NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

A well-to-do couple (the husband owns a surveying company) were convicted in Manchester (England) Crown Court in October of creating an elaborate scheme to avoid two camera-detected speeding tickets and were fined the equivalent of about $20,000, almost 200 times the cost of the tickets. Stewart and Cathryn Bromley had offered an alibi, explaining that the driver of their car was a (fictitious) Bulgarian friend, and Cathryn made up a postcard "from" the man "to" the Bromleys that incriminated him, and then actually traveled 1,400 miles to Bulgaria to mail it with an authentic postmark.

Council: Code enforcement lax

BY RYAN HYATT

Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL — Elected officials hope laws intended to improve the quality of life for residents will soon be better enforced.

The Santa Monica City Council

last Tuesday unanimously approved the re-evaluation of its code enforcement program. The decision comes after the council reviewed a staff report that indicates City Hall's code enforcement efforts for the past three and a half years have mostly focused on responding to complaints.

In addition to addressing complaints, the council asked staff at the Nov. 22 meeting to look at ways it can more aggressively enforce some laws, specifically those pertaining to the seismic retrofitting of buildings, noise pollution and, if possible, mold. These are concerns that elected officials believe should be higher priorities than they have been in recent years.

Currently, City Hall is budgeted to staff 10 code enforcement positions. Of those, eight have been filled, two of them as recently as September, said Tim McCormick, the city's building official.

Approximately 80 percent of code enforcement staff are spending most of their time responding to complaints, according to the staff report. These include issues related to construction work, sub-standard housing and zoning, the staff report said.

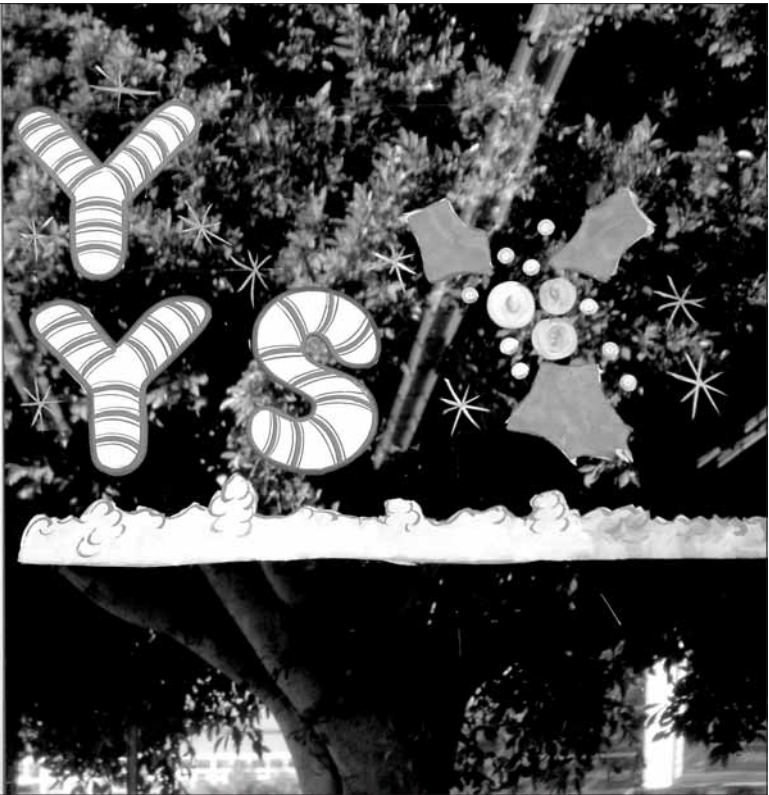

City Manager Susan McCarthy explained to the council that staff has focused on responding to complaints for the past three and a half years mainly because residents previously felt their complaints weren't being addressed.

As a result of this focus, proactive areas of enforcement have been largely neglected, McCarthy said. With a full staff, at least 65 percent of efforts would still be oriented toward complaints, officials said.

"This is not an excuse, but it may be time to take a new look (at our priorities)," McCarthy said. "We're in a policy arena here, so we need your guidance."

However, some councilmembers said that staff had already been directed on the appropriate

Sylvia Anderle: Enabling education

BY RYAN HYATT

Daily Press Staff Writer

Local librarian Sylvia Anderle was recognized recently for her dedication to leading youngsters to brighter educational futures.

Noted for her commitment to her profession, her peers, and the children and families of the Santa Monica community, Anderle, a children's and Latino outreach librarian at the Fairview branch of the Santa Monica Public Library, received the 2005 New York Times Librarian Award.

Anderle, 61, has worked for 16 years at the Fairview branch at 2101 Ocean Park Blvd., where she is charged with familiarizing Spanish-speaking students and families with library resources.

"When I was hired, I wanted to create parallel services for Spanish speakers," Anderle said. "So I started out in my position having story times for children that were both in Spanish and English."

Anderle's purview has since expanded. Now she not only organizes and presents the daily and evening story times for children, but her job also entails a wide range of advocacy to help youth — many of whom come from struggling families — feel more comfortable with the educational resources the library has available.

"I see that families come here and feel safe and learn that this is a good place to bring your child," Anderle said. "Most of them find

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS The stars show the kind of day you'll Have:
★★★★-Dynamic ★★★★★-Positive ★★★★★-Average ★★-So-so ★-Difficult

 ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ You might get a startling insight that is a bit uncomfortable. One-on-one relating draws a new perspective. Read between the lines. Get more information. Be willing to seek out new insights. Tonight: Discuss a problem.

 TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ A friend could go turncoat on you when you least expect it. What is going on here? You might have revealed more information than this person can handle. Be willing to let go. Another's judgment might not be complete. Tonight: Say less; listen more.

 GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You need to pace yourself and work less from nervous energy. Everyone gets uptight sometimes. Why should you be any different? What happens could startle you, but at the same time, it might be quite exciting. Tonight: Easy does it.

 CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Though you have a creative alternative, others might not be able to go along with it for lack of understanding or openness. This situation provides a challenge. Think of better, more effective ways of communicating. Tonight: Work on getting your message across.

 LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Something a child or loved one shares with you could jolt you. Sometimes getting too comfortable and sharing a lot could cause a problem. You are coming from an anchored point of view, even if you feel a bit shaky. Tonight: Happy at home.

 VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You could be juggling far too much, and what happens or the situation that develops will demonstrate this issue. Keep the lines of communication open. You might want to understand more of where someone is coming from. Tonight: Make inquiries discreetly.

 LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ A financial matter might not turn out the way you would like it to. A misunderstanding could be at the base of the problem. You also might not be as adaptable as you need to be. Consider being more flexible. Tonight: Be honest about your vulnerabilities.

 SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Your personality helps settle a problem that could develop out of the blue. Avoid risking or trying anything new; events might not happen the way you would like them to. Play it conservatively. Tonight: As you wish.

 SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Much might be revealed right now. What you are saying and doing might not conform to the authentic you. A shake-up could occur on a familial or security level. Tonight: Be willing to admit when you are wrong.

 CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Aim for what you want, but be ready to focus your energy in another direction if need be. Listen carefully to a friend who tries very hard to pitch in. As a team, you'll be unbeatable. Choose your words with care. Tonight: Let off some steam.

 AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Someone you counted on could be very depressing. Visualize more of what you want. Use care with spending; though, should you feel lucky, buy a lottery ticket. Listen to news that heads in your direction. Tonight: Up late.

 PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You have a way of jolting authority figures. What is going on might be a direct reflection of what happens with you, your attitude or just who you are. Detach from the immediate scene and be willing to look at yourself. Tonight: Do needed research.

L.A. Clippers serve up Thanksgiving dinner

By Daily Press staff

Los Angeles' "other" professional basketball team recently helped bring Thanksgiving to those in need.

On Monday, Nov. 21, the Los Angeles Clippers teamed up with Ralph's and Food-4-Less to host their Thanksgiving "Teamwork at the Table" event at St. Joseph Center's Bread and Roses Café and 400 West Pico Blvd.

Starting the day at Bread and Roses Café, members of the Clippers' front office served homeless guests plates overflowing with turkey and fixings. On hand was Hunter Howard, 9-year-old son of Christian Howard, the Clippers' vice president of marketing and broadcasting. Hunter has been a committed volunteer since age 4.

In the afternoon, head coach Mike Dunleavy and his assistant coaching staff, along with Clippers players Elton Brand, Anthony Goldwire, Walter McCarty, Boniface Ndong, James Singleton and Chris Wilcox, distributed Thanksgiving turkeys, food baskets, clothing and books to 300 families at St. Joseph Center's main service site.

Since 1993, the Clippers have brought "Teamwork at the Table" to St. Joseph Center. Last year, Ralph's and Food-4-Less joined the partnership and have since donated more than 600 turkeys. This year's event was a special way for St. Joseph Center's homeless and low-income clients to prepare for the holidays.

In its 29th year, St. Joseph Center is a nonprofit social service agency that helps more than 7,000 homeless and working poor individuals annually. The center provides clients with basic necessities such as food and long-term services such as job training, childcare and adult education so that they can work toward becoming productive, stable and self-supporting members of the community.

City Hall is currently embroiled in a bitter legal battle with the attorneys who successfully represented Santa Monica in its litigation against 18 oil companies for allowing MTBE to leak into the city's water supply. At issue is how much City Hall owes its lawyers for their services. And although city officials are looking to minimize the percentage of the more than $120 million settlement that is shared with those attorneys, they are racking up millions in legal fees in the process.

So this week, Q-Line wants to know, "Do you approve of the way in which City Hall is handling its legal dispute with its former attorneys? Why or why not?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Where are the council's priorities?

Editor:

I am writing because I would like to know if the City Council has their priorities where they should be. If Santa Monica has all this money for restoring buildings such as the library and the Santa Monica Pier, then why can't they build more affordable housing or shelters? I saw a picture on the front page where they evicted people out of their homes so the owner could build condos. Isn't that kind of cold-hearted to tell people to get out so they can build something for people with more money? It seems that the money that Santa Monica gets is not for the real problem at hand (homelessness) but rather to make this city more attractive. Some homeless people out here just can't afford the high rent. Even poor or even mentally ill people have a right to live in a nice atmosphere instead of looking out the window of a cheap downtown apartment and see hookers, drug dealers and gangs. Also, it is more humane to help the homeless instead of giving them tickets, which turn into a fine or incarceration. How is that helping? I think Santa Monica would be a much nicer place if it catered to both the rich and the poor. Then the City Council could say that they are doing some to make Santa Monica a place to visit or live.

Santa Monica's loss is San Diego's gain

Editor:

Thank you for hiring away our San Diego City Manager, Lamont Ewell. He was scheduled to leave our city in disgrace, but now he's departing even quicker — providing welcome financial relief for our beleaguered city's finances.

Ewell was involved in the hush-hush labor strategy sessions that were partly responsible for the multibillion-dollar underfunding of San Diego's opulent city employee pension plan — activity that is now under intense FBI investigation.

When an efficiency think-tank came forward with over 200 suggestions on how the city could increase efficiency and/or reduce operating costs, Ewell airily dismissed the definitive report, assuring the gullible Mayor and City Council that he had everything under control. Some control.

Under Ewell, we've had to close municipal swimming pools, reduce library hours and watch helplessly as potholes evolved into sinkholes because the city couldn't fund the needed repairs. More drastic cuts in city services are expected this year.

Meanwhile rank-and-file city employees with 30 years service are retiring at age 55 with pensions exceeding 130 percent of their highest salary — a gravy train that could put San Diego into bankruptcy within the year.

If there's one thing Ewell is good at, it's feathering his own nest. He worked only five years for San Diego. Ewell then bought five more years of "pension credits," giving him the bare 10-year minimum for full pension vesting. He will now retire this year with a city pension reported to be about $58,000 a year, plus annual cost-of-living increases — and probably a gold-plated lifetime health care package to boot.

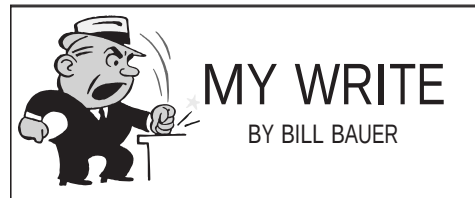

We find it ironic that Santa Monica, with a population about one-fifteenth the size of San Diego, is going to pay Ewell $245,000 a year — over $20,000 more than he made as San Diego's City Manager. I'm sure that with a little tougher city bargaining, you could have gotten him to screw up your city finances for half that cost.

We San Diegans may not have heard the last of Lamont Ewell. There are ongoing federal investigations of our city bureaucrats and politicians who allegedly cut illegal pension deals behind closed doors with labor union bosses. Mr. Ewell may find that he is "invited" by government prosecutors to return to our fair city to defend his role in these matters.

Again, thank you, Santa Monica, and good luck. Your loss is our gain.

Picking over the bones of old political turkeys

MY WRITE

BY BILL BAUER

Now that Thanksgiving is over, it's time to give that old turkey carcass the heave-ho. But before we do, let's pick over the bones.

A group of tenants eager to preserve their homes from demolition has asked the Landmarks Commission to look into whether their 1950s era, 28-unit apartment building at 134 San Vicente Blvd. (known as the Teriton Apartments) is a landmark.

The shadowy, Los Angeles based, corporate owner of the Teriton Apartments recently pulled a permit to demolish the "deteriorating" Teriton. Tenants want to preserve it "as one of the finest buildings of the period that's still intact." The demolition is on hold while commissioners determine whether the Teriton is worthy of protection.

I'm sure there are those who would like to have City Hall buy it and turn it over to Community Corporation of Santa Monica, the city-affiliated affordable housing provider, for conversion to low-income apartments. That would save the building and provide new and much needed "north of Montana" affordable housing.

City Hall's sole response is to build new affordable housing that neither protects existing residents or provides housing for those displaced. And, where's that great protector of us renters — Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights? They're full of the bird (or, maybe it's bull) asleep on the couch and doing zip, nada and zero about it.

The Teriton is just one on a growing list of apartment buildings being purchased by mostly out-of-town speculators. They buy up property, evict tenants and rebuild at market rate. In the process, long-time Santa Monicans are being tossed out of their community in increasing numbers.

Carole Orlin hit the turkey on the head in her column (SMDP, Nov. 21, page 5) Common Scents. She announced nominations for her "Common Scents Turkey of the Year Award." Topping her list was our very own Santa Monica City Council "who have done absolutely nothing about the vagrants who flock to our city ..." She also chided them for lack of action on traffic problems and then said, "They are a self-serving committee that seems to exist to meet the needs of special interest groups." You go, girl.

