City considers emergency housing for fire survivors

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Santa Monica may be taking in some Woolsey fire evacuees.

About 10 to 15 Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District families who qualify for free or reduced lunch could be moving into vacant affordable housing in Santa Monica after their houses were destroyed in the Woolsey fire. The families are currently couch-surfing, said Tara Barauskas, executive director of the Community Corporation of Santa Monica (CCSM).

On Nov. 27, CCSM requested City Council consider moving some families displaced by the fire to the top of various waiting lists for affordable housing. The council asked staff to develop a plan to house income-qualified families with children in SMMUSD as quickly as possible.

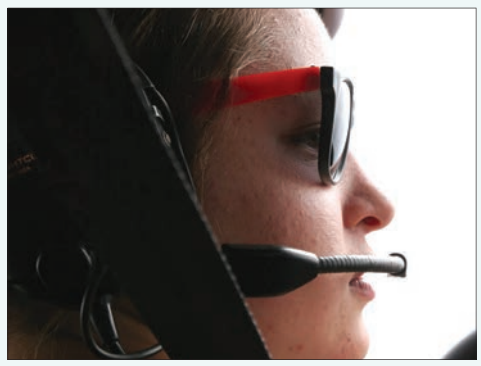

Councilmember Gleam Davis said providing the displaced families with local housing would help them return to normal life because their children could keep attending local schools.

The council agreed that if the plan moves forward, the families

There are but us mere mortals and then there's Maddy Tung.

The Santa Monica native, Samohi grad and senior at the United States Air Force Academy will attend Oxford in the fall of 2019. At Oxford, she'll study for her Master's degree in Computer Science and Global Governance and Diplomacy.

Getting to Oxford is worldwide, rarified distinction and on top of it, she'll have her way there paid for via several scholarships, including the prestigious Rhodes scholarship.

Around 2,500 students in the country completed the rigorous application process to become Rhodes scholars with 880 nominated, 240 finalists whittled from that 880 and 32 winners. Of the 32, three were from US Service Academies and two from the Air Force Academy. One of those, of course, being Maddy.

"It doesn't feel real sometimes," Maddy said about her becoming a Rhodes scholar and her looming Oxford education. "It's kinda crazy. It's a humbling experience being selected."

That's enough accomplishments for a lifetime, but Maddy's life isn't anything like the normal layperson.

She also has an endless scroll of achievements which led her to where she is and is heading now: Wrestling National Champion, Valedictorian candidate and 6-time All-American in wrestling for

Bird wants private investors to join the flock of e-scooter operators

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Business owners and entrepreneurs will soon be able to buy and manage fleets of Bird scooters.

Bird recently announced its plan to launch Bird Platform, which will allow independent operators to purchase scooters, brand them with their logos and run them on their own customized apps powered by Bird. The company will charge a service fee on every scooter ride, but fleet owners would collect the rest of the revenue.

"Independent operators will also have access to a marketplace of chargers and mechanics to help maintain and distribute the e-scooters each day, as well as global support resources," a Bird spokesperson said. "Once the fleet is up and running, independent operators will have access to Bird's portfolio of operational tools to manage and optimize their fleet."

More than 300 individuals have expressed interest in starting their own fleets, mainly people who want to bring the scooters to cities that don't yet have them and bicycle rental operators looking to add scooters to their inventories.

Rob Wakefield, who owns Santa Monica Beach Bicycle Rentals on 4th Street near Santa Monica Boulevard, said he reached out to Bird about the program because e-scooters took 10 to 20 percent of his business over the past year.

Food Benefits Available For Los Angeles County Wildfire Victims

The California Department of Social Services (CDSS) today announced that, as part of the continuing disaster recovery effort, individuals and families impacted by the wildfires in Los Angeles County may be eligible to receive one month of Disaster CalFresh food assistance.

A family of four with a monthly income up to $2,755 per month may be eligible to receive up to $640 in food assistance through California's Disaster CalFresh program. Households can apply for this assistance December 3- 7. In most cases, Disaster CalFresh food assistance benefits will be available within three days of the date of application.

On November 28, the United States Department of Agriculture approved California's request for Disaster CalFresh food assistance to enhance the recovery effort in Los Angeles County. The program is known nationally as the Disaster Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program or D-SNAP.

