COOKING ON DEADLINE: Chewy Molasses Cookies

BY KATIE WORKMAN
Associated Press

Holidays equal platters and tins of festive-looking cookies. Cookies with colored icing, cookies with sprinkles, cookies with fillings, cookies with layers.

An artistic cookie display is a thing of beauty, that I'll not argue, but I'll reach past the whole lot if I see a flat, modest, quiet molasses cookie. This is my cookie, not much to look at compared to its flashy holiday brethren, but pliant and spice-scented and, to my mind, kind of perfect.

Because the butter is melted in this recipe, you can just as easily mix them up with a spoon or a rubber spatula as an electric mixer. And also go for dark brown sugar, which contains more . molasses!

Don't overbake these cookies (unless you want crispy molasses cookies — then go right ahead and add another couple of minutes).

They will keep for three or four days in an airtight container. And they are good contenders for shipping; separate layers with wax or parchment paper, place additional

The people of Santa Monica give back

MARINA ANDALON

Meals on Wheels operates in various communities throughout the country. There are over 5,000 independently run local programs and one happens to reside in Santa Monica.

Meals on Wheels West is located at 1823 Michigan Ave and has been a certified nutrition program since 1999. They continue their dedication to nourishing people's lives by serving them a hot lunch, snack and a cold dinner. This program would not be possible if it was not for the volunteers who go out on the road and deliver food.

"I was assigned by my nutrition professor to go volunteer and I became hooked," said Santa Monica College student Alexandra Franke. "I think everyone in the community should participate and try it out. The program has opened my eyes to what Santa Monica really looks like and this is one of the easiest ways to give back."

Franke wanted to do more, she suggested the idea of volunteering on Thanksgiving rather than spending hours and money on a big fancy dinner.

"I was happy that my family was on board with this idea," said Franke. "I am looking forward to going on the routes with my family and wishing people a happy Thanksgiving along with some delicious food."

Speaking of the food, Meals on Wheels changed their menu a bit. Making the food holiday friendly.

Meals on Wheels West Executive Director, Chris Baca explains the meals need to be nutritious and healthy for our clients so we watch the portion size. He said, "This year we will be serving Turkey breast, gravy, dressing, green beans, low sodium corn bread, mash potatoes, fresh fruit salad and a low sugar pumpkin pie."

The SantaLand Diaries

When it was first broadcast, it generated more requests for tapes than any story in Morning Edition's history except the death of Red Barber. It was brought to life off-Broadway, had a sell-out run at the Playhouse last year, and for 2016, stage and screen personality Patrick Censoplano dons the candy-cane tights for the holidays in this outrageously funny one-man play about the author's experiences as an unemployed writer taking a job as an elf at Macy's department store in New York City. This delightfully tart tale takes a wry look at how the holiday season brings out the best – and the worst – in us all. The SantaLand Diaries, adapted by Joe Montello from renowned author David Sedaris's well-loved story, is helmed by international acclaimed director Chris DeCarlo, with appropriately cheerful holiday costumes by Ashley Hayes and outrageous yuletide set by James Cooper. Perfect for date night, group parties and for anyone who wants to joyously celebrate, or cheerfully denigrate, the holidays in a unique and special way. Not suitable for under 15s. Toast the holidays with pre-show champagne or non-alcoholic eggnog, included in your ticket price. Santa Monica Playhouse productions are supported in part by grants from the City of Santa Monica and the Santa Monica Arts Commission and by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors through the Los Angeles County Arts Commission. Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 3:30 p.m., December 2 - 18. General admission is $29.50; discounts available for students, teachers, seniors, members of the military and groups of 8 or more. Visit http://SantaMonicaPlayhouse.com for more information.

Pope allows all priests to absolve "grave sin" of abortion

FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY Saying nothing is beyond the reach of God's mercy, Pope Francis told Catholics worldwide he is allowing all priests to absolve the faithful of abortion — women and health workers alike — even while stressing that it is a grave sin in the eyes of the church to "end an innocent life."

In an Apostolic Letter made public Monday, Francis said he was extending indefinitely the special permission he had granted to all rank-and-file priests during the just ended Holy Year of Mercy.

