Long time coming for SM Pier bridge plans

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL Remember the new Santa Monica Pier bridge that's been in the works for 15 years? Well it's still in the works.

City Council will select a design or two to pass on to the environmental study phase at Tuesday's meeting.

City Hall floated the idea of improving the current bridge, which was built in 1939, back in the late '90s. In 2006, city officials circled a proposal to rehabilitate the current bridge but Caltrans said it wouldn't be eligible for federal funding.

Traffic on the bridge is a problem, city officials said. About 3,667 people cross the bridge on busy weekends, according to the 2006 proposal. Traffic is expected to get worse with the coming Expo Light Rail Line, they added.

In 2010, council voted to apply for federal funding for a bridge replacement project. Last year, the funding was authorized through the Federal Highway Administration and council selected a con-

Money, star power await Obama on West Coast fundraising tour

JIM KUHNHENN
Associated Press

SEATTLE Money, star power and Hollywood awaited President Barack Obama on a West Coast swing featuring a bit of official business, but mostly fundraising for a Democratic Party eager to go on offense after a politically debilitating two months.

Obama arrived Sunday evening in Seattle. He also planned stops in San Francisco and Los Angeles, raising money for House and Senate Democrats as well as the national party.

High-profile events on the schedule included a reception at the home of retired basketball star Earvin "Magic" Johnson and his wife, Cookie, in Beverly Hills, Calif., and one at the house of Marta Kauffman, co-creator of television's "Friends."

"In the year before an election like this, I think the most tangible way that an incumbent president of either party, frankly, can benefit his party's prospects in congressional races is to try to help them raise money," White House spokesman Josh Earnest said. "And I would anticipate that the president's efforts on that front will continue into next year."

The trip comes as Obama's health care law approaches a crucial Nov. 30 deadline for an improved insurance enrollment website whose catastrophic start Oct. 1 dealt a serious political blow to the White House. Also, the U.S. and other world powers just sealed a historic deal with Iran for a tempo-

Lompoc ends Samohi football's postseason

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA

LOMPOC, Calif. A long road trip to Lompoc ended Santa Monica football's playoff hopes.

Lompoc ran away with a 42-10 win over Samohi Friday at home that sends the Braves into the semifinals of the CIF-Southern Section Western Division playoffs.

For Samohi, all they are left with are the memories of a season that saw the Vikings do more with less.

Issues at quarterback left Samohi with little options beyond the running game, yet the Vikings still finished second in the Ocean League and earned an appearance in the second round of the postseason for the third straight year.

Despite being sent home for the year, Samohi head coach Travis Clark couldn't help but be proud of his Vikings.

"Just to get to this point, hats off to these

Prison inmates learn tech sector from Silicon Valley professionals

MARTHA MENDOZA
AP National Writer

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. The budding entrepreneurs wear blue sweat pants labeled "prisoner" and huge, flapping blue shirts. Their doors are triple locked, and lunch is a stale peanut butter and jelly sandwich. Complicating matters, participants in this growing Silicon Valley startup incubator are barred from the Internet.

Nonetheless, the program, launched by successful tech entrepreneurs for inmates north of San Francisco in the decaying San Quentin State Prison, has expanded, and a new session began this month in the gritty, downtown Los Angeles Twin Towers Correctional Facility.

The reason they're growing is simple: Graduates, now trickling out of the penal system, are landing real jobs at real dot-coms.

The rigorous, six-month training teaches carefully selected inmates the ins and outs of designing and launching technology firms, using local experts as volunteer instructors.

"We believe that when incarcerated people are released into the world, they need the tools to function in today's high-tech, wired world," says co-founder Beverly Parenti, who with her husband, Chris Redlitz, has launched thriving companies, including AdAuction, the first online media exchange.

The pair were Silicon Valley pioneers in the 1990s, and they tap their many high-level connections to help with the prison program they started the program after Redlitz was invited into San Quentin in 2011 for a FEASTING ON THE COMPETITION: 'Hunger Games: Catching Fire' burned up the box office to the tune of $161.1 million in receipts. The sequel was the biggest November debut in history.

'Catching Fire' scorches with $161.1M opening at box office

JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

NEW YORK Moviegoers satiated their appetite for the "Hunger Games" franchise by making the sequel "Catching Fire" one of the year's biggest hits.

"The Hunger Games: Catching Fire" opened with $161.1 million at the domestic weekend box office, according to studio estimates Sunday.

It became the biggest November debut ever, as well as Lionsgate's most lucrative opening.

The result fell short of some expectations and failed to dethrone the year's biggest box-office opening, "Iron Man 3" with $174 million. But the film opened massively worldwide, taking in a total of $307.7 million.

The marketplace largely ceded the weekend to "Catching Fire." The only other new wide release was Disney's Vince Vaughn comedy "Delivery Man," which sputtered to an $8.2 million opening.

The box-office performance for "Catching Fire" establishes "Hunger Games," starring Jennifer Lawrence as the archer heroine of Suzanne Collins' young adult series, as among the elite franchises in movies. The budget nearly doubled from the original and Francis Lawrence took over directing duties from Gary Ross. "Catching Fire" received better reviews and drew a broader audience.

"When the first film was released, there was this idea that it was going to appeal largely to young girls," said Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst for box-office tracker Rentrak. "But over time, it's skewing back toward male audiences. There's actually a lot of action, there's violence in the movie. It's crossing over to a much broader base."

The domestic opening for "Catching Fire" is the fourth best ever, following "The Avengers ($207 million), "Iron Man 3" and "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part II" ($169 million).

Record keeping, though, has become more complicated in recent years at the box office. Higher-priced 3-D or IMAX screenings can boost revenue, as can early screenings. "Catching Fire," which earned 8 percent of its gross from IMAX showings, counted $25 million from Thursday night

Discussing new green space

Editor:

As the City of Santa Monica's director of the Community & Cultural Services Department I feel that it is important to address the article in Thursday's Nov. 21 Daily Press regarding Mt. Olivet Reservoir and Commissioner Phil Brock's idea for opening up the site to park use ("Scenic park proposed for reservoir," page 1). The city's adopted Parks and Recreation Master Plan contains five recreational themes including the theme of reclaiming lost space for possible greater park and recreational use in the community. Mt. Olivet Reservoir is identified among other spaces that could possibly be reclaimed in the future for further public enjoyment. At this time, however, the project is not contained in the city's 5-year Capital Improvement Program and would need City Council approval to proceed. Should that approval be granted sometime in the future, a full public engagement process would be undertaken with the community to discuss the idea in depth.

Not a fan of a new park

Editor:

I can't believe we are talking about another park ("Scenic park proposed for reservoir," Nov. 21, page 1). No one in Wilmont, which is surrounded by single family residences. Really? Do people not realize we have one of the greatest parks in the world – Santa Monica Beach? We cannot afford to continue increasing our cost base. Why are we not talking about real problems such as crime and homelessness? I would gladly trade in all the parks and other public spaces if we didn't have crime. This is a real, quality of life and personal safety issue. Until we get basic services fixed, I hope some of our residents would stop trying to add to our problems.