Wildfire victims may apply for CalFresh disaster food assistance in-person at local social service agency offices in Los Angeles County.

Disaster CalFresh benefits will be provided via an Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) card, which is similar to a debit card that can be used to purchase food items at grocery stores and other authorized retailers.

WHO CAN APPLY?

Individuals and families who lived or worked in Los Angeles County in the following zip codes, 90263, 90264, 90265, 90290, 91012, 91301, 91302, 91304, 91307, 91311, 91361, 91362, 91372, may be eligible for Disaster CalFresh food assistance if the household experienced at least one of the following as a direct result of the wildfires:

Damage to or destruction of the home or self-employment business;

Loss or inaccessibility of income, including a reduction or termination of earned income or a significant delay in receiving income due to disaster related problems; or

Disaster-related expenses (e.g. home or business repairs, temporary shelter, evacuation, etc.) that are not expected to be reimbursed during the disaster benefit period.

Households already participating in CalFresh are not eligible to receive Disaster CalFresh food assistance, but may be eligible to receive supplemental benefits based on their household size. Households already participating in CalFresh may contact their local social service agency to request supplemental benefits by phone or in person. Some households already participating in CalFresh may also automatically receive supplemental benefits based on the direct impact, such as mandatory evacuations, of the wildfires in their community.

WHEN TO APPLY

Individuals and families affected by the wildfires who are seeking food assistance may apply for Disaster CalFresh beginning December 3rd by visiting a social service agency in Los Angeles County. Additional application sites and more information is available at http://www.cdss.ca.gov/Disaster-Help-Center.

In addition, individuals or families with new needs for assistance due to the wildfires may always apply for regular CalFresh benefits and CalWORKs cash aid at their local social service agency or online at benefitscal.com.

Appeal for Reason

Santa Monica is facing a California Voting Rights Act (CVRA) lawsuit that seeks to strip the city of its at-large city council elections and compel it to employ elections from single-seat, winner-take all districts.

This result would be bad for Santa Monica. Why?

Currently all Santa Monica registered voters have a right to vote for all elected positions governing the city. The City's at-large electoral system features elections every two years, with three, four-year City Council seats up in one election, and four, four-year seats in the next. Voters can vote for all seats up in each election.

This system gives all Santa Monica registered voters the ability to vote for all City Council seats, while candidates must display an understanding of the entire city and be responsive across geographical lines to be elected. This is especially critical in a small place like Santa Monica, where what happens in one part of the city can easily affect another, and our daily lives bring us to many parts.

Furthermore, having staggered elections allows for voters voice every two years to adapt to changing circumstances, while retaining four year terms that allow Councilmembers to serve without having to immediately turn around and start fundraising for a new election. Staggered terms also provide for a potential mix of new blood and institutional memory every two years through a mix of incumbents and first-time members on each City Council.

But the benefits of at-large elections do not stop on election day. The City Council makes decisions on a plethora of matters, large and small - and not all issues are geographically-based, far from it. In this sense, the parochial appeal of having 'your own' council member is seductive but misplaced.

As a resident, you may find that you agree with a given Councilmember on some issues, but not on others - including someone who may won a majority of the vote in your own neighborhood. Under our current system, you can go to any of seven Councilmembers on a issue important to you, because they need votes from all parts of the city to be elected, finding one closest to your views. For example, you may find resonance with one Councilmember on the arts, another on social services and another on development.

Under single-seat, winner-take-all district elections, that all goes away. First, Santa Monica residents would lose their direct voice on six of seven council seats, being able to vote for only one seat out of seven. Second, council members would no longer need votes from any Santa Monicans outside of their district to be elected, decreasing citywide accountability of our elected officials, while increasing the relative access of those 'outside the district' Santa Monicans who can make large campaign donations to candidates living in other parts of the city.

SOME LATINOS MORE EQUAL THAN OTHERS

The basic premise of the CVRA lawsuit is that Latino-preferred candidates are not being elected in a legally sufficient number — and that is because Latino voters' preferences are being diluted beyond a legally acceptable threshold by the City's at-large voting system. The court briefs filed by both sides are mostly dedicated to proving/disproving this premise.

I find the City's briefs compelling on this point, demonstrating that the overwhelming majority of Latino-preferred candidates over the years have been elected to the City Council (as well as the School Board, College Board and Rent Control Board).