"There is no sin that God's mercy cannot reach and wipe away when it finds a repentant heart seeking to be reconciled" with God, the pope wrote in the 10-page letter, signed Sunday, the day the Holy Year ended.

But, he added: "I wish to restate as firmly as I can that abortion is a grave sin, since it puts an end to an innocent life."

Because the Roman Catholic Church holds abortion to be such a serious sin, absolution had long been a matter for a bishop, who could either hear the woman's confession himself or delegate it to a priest considered an expert in such situations, a potentially intimidating scenario for many of the faithful.

In his letter, the pope appeared to acknowledge that. "Lest any obstacle arise between the request for reconciliation and God's forgiveness," he wrote, "I henceforth grant to all priests, in virtue of their ministry, the faculty to absolve those who have committed the sin of procured abortion."

A top Vatican official, Monsignor Rino Fisichella, told a news conference at the Vatican on Monday that the pope's words applied to all those who were involved in an abortion — "from the women to the nurse to the doctor and whoever supports this procedure."

"The sin of abortion is inclusive. Thus forgiveness for the sin of abortion is all-inclusive and extends to all those who are participants in this sin," Fisichella said.

The pope is "absolutely not" lessening the gravity of the sin of abortion, Fisichella added in comments to Sky TG24.

Still, the head of an Italian anti-abortion group expressed concern that some priests might trivialize the sin of abortion. Gian Luigi Gigli, president of the Movement for Life, said women or health care workers who confess to abortion should be given penance in the form of volunteer work at the group's centers that work to prevent abortion.

By permitting all priests to absolve the sin of abortion, Francis was further applying his vision of a merciful church called to minister to the problems of its flock, reflecting concerns he became familiar with while archbishop of Buenos Aires in his native Argentina. Last year, he wrote that some women who had abortions felt they had no choice but to make "this agonizing and painful decision."

In his Apostolic Letter, Francis called on every priest to "be a guide, support and comfort to penitents on this journey of special reconciliation."

O. Carter Snead, director of the Center for Ethics and Culture at the University of Notre Dame, noted that priests hearing the confessions of those involved in abortion had already been "a longstanding practice in the United States and several other countries."

Thus, Francis is essentially "reminding us that the core message of the right-to-life movement is one of radical hospitality, mercy and unconditional love for every member of the human family, including mothers and fathers whose lives have been broken by abortion and who now seek forgiveness," Snead said.

During the recent U.S. presidential election campaign, some pastors urged their congregations to keep in mind the "sacredness in life" — seen as a reference to abortion — when deciding which candidate would get their vote. U.S. President-elect Donald Trump voiced opposition to abortion during his campaign, while his Democratic opponent, Hillary Clinton, supported women's right to have an abortion.

In his letter on abortion, Francis made plain that there can be no ambiguity in laying out moral principles, even while stressing the church's merciful side.

Addressing priests, Francis wrote: "I ask you to be welcoming to all, witnesses of fatherly love whatever the gravity of the sin involved, attentive in helping penitents to reflect on the evil they have done, clear in presenting moral principles, willing to walk patiently beside the faithful on their penitential journey, farsighted in discerning individual cases and generous in dispensing God's forgiveness."

"Mercy cannot become a mere parenthesis in the life of the church; it constitutes her very existence," Francis wrote.

Four cardinals, including archconservative U.S. Cardinal Raymond Burke, recently criticized Francis for his statements on another hotbed issue in the church, whether divorced Catholics who remarry can receive Communion. Burke and the others expressed fear that Francis was causing "confusion" by saying the matter could be left to the discernment of local priests. Church teaching holds such Catholics are adulterers living in sin, and thus shouldn't receive Communion.

While the pope's approach to forgiveness for abortion could distress Catholics holding a more rigid application of church teaching, Francis also reached out to traditionalists in his letter.

Faithful attending churches officiated by priests of an ultra-conservative breakaway group, the Fraternity of St. Pius X, can "validly and licitly receive the sacramental absolution of their sins," the pope wrote. Francis had previously granted that permission only for the period of the Holy Year.

Francis also expressed hope that these breakaway priests would strive to work for full Communion with the Roman Catholic Church.