I have one suggestion that should propel this nominee into the pantheon of truly deserving Turkeys of the Year. It's worse than doing nothing about vagrants, Carole, they encourage them. By allowing groups to hand out food in public parks, spending of millions of dollars annually on ineffective services and approving hard-to-enforce anti-vagrancy laws, they literally roll out the red carpet. And, the unwieldy traffic is a result of deliberate city policy, too. She did hit the bird's eye with "self serving," though.

The City Council made no decision last Tuesday on an appeal by 18th Street neighbors of a recent Planning Commission approval of an expansion proposal and parking variance for the Unitarian Universalist Community Church at the corner of 18th Street and Arizona Avenue.

They heard from neighbors, church representatives and the public. Because it was after midnight, they put off making a decision and adjourned.

Traffic and lack of on-street parking is a major quality of life issue in the area. Neighbors contend the church is not providing enough parking, therefore expansion should not be permitted unless parking and traffic issues were realistically addressed.

Church officials responded that they can't fix area parking problems by building the 13 parking spaces required by code for the expansion, so why bother? They said they should be able to build, anyway. That's exactly the attitude that has resulted in the traffic and parking nightmares that many neighborhoods now face.

But, by "stuffing" the City Council agenda, once again a large group of citizens were forced to wait for hours before being heard and then they were "continued." Until this is officially decided — which could be weeks from now — the possibility of buttonholing and influence peddling could turn this into a turkey shoot and unfairly and maybe even illegally influence the decision-making process.

Speaking of ruffling feathers, if you think all this is bad, just wait. The city's transportation management folks are working on a scheme that would allow business parking and employee parking permits on residentially permitted streets. Talk about getting "the bird."

course of action but still was failing to operate effectively.

Councilman Richard Bloom said that under the budget that was passed earlier in the year, it was his understanding the code enforcement program would be adequately staffed. Last Tuesday, he said he expected the division would have already made headway on what the council had identified as areas of concern during previous meetings.

"I'm looking for staff to come back with a plan because that's what we've set out in our guidelines," Bloom said.

Calling code enforcement a "broken system" that was "embarrassing," Councilman Bobby Shriver said it was imperative staff try a new approach in dealing with its responsibilities.

"I'd like to see something different, but different in a way that's effective," Shriver said.

Shriver and other councilmembers agreed staff needs to look at realistic ways in which it might better tackle code enforcement issues — especially as they pertain to noise and building safety, which they said have been lacking sufficient progress.

Staff has been asked to analyze options to improve its code enforcement program in coming months, including reasonable expectations of what it may be able to accomplish with various levels of support. Some councilmembers said that these crucial components were lacking in the staff report presented to them last week.

Battle escalates over Christian TV network's bid for a public station

BY GILLIAN FLACCUS

Associated Press Writer

SANTA ANA, Calif. — For more than 30 years, public television station KOCE has been heralded for its lineup of award-winning news programs that remind viewers there's more to Orange County than sun-drenched beaches.

Now, however, the county's only local television station is fighting in court to prevent a televangelist network from taking over its airwaves.

The case, under review by a state appeals court, pits Daystar, one of the nation's largest Christian television networks, against a small but popular public station that remains dedicated to Orange County's 3 million residents in a media market dominated by the high-amplitude news and Hollywood glitz of nearby Los Angeles.

"If we were in the middle of Kansas somewhere, these 3 million people would be their own city with six competing TV stations," said Mel Rogers, KOCE-TV president. "But Los Angeles television doesn't stray down here unless there's some car chase or shooting."

The conflict began in 2003, when the Coast Community College District decided to sell the 33-year-old KOCE-TV to get rid of the $2 million annual carrying cost associated with the station and generate some cash for the district. The district includes three junior colleges in Orange County and serves more than 60,000 full- and part-time students, some of whom study by way of courses aired on KOCE-TV for 40 hours a week.

After a bidding process, the district sold the station to the KOCE Foundation, the station's fundraising arm, for $32 million — an $8 million down payment in cash, with the rest spread over 30 years of payments. That amount later dropped to $28 million.

But Texas-based Daystar sued a short time later, saying the district should have selected its bid of $25 million because the sale was completed under a state law that allows college districts to sell surplus property "for cash" to the highest bidder. The foundation's bid, it argues, included only $8 million in cash.

Daystar increased its bid to $40 million the day after bidding closed.

A lower court ruled in favor of the college district and the foundation, but that ruling was overturned on appeal. On Tuesday, the Santa Ana-based appellate panel reheard arguments the case — a highly unusual move — after agreeing to review its decision following a petition from KOCE, the foundation and the district.

Daystar attorney Richard Lloyd Sherman said the district blatantly violated the state's education code to prevent the station from falling into the hands of a televangelist network and had a "symbiotic, close relationship" with the KOCE Foundation.

"There's been a corrupt auction that took place to give this station to the foundation," Sherman told the three-judge panel of the 4th District Court of Appeal. "Their desire to have a PBS station outweighs everything else. It was never going to fall into the hands of a television evangelist."

Those who favor the PBS station, however, say they had discretion to choose the highest "responsible" bidder and that was the KOCE Foundation. The district had an obligation to Orange County to keep KOCE-TV as a public asset, Ardelle St. George, the foundation's legal counsel, said outside court.

"KOCE offers the only continual coverage of Orange County and it has just been a tremendous asset," she said. "It's really the voice of Orange County."

Huntington Beach-based KOCE's major shows include the news program "Real Orange," which last year won the station's 25th Los Angeles-area Emmy Award, and "Inside OC," which presents interviews and discussions.

KOCE supporters worry that Daystar would strip all local programming and beam in national shows that don't reflect the county's needs. The station would also have to refund $22 million in grants from the national Public Broadcasting Service if it became privately owned, attorneys said.

Daystar, which owns 40 television stations nationwide and claims a potential U.S. audience of 128 million people, would be required under the current terms to keep KOCE-TV's educational courses for school children, teacher training and non-traditional college students.

"Daystar has a history of buying local stations and then they no longer carry local news," said Milford Dahl, an attorney for the college district. "They give it away to the national broadcasters in return for the right to broadcast their national stuff."

The appeals court is expected to rule by January.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

'Know before you go' is a weekly update on construction projects throughout Santa Monica. Here are the government agency-initiated projects for the week of Nov. 28.

Soil remediation project

Excavate, haul-off and dispose of impacted soils to construct a new park. The project is scheduled to begin on Nov. 2 and end on Dec. 2. No vehicular traffic will be impacted by this project. Follow posted caution signs at construction site.

Fourth Street fiber optic communications

Fiber optic cable and conduit installation and splicing termination on Fourth Street, between California Avenue and Olympic Drive. A minimum of one lane in each direction on all streets will be maintained. Follow posted street closure signs.

Pier structural rehabilitation

Structural upgrade of Municipal Pier roadway and miscellaneous repairs on Newcomb Pier. From Nov. 7 to Dec. 16, vehicular access to the pier on Ocean Avenue will not be allowed and deck parking lot will be closed.

Storm drain repair

Install low-flow diversion unit on Ashland, between Main Street and Neilson Way. There will be detour signs posted around the work area.

Montana Avenue storm drain repair

Repair of an existing outlet structure, several drainage facilities and approximately 200 square feet of asphalt near the 1550 beach parking lot. Project will include construction of 24-inch and 63-inch reinforced concrete pipes. Portions of the bike path will be used during construction. Follow posted detour signs.

