamill, and other dedicated volunteers like him, do their work through the nonprofit organization Mob Rule, Inc., a loosely-bound coalition of community-minded individuals who run free workshops throughout the Los Angeles area.

The beauty of Mob Rule, Inc. is that anyone with an idea and some energy can get a class going with all the tax benefits of working through a nonprofit and none of the overhead. That's because Lee Costello, Mob Rule's president, runs much of the operation from her laptop.

"Everything raised goes directly to whatever they're doing," Costello said.

Mob Rule and the free senior improv class in Santa Monica got started 15 years ago by a group of ex-pats from Second City Improv in Chicago, a renowned improvisational school with alumni like Conan O'Brien, the Belushi brothers and Steve Carell.

They had night shows going at a small theater in Santa Monica. During day rehearsals, seniors would walk by and inquire what the shows were all about.

"A lot of people felt that what was going on might not be for them, that it was for kids," Costello said. The actors invited the elderly in to do workshops in the space in the afternoons before performances, and a tradition was born.

Several of the seniors involved in the group today are the very same that took part when it was first founded, like Bruce Cohn, a veteran combat Marine in the Korean War and employee of Transamerica.

"I was here when it was two times a week at the Santa Monica Playhouse," Cohn recalled. He met his girlfriend, Elaine Cohen, at the group.

The Second City improv method was built upon a series of games developed by theater educator, director and actress Viola Spolin, who worked as a drama supervisor for the Chicago branch of the Works Progress Administration's recreational progress from 1939 to 1941.

Spolin worked largely with immigrants, Costello said, and needed activities that could reach across cultural, and linguistic, boundaries.

The games inspire players to be physical and spontaneous, with actors reacting to both their onstage colleagues and the audience.

A group of around 15 seniors act as the core of the group. Many, like Bruce Schroffel, use the free classes to keep their artistic abilities sharp. Schroffel sings in a barbershop quartet called the Oceanaires, but he's also a working actor who does commercials and television shows.

Daniel Archuleta daniela@smdp.com

A LITTLE DIRECTION: Brian Hamill leads the improv class at the Senior Center recently.

Others in the group were deeply involved in show business, writing for the "Carol Burnett Show" or dancing with Jimmy Durante.

"We're people who come from a creative background, and we need something creative to do," Schroffel said.

Improv holds a special attraction, said Marilyn Brennan, a writer and longtime participant in the group.

"Acting is very different, there's more control," Brennan said. "Improv is like walking on a tight rope with no net."

Moving, interacting, thinking on the fly. They're all activities that Robin Davidson, the human services administrator for families, seniors and disability initiatives, has been trying to foster with new programming at the Senior Center.

The Santa Monica senior population can be easily isolated as high rents force out family members and friends pass away, and improv classmates help each other through diseases like dementia and the loss of beloved spouses.

Getting seniors engaged and out of their homes through improv, exercise activities like Zumba or even free lunches helps them stay healthy, Davidson said.

"I think that when something is offered that helps seniors get out of their home, the benefits are across the board," Davidson said. "The social connection part of it alone is tremendous and important."

Seniors who want more information on the improv group or other senior services can call the Senior Center at (310) 458-8644 or WISE & Healthy Aging at (310) 394-9871.

RADIOS

"If the police need to share sensitive information among themselves, they know how to do it," Phil Metlin, news director of WTTG-TV, in Washington, said at the council hearing. "Special encrypted channels have been around for a long time; so have cellphones."

It's impossible to quantify the scope of the problem or to determine if the threat from scanners is as legitimate as police maintain — or merely a speculative fear. It's certainly not a new concern — after all, hobbyists have for years used scanners to track the activities of their local police department from their kitchen table.

David Schoenberger, a stay-at-home dad from Fredericksburg, Va., and scanner hobbyist, said he understands Lanier's concerns — to a point.

"I think they do need to encrypt the sensitive talk groups, like the vice and narcotics, but I disagree strongly with encrypting the routine dispatch and patrol talk groups. I don't think that's right," he said. "I think the public has a right to monitor them and find out what's going on around them. They pay the salaries and everything."