Money, Power and Local Politics

Dear Editor:

As a long-time resident of Santa Monica I found it very disturbing to see local politics played out at its ugliest level during our recent elections. I refer specifically to the campaigns waged in favor of the four incumbent city council members as well as the one amassed against the LV initiative.

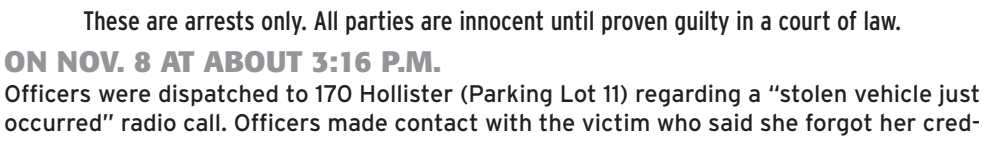

Once again our city council was able to have its way by relying on its developer friends to fund overwhelming efforts to see that incumbents were re-elected and the LV initiative defeated. And it once again called on its renters' rights partners and city employee unions to vote in accordance with its wishes thereby mobilizing large numbers in its favor - all so that it could continue to advance its pro-development and social-engineering agendas without interference.

Opposing efforts were greatly outspent and had no chance against the local political machine. Lies and fear were used for good measure by council cronies to ensure success. Multiple lies about the consequences of the LV initiative were spread widely and often through glossy expensive pamphlets dropped at our doorsteps. Most disgracefully, our police and firemen were used as pawns by claiming that they supported council's stance against controlling further development. After all, who among us would want to oppose the interests of our police and firemen? But what reasonable fireman, policeman or other emergency responder welcomes more traffic congestion when trying to do their jobs?

It should be apparent to most of us that live here that the city council is able to marshal these powerful resources by extending favors to developers, promising continued protection to renters, and maintaining high employee salaries and an inflated payroll. The fact that they get away with this use of power time after time is what is so disheartening.

It is high time we recognize that there will be no fair democracy in our city government until we reject local machine politics. We can begin by voting in new members to city council that can bring more balance to decisions regarding the future of our city.

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department.
These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON NOV. 8 AT ABOUT 3:16 P.M.

Officers were dispatched to 170 Hollister (Parking Lot 11) regarding a "stolen vehicle just occurred" radio call. Officers made contact with the victim who said she forgot her credit card inside a restaurant in the 2400 block of Main St. so she parked her car and left in running and unlocked. About two to five minutes later, she came back to the parking lot and saw the suspect driving out of the parking lot. The victim ran up to the vehicle, slammed her fist on the vehicle, and yelled for the suspect to exit the car. She then ran in front of the car. The suspect reversed the car and parked in a stall. She ran up to the window and started yelling at the suspect. The suspect then ran away southbound on Neilson, where he was located by responding officers. The suspect did not originally listen to officers commands to stop, and when he was placed in the vehicle, he refused to come out to be identified. Once officers were able to get him out of the patrol vehicle, the suspect was positively identified by the victim.
Alberto Rodriguez, 24, had bail set at $25,000.

Every weekday around 10:30 a.m. volunteers pick up about ten meals for delivery and deliver to clients in Santa Monica, Venice, Marina Del Rey, and Pacific Palisades. Volunteers run into a variety of clients, mainly senior citizens.

"People are surprised that there is a hidden hunger in even the most affluent communities, "said Baca. "Around 18% of Santa Monica residents are food insecure."

According to the Meals on Wheels website, one in six seniors struggles with hunger. It also states there are 1,431,062 isolated seniors in California that are living alone and 83% of seniors say the program improves their health.

Not only are individual's giving their time, but also is a Santa Monica based company Watt.

"I started volunteering by myself almost eight years ago, and gradually others within the company started to join me," said Watt Vice President, Mark Humphries.

"Watt was founded almost 70 years ago and the founder, Ray Watts was a strong believer of giving back to the community. As a company and individuals we do our best to volunteer every week with Meals on Wheels, and it is time well spent."