Marine Street utility undergrounding

Relocation and undergrounding of electric, phone and cable facilities on Marine Street, between Lincoln Boulevard and Prospect Court. Parking limitations will be posted daily and detours may be announced as necessary.

Cingular telecommunications lines

Cingular is installing telecommunication lines on San Vicente Boulevard from 17th to 19th streets; San Vicente Boulevard from Fourth Street to 100 feet west of Fourth Street; and Fourth Street from San Vicente Boulevard to the alley south of San Vicente Boulevard. There will be detours around the work areas.

Civic Center parking structure

Construction continues on a new 900-space Civic Center public parking structure, located on Fourth Street next to the Public Safety Facility. Construction will require the closure of Avenida Mazatlan and the Fourth Street sidewalk. One lane on southbound Fourth Street is subject to closure while work is occurring. There also may be delays entering the Civic Center parking lot from Fourth Street. Use the Main Street entrance.

Electrical vault Installation

Southern California Edison will be installing an underground vault in Santa Monica Boulevard at Seventh Court. There will be detours around work areas. Follow posted signs.

Gas company main replacement

Southern California Gas Company is replacing a 4-inch main on San Vicente Boulevard, between 17th and 16th streets; 17th Street, between San Vicente Boulevard and Georgina Avenue; Georgina Avenue, between 17th and 16th streets; and 16th Street, between San Vicente Boulevard and Georgina Avenue. There will be detours around work areas. Follow posted signs.

Main Library

Construction is near completion on the new main library, located at 601 Santa Monica Blvd. During construction, visit the temporary library at 1324 Fifth St. or any of the branch libraries. Vehicular traffic patterns and parking availability have been restored on Sixth and Seventh streets, between Santa Monica Boulevard and Arizona Avenue. However, temporary no parking will be permitted on the northwest side of Santa Monica Boulevard, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Memorial and Los Amigos Park building replacement

Demolition of existing park buildings and construction of new restrooms, concession stands and storage buildings. Park buildings will be inaccessible during construction. Memorial Park is located at Olympic Boulevard and 14th Street, and Los Amigos Park is located at Fifth Street and Hollister Avenue.

On-Fiber telecommunications lines

On-Fiber is installing telecommunication lines on 26th Street from north of Colorado Boulevard to Pennsylvania Street. There may be detours around the work area along Pennsylvania Street from 26th Street to Stewart Street.

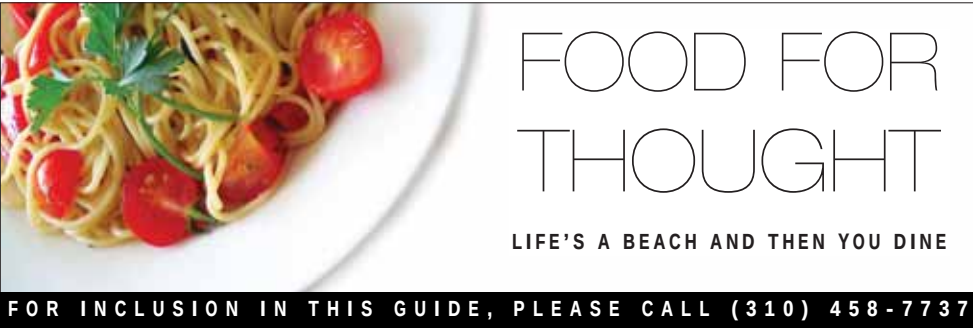

Street and park lighting project

Work continues on upgrading street lighting with new fixtures and circuits. The contractor is installing new poles and lights. Construction for the project occurs in the sidewalk areas and may impact pedestrians, vehicles and park visitors. Parking restrictions also will be in place immediately adjacent to the work areas. The work is currently scheduled to occur on 23rd Street from Santa Monica Boulevard to Arizona Avenue; California Avenue from Second to Seventh streets; and Ocean Avenue from Montana Avenue to California Avenue; as well as Marine, Clover and Douglas parks.

Traffic signal upgrade

The transportation management division is upgrading traffic signals on Ocean Park Boulevard at Cloverfield Boulevard and at 23rd Street. There will be detours around the work area. However, the contractor will maintain at a minimum one lane in each direction on all streets. For information, call (310) 458-4982.

out by word of mouth.”

Recently, Anderle helped push for the library to secure several laptops so young students, many of whom do not have a computer at home, can learn the basic research and typing skills essential in today’s world.

She serves on several local boards that help distribute literature in the schools, and her ongoing commitment to promoting education among youth gained the recognition of her colleagues, who nominated her for the Times’ prestigious award.

This year’s 27 winners were chosen from more than 1,200 nominations from 48 states. A selection committee composed of leading library professionals and a representative from the Times chose the winners.

The Times held a reception in honor of the winners on Nov. 16 in New York, during which Anderle was given $2,500 and a commemorative plaque.

“It was a fantastic event,” Anderle said. “My husband and I used the money to make a trip of it.

“We spent several days enjoying the city.”

Here the Daily Press caught up with Anderle to discuss her recent honor and her ongoing work in Santa Monica.

What does your position entail?

“It’s really my own thing. I’m the only Spanish-speaking librarian at this branch. There’s one at the main branch. She will be doing Spanish story times when the new branch opens. It will be the first time at the main branch.

“I do a toddler reading on Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. and Thursday nights at 7 p.m. It’s not my only task. I help develop the collection and ensure we’re obtaining materials that have the Spanish that is more or less universally spoken for the people who use this collection. The quality of the printing has increased dramatically over the past seven years. It’s spectacular. When I first started, the quality of the paper was just not at that level. There are some wonderful resources now, and it’s friendlier for readers than it used to be.

“I have joined up with Reading is Fundamental, so I visit the schools and do story times.”

Tell me about your background.

“People look at me and wonder how I can be so enthusiastic about my job. I’m 61, so they figure I’ve been doing this a long time. But I like when I went into it, at that stage in life when my kids were grown.

“I have two children. I was fortunate to give them lots of reading. My husband, Donald, is a librarian, like I am, so my children grew up in a home where books are cherished.

“I was born in this country, and my parents are from Cuba. They came here in 1939, and I was the only child. My parents lived the American dream, but they did it at a price. They worked very hard and were assimilated. My father served in World War II, and in the process, they had no tradition of taking your child to story time or getting a library card or anything like that. My parents gave me books, because that is what you do, but it’s not the same kind of environment that you find here.

“I live in Santa Monica in a house four blocks from the branch. We moved here in 1989. I came from New York and finished my master’s degree in library science at UCLA. I did my undergraduate at Syracuse, a background in art history.”

What else do you do in the community?

“Family literacy is very important. It’s always exciting to see children select the book they want and take it home. I make them take the Reading is Fundamental pledge, raise their hand and make them promise to bring their book home, read it and share it with someone.

“During the summer, families were coming up to me and saying, ‘Do you have any way to help my child, he or she is having trouble with reading, and now we have this summer vacation.’

“We had a program in place that was an enrichment program that was fee-based. There were a few scholarships available, but it wasn’t a remedial program (which was needed). So I started a summer reading tutorial where I recruited volunteers, training them and setting up a six-week tutorial. We placed the readers one on one with a tutor, and it’s a program that has continued over the years. This last summer was the 11th year we’ve been doing it.