Creating a park out of an under-utilized reservoir

I HAD BREAKFAST A WEEK AGO WITH Phil Brock, chair of the Santa Monica Parks and Recreation Commission

Hanging out with Mr. Brock is always an interesting experience. He's full of good ideas about how Santa Monica could provide a much better quality of life for residents and visitors alike.

He likes to bounce ideas off people, which is always a smart way to gauge whether they're worth pursuing, need some tweaking or is just worthless.

We had a spirited debate about the new ordinance governing professional trainers in our parks and exchanged predictions about who will run for City Council next year. Then he asked, "What do you think about a passive park on top of Berkeley Hill at the Mt. Olivet Reservoir?"

"Are you kidding," I asked. "It's a great idea and long overdue."

The Mt. Olivet Reservoir is a giant, subterranean reservoir of city drinking water covered by grass that's currently fenced off to the public. It's on top of Berkeley Hill bisected by Franklin Street in the city's north-east neighborhood.

The 1.2-acre site has mostly unimpeded 360 degree views — to the Pacific on the west; the Santa Monica Mountains on the north; Westwood Village, Century City, Hollywood and downtown Los Angeles (on a clear day) eastward, and Mar Vista, Marina del Rey, LAX and Palos Verdes on the south.

The area is behind locked gates and chain link fencing for security reasons. Nevertheless, Brock would like to see part of it landscaped and maybe have a few benches installed to make it more accessible to the public.

Opening up portions of the site would mean insuring that the reservoir itself and related infrastructure is safe from tampering or misdeeds. Fencing and/or security measures are obviously needed to protect pumping equipment and access to the reservoir itself. We both feel that at least part of the site would be perfect for limited use strictly as a retreat, viewing area or meditation zone.

I've been on Berkeley Hill many times. The present vacant lot is a tragic waste of space and an unused amenity. Currently, visitors are prevented from fully enjoying one of the Westside's most stunning views unless they stand in the street. I've often wondered why someone hadn't come forward and said, "Let's do something with this." Finally somebody has. An excellent idea it is, too.

City Hall should move quickly to make this happen. It's time to create a quiet, contemplative environment at this spectacular site for thought and reflection. No kiddie playground, no doggie park, no bells and whistles except for greenery, a few benches and maybe a drinking fountain. Street parking is handy in the surrounding residential neighborhood.

Security for the reservoir is paramount. It does contain 5-million gallons of drinking water. But, until something specific is proposed, we don't know whether a park or at least a viewing platform at the reservoir is feasible or what is involved in making the area secure, while at the same time accessible to everyday folks, even if on a limited basis.

The cost of any upgrades or security enhancements would be a fraction of the approximately $44 million City Hall squandered on the vastly overblown Tongva Park and Ken Genser Square.

This is a great opportunity for a unique, vest-pocket park. Let's hope it doesn't get bogged down in a debate over what can and can't be accomplished. A safe and spectacular Mt. Olivet Park or viewing platform on Berkeley Hill is a priority and a positive community benefit.

TYING UP ODDS, ENDS

City Council approved two more new hotels at their Nov. 12 meeting. These developments had been kicking around for many months, but when developer OTO Development, headquartered in Spartanburg, S.C., finally agreed to UNITE Here Local 11 demands regarding union membership, wages and benefits, the deal was finally sealed.

The six-story Hampton Inn & Suites will consist of 143 guest rooms, 78,750 square feet of floor area and parking for 108 vehicles in a two-level subterranean garage at 501 Colorado Ave. The companion project is a six-story Courtyard by Marriott with 136 guest rooms, up to another 78,750 square feet of floor area and parking for 108 vehicles in a two-level subterranean garage at 1554 Fifth St., at the same intersection.

While there was quibbling among staff and politicians about columns infringing on pedestrian space and the amount of the developer's contribution to the Colorado Esplanade, the overall appearance of these gateway developments apparently didn't warrant a second thought.

As a result, we'll have two, six-floor inns at Interstate 10 and the Expo Light Rail entrance to Downtown that look like they'd rather be in Bakersfield.

It's too bad that nobody directly involved insisted on better and more imaginative developments. Because of everyone's low standards, we'll have in our midst two more hideous hotels that everyone hates.

STILL NO WORD FROM BBB

Lastly, after last week's column, we haven't heard from Big Blue "Bust" about what, if anything, they're planning to do to improve the miserable service on the Line 3 route on Lincoln Boulevard. No surprise. It's par for the course.

However, I received an e-mail from a reader who told me it's just as bad in the evening as it is in the morning with crowded buses — two or three in a row — often bypassing riders at stops. Still unacceptable, guys!

Newport Beach considers testing natural gas fire rings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. The Newport Beach City Council will weigh whether to test natural gas-burning fire rings on certain beaches as part of a pilot project with anti-pollution regulators.

The city staff plans to ask the council Tuesday to join the project that would install cleaner-burning gas fire pits while removing some wood-burning rings that some residents have deemed a health nuisance, the Los Angeles Times reported in Sunday's editions.

"I think ... these are going to be really popular," City Manager Dave Kiff said of the natural gas alternative.

Before beachgoers can roast s'mores over gas bonfires, the South Coast Air Quality Management District must give the go-ahead for contractors to build the prototype propane and natural gas fire rings. The California Coastal Commission also must sign off on the project.

If approved, the rollout of the new gas rings would occur in two steps: An initial trial run would be tested at Balboa Pier before expanding to Corona del Mar. Instead of being placed near wood-burning pits in the sand, the gas rings would be near parking lots.

City officials will study how safe the gas rings are and whether they're easy to maintain during the pilot phase.

"This is uncharted territory," Kiff told the newspaper.

The switch to gas fire rings in certain beach spots comes amid concerns over wood-burning bonfires. Last summer, some Newport Beach residents sought to ban the pits, saying the smoke drifts over and pollutes their homes. But supporters say the rings are a beach tradition and tourist attraction.

During the heated bonfire battle earlier this year, the California Assembly approved a nonbinding resolution supporting the fire rings as a "time-honored" and "important beach attraction." Orange County supervisors delivered a similar resolution.

Under rules approved by the AQMD that go into effect in March, bonfires must be at least 700 feet from homes.

Report: Underground leak sites go unmonitored

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA ANA, Calif. A new report says hundreds of underground leak sites will go unmonitored by the state under a policy change.

Since the 1980s, more than 44,000 underground fuel tank leaks have been tallied in California. A change that went into effect last year allows some of these sites to end regulatory monitoring even though trace contamination exists, the Orange County Register reported.

The state has defended the policy, saying that there's no threat to human health because gasoline contaminants will naturally degrade and won't reach groundwater supplies. State officials also said their focus is on cleaning up the worst underground petroleum storage tank leaks.