Meals on Wheels is thankful for each volunteer, and the generous donations from the community. Donating could be setting two hours aside each week to deliver hot meals or giving $40, which could feed five people a hot lunch and dinner for one full day.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Annual Holiday Clothing and Shoe Drive November

Flair Cleaners wants to help you clean out your closet and feel good about it. Make room for all your #BlackFriday bargains by donating gently used or new clothing and shoes to the Flair Cleaners Annual Holiday Clothing and Shoe Drive. Clothing and shoes can be donated at any of the five Flair Cleaners locations, Burbank, Redondo Beach, Santa Monica, Studio City, and Valencia, between November 25 and December 31, 2016.

All donations will be cleaned, if needed, and given to local nonprofits that help our community members in need. This year the drive will benefit the Los Angeles Mission, MEND, and Helping Hands for the Blind.

"We all have something lying around, like the stack of shirts your son has outgrown or those items of clothing in your closet that you just never wear. Now is the time to get them out of the closet and into the hands of those who need them most," said Gary Futterman, owner, Flair Cleaners. "We are proud to carry on this tradition and to help our communities come together to help others, and grateful for the ongoing generosity of our customers and communities."

Please donate only new or gently used items in good condition and remember to empty all pockets before making your donation. Clothing and shoes can be placed in the large donation bins near the entrance at each Flair Cleaners store. While all types of clothing are needed, jeans, professional clothing and accessories are appreciated. A list of items most needed by these nonprofits can be found on our Facebook page.

"Now What?: Being A Democrat in the Trump Era"

Although Santa Monica voted overwhelmingly against Donald Trump, we find ourselves today in a new uncertain world, wondering what this election means for our core democratic principles. The Santa Monica Democratic Club will host an expert panel to analyze the election results and chart out the path forward.

FEATURED PANEL:

- Eric Bauman, Chair of the Los Angeles County Democratic Party
- Sandra Fluke, Women's Rights Activist and former State Senate candidate
- Peter Dreier, Politics Professor and Director of the Urban and Environmental Policy Department at Occidental College

Rather than sit back and allow Donald Trump and his band of bigoted deplorable to wreak havoc on our beloved country, it's time to stand up and fight back. This fight begins Wednesday, November 30, at 7pm. We hope to see you there!

Place: Santa Monica Public Library. 601 Santa Monica Blvd. 2nd Floor Community Room

This event is free and open to the public. Light refreshments. Parking available. Handicap accessible.

Curtain Calls

■ Jerome Irving Rodale (1898-1971) was an author, playwright, publisher and pioneer in modern organic farming. In 1971, at the age of 72, he appeared on the The Dick Cavett television talk show, where he joked at one point during the interview that he was in "such great health that I fell down a long flight of stairs yesterday and I laughed all the way."

■ Rodale was sitting beside another of Cavett's guests, newspaper columnist Pete Hamill, when he suffered a fatal heart attack. The show was never broadcast.

Man on the Street

by MARINA ANDALON

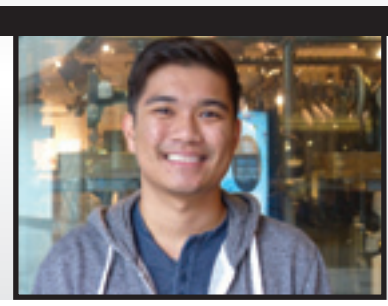

Q: What is your favorite winter activity and why?

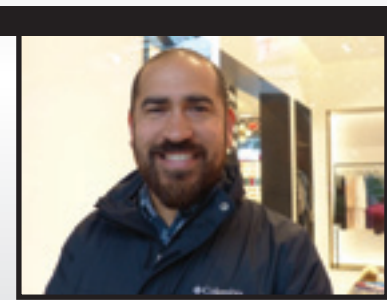

GERARD O'NEILL:
I don't like the winter. I actually haven't spent a winter in LA yet, but back when I was living in New York, I liked riding my bike in the winter. It was the one thing I could do that didn't suck.