“What’s happened is that a lot of the volunteers continue (tutoring) during the school year, and word gets out, and so these mothers hear, ‘If you go visit Sylvia, she’ll help you.’

“I wish I had more volunteers. I have my ears open and am always trying to find good people. It’s not about just being bright in school. It really takes a gifted middle school student to be able to tutor children and inspire them to come back week after week and enjoy their time with you. It’s great to come here during summer and hear this buzz going, all of this tutoring in the library.

“It’s an atmosphere I’ve worked very hard to create here, and I’m kind of tough on the after-school crowd. We had a situation last year where I had to show the kids that we are here to help and that the library is not an arcade.

“Parents get very energized by the possibility of their children advancing, and that’s why these parents want to bring their children to our programs.

“We also have these laptops now which come out in the afternoons. They’re a big help. We have a lot of kids in the community who don’t have computers at home and they are not computer literate. The computers are just for homework and research, not for rock n’ roll.

“It’s really heart-breaking to see a high schooler in here at quarter to nine in the evening trying to type a paper with their finger. We had this typing tutorial over the summer in which kids had to perform at a certain level in order to qualify for a pizza party. It was exciting to see the number of kids who came by and tried their hands at keyboarding.

“Parents have faith computers are the future, so they lined their kids up for this keyboarding program over the summer. It’s great to see them so energized. It’s hard for a lot of them, and they want to do what they can to give their children the most opportunity possible.”

Why did you get this award?

“I was nominated by people in the library who think I’ve been doing something that deserves credit. The award is about public service. I couldn’t do the work I do if it wasn’t for the staff that supports me. The work that’s done at this branch is done by the commitment of everyone who works here. We’re here for information, and that’s our role. It’s good people feel comfortable and safe here.”

Alito's stance on abortion unclear

BY DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — His mother may know best, but conservatives do not share her certainty that Samuel Alito would overturn abortion rights.

Alito's independent streak is complicating what might otherwise be an easy call as people on both sides of the abortion divide try to figure out his likely course if he were confirmed by the Senate for the Supreme Court.

The nominee's 90-year-old mother, Rose Alito, has said of her Catholic son that "of course, he's against abortion." But that is her personal understanding, which is not always an accurate indicator of how a justice would vote.

"If you asked me to guess what Sam thought about abortion, it's probably the same thing his mother said," said Joshua I. Schwartz, a professor at George Washington Law School who worked with Alito in the solicitor general's office during the Reagan administration.

"But obviously there is a real difference between what Sam Alito thinks is what's right and what's wrong and what does he think the law should be," Schwartz said.

President Bush has nominated Alito, a judge on the Philadelphia-based 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, to replace Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who announced plans to retire in July.

O'Connor has been the divided court's swing vote on abortion, frustrating conservatives who have pressed for the undoing of the landmark 1973 Roe v. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

Liberals say Alito is certain to roll back abortion rights. They contend that while Alito stuck to Supreme Court precedent as an appellate judge, he would be free as a justice to act on his personal opposition to abortion.

Abortion foes are not so sure he would vote their way. Their optimism about Alito's nomination is tempered by their views on some of Alito's decisions during his 15 years on the federal bench.

Conservatives cheered Alito's 1991 vote requiring that women who seek abortions notify their spouses. But they were dismayed by his writings in three other cases:

■ In 1997, in Alexander v. Whitman, Alito concurred with the appellate court's decision that a fetus is not a person under the equal protection clause of the Constitution. A woman who delivered a stillborn baby had challenged a New Jersey law, arguing that she should be able to file a wrongful death lawsuit.

"I agree with the essential point that the court is making: that the Supreme Court has held that a fetus is not a 'person' within the meaning of the 14th Amendment," Alito wrote.

■ In 2000, in Planned Parenthood of Central New Jersey v. Farmer, Alito was among the judges who invalidated a New Jersey law banning late-term abortions. He cited the high court's decision on a Nebraska statute.

"Our responsibility as a lower court is to follow and apply controlling Supreme Court precedent," Alito wrote.

■ In 1995, in Blackwell v. Knoll, Alito cited federal government policy in voting to invalidate Pennsylvania restrictions on publicly funded abortions for women who are victims of rape or incest.

Richard Collier, president of the Legal Center for the Defense of Life in New Jersey and a lawyer in the 2000 case on late-term abortions, said Alito had no reason to cite Supreme Court precedent in the case.

"He followed it for the wrong reasons," said Collier, who fears that Alito would not vote to overturn Roe v. Wade.

Collier points to comments from Alito's colleagues on the federal bench. They say Alito backs tighter abortion restrictions, but Senior Judge Leonard Garth has said, "Sam is not going to overturn Roe v. Wade."

"How many people do we need to tell us that?" Collier asked.

Marie Tasy, executive director of New Jersey Right to Life, was heartened by Alito's 1985 memo in which he said the Constitution does not protect a right to an abortion. But she noted that Alito was more inclined to offer his opinion in religious liberty cases than in abortion matters.

"He didn't seem to want to go that extra step," said Tasy, whose group has neither endorsed nor opposed Alito.

Troy Newman, president of anti-abortion group Operation Rescue, said his organization is backing Alito's nomination, confident that Alito is far more conservative than O'Connor.

Newman did acknowledge the uncertainty within conservative ranks, but he said there are reasons to be hopeful.

"A conservative court led by (Chief Justice) John Roberts and with Alito should have no problem redefining personhood for the pre-born child, thus nullifying Roe rather than overturning it," Newman said.

Should he join the high court, Alito probably would have the chance to rule on two major abortion cases in the current term.

One centers on New Hampshire's parental notification statute and whether the state law is unconstitutional because it lacks an exception that would allow a minor to have an abortion for health reasons in a medical emergency.

The second case stems from the Bush administration's request that the Supreme Court reinstate a national ban on a type of late-term abortion. Bush signed the 2003 law imposing the prohibition, but legal challenges have prevailed based on the argument that the statute lacked a health exception and was unconstitutional.

Kate Michelman, former president of NARAL Pro-Choice America, said that as a justice, Alito no longer would be bound by the precedent that dictated his appellate court rulings.

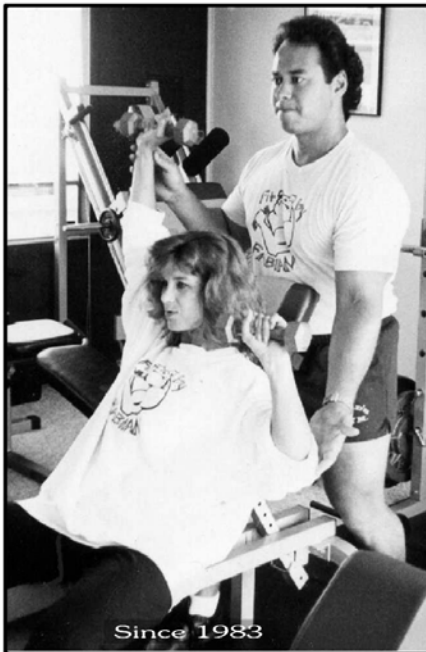

"Do I think he will overturn Roe immediately? I think no," Michelman said. "But he doesn't have to overturn Roe v. Wade explicitly. All he has to do it uphold the New Hampshire law, the federal ban on late-term abortion. All he has to do is decide differently from Sandra Day O'Connor and the right to choose is lost essentially for American women."

