There's a new game in town

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Editor in Chief

PALISADES PARK For a game that is far from familiar for most Santa Monicans, Mark Greenberg and his boules are starting to attract some attention.

It's Friday morning in Palisades Park and with the iconic Santa Monica Pier providing the perfect backdrop, pairs of tourists and locals in the middle of their workouts stop and stare as Geenberg crouches inside a small circle drawn in the sand. He pulls his arm back and lets fly a shiny metal boule (French for ball), sending it roughly 15 feet into the air. It lands in the dirt with a thud and rolls a foot toward a small, orange target.

Greenberg is pleased, not with the shot, but with the number of onlookers intrigued by the retired photographer's favorite pastime.

"I'll give you a sheet here that explains the rules and tells you a little bit about the game," Greenberg said with a noticeable Brooklyn accent as he walked toward two men dressed in casual business attire.

The game is pétanque (pronounced pay-tonk), one of Europe's most popular outdoor games — a cousin of both horseshoes and of the Italian bowling game called bocce. And to say that Greenberg is a player would be grossly understating things.

Greenberg is Santa Monica's pétanque ambassador, having lobbied the powers that be at City Hall — thanks in large part to his friendship with the late mayor, Herb Katz — to recently replace the aging and rarely-used shuffle board courts near the Senior Center with two pétanque courts, which are free and open to the public from 5 a.m. to midnight every day.

"I'm addicted to this," said Greenberg, a former instructor at Santa Monica College who tore up grass in the backyard of his home near the college so he could practice pétanque.

Malibu seventh graders raise supplies for Fiji

Community service a part of the lesson plan for students

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

MALIBU HIGH SCHOOL School may be about reading, writing and arithmetic, but learning comprises much more.

A Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District seventh grade history class at Malibu High took that lesson to heart, gathering up hundreds of pounds of clothing, shoes, school supplies and medical necessities for an impoverished village in Fiji.

Gabby Watkin, a class member, coordinated the effort.

She and her mother, Suzanne Donovan, planned a trip to the southeast Asian country of Fiji through a nonprofit that provides healthcare to Fijians when the country's medical system fails. Donovan's background as a doctor specializing in infectious diseases meant that she would be busy working in local hospitals, and Watkin sought a way to give back as well.

"(My mom) told me how needy they were, and how poor they were. I started getting really worried about what they would have to deal with there," Watkin said.

An e-mail to the charity in Savusavu, Fiji revealed a shortage of basics for local children, from shoes on their feet down to pencils they would need in classes. This, Watkin felt, was a need she could address.

Watkin went to history teacher and baseball coach Ari Jacobs with a proposition: allow her to make an announcement to her seventh grade class about a donation drive to benefit the children of Savusavu, the proceeds of which would travel with Donovan and Watkin when they left for the island nation in November.

Jacob decided he could do one better.

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES Hollywood's holidays are off to a dreadful start: Fewer people went to the movies the last two weekends than during the box-office hush that followed the Sept. 11 attacks 10 years ago.

Domestic revenues tumbled to a 2011 low of about $77 million this weekend, when the star-filled, holiday-themed romance "New Year's Eve" debuted at No. 1 with a weak $13.7 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

It's the worst weekend in more than three years, since the weekend after Labor Day in 2008, when revenues amounted to $67.6 million, according to box-office tracker Hollywood.com. And it comes after an $81 million total a week earlier that had been this year's previous low.

"It's unbelievable how bad it is," said Hollywood.com analyst Paul Dergarabedian.

Jonah Hill's comedy "The Sitter" opened at No. 2 with just $10 million.

Divided by this year's average ticket price of $7.96, the combined $158 million haul means only an estimated 19.8 million people went to the movies the last two weekends. Based on the average ticket price, this year's top-grossing film, "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2," drew more people all by itself over opening weekend.

Friends say Hollywood shooter had tough breakup

CHRISTOPHER WEBER
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES Friends and neighbors of a gunman who was shot dead by police as he fired randomly at passing cars on a Hollywood street — critically wounding one man — say he was deeply troubled by the recent breakup with his girlfriend.

Authorities released the identity of Tyler Brehm Saturday and examined the 26-year-old's body, Los Angeles County Coroner's Lt. Larry Dietz said, a day after the shootout at Hollywood's intersection of Sunset and Vine.

Investigators have not released a motive for Friday's attack.

Friends and neighbors said Brehm was stung by the relationship's end.