There's no doubt that it's increasingly easy to listen in on police radios.

One iPhone app, Scanner 911, offers on its website the chance to "listen in while police, fire and EMS crews work day & night." Apple's iTunes' store advertises several similar apps. One promises to keep users abreast of crime in their communities.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Former UCLA, NBA star Walt Hazzard dies

BETH HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES Walt Hazzard, the former UCLA and NBA star who played on the Bruins' first NCAA championship basketball team in 1964 and later coached the team for four seasons in the 1980s, died Friday. He was 69.

Hazzard's family said he had been recuperating for a long time from complications following heart surgery. The school said Hazzard died at UCLA Ronald Reagan Medical Center.

He had a stroke in March 1996 and made a strong recovery, but became less publicly active. He made occasional appearances at UCLA games in recent years.

Hazzard was co-captain of the 1964 national title team that went 30-0 under coach John Wooden. He averaged a career-high 18.6 points as a senior playmaking guard. He was chosen college basketball's player of the year, having averaged 19.8 points in the NCAA tournament, where he was selected as the most valuable player.

As a junior, Hazzard led the Bruins with a 16.3 scoring average and they won 20 games for the first time since 1957. In his sophomore season, he averaged 13.2 points and the Bruins reached the Final Four for the first time in school history, losing by two points to eventual national champion Cincinnati in the semifinals.

In 1996, UCLA retired his No. 42 jersey.

"Walt was one of the pillars of UCLA's first championship team in men's basketball," current coach Ben Howland said. "He was a great player and an outstanding coach at UCLA. He is a huge part of the Bruin legacy, and he left life-long memories for the Bruin faithful."

Hazzard helped the U.S. win a gold medal at the 1964 Tokyo Olympics and played 10 years in the NBA, including a stint with the Los Angeles Lakers, who made him the No. 1 overall pick.

Hazzard averaged 12.6 points and 4.9 assists during his career with the Lakers, Seattle, Atlanta, Buffalo and Golden State. He ranked among the league's top 10 in assists during six of his seasons. In 1968, he averaged 23.9 points and 6.2 assists, culminating in an appearance in the All-Star game.

During his four years as UCLA coach, the Bruins had a 77-47 record. In 1985, he led them to the school's first NIT championship. In 1987, UCLA won the Pac-10 title and the league's first postseason tournament with future NBA star Reggie Miller in the lineup. They finished with a 25-7 mark, losing in the second round of the NCAA tournament, with Hazzard selected league coach of the year.

"Thoughts and prayers go out to the Hazzard family on your loss," Miller tweeted Friday night. "Coach Hazzard was not only a STUD point guard at UCLA under Coach Wooden...But a great Coach as well. He helped shaped me into the ball player I was, thanks so much Coach.."

The Bruins slumped to a 16-14 record the following year, and Hazzard was replaced by Jim Harrick for the 1988-89 season.

"This is a sad day for the UCLA basketball family," Bruins athletic director Dan Guerrero said.

"Walt was the catalyst for Coach John Wooden's first championship team and played the game with a style that excited Bruin basketball fans everywhere. He contributed to his alma mater in numerous ways, including as a student-athlete, coach and honored alum, and he will be greatly missed by all of us knew him."

Before taking over at his alma mater, Hazzard coached two seasons each at Compton College near Los Angeles and Chapman College in Orange County.

In 1994, Hazzard re-joined the Lakers as a West Coast advance scout. After his stroke, he served as a special consultant to the team for another 15 years.

Lakers owner Jerry Buss said, "Walt was a man of extremely high character."

Lakers general manager Mitch Kupchak said, "Not only was Walt an outstanding player, but his knowledge of the game was extremely valuable to our front office as well over the past 17 years. In the years since his stroke, he has been an inspiration to many of us with his perseverance and his passion for the game."

Hazzard, a native of Wilmington, Del., starred at Philadelphia's Overbrook High, where Wilt Chamberlain had played years earlier. During his three-year varsity basketball career, Hazzard led the school to an 89-3 record and two city titles. He also played baseball and ran track, and was student body president.