Got raw milk? Smaller shareholder dairies are running afoul of regulators

BY RACHEL LA CORTE

Associated Press Writer

VASHON ISLAND, Wash. — Kelsey Kozack's kitchen is a dairy wonderland. Fresh cheeses, yogurt and quarts of fresh raw milk abound, all compliments of Iris, a gentle tan cow who grazes on the family's seven-acre property.

Just 16, Kelsey has established and run Fort Bantam Creamery from her family home on this island just west of Seattle.

At first, Kelsey's parents and sister were the main consumers of her culinary creations from Iris' raw, unpasteurized milk. Then, neighbors got samples, and from there a small but passionate business began. Raw milk aficionados bought a "share" of Iris for a fee, and Kelsey handled the care, feeding and milking.

"After you've been drinking raw milk for a while, you can't drink store-bought again," Kelsey said. "It has a lot more flavor and is healthier."

But the state has taken notice of these small, community-driven models across the state, saying that they need to be licensed and regulated with the state Department of Agriculture or else must stop operations. Recently, the agency has been sending cease-and-desist letters to raw microdairies that aren't licensed, sparking a small battle over whether the state has a right to regulate what many consider a private operation.

With only one dairy cow whose milk production is tapering off and a handful of shareholders, the Kozacks don't consider themselves in the retail business like large dairies. They also don't consider themselves rule breakers.

"If they send a letter, we'll stop," said Chuck Kozack, Kelsey's father. "That would be unfortunate. We know the people now and they really love the product and we love sharing it. We definitely don't do it for the money."

Interest in raw, unpasteurized milk has been on the rise across the nation, part of the growing organic and natural foods movement. Proponents say raw milk is healthier and better tasting than the pasteurized, homogenized milk on supermarket shelves.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration claims that raw milk is dangerous, possibly carrying deadly pathogens such as campylobacter, salmonella and E. coli.

But supporters of raw milk say it's the victim of a smear campaign.

"Raw milk from healthy animals is the safest milk in the world," said Ron Schmid, author of "The Untold Story of Milk."

Selling raw milk for human consumption is legal in 28 states, according to the Weston A. Price Foundation, a raw milk advocacy group based in Washington, D.C. Five states allow raw milk for animal consumption, a loophole that raw milk fans exploit. In some of the remaining states, including Colorado, Virginia and Wisconsin, raw milk is available through cow share programs.

Numerous cow share programs likely exist below the radar.

"We know a lot of small farmers don't want to pay, or get involved in the bureaucracy," said Bill Sanda, executive director of the foundation.

In Washington state, raw milk sales are legal if the farm is licensed through the state, which requires monthly testing of the milk and inspection of the farm and milk bottling room.

Also, each bottle must contain a warning label stating "WARNING: This product has not been pasteurized and may contain harmful bacteria. Pregnant women, children, the elderly, and persons with lowered resistance to disease have the highest risk of harm from use of this product."

Janet Anderberg, public health adviser with the state Department of Health, said there was an E. coli outbreak last year involving three people in Whatcom County tied to illegal raw milk. In 2003, three people in the city of Yakima and eight in Skagit County became ill from tainted milk.

"No one has died as a result of a raw milk outbreak, but we've had some really sick people," Anderberg said.

The state agency has sent out four letters to unlicensed raw dairies across the state in the past several months, said Claudia Coles, program manager of the agency's food safety program.

Six dairies in the state are licensed to sell Grade A raw milk, both goat and cow, Coles said.

"The people who are using a cow share operation in lieu of being licensed with us are doing so to sidestep licensing criteria," Coles said.

That criteria for cow shares includes submitting to inspections every three to six months, and ensuring that the milking and bottling areas are up to code, which includes having a separate room for bottling the milk, something that Kozacks — who bottle in their house — say is an unreasonable financial burden.

"How worth is it to have a cow or two if you have to go make a stainless steel kitchen that's only for bottling the milk and nothing else?" asked Linda Kozack, Kelsey's mother.

A statewide campaign in support of the raw dairy shareholder has formed under two organizations, Washington Association of Shareholder Dairy Owners and the Raw Dairy Choice Campaign.

"You can't buy what you already own," said Chrys Ostrander, organizer of Raw Dairy Choice and co-founder of the shareholder association. "If you're a shareholder and you can demonstrate that through legal documentation and you contract with the farmer, that's no different than having your own cows at your own home."

George Calvert, who operates a cow share out of Calvert's Castle dairy in Medical Lake near Spokane, received a letter from the state in August. His attorney responded in September, saying they weren't selling milk and therefore weren't in violation. So far, the state hasn't responded.

Calvert charges a $40 one-time fee for a share of the cow; $14 a month covers the boarding, feeding and milking.

"What you've got is the state telling you how to run your dairy, instead of the owner of the cows you are accountable to," Calvert said. "I don't need the state to tell me how to run my dairy."

Salaries, class enrollment for petroleum engineering on rise

BY MEAD GRUVER

Associated Press Writer

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Ashley Lantz had no idea what her major would be back when she was a freshman at Colorado School of Mines, but she liked the idea of living in exotic places.

Lantz, 23, decided on petroleum engineering. Now she's on the vanguard of the "Great Crew Change" as companies seek to replace an entire generation that entered the industry during the last oil boom.

With pay starting at $50,000 to $60,000 and a healthy supply of jobs — a result of booming natural gas drilling in Wyoming and other states, and to a wave of retirements in the profession — enrollment in undergraduate petroleum engineering is up 46 percent nationwide since 2002.

"Every company that I've talked to says they simply can't get enough petroleum engineering staff for their projects. They're just crying out for people," said Brian Towler, head of the Department of Chemical and Petroleum Engineering at the University of Wyoming.

The University of Wyoming is getting on board by bringing back the undergraduate petroleum engineering major after a four-year hiatus. Towler hopes eventually to have 100 undergrads, a figure not seen at UW since 1987.

Similarly, the 2,347 undergraduates majoring in petroleum engineering this school year is the highest figure since 1987 — though that's still well below the peak of 11,014 in 1983, according to figures that Texas Tech professor Lloyd Heinze has compiled for the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

It was Lantz's adviser who looked at her good math and science grades and suggested petroleum engineering. "Four years ago, they knew there was a huge age gap and that we would need people," Lantz said.

Though the profession offers plenty of opportunities for travel — with lots of oil and gas drilling in the former Soviet republics, west Africa and South America — Lantz said that heading overseas is no longer a priority for her.

Between her junior and senior years, she interned with Calgary-based EnCana. And last fall, months before her May graduation, the company offered her a job.

She is based in Denver, but does get out of the office one week a month to the Parachute, Colo., area on Colorado's Western Slope, where gas drilling is booming.

So far she has focused on the production side — working on existing wells — but she also plans to get to know the profession's other specialties, such as exploration and transforming newly drilled wells into producing wells.

"Every person you meet has a different story," she said. "It's pretty neat that with one degree you can do so many different things."

Even more opportunities will be available for the next generation of petroleum engineers, said to Margaret Watson, spokeswoman for the Society of Petroleum

Engineers in Richardson, Texas. The average age of SPE members is approaching 50, she said, and that means not only more openings, but more opportunities to advance.

"These people are going to have to become up-to-speed very quickly and have to move into management positions more quickly than in the past because those vacancies are going to exist," she said.

A growing number of students seem to be aware of these developments. Petroleum engineering enrollment is up virtually everywhere such a degree is offered. Only the University of Southern California, with the nation's smallest undergraduate program, hasn't added students this year.