"There's a lot of money that is being spent on low-threat sites. The board wants to stop spending money on the low-threat sites so that we can start spending money on the high-threat sites," Kevin Graves, who heads the cleanup program at the California State Water Resources Control Board, told the newspaper.

But some scientists and local water agencies have protested the new standard, saying that it allows gas station owners and oil companies to walk away from their responsibilities.

The Orange County Water District, which serves about 2 million residents, is among those concerned. The district has a pending lawsuit against more than a dozen gas companies.

"When you take away the monitoring wells from these sites, then we really are left with no information to tell where the plumes have moved. Now these sites are being closed with contamination in the groundwater presumably with the thought that they will attenuate by themselves without monitoring and that is certainly a concern to the water district," said Roy Herndon, chief hydrogeologist at the Orange County Water District.

Since 2012, when the new standard went into effect, state and local regulators determined that more than 500 cases won't have to undergo monitoring or sampling because they were considered "low threat." Records show another 1,700 cases may also be eligible to go unmonitored, the Register reported.

The Q Line

Getting to the bottom of things

City officials recently admitted that they have no clue as to how a more developer-friendly zoning map was including in the Land Use & Circulation Element in regards to A-lots ("Residents, City Hall propose corrections to planning document," Nov. 13). That change has already led to one development proposal that currently would not be allowed.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks: Given that City Hall doesn't know how the change occurred, should an independent investigation be conducted? What do you think happened?

Contact qline@smdp.com before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. You can also call 310-573-8354.

A new type of fracking

Dear EarthTalk:

I hear there's a greener form of fracking for natural gas and oil that uses carbon dioxide instead of water to access underground reserves. Is this really better for the environment?

Jason Burroughs
Erie, Pa.

Hydraulic fracturing (known as "fracking") is a method of causing fissures in underground shale rock formations to facilitate the extraction of otherwise inaccessible natural gas and oil. In a typical fracking operation, drillers inject a mixture of pressurized water and chemicals underground to fracture the rock and free up the gas and oil. Not widely employed in the U.S. until less than a decade ago, fracking has quickly become a major player in the U.S. energy scene. The resulting influx of cheap domestic natural gas-cleaner burning than the oil and coal it has replaced-is at least partly responsible for the fact that the U.S. has reduced its greenhouse gas emissions to the lowest levels since 1992.

Fracking has been good for oil companies, the economy and even our carbon footprint, but it doesn't come without environmental cost. A typical fracking operation pumps some five million gallons of water and chemicals underground to break up the shale. About half the water is removed during the oil and gas recovery process, leaving the other half underground where it can contaminate aquifers and degrade soils.

Enterprising petroleum engineers have been hard at work trying to find ways to frack without water. One promising alternative involves using carbon dioxide (CO_2) to break up the underground shale instead of water. "Fracking with carbon dioxide has a number of potential advantages," reports Kevin Bullis in the MIT Technology Review. "Not only would it eliminate the need for millions of gallons of water per well, it would also eliminate the large amounts of wastewater produced in the process."

He adds that CO_2 may also yield more natural gas and oil than water, given the dynamics of how it works underground. Also, CO_2 used in fracking can be recovered and used repeatedly. And once a well is done producing, it can be sealed up, sequestering the CO_2 underground where it can't add to global warming.

Researchers at the University of Virginia estimate that fracked sections of the Marcellus shale in the eastern U.S. could store over half of all U.S. CO_2 emissions from power plants and other stationary sources over the next 20 years, with other shale formations providing significant additional storage.

Right now CO_2-based fracking is uncommon, given the abundance of water in our biggest fracking regions and the logistical challenges in transporting a compressible gas to well sites safely and cheaply. But as fracking expands into politically charged areas, or arid regions where water is scarce, waterless fracking could become more common. Already, nearly half of the fracked wells drilled across the U.S. in 2011-2012 are in water-stressed areas, according to the sustainability-oriented non-profit, CERES. And a recent study from the consulting firm Wood Mackenzie concluded that many of the countries with the greatest promise for developing shale oil and gas through fracking suffer from water shortages.

Bullis says that one of the largest shale gas resources in the world is in China underneath 115,000 square miles of desert. "Piping in water would strain already tight supplies," he says, but adds that China's major use of coal-fired power plants means the country has plenty of CO_2 it could be capturing and using.

TALE OF THE TAPE: A typical fracking operation pumps some five million gallons of water and chemicals underground to break up the shale. About half the water is removed during the oil and gas recovery process, leaving the other half underground where it can contaminate aquifers and degrade soils.

Iowans concerned about ethanol's lost political clout

THOMAS BEAUMONT
Associated Press

ALTOONA, Iowa For decades, presidential candidates' chances in Iowa were wounded if not doomed unless they backed federal support for ethanol, a boon to the state's corn-growing economy.

That rule of politics collapsed resoundingly in the 2012 campaign when five of the six top Republican candidates said it was time for such intervention in the private market to end.

Now, Iowa's senior political leaders are pondering how to shore up political support for the corn-based fuel at a time when its economic and environmental benefits are under attack .

The latest blow came this month, when the Obama administration proposed cutting the required amount of ethanol in the nation's fuel supply for the first time since Congress established a standard in 2007.

The state's leading Republicans and Democrats hope they can still use Iowa's political importance as a swing-voting state and as the site of the first presidential nominating contest to get candidates to support keeping the requirement, or at least part of it, in place.

But the case has become a tough sell for Republicans as the party has moved to the right and become increasingly hostile to government programs and directives.

Even among Democrats, concern has grown about ethanol's role in rising food prices and in cultivation of land that had been used for conservation.

The recent boom in domestic oil production has also made ethanol less prized as a U.S.-produced fuel that limits dependence on foreign oil. The grain alcohol burns cleaner than gasoline but produces less energy.

"I think there are some that feel it's potentially safer now to be lukewarm at least, or not supportive of it," said Iowa's Secretary of Agriculture Bill Northey, a Republican. "I think it's yet to be seen if that's a smart political position."

U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa said he hopes to thwart the administration's proposal in Congress if it survives the 60-day comment period.

Meanwhile, Republican Gov. Terry Branstad planned to press his fellow GOP governors, especially those with possible presidential aspirations, to be mindful of the ethanol industry's economic importance. He met with New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie at a governors' association meeting in Arizona this week. On Tuesday, Branstad launched a Website for people to leave comments for the EPA.

For politicians eying the White House, "Whoever comes here better understand the importance of renewable fuels, or they are going to have hell to pay in rural Iowa," Branstad said in a recent interview.

The federal government began actively supporting ethanol, which is made by fermenting and distilling corn, about 40 years ago when petroleum prices spiked and anti-air pollution efforts were ramping up. Refineries initially were given a tax credit to produce the grain alcohol and Congress later required oil companies to blend it in their gasoline.