But for Santa Monicans trying to figure what this is all about, perhaps what is most revealing is the remedy the plaintiffs are seeking.

Under the CVRA, there are many possible legal remedies, including variants of Santa Monica's at-large system. The plaintiffs appear to want no part of that. Specifically, they seem to want one thing - a Pico Neighborhood single-seat, winner-take-all district, which not coincidentally is where the plaintiffs live.

Yet a majority of Latinos in Santa Monica live outside of the Pico Neighborhood. Do they not count too? Apparently not in this CVRA case. The plaintiffs rightly should be proud of their social justice advocacy in the city. But that doesn't entitle them to their own City Council district upon that basis, at the expense of city-wide democracy, and without regard for Santa Monica Latinos who don't live in their neighborhood.

AT-LARGE, RANKED-CHOICE VOTING ELECTIONS PREFERABLE FOR SANTA MONICA

A remedy contained in the CVRA — but apparently not sought by the plaintiffs — is ranked-choice voting, the use of which is spreading across the nation. A form of elections by proportional representation, ranked-choice voting — combined with Santa Monica's at-large system — would retain the benefits of Santa Monica's current system, but lead to results more directly proportional to the diversity in our electorate, giving more residents a seat at the table of our democracy.

But as far as what is good for Santa Monica, single-seat, winner-take-all districts would be a regressive step backwards for our community and our local democracy. By contrast, ranked-choice voting would preserve and enhance the benefits of our current system, and offer those to all Santa Monica Latinos. Lamentably that hasn't appeared to be on the plaintiff's radar. Perhaps it should be.

Michael Feinstein is a former Santa Monica Mayor (2000-2002) and City Councilmember (1996-2004); and was a 2018 candidate for California Secretary of State.

SMC Launches Five New Free Vocational Programs

Santa Monica College (SMC) has launched 5 new short-term vocational and workforce preparation noncredit programs–Bicycle Maintenance, Business Essentials, Customer Service, Introduction to Early Care and Education, and Rehabilitation Therapy Aide–to offer adult learners pathways to entry-level or higher employment, as well as preparation for college.

These noncredit programs have no enrollment fees, and are free to California residents. The Santa Monica Regional Consortium for Adult Education–composed of SMC's Noncredit Programs and the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified District (SMMUSD)'s Adult Education Center–which receives funding from AB 104: Adult Education Program of California, provided planning, implementation, and financial support for the 5 new programs.

Made up of a sequence of two or three courses, these new programs provide adult learners–18 years of age and older–a short-term option to gain basic job and professional skills. While three are being currently offered, all five new programs will be offered at SMC in the upcoming spring 2019 semester, which begins February 11, 2019 (enrollment for the new noncredit programs is ongoing). With direction from the California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office, SMC faculty developed these courses so that students can complete them in a year or less.

"These free vocation-focused noncredit programs are an important addition to Santa Monica College's curricular offerings. They certainly help the college fulfill the goal of meeting the educational needs of the broadest possible cross-section of our communities," said Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery, SMC Superintendent/President. "SMC's partnership with the SMMUSD to expand access to quality adult education and provide adults a fast track to employment is an example of collaboration that works!"

Current SMC students–who are enrolled in credit courses–may sign up for the noncredit programs through the college's student portal Corsair Connect. To enroll, prospective students new to SMC can contact the SMC Noncredit Registration Office by emailing Gonzalez_Nataly@smc.edu or Jauregui_Luis@smc.edu, or by calling (310) 434-3399.

Noncredit courses do not award college credits towards a degree–and are not designed as substitutes for credit courses–but are intended for those who want to prepare for college courses, learn or upgrade a professional skill, and/or for their own personal enrichment. In addition, six more noncredit programs are in the works to be launched at SMC before or in fall 2019 in the areas of Amazon Web Services cloud computing, Gerontology, Sustainability, and Transition to College and Career.

The Santa Monica Regional Consortium for Adult Education was first formed in 2014, and is composed of staff and leaders from SMC's Noncredit Programs and the SMMUSD's Adult Education Center. There are 71 such consortia throughout California, working to expand access to adult education. The two institutions–SMC and SMMUSD–meet different needs in education and training needs of working-age adults, but partner through the consortium to ensure that academic and career pathways are identified and established for adult learners.