Texas Tech's program has grown by 53 students from last year, an increase of 22.4 percent; followed by Colorado School of Mines (51 students; up 23.9 percent), Oklahoma (50 students; up 31 percent) and Texas A&M (45 students; up 15.4 percent).

The largest programs are still in Texas: University of Texas-Austin (409), Texas A&M (338) and Texas Tech (290 students).

UT's program nearly doubled from 2002-2004, but it may have topped out. Mukul Sharma, a petroleum engineering professor at Texas-Austin, said the entrance requirements had been raised. "We have 17 faculty here, so our student-faculty ratios go completely out of whack if our student numbers go beyond 400 students," he said.

Another reason for being conservative with enrollment — if the job market cools, students enrolled today might find fewer prospects when they graduate. "If we try to match the industry's ups and downs, we will always be four years out of phase," Sharma said.

And more and more, this field is for the mathematically inclined. Towler said students should expect to take three semesters of calculus and one of differential equations. There are also courses in engineering science — statics, dynamics, fluids and thermodynamics — as well as in drilling, production, oil and gas reservoirs, and measuring the properties of rock.

Even though undergraduate petroleum engineering won't be offered at UW until next fall, students are already asking to transfer into it.

You can make enormous profits! How To Buy & Sell Houses In California Without Using Your Money Or Credit!

Let's say you don't have enough money... plus... you have lousy credit or don't want to use your good credit.

And, let's say you want to make huge profits buying and selling houses in California.

Can it be done? Absolutely! And, here's why: There's a man in Jacksonville, Florida who's bought and sold over 1600 houses all over the United States. He became a multi-millionaire doing this.

From humble beginnings as an auto mechanic, working fourteen hours a day to make ends meet, he built a fortune in real estate... starting from scratch... with no previous experience.

Why is this important to you? Simple! Over the years as he was struggling to figure out the secrets of real estate investing, without using his money or credit, he began building step-by-step systems almost anyone could duplicate to knock off ten years from their learning curve.

Then he started sharing his secrets with others and it wasn't long before the success stories started rolling in and he became known as the world's leading expert in Quick Turn Real Estate and built a secret society of real millionaires spanning North America.

If you'd like to be part of this, the first thing you have to do is learn how to find great real estate deals. Plus, there are a few other "trade secrets" you need to know. How are you going to learn all these secrets? That's easy. The man in Jacksonville (his name is Ron LeGrand) has spent a small fortune to put on a seminar in Los Angeles. All you have to do is go to one of these seminars and you'll learn his secrets...

100% Free!

There's no cost to you whatsoever to attend this seminar. It will start exactly at "...two fast ways to pick up a big check ($10,000) or more in less than 30-days after you attend the seminar..."

8:00 a.m. in the morning... and... it's recommended you get there about 1/2 hour early. The seminar will last until approximately 5:00 p.m. that afternoon. Be sure to bring pen and paper... because... during this seminar, you'll learn secrets about making HUGE profits in real estate... which...will amaze you...and...

You Can Come To This Seminar Absolutely Free!

Here's a "taste" of what you'll learn at this seminar:

✓ How you (regardless of your credit or financial status) can make $10,000 per month (every month of the year) without spending a dime of your own money!

✓ Where to find the best deals in the shortest time with the least amount of effort!

✓ How to buy your own "dream home" without money or credit! (URGENT: Don't even think about buying a home until you learn this.)

✓ Why you should NEVER ask a bank for a loan! It's absolutely NOT necessary... and... it's also a royal pain.

✓ The 5 steps to real estate success and why... if even one of them is out of place... your real estate profits will *vanish!

✓ Who are the very best people to buy houses from... and why... you should ONLY deal with these people!

✓ The two fastest ways to pick up a big check ($10,000 or more) in less than one month after you come to the free seminar!

✓ How to (legally) make all your real estate profits... 100% tax free!

This seminar could change your life. You'll be able to buy and sell houses in the Los Angeles area with no credit, no money and without risking any of your savings. Actually, even if your credit is perfect, there's still no reason to tie up your credit and put yourself at risk with loads of loans.

You'll never have to deal with bad tenants who kick holes in your walls, stop up toilets... or... who move out in the middle of the night... still owing you rent!

No loans and no banks. The secrets you'll learn will make banks and loans 100% unnecessary.

No real estate license required! When you learn to do business this way, you will NOT need any kind of license.

Isn't It Time To Get Some Excitement Back In Your Life And Have Some Fun While You Get Rich?

If that's something which appeals to you, come and spend one day at this seminar.

There will be three seminars in the Los Angeles area. The events will be held on December 9th at the Wyndham Hotel Orange County, December 10th at the Sheraton Los Angeles Downtown hotel, and December 11th at the Hilton Burbank Airport and Convention Center hotel.

Be sure to go to one of these seminars. It'll only last one day... but... that one day will change your life.

Seats are limited and pre-registration is required. Seats are given on a first-come, first-served basis.

You'll also receive a free gift of two CD's worth $100 filled with over 300 pages of valuable, life-changing secrets that only a man that has personally bought & sold over 1600 houses can reveal.

It's easy to attend. All you have to do is call the toll-free number below (it won't cost you a single penny to make this call), give your name and address and...

You Can Bring Your Friends! (Call RIGHT NOW to make sure you don't get left out.)

Feds offer new way to manage Hanford's elk

BY SHANNON DININNY

Associated Press Writer

HANFORD REACH NATIONAL MONUMENT, Wash. — To folks driving by, the massive elk roaming freely across south-central Washington's rugged, sagebrush-dotted federal land are a delightful sight. To hunters, they are an enticing target that can't be touched.

For Bud Hamilton, a wheat farmer whose property abuts the Hanford Reach, the large stands of elk pose a bust to his crop.

"They come out at night, eat my fields or trample my crops, and go back to the federal land in the morning," Hamilton said. "What am I supposed to do?"

Managing the rapidly growing herd has been a problem for state and federal wildlife managers for years. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is offering some new options in an elk management plan up for public comment — including hunting on federal property that hasn't been opened to the public in decades.

Former President Clinton created the Hanford Reach National Monument by proclamation five years ago. The monument, an odd, almost horseshoe-shaped property surrounding the Hanford nuclear reservation, stretches along a free-flowing leg of the Columbia River renowned for salmon runs, bird habitat and rare plant life on its banks.

The area includes land, known as the Arid Lands Ecology Reserve, that is considered one of the few large, contiguous blocks of arid shrub-steppe habitat remaining in the Northwest. The reserve used to be part of Hanford and has been closed to the public since the nuclear site was created in the 1940s.

That closure, along with the nearby Yakima Training Center, a U.S. Army training site, give the elk vast room to roam — and reproduce — on federal land.

During a recent tour of the monument, dozens of elk could be spotted thundering through canyons and coulees. Even more stood still across a dry, dusty field, bugling. Wildlife managers estimate the herd at 770 elk — roughly 400 more than some believe the area can support and certainly more than area farmers are willing to tolerate.

Since 2000, the state has paid more than a half-million dollars in crop damages just from this herd.

"For about a decade now, we have been trying pretty much everything we can think of to manage this elk herd," said Jeff Tayer, regional director for the state Department of Fish and Wildlife. "Hunting is a tool ... it's effective, it's cost effective and biologically effective. It's a tool that hasn't been used up until now,"

Five years ago, the herd stood at about 800 animals. Fire forced many elk off the federal land, allowing hunters to kill some animals on private land. Wildlife managers also captured and relocated another 200 elk.