In Iowa, the nation's leading corn producer, about 45 percent of its crop went into ethanol last year. The state has 42 ethanol plants that produced 3.8 billion gallons.

Branstad said cutting the federal requirement would lower corn prices that have already fallen this year because of an unexpectedly robust harvest.

"They're making a huge mistake," Branstad said at the governors conference this week. "And they're going to drive corn below the cost of production."

Democratic U.S. Rep. Dave Loebsack of Iowa City said a loss of federal support would be "a devastating decision for Iowa's farmers, rural communities and economy."

If the federal mandate was reduced or ended, ethanol producers would rely on the handful of states with their own ethanol fuel standards, and on exports which accounted for about 1 billion gallons last year. The proposed change would likely hurt smaller producers more than powerhouses like Archer Daniels Midland and Cargill.

Ethanol supporters insist the federal requirement is still justified even though the U.S. reliance on foreign oil is dropping, and for the first time in two decades, the U.S. produces more crude oil than it imports.

"We use 10-percent of ethanol in the gasoline in our cars. Do you want to import another 10 percent of oil" Grassley told the AP. "No, you don't."

While oil companies are pushing to escape the ethanol mandate, environmental groups are growing concerned about the impact of increased corn production. Farmers planted 15 million more acres of corn last year than a decade ago, according to an Associated Press analysis, taking land out of conservation use and applying more pesticides and herbicides.

Years ago, "there was a strong argument for encouraging the use of available resources like corn, for ethanol. Those days have passed," Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont said in a statement.

In a sign of ethanol's eroding political support, the winner of the 2012 Iowa caucuses, Rick Santorum, called during his campaign for phasing out the federal mandate.