Hazzard is survived by wife Jaleesa, a Bruins song girl during the 1964 NCAA title season, and sons Yakub, Jalal, Khalil and Rasheed. During his NBA career, Hazzard converted to Islam and changed his name to Mahdi Abdul-Rahman. He felt the change was poorly received and cost him professional opportunities so he returned to using his given name professionally while remaining a devout Muslim.

Be out and about tonight, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Face facts: Some Mondays are more difficult than others. Greet the difficult. You or someone else -- or maybe both of you -- will need to make an adjustment. Do avoid a power play at any cost. Others want more control. Let them have it! Tonight: Out and about.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Your work, routine and daily life seem to take their toll. You would prefer to be somewhere else. Try to funnel some of your creativity into the area of your life in which you have an issue. Change what no longer works for you. Tonight: Choose a feel-good activity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You move in a new direction because you remain open to ideas and directions. Stay optimistic and positive. Don't worry about others right now -- only what is on your plate. A partner might not realize that he or she is a major distraction. Tonight: Now the fun starts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You might want to close your door or cocoon somewhere. But the best action is to stay present and fulfill your obligations. Ask yourself what type of change would work for you with this person. Weigh the pros and cons. Approach the other party, but not today! Tonight: Home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Parcel out your energy. You cannot count on getting a second wind. You might need to do as much as possible on the phone, from your office and/or on the computer. You cannot count on your energy and others not interfering. Tonight: Chat with a friend over dinner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★ Curb your need to add to your lucre right now. Any risking financially could backfire. Be the conservative, steady Virgo for now. Someone you meet could mean a lot more than you thought possible. Tonight: Don't feel pressured.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Despite flak from someone you care about, you need to let it go and focus on what you want. Your sense of humor emerges when dealing with others. You'll also gain a better perspective away from home. You can push almost any idea that is important. Tonight: As you wish.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★ See what is going on behind the scenes. You might be picking up a lot of information that doesn't coincide with your knowledge. Become your own PI as you sleuth through what is real and what isn't. Your questions carry a great deal of impact. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Zero in on your priorities. Not everything is as you might like. A financial matter feels as if you've stepped into quicksand. It really isn't that bad. Explore your options with your eye on what honestly works for you. A meeting proves to be significant. Tonight: Surrounded by people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Tension runs high, as you don't see eye to eye with an authority figure. Passions runs high, and you open up to new possibilities. Honor someone's ideas and try them out. You might be sure they won't work, but you are not in charge. Tonight: Out late.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ If you can take in a bigger perspective, do. The more you understand, the more you push judgment aside. Your openness is ultimately a very positive quality, making your life and the lives of those around you easier. Let go of rigidity. Tonight: Let your mind choose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Where your friends are is where you want to be. Schedule a lunch with a pal, Your tendency to sprinkle in socializing pays off, as you feel more satisfied. Tonight: Share with a special person.

Happy birthday

This year others might feel that you are giving mixed messages. You are changing on a profound level, especially in how you communicate. During this process, communication might be in flux. Be willing to talk through problems. If you are single, you could meet someone seemingly special. Check this person out. He or she might not be all you think he or she is. If you are attached, you as a couple need more one-on-one time. LIBRA understands you very well.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Basically, "Toto" is to sophisticated toilets in Japan as "Apple" is to consumer electronics in America. In September, Toto unveiled a prototype motorcycle with a toilet bowl to convert a driver's waste into fuel, not only making it self-gassed-up but contributing to the company's goal of reducing carbon dioxide emissions by 50 percent within six years. The company was launching a monthlong, cross-country publicity tour (presumably featuring a gastro-intestinally robust driver).

■ At press time, Melinda Arnold, 34, was waiting to hear whether her mother would be accepted as an organ donor for her daughter -- with the organ being the mom's womb. Melinda (a nurse from Melbourne, Australia) was born without one (though with healthy ovaries and eggs), and if the transplant by Swedish surgeon Mats Brannstrom of Gothenburg University is successful, and Melinda later conceives, her baby will be nurtured in the very same uterus in which Melinda, herself, was nurtured. (Womb transplants have been performed in rats and, with limited success, from a deceased human donor.)