Today, the population is booming again, as elk continue to seek refuge during hunting season.

The state has issued a select number of hunting permits to landowners on the edges of the reserve, who may charge hunters to hunt on their private land as long as they haven't made crop damage claims, Tayer said. But with too many hunters shooting bull elk for their antlers — rather than cow elk that produce calves — additional hunting is needed.

"The primary goal was to get as much hunting access, and therefore harvest, around the monument as we could, at the same time knowing that unless and until there was some remedy to the escape zone on the monument, that we weren't going to be able to solve this problem. And we haven't," Tayer said. "Hunting up there would be a huge step forward."

Rick Leaumont, conservation committee chair for the lower Columbia Basin Audubon Society, disagrees. Leaumont argues that the proposed seven-month hunting season would cause too much damage to the near-pristine reserve and drive elk to yet another closed area: the remaining land of the nearby Hanford nuclear reservation, the nation's most contaminated nuclear site.

"We're not resolving the problem, we're just relocating the problem," he said.

The Fish and Wildlife Service, which manages the Hanford Reach, issued three alternatives for managing the area's elk. The agency's preferred alternative calls for controlled public hunting, a trap and relocation program and, if necessary, a government cull, in which wildlife officers could hunt the animals by ground or air to reduce the size of the herd.

The plan follows years of debate and public meetings to discuss all of those options, some of which have proven controversial. Many residents have spoken out against government culls, believing hunters should get a crack at the elk first. Still others believe the reserve is too sacred and pristine to open to the public.

At the same time, some farmers are willing to open up their land for hunting, while others don't want anyone on their property regardless of the size of the herd.

"There's no consensus," said Greg Hughes, Hanford Reach project leader for the Fish and Wildlife Service. "But if your goal is to reduce the size of the herd, we need to find a common goal."

The Fish and Wildlife Service will be accepting public comment on the elk management plan through Dec. 18, while working with area American Indian tribes separately to include them in the process and ensure their continued access to the land.

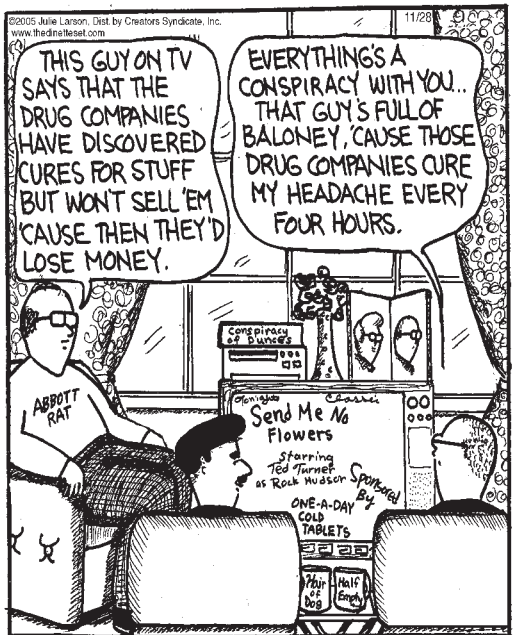

If the agency adopts its preferred alternative, the first hunt would occur next fall.

Not soon enough, said Hamilton, the farmer who has opened his cropland to hunters for several years in an attempt to ease his elk woes.

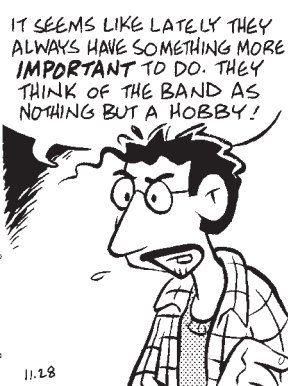

"I just want my property rights back — that the game department isn't telling me what to do with my land, the hunter isn't telling me what to do with my land, the elk aren't destroying my land," Hamilton said. "I want my hill back."

Crowe finds his sense of humor over phone incident

By The Associated Press

CANBERRA, Australia — Oscar-winning actor Russell Crowe can now laugh about throwing a telephone at a New York hotel concierge.

Hosting the Australian Film Industry Awards in Melbourne on Saturday night, the actor walked on stage carrying an old-fashioned telephone.

"If there are any problems and you do get up here and go on too long," Crowe warned nominees in the audience before indicating the phone, "then 'hello' to my little friend."

The 41-year-old actor pleaded guilty earlier this month to third-degree assault, admitting that he threw a phone that hit a concierge in June. He had to pay a $160 court charge and was sentenced to conditional discharge, which means he must not get arrested for one year.

Last week, Crowe berated reporters in Melbourne for blowing the incident out of proportion.

He won the Academy Award for best actor in 2001 for "Gladiator" and has also starred in films including "A Beautiful Mind" and "Cinderella Man."

LONDON — Madonna says she would like to follow the lead of her husband, filmmaker Guy Ritchie, and direct a movie of her own.

The pop singer will appear in a documentary about her life, "I'm Going To Tell You A Secret," which will air Dec. 1 on Britain's Channel 4 television.

"I would love to direct a film. I felt very inspired by making this movie, and I learned a lot about filmmaking and storytelling. I would like to do it on my own next time," she said in an interview broadcast Sunday with Channel 4.

Madonna said her 9-year-old daughter, Lourdes, is a good singer and dancer, and would one day follow in her footsteps.

Asked about her horse riding accident in England this summer, which broke her collarbone and cracked three ribs, Madonna said: "I don't want to go there. I get flashbacks. I'm just starting to feel better."

NEW YORK — Diane Keaton dated many of her leading men off screen, but she says she prefers to fall in love on screen.

"You know where it's going, and you can just enjoy it for what it is," Keaton tells Time magazine. "Real life is complicated. Onscreen you know what the lines are. Everybody's doing what they're supposed to do. He's not gonna surprise you."

The 59-year-old actress credits her listening skills in making relationships with Woody Allen, Al Pacino and Warren Beatty work.

"I was a good listener. But then that wears off. They get bored," she says.

Keaton plays a mother in the upcoming "The Family Stone," about a Manhattan career woman (Sarah Jessica Parker) who gets a cold reception from her fiancé's family.

She's not surprised by the lack of sexy roles for women over 50 despite the success of "Something's Gotta Give," for which she was nominated for an Oscar.

"It requires somebody who's a good writer you wants to write about that subject," she says. "Who is gonna do that? George Lucas? I don't think so. I'd have to be an alien, a sexy, older alien."

LOS ANGELES — Kimberly Stewart and "Laguna Beach" star Talan Torriero say their wedding plans are off.

"It was just too soon to enter into a lifelong commitment," their representatives said in a joint statement. "It is better to have a brief engagement than a short marriage. The couple continue to share their time together and remain open to whatever the future may hold."

Stewart, the 26-year-old daughter of singer Rod Stewart, and Torriero, a 19-year-old star of the MTV reality show, announced their engagement earlier this month.

Stewart's representative, Elliot Mintz, said they "remain friends."

Mintz said they began dating "a relatively short period of time" ago. "It would be in the category of weeks as opposed to months," he said.

Stewart is a close friend of Paris Hilton and was at one time reported to be a possible replacement of Nicole Richie on the canceled Fox reality show "The Simple Life."

Torriero has said he's attempting to start a music career.