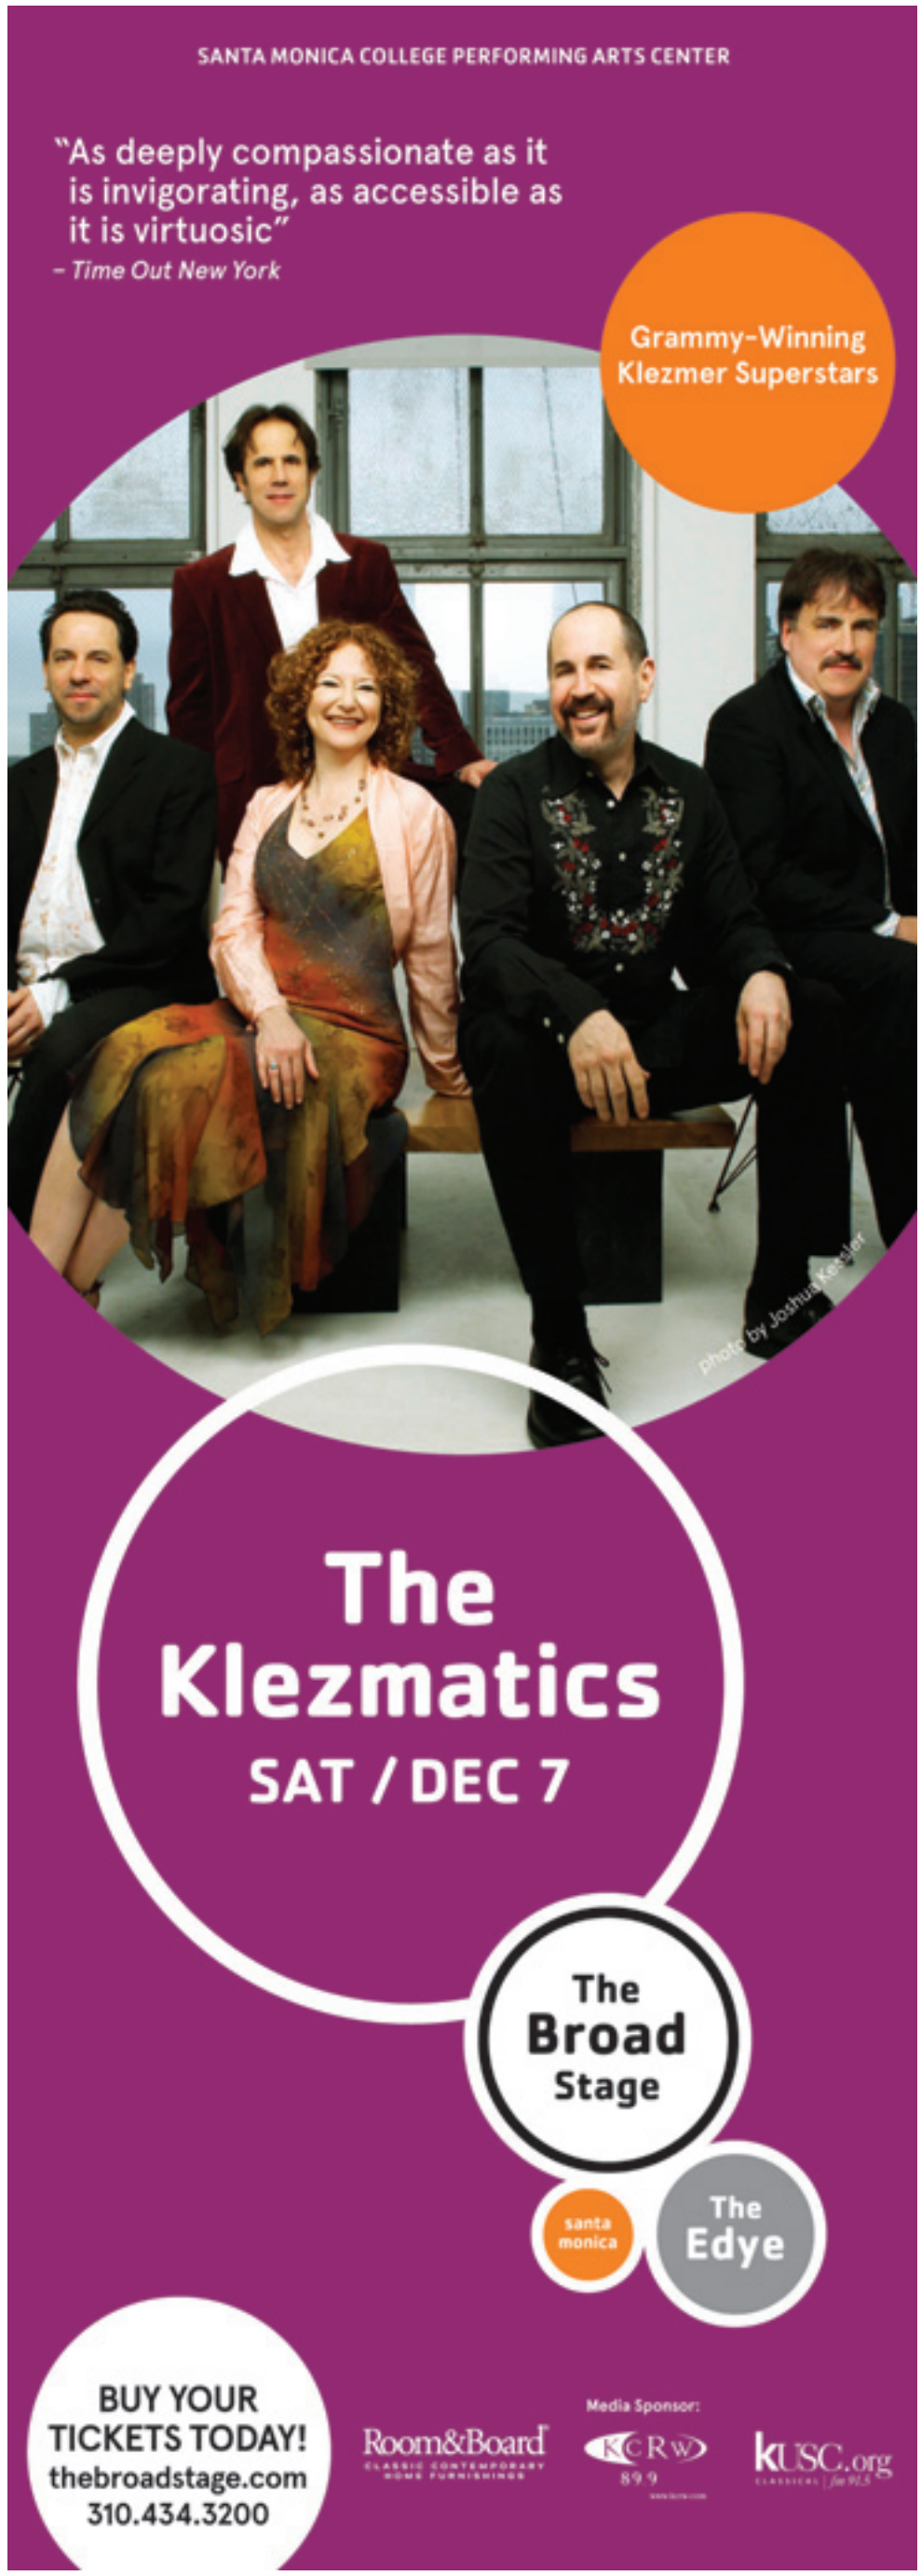

The prospects for support in the possible 2016 presidential field are uncertain. About a week ago, Branstad brought up ethanol support privately with 2012 vice presidential nominee Paul Ryan before the Wisconsin representative headlined a Branstad campaign fundraiser.

Ryan declined to comment publicly on the EPA's ethanol proposal. A spokeswoman for Christie also declined to comment on Christie's position. Among possible Democratic candidates, neither Clinton nor Vice President Joe Biden has commented publicly about the issue recently.

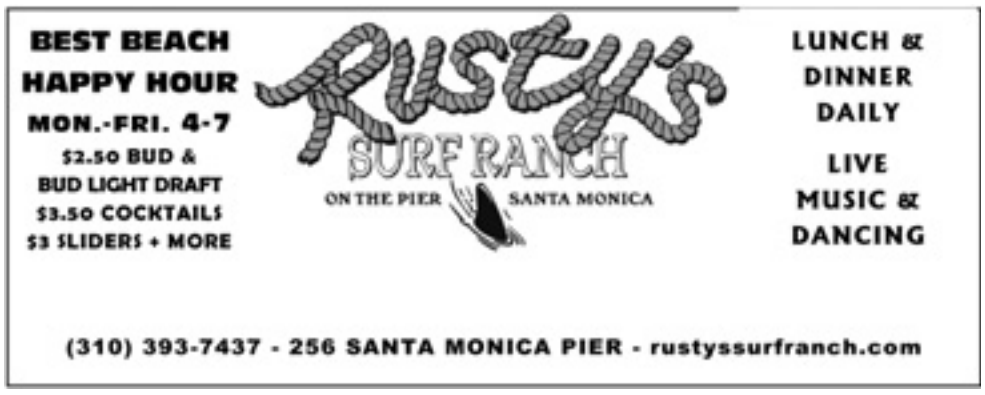

Some question whether the economic impact on Iowa would be as dire as its political leaders suggest.

Only about 2,000 people work full time in the industry nationwide, said Iowa State University economist Dave Swenson, adding, "Worldwide demand for corn is still very strong."

rary freeze of its nuclear program.

In addition to a half-dozen fundraisers, Obama intended to use the trip to keep the heat on Congress to pass an overhaul of immigration laws. He planned to address that issue during a stop Monday at a Chinese recreation center in San Francisco, and to promote his economic agenda Tuesday at the DreamWorks Animation studio in Glendale, Calif.

In recent days White House officials have tried to draw attention back to the economy to avoid getting bogged down by the botched launch of the health care enrollment.

Lately, Obama has devoted time to raising money for the party, helping the Democratic National Committee reduce a massive 2012 debt and build up cash for House and Senate Democratic Committees.

The White House has been especially attentive to Senate Democrats to ensure that the party retains its majority in the chamber. The House is controlled by the Republican Party.

In Seattle, he attended two events Sunday, one at the home of Tom Campion, co-founder of the clothing chain Zumiez, and the other at the house of a former Microsoft executive, Jon Shirley.

screenings among its weekend total.

The original "Hunger Games" earned $152.5 million in its opening weekend in March 2012, but didn't debut until midnight screenings Thursday.

"It's really become a phenomenon," said David Spitz, head of distribution for Lionsgate. "We've established now a better opening than the first, and now we're entering into the Thanksgiving and Christmas period, which is very, very lucrative."

After two weeks atop the box office, "Thor: The Dark World," released by Disney, slid to second with $14.1 million. After an impressive opening, the romantic comedy "The Best Man Holiday" added $12.5 million for a two-week total of $50.4 million.

Overseas, the critical and box-office hit "Gravity" from Warner Bros. opened big in China. The Sandra Bullock space adventure added $46.6 million to its international total in its eighth week of release. Its cumulative haul is up to $577 million.

Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Rentrak. Where available, latest international numbers for Friday through Sunday are also included. Final domestic figures will be released Monday.

guest lecture and was overwhelmed by the inmates' desire to learn.

"I figured, 'We work with young entrepreneurs every day. Why not here?'" he recalled.

After discussions with prison administrators, Parenti and Redlitz decided to add a prison-based firm to their portfolio, naming it for the precarious journey from prison to home: The Last Mile.

Now, during twice-a-week evening lessons, students — many locked up before smartphones or Google— practice tweeting, brainstorm new companies and discuss business books assigned as homework. Banned from the Internet to prevent networking with other criminals, they take notes on keyboard-like word processors or with pencil on paper.