While SMC focuses mainly on noncredit Career Development College Preparation (or "CDCP") courses and programs–including popular noncredit English as a Second Language (ESL) courses and noncredit non-CDCP courses such as classes offered at SMC Emeritus for older adults–the SMMUSD Adult Education Center provides classes in high school diploma/credit recovery, high school equivalency exam preparation (GED), adult basic education, citizenship, and ESL.

"SMC's Noncredit Programs and SMMUSD Adult Education Center have worked closely to ensure that adult learners 18 and older have the resources and support they need to be successful," said Dr. Ben Drati, SMMUSD Superintendent. "This close collaboration has the aim of helping those who take courses through SMMUSD to transition to those offered at SMC to ensure that students have the skills to navigate and adapt to an ever-changing global society.

BRIEF DESCRIPTIONS OF THE FIVE NEW NONCREDIT PROGRAMS THAT ARE NOW AVAILABLE AT SMC:

■ Bicycle Maintenance Certificate of Completion (Noncredit): Introduces students to the basics of bicycle maintenance–including an introduction to small business operations to "pedal-assist", electric and Light Electric Vehicle (LEV) technologies. Provides skills for jobs such as entry-level mechanics, bicycles sales positions, or in bicycle shop management upon completion of two courses. An intermediate or higher skill level in ESL is recommended.

■ Business Essentials Level 1 Certificate of Completion (Noncredit): Introduces students to general business concepts, including the key business functions and the role of entrepreneurship in the United States economy. An intermediate or higher skill level in ESL is recommended.

■ Customer Service Certificate of Completion (Noncredit): Introduces students to the theories of the customer service exchange and practical application during a customer encounter. Provides marketable business knowledge and professional skills to students seeking employment in various customer-driven industries. An intermediate or higher skill level in ESL is recommended.

■ Introduction to Early Care & Education Certificate of Completion (Noncredit): Introduces students to the theoretical and practical knowledge required for working with young children in an early care and education setting. This program allows students to determine their level of interest in the field, and prepares students for credit coursework in Early Childhood Education. It also counts towards the professional growth requirement for the renewal of an existing Child Development Permit, and is made up of a sequence of three courses that provides students with the knowledge and skills needed to gain employment as an entry-level Assistant Teacher or Family Child Care Provider. An intermediate or higher skill level in ESL is recommended.

■ Rehabilitation Therapy Aide Certificate of Completion (Noncredit): Introduces students to the field and practice of rehabilitation therapy, including occupational, physical and speech therapy. Students learn the essential job duties and responsibilities of a Rehabilitation Aide, and get clinical hands-on experience. An intermediate or higher skill level in ESL is recommended.

HOUSING

should be able to live in the affordable units indefinitely.

"Once they're in, it may be pretty hard to ask them to leave," Barauskas said.

Mayor Ted Winterer said if the City is to grant affordable housing to evacuees, they should be able to prove they do not have the means to rent in Malibu or Santa Monica.

"If you lost your tax returns in the fire, you can at least prove you qualify for free and reduced lunch," he said.

Councilmembers Sue Himmelrich and Tony Vazquez said they support the plan but want to avoid prioritizing fire evacuees over people who have already been waiting for affordable housing because they were evicted under the Ellis Act or had to move out of uninhabitable units.

"Let's move forward with exploring this, but make sure we're not bumping Santa Monica families who are waiting already for these places," Himmelrich said. "I'm not comfortable with bumping people who've been waiting for housing in Santa Monica for a long time and are couch-surfing or staying in garages."

Barauskas said CCSM receives less than 10 applications for housing from people evicted under the Ellis Act, which allows landlords to evict tenants if they wish to get out of the rental housing business.

The opening of The Arroyo, which will provide 64 affordable apartments downtown, has created some vacancies in CCSM's inventory, she added.

Mayor Pro Tempore Gleam Davis said she thinks the council would be better equipped to decide whether to prioritize the fire evacuees if it had information how many people waiting for CCSM apartments were evicted under the Ellis Act or left their homes under exigent circumstances.

"I'm a little uncomfortable being so specific about the parameters because we don't know what effect that's going to have," Davis said. "If there are 1,000 people ahead of (the evacuees) given those parameters, then we're not helping anybody."