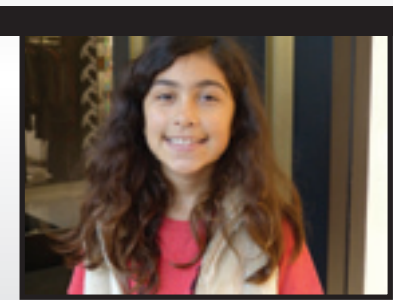

PATTY LYCZKOWSKI:
I'm from New Jersey, so I like putting on the fireplace, getting hot cocoa, getting those extra fluffy marshmallows, and just sitting down and reading a book. And then admiring the snow, but not being in the snow.

KIRBI MARQUEZ:
My favorite winter activity I think, before I hurt my knee, is snowboarding, even if it is just small hills. Just playing in the snow. I don't like shoveling, though.

CARLOS SANTINI:
It's interesting, in the winter here the sun sets closer to the Santa Monica Pier, so I like doing some twilight shots, like photography, because the sun sets really nicely. I think photography is one of my favorite things to do in the winter.

CARLA SANTINI:
I like ice skating, because I fall over all the time and I get up again.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 23)

Your appreciation for what you already have leads to augmented fortunes this solar return. You treat others with such tenderness through 2017 that relationships will develop an unparalleled depth of feeling. There's a professional advancement in February. A financial upswing begins in May and keeps building. Libra and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 19, 33, 24 and 15.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Some of the most influential people of your life aren't the type to readily give advice. They just live exemplary lives, certain aspects of which you would love to emulate -- and today, you will.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Smart people seek wisdom, and wise people seek intelligence. Certainly there will be plentiful examples of one without the other today, but not from (well-rounded and deliberate) you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
You've been there. You've been the source of the long sigh followed by "If only." But now you're too busy making things happen for yourself for such sighing. You need to be around people who are the same way.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
"Vain is the word of a philosopher which does not heal any suffering of man." There's lots of advice out there today, mostly unhelpful, much of it impractical. It only adds to the beauty of a good ol' to-do list.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Though it's sometimes fun to touch on mystical topics, what matters today more than who you were in a past life or how to interpret someone's aura is who you are being now and how that's working with the other person's need of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
No one knows why, but even hungry livestock sometimes need to be prodded to the pasture. One never knows what might be distracting another person. Kindness is called for.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
The person with the least need of a situation has the most cheerful, relaxed attitude toward it. From this mood, a person can see and attract more opportunity. Today provides one more example of the benefits of detachment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
There is but one way to draw a straight line between two points. But if the line is crooked it can follow an infinite number of different paths. Do what's right. Go directly. Get there the easy, simple way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
All things turn into fire in the end -- otherwise known as "the beginning," because fire is also the birthmother of all things. Wherever you are in your creative process, it's a good and necessary part of the cycle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
There should be a name for the particular type of anxiety that accompanies technical difficulties. Software errors, password fails, Wi-Fi issues... quickly let it go. You'll come up with astoundingly creative solutions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Don't let work take an outsized role on your sense of self. You're not defined by your work any more than you're defined by what you own, who you know, or any other single element of your life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
Maybe it's impossible to tame that ocean of feeling inside you, but you'll be incredibly powerful when moments of calm do come over you. Through self-possessed, patient politeness you'll get exactly what you want.

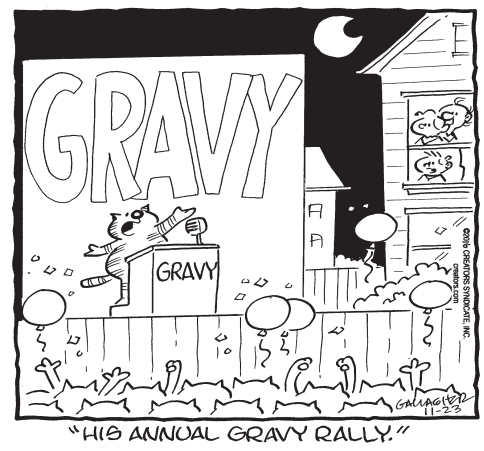

Spicy Mercury-and-Saturn Meetup

Relations sometimes feel they have the right to be more critical than would be kind for anyone outside of the clan. Such is the intimate nature of familial love. A grain of salt will not be enough to make these opinions palatable as Mercury and Saturn meet up. Keep the shaker shaking, and if stronger spices are needed, the stars will point the way.