The program is still "bootstrapping," as its organizers say, with just 12 graduates in its first two years and now a few dozen in classes in San Quentin and Twin Towers. But the five graduates released so far are working in the tech sector.

They are guaranteed paid internships if they can finish the rigorous training program, which requires prerequisite courses, proven social skills and a lifetime oath to lead by positive example.

In one recent class, while thousands of inmates exercised or played chess in San Quentin's prison yard, students worked their way through a business model, pitching different technology concepts.

"What are the distribution channels?" challenged seminar leader Andrew Kaplan, a product marketing manager at LinkedIn. "What platforms or networks do we need to think about? Who are we trying to engage?"

Tommy Winfrey, 35, who is serving 25 years to life for second-degree murder and hopes to be paroled in 2018, adjusted his eyeglasses and raised a tattooed arm. "I think an important part of our brand is going to be to give our customer a voice," he said, suggesting they share ideas on social media.

On a Silicon Valley-style Demo Day, the startup students present ideas to investors, a demonstration that convinced former California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation director Matthew Cate he made the right decision to approve the training course.

"This program will go a long way to not only providing these guys with jobs, but it is my hope that they hire people like them who have changed their lives and are now ready to contribute to society, pay taxes, follow the law, support their families. All those things contribute to the economy," he told participants after watching the 2012 Demo Day.

Inmates also learn the essential startup skills of blogging, in part by answering questions on Quora, a website that allows users and experts to communicate, by having volunteers input their entries.

Without real businesses to discuss, thousands of readers ask the inmates questions such as: "What does it feel like to murder someone?"

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Expo Light Rail Line

Note the following activities:
1. Intersection closures: 11th Street will be closed to northbound and southbound traffic at Colorado Avenue, Dec. 9-15 from 9 a.m. to 6 a.m. Work will continue 24 hours per day for seven days to install train tracks. Relocation of traffic signals will occur at the intersections of Colorado and Sixth Street on Monday, and at Colorado and Seventh Street on Nov. 27. Signals will be out of service from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., however traffic service officers will be in place at these intersections to guide and direct traffic.
2. Colorado Avenue between Fifth and 17th streets: Expect westbound and eastbound lane closures during daytime hours. Expect reduction of travel lanes during the non-peak daytime hour at Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets at Colorado. Alleys on the north side of Colorado between Sixth and 17th streets will have limited access. Sidewalk and lane closures on north or south side of Colorado between Fourth and 10th streets.
3. Olympic Boulevard between 20th Street and Centinela Avenue: Eastbound and westbound lane closures during non-peak hours of 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.
4. Colorado between Fourth and Ninth streets: Night work will take place between the hours of 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. for potholing activities. Expect reduction of travel lane and possible intermittent lane closures.
Additional information is available at: buildexpo.org or by calling (213) 922-EXPO (3976).

Annual Street Resurfacing

The contractor will be striping Santa Monica Boulevard between Lincoln Boulevard and 20th Street. Expect some delays but there'll be one lane of traffic open in each direction. For more information, contact Hany Demitri, City of Santa Monica Civil Engineering Division at (310) 458-8721 ext. 5385.

Santa Monica Pier Renewal

Construction will continue and is estimated to conclude in spring 2014. The pier and its businesses will remain open during construction. Contact Curtis Castle, civil engineer, at (310) 458-8721 if you have any questions.

Advanced Traffic Management Systems

The contractor will be making concrete sidewalk restoration and clean-up along Ocean Park Boulevard, Neilson Way and Main Street. There should be no impact to traffic. For more information, contact Hany Demitri, City of Santa Monica Civil Engineering Division at (310) 458-8721 ext. 5385.

Parking Structure No. 6

There will be periodic sidewalk closures on Second Street between Broadway and Santa Monica Boulevard through Nov. 27. There will be a continuous northbound lane closure through Nov. 30 on Second Street between Broadway and Santa Monica Boulevard. One northbound lane on Second Street between Broadway and Santa Monica Boulevard will remain open at all times. Temporary traffic control signs and barricades will be deployed to guide vehicular and pedestrian traffic in and around the work areas. Materials delivery work will take place in the alley behind the parking structure (Second Court), with partial alley closures taking place through Nov. 27. All work will take place Monday through Wednesday, 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Wastewater Main Improvements Citywide

The contractor will continue with the installation of a new sewer main on 32nd Street, from Pico to Ocean Park boulevards. This work will take place between the hours of 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. 32nd Street will be closed to through traffic. Use alternate route whenever possible. For more information, contact Carlos Rosales, Construction Manager, City of Santa Monica, at (310) 458-8721.

The Village

There will be a lane closure on the northbound side of the 1700 block of Ocean Avenue, extending south to Vicente Terrace. The parking lane and the number two lane will be closed for sidewalk, curb and gutter rework from Vicente to Pacific terraces. One lane will be available in the northbound direction at all times. The southbound lanes will not be impacted. The city will also be closing down the sidewalk and parking lane on the west side of Main Street and Olympic Drive for sidewalk, curb and gutter rework. For any questions or concerns, contact Gary Vitale, superintendent, Pankow Builders, at (510) 772-8836.