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Dec. 3)

The congruence of speech and action will be key to your success. It's a simple chain. You'll say what you're going to do, do it and then say what you did. More highlights of the year include a responsibility that falls to you, a sharp increase in the reach and efficacy of your social network, and a sweet romantic connection. Libra and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 21, 8, 40 and 11.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Just as the bodybuilder grows muscles by alternately exhausting and resting them, you will become emotionally stronger through bearing and releasing emotional burdens.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
In this astounding world, so much that seemed impossible has already become part of daily life. Getting focused amid all of these options will be both challenging and very worth the effort.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
You're not working for the feedback, but you do need it to better understand how others are impacted by what you do. You're not in it for the praise, laughter or applause, but this will let you know when you're on the right track.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
The potential to be hurt goes up exponentially in a boat or in a relationship. But what would life be like without a boat ride or another person to bounce around emotional waters with? Take the risk. At heart, you're a sailor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Part of your job is to teach others, so it gets a little frustrating when they don't seem to be learning. It might help you to think in terms of helping others find what's already inside them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
To breathe easy – that's the goal in all areas today. Widen the margins. Give yourself a bigger berth. Be generous with the best things, such as compassion and kindness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You've a large capacity for reason, but don't forget to keep dreaming. Those who will tamp down ideas with too heavy a dose of logic and practicality are no more correct than imaginative fools.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
The pleasure of creating and playing is so often squashed by the pressure to do so. That's why, if you can in any way manage it, keeping money out of the equation might be very uplifting to the experience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
The advances are exciting when they come, but do keep in mind that there's inevitably some awkwardness in growth. One part gets bigger faster; the other has to catch up. Take heart in knowing that this is par for the course.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
It's hard to say why you feel the way you do, and if you can't come up with a good enough answer, you might talk yourself out of the feeling. But just because you don't know the origin of the feeling doesn't make it incorrect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
How do you get there? One foot in front of the other. Inch by inch, bit by bit. The biggest challenge will be consistency. Break the action down into extremely small parts and the consistency will cease to be an issue.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
When you can solve the problem in a few steps, you will. No complaint. The complaint only happens when you're not sure how to solve the problem. Ideally, the complaint will inform you and not be a substitute for the solution.

Moon Change Questions
Should you tell the other person how you really feel? This needs to be carefully weighed in an equation dividing the intensity of the sentiment by its likely duration, and you need to factor in the potential for disruption and inconvenience and the likely emotional fallout. The lunar shift from Libra to Scorpio is a complicated time for sharing.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Never Say "Diet"

■ The Major League Eating record for cranberry sauce (jellied division) is 13.23 pounds in 8 minutes, held by Juliet Lee. Given the amount and time, it really should be called "cramberry sauce."

Best Medicine

■ Wife: So, how did your visit to the doctor go?
■ Husband: Well, apparently my memory's not as sharp as it used to be.
■ Wife: That's all?
■ Husband: Also, my memory's not as sharp as it used to be.

Samohi, Mary Sutton Bundy Award winner for Best Female Scholar Athlete, Rotary Club award winner, a Black Belt in Hapkido and in her free time, she managed to earn her private pilots license in her senior year of high school.

But how did this all start? How does one become a renaissance woman?

Maddy defers to humility, saying it was the village of Santa Monica that molded her.

Maddy's mom says it all started somewhere around 2nd grade. Maddy, the eldest of three girls, became a bit of a tomboy from the way her mother tells it, growing her confidence and life skills while hanging with the boys at school.

"She was always empathetic and kind, but being with the boys taught her to stand up for herself. She was never intimidated by them and they respected her."

These friendships led to a yearning for "an intellectual stimulation and a physical drive" as Tung grew into adolescence, which led her to Hapkido karate martial arts and the foundation for Maddy's life.

Leesl Herman, her instructor at the time, said she was a natural-born leader, instantaneously pulling people together as soon as her first day. There, her compassion, bravery, loyalty and tenacity were nurtured.

"It's about the character development," Maddy says, rattling off a list of values from Hapkido that she still remembers from childhood. "The practices taught there helped develop values in me that I still hold dear to me."

Hapkido led to her next true love, wrestling, where she became a 6-time national champion.

An academic star at Samohi, she would take weeks off of class to wrestle around the City and state, often teaching herself the curriculum so that she could maintain her GPA while furthering her wrestling career.