High Place East

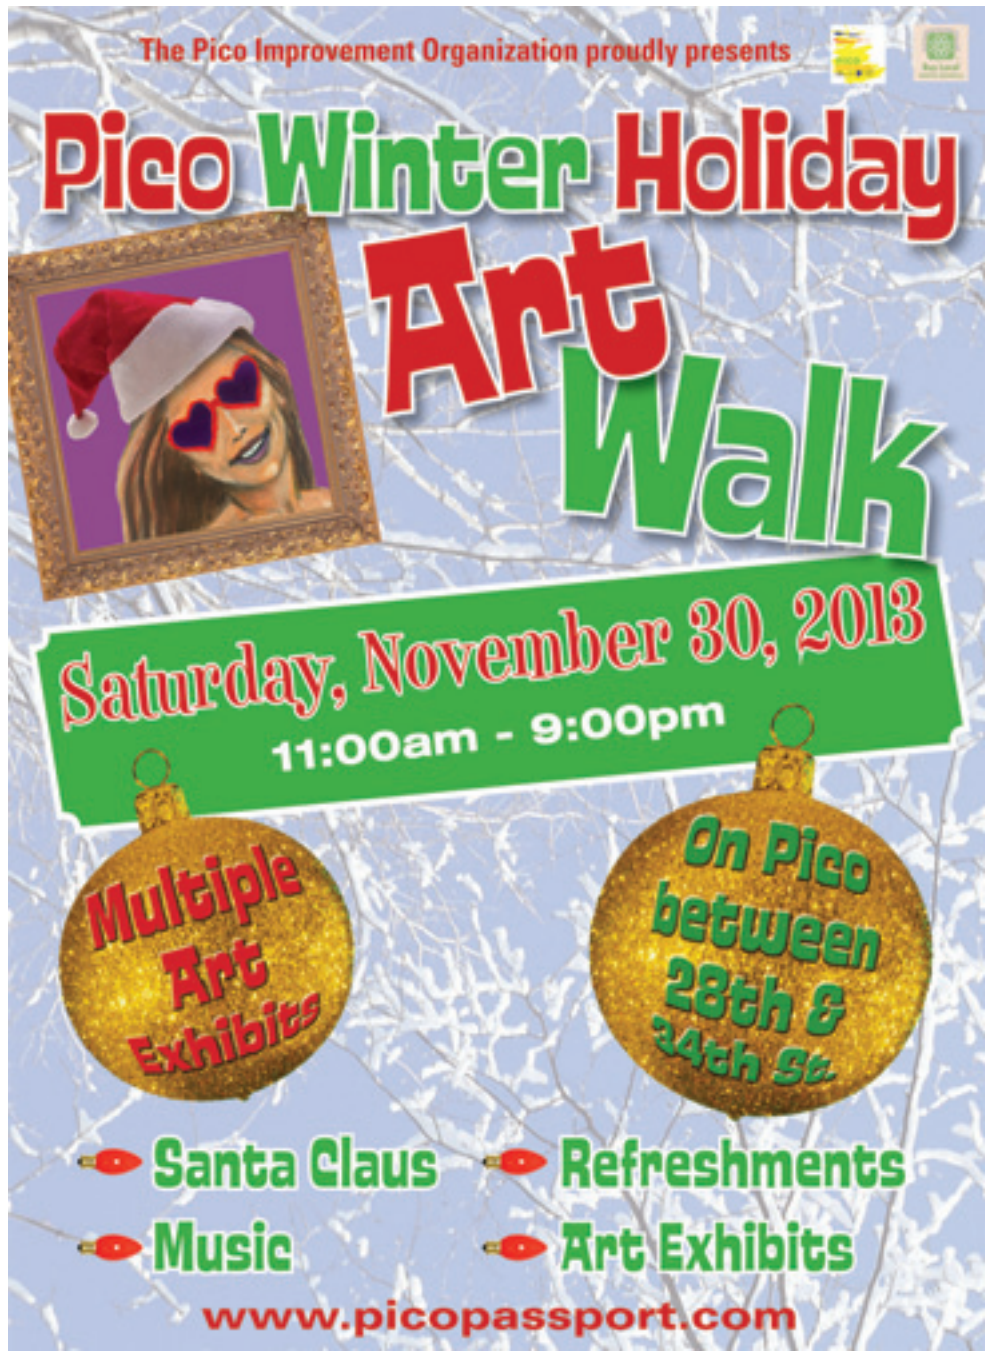

There will be delivery trucks throughout the week on Cloverfield Boulevard between Interstate-10 and Virginia Avenue, and on Virginia Avenue between Cloverfield and 27th Street for the development of 45 affordable housing units. Use alternate routes whenever possible. For more information on this project, contact Donnie Krueger (949) 254-8153.

sultant. Earlier this year they approved temporary upgrades to the bridge's sidewalks to keep cars and pedestrians separate.

Tomorrow, city officials will present four designs, two of which they are recommending for environmental study.

The first widens the bridge by 70 percent to 58 feet, allowing cars and pedestrians more room.

The second recommended design replaces the current bridge with a similar bridge meant only for bikes, pedestrians, and limited delivery or emergency vehicles. It includes a second bridge at Moss Avenue for vehicles. The public and the Pier Control Board favored this design at previous presentations, city officials said. This design would cause traffic impacts at Moss Avenue, but improves flow at the Ocean Avenue and Colorado Boulevard intersection.

City officials are also asking for an additional $400,000 to complete the environmental review, bringing the total spent on the design process to $1.25 million. Once the project is complete, city officials said, the Federal Highway Administration will reimburse that cash.

The final design is expected to be complete by fall of 2016. Construction will take 12 to 18 months.

FOOD TRUCKS

Council could approve the inclusion of permits for off-street food trucks on Main Street in the Zoning Ordinance.

In 2010, the California Heritage Museum began hosting City Hall-approved food truck events on Tuesday nights. The weekly event, which draws 400 to 500 people, raises funds for the museum.

Last year, council approved a survey of anyone impacted by the food truck events.

Almost 60 percent of food truck patrons surveyed were Santa Monica residents.

About half the businesses on Main Street reported a change in sales and 28 percent of restaurants reported a decrease in sales. About 44 percent of restaurants felt that the food trucks were in direct competition with them.

City officials noted that taxable sales on Main Street have increased 16 percent in the time since the food trucks were introduced. The findings, they said, suggest that the food truck events have no significant negative impact on Main Street businesses.

Therefore, planning officials are recommending that council allow the authorization of three-year permits to food truck vendues on Main Street.

Food trucks would be allowed to operate one night a week, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m.

TAX COLLECTION

Council will vote on an ordinance that would allow the Finance Director to publish the names of companies with outstanding taxes, and to waive taxes and debts deemed uncollectable.

Three circumstances allow a debt to be deemed uncollectable: The debtor must be dead or impossible to locate; the business must be dissolved or liquidated; the cost of further collection efforts must exceed the recovery amount.

A company can be added to the public delinquency list if they have outstanding debts of $5,000 or more.

If that list were published today, it would name 20 businesses with total debts to City Hall of more than $310,000.

kids," Clark said. "These guys fought this season."

Samohi ends the season 7-5 overall with a 4-1 league record.

Lompoc improved to 11-1 and will travel to No. 2 seed Chaminade on Friday in the semifinals. St. Francis hosts No. 1 seed Serra on Friday in the other half of the bracket.

Despite the lopsided final score on Friday, Samohi was very much in the game early on.

Lompoc struck first with an 11-yard touchdown run by Richard Foster, but Samohi's Ryan Chamberlain answered with a 90-yard kick off return on the next possession that gave the Vikings hope on the road.

That hope was fleeting as Lompoc quarterback Gage Buckley scampered in with a 6-yard keeper on the ensuing possession that gave the Braves all they would need to advance to the next round.

Samohi ended the second quarter on a high note as kicker Denicio Gonzalez-Drake booted a 38-yard field goal with 14 seconds left in the frame that made the score 28-10 in favor of Lompoc.

Samohi received the kickoff to begin the second half, but starting quarterback Kevin Person fumbled the ball, ending what could have been a strong start to the third quarter and ultimately dooming the Vikings.

"That was really big for us," Lompoc head coach Andrew Jones said. "That really took away their momentum."

Considering that Friday was the third trip to the second round of the playoffs in a row for Samohi, Clark believes that his team is primed for big things for years to come.

"We're getting close to competing with the big guys," Clark said. "I would love to be more competitive with the likes of Lompoc, Serra and Chaminade."

Clark and Co. will spend the off-season searching for play makers to replace guys like running backs Will Taylor and Kwame Duggins, but a young defensive line gives Clark reason to think that next season will see more of the same success that Samohi has enjoyed the past few seasons.

"I'm sure some of our young guys will step up next year," Clark said. "We just have to reload and keep coming."

LEGEND

DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria -- enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms -- that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

NO NEED TO BE SERIOUS TODAY, TAURUS

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You'll act as if it is your destiny to dive head first into a project in an attempt to move it forward. Try not to get frustrated at others' lack of vision or creativity. Tonight: Do not bring your stress home with you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Your imagination and drive is limitless, or so it seems. You might try to entice others to think like you. Forget it. Your uniqueness makes you special and also more in demand. A partner will want to have a serious talk with you. Tonight: No need to be serious; it is only Monday.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★ You can't seem to get energized about anything at the moment. If you can take the day off and relax, that might be best. Don't take that attitude into work or even into a friendly lunch with a pal. Tonight: Go with the flow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Be clear and direct. If confusion ensues, you'll know that you have done your best! Also make it a point to confirm meeting times and places. Tread lightly with a child or new friend. This person definitely seems to be in an off mood. Tonight: Catch up on calls and emails.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You could give some troublesome issues power if you focus too much on them. Be as clear as possible. Bone up on your listening skills, and repeat anything that seems off. Tonight: Free yourself from a difficult situation by dealing directly with the other parties involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A sudden surge greets you in the morning with your first cup of joe. You might feel as if others are speaking pig latin, as they don't seem to understand what you're saying. You might want to stop and decipher what could be an important message. Tonight: A long-overdue chat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★ No one needs to tell you that it's Monday -- you know by the way you feel. Stay out of the problems around you; instead, focus on accomplishing one task after another. It might be necessary to have a long-overdue conversation about your finances. Tonight: Play it low-key.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You come off as very serious to those around you. Approach each moment as new and maintain a methodical approach. If a situation seems ludicrous, know that it probably is. Tonight: Call a friend and catch up on his or her news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Your ability to get through a hassle elevates your value to a higher-up. Once more, this person might dump a problem on you. Confusion could surround a personal issue as well. Tonight: Attend to personal matters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Keep reaching out for a new solution. It is out there for you to find; you just haven't hit upon it yet. Detach and refuse to feel pushed. Back away from a pressure-cooker atmosphere, and much more will reveal itself. Tonight: Find your friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ A loved one might mean well, but you will have a difficult time believing that when you see what is going on behind the scenes. Take a step back and chill out. Imagine what it would be like to walk in the other party's shoes. You will understand. Tonight: With a favorite person.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Your intentions are good, but your actions just might create more of a fog around an already unclear situation. Make a point to detach, and you'll gain a new perspective. The end result will be better if you do. Tonight: Get through some paperwork you've been avoiding.

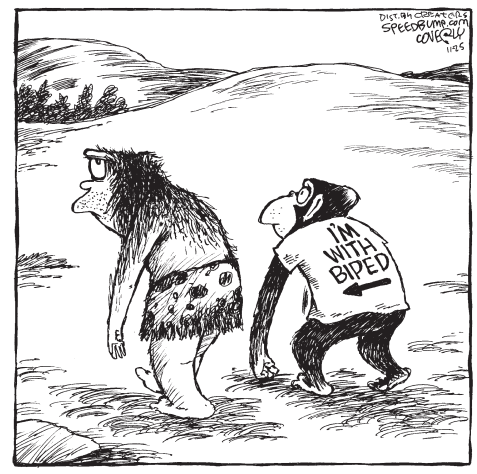

Monday, November 25, 2013

This year you focus on a long-term goal. Your friends also will play a significant role in your year. Recognize that you might be unduly serious at times. If you are single, you are strikingly visible to the person who might be your next sweetie. This person eventually will let you know how he or she feels. If you are attached, the two of you will enjoy being out and about as a couple, especially if you're involved in a mutual commitment or cause. VIRGO fusses over details to such an extent that he or she loses sight of the big picture.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from ★ (easiest) to ★★★★★ (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ After its launch was delayed for a month by the Madison, Wis., city attorney, the Snuggle House was cleared and scheduled to open on Nov. 15 to provide in-bed, pajama-clad "intimate, non-sexual touch(ing)" for $60 an hour. "So many people," said assistant manager Emily Noon, "don't have a significant other in their lives" and "just need to be held" (including, she said, the elderly and hospice patients, who are part of the target clientele). The city's delay was, a spokesman said, to assure that Snuggle House had protocols for dealing with "risky" situations in which a customer refuses to take "no sex" for an answer. (Snuggle House has prominent surveillance cameras and panic buttons for the staff.)

■ Among the underreported catastrophes caused by Hurricane Sandy in the New York-New Jersey area in October 2012 was the tragedy that befell the 27,000-case WineCare storage cellar in Manhattan. Though it claimed to have lost only about 5 percent of its inventory when waters from the Hudson River flooded its supposedly secure warehouse, that number apparently did not count the many preserved bottles whose labels washed off, dramatically reducing the value of customers' toweringly priced grape and forcing WineCare into bankruptcy court, according to a New York Times report in July.

TODAY IN HISTORY

1963 - President John F. Kennedy is buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

1970 - In Japan, author Yukio Mishima and one compatriot commit ritualistic seppuku after an unsuccessful coup attempt.

WEEKLY JOKE
PRO FOOTBALL TURKEY
THE PRO FOOTBALL TEAM HAD JUST FINISHED THEIR DAILY PRACTICE SESSION WHEN A LARGE TURKEY CAME STRUTTING ONTO THE FIELD. WHILE THE PLAYERS GAZED IN AMAZEMENT, THE TURKEY WALKED UP TO THE HEAD COACH AND DEMANDED A TRYOUT.
EVERYONE STARED IN SILENCE AS THE TURKEY CAUGHT PASS AFTER PASS AND RAN RIGHT THROUGH THE DEFENSIVE LINE. WHEN THE TURKEY RETURNED TO THE SIDELINES, THE COACH SHOUTED, "YOU'RE TERRIFIC!!! SIGN UP FOR THE SEASON, AND I'LL SEE TO IT THAT YOU GET A HUGE BONUS."
"FORGET THE BONUS," THE TURKEY SAID, "ALL I WANT TO KNOW IS, DOES THE SEASON GO PAST THANKSGIVING DAY?"

Negligence and Auto Accidents

To have a valid car accident claim, you must first determine the negligent party or parties that caused the car crash. You may suspect that another driver, pedestrian, motorcyclist etc. acted carelessly, but cannot identify what traffic laws they violated. A skilled car accident attorney, however, can examine police reports and state traffic laws and speak to witnesses to determine who was at fault for your motor vehicle accident.

Tip: Act Quickly

If you seek legal advice, it's important that you do so as soon as possible after an accident. You're more likely to get the compensation due to you if your attorney is able to act quickly. Our state attorney's are available 24/7 to discuss your claim.