After graduation, she sought out more intellectual stimulation, looking at Ivy League schools that could challenge her mind. Unfortunately, the Ivy Leagues couldn't challenge her body-- none of the Ivy Leagues she was interested in had women's wrestling.

Eventually, she found the Air Force Academy.

"You study academics and you get to focus on leadership, character development and found that interesting," she said. "I liked that stuff like jiu-jitsu was mandatory. I liked the concept of improving yourself and I wanted to make a difference. The military made sense."

Her academics soon took over (a double major in Mathematics, Humanities and a minor in Chinese, mind you) and her wrestling became less frequent, but her curiosity in the military and its application increased.

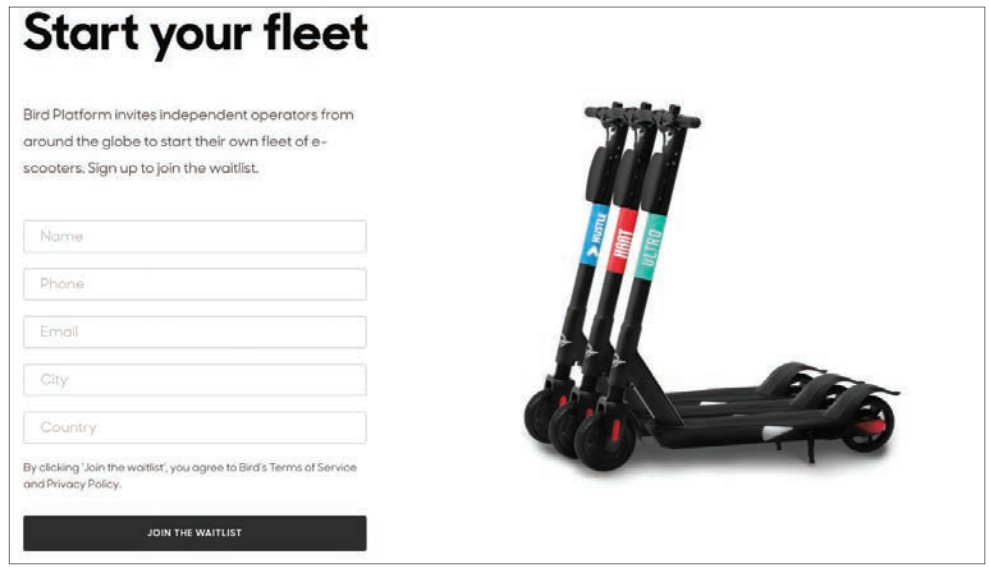

She says she took a computer science class that "blew my mind blown daily", specifically learning about artificial intelligence and hopes to wield that in an ethical way.

"Is there a place for AI in the military? What can the world be? How can AI help people? How can tech be used in a positive manner and also always support America's value system? That's what I'm interested in."

While Maddy continues to reach new heights, her family and community say it isn't much of a surprise to them, knowing she'll do good for others with her varied skill set.

"I can't wait to see what kinda things she does for the world," Amanda Tung says. "Her heart and head are in the right place. I think she'll be able to accomplish incredible things and that's what's exciting to me. I love her."

SCOOTERS: Bird is allowing operators to build their own scooter brand.

INVESTORS

"If you can't beat them, you've got to join them," he said. "They've cut into our business, so we've got to cut into theirs."

Wakefield said he is wary about the work managing a fleet of scooters would entail, however, since many get stolen, go missing or suffer damage. He added he thinks managing Bird-branded scooters may attract more customers than renting ones branded with his own logo.

It's unclear how independent operators would fit into Santa Monica's Shared Mobility Pilot Program, a City of Santa Monica spokesperson said. The program launched in September and limits the number of operators that can provide dockless e-scooters. Bird and Lime can each operate 750 scooters and Lyft and Jump, which is owned by Uber, operate 250 each. Jump and Lyft also manage 500 e-bikes each.

The total number of e-scooters operating in the city is capped at 2,000, although the program stipulates that the number of devices each operator is authorized to deploy may increase or decrease based on utilization and performance.

However, a Bird spokesperson told TechCrunch that the company will start rolling out Bird Platform in December in cities that have not imposed regulations on e-scooters. For example, the company plans to avoid San Francisco because it has capped the number of e-scooters that can operate in the city at 1,250.

Bird is not setting a maximum or minimum limit for fleet sizes, a spokesperson said.