"He wasn't a bad guy, he just got fed up," stunned friend and neighbor Christina Mesropian said after a KNBC-TV news crew told her the shooter that caused the disturbing scene was Brehm.

Mesropian said he was struggling to overcome a breakup with girlfriend Alicia Alligood.

"He was like 'Ah, I'm over it, I'm over it,' but I could tell he wasn't over it," Mesropian said.

Alligood, did not appear on camera, but told a KNBC reporter only that she and Brehm had "been dating for four and a half years, we broke up recently."

Ramon Hernandez, who lived in the apartment next door to Brehm, said the couple had recently moved out. He told KABC-TV that they kept to themselves but he at times heard them arguing.

"I could tell that he was an unstable person," Hernandez said, "but I don't know the details on what actually made him snap."

Brehm walked down the middle of Sunset Boulevard, firing on motorists with no clear target and injuring three of them until two police officers who just happened to be in the area — an off-duty motorcycle officer working movie set security and an LAPD detective — shot and killed him, authorities said.

Standing up for the nativity scenes

Editor:

Jorg Aadahl's Dec. 5, 2011 letter ("Different take on Christmas") complaining that there isn't a war on Christmas was hilarious since he spent the next six paragraphs on an all out attack. He ended his rant saying that there was "not a shred of evidence of Jesus as a historical figure." Actually there are many writings by people living at the time who mention Jesus . The Roman historian Tacitus in A.D. 64 for example.

So is there an attack on Christmas? Judge for yourself. For 58 years there have been 14 nativity booths in the park on Ocean Avenue near Santa Monica Boulevard. This year the Nativity Committee was only allowed to erect three of their 14 booths. At least two of their spots were given instead to atheists!

The 14 nativity booths all work together to tell the story of Jesus's birth. Limiting the committee to only three booths is like selecting three random scenes from "Raiders of the Lost Ark." It just doesn't do the story justice.

The 14 nativity scenes are a tradition that goes back five decades. Fathers and mothers bring their kids from the Inland Empire, Orange County or simply from around the corner, just to relive the childhood moments when their parents brought them to see the 14 scenes. I have watched very emotional families rekindle fond memories while at the same time starting new ones with their own children. At Christmastime, shouldn't family-friendly be Santa Monica's first priority?

So who got the other 11 booths that were taken from the Nativity Committee? That's what I would like to know. And why weren't the 14 nativity scenes given priority since they have been an institution in the park since 1953?

What I do know from walking in the park is that two spots have been given to atheists. Up for the third year in a row (and credited in a SMDP article as being by Damon Vix of Burbank) is a sign in a cage that states " Religions are all alike — founded upon fables and mythologies, Thomas Jefferson."

The fact that Thomas Jefferson never said that doesn't seem to matter. Experts at no less than the Jefferson Library at Monticello say there is absolutely no evidence Jefferson said these words. Do you see the irony? Damon Vix's sign is actually what has been proven to be the myth!

Certainly the city of Santa Monica (on government property no less) shouldn't be guilty of perpetuating this myth about our president. They surely wouldn't allow a lie about presidential hopefuls Ralph Nader or Dennis Kucinich to be publicly posted for three years running.

There is a distinct lack of civility. It seems like a very classless thing to attempt to tear down someone else's belief system at the very time they are in the process of celebrating who they are as people.

For a city like Santa Monica that seems to pride itself on tolerance it would seem that allowing two booths that question other people's religion during their holy celebration would be not only against their tolerance policies but simply not in the spirit of the season. Would the City Council tolerate hecklers at the Menorah lighting ceremony? Would they tolerate a booth questioning Mohammad during Ramadan?

Why can't the 14 nativity scenes be allowed and if any other religion wants to display something, do that as well? Why not be inclusive rather than spiteful and intolerant?

If you are someone who misses seeing the other 11 booths and feel that your religious freedom to see the 14 historic nativity scenes has been violated, please contact the City Council or the parks department and make your voices heard. Maybe we can get some answers.

Food handouts are bad news

A DAILY PRESS NEWS ARTICLE ("Feeding homeless in public raising concerns again," Nov. 23) reported that Downtown stakeholders are concerned about the growing number of groups now handing out food, primarily to transients and "the homeless" on the Third Street Promenade.

There are increasing numbers of undesirables — drunks and anti-social individuals — attracted by these handouts. They congregate on the promenade, pester passers-by and engage in anti-social behavior while waiting for food providers to show up. And, they often linger long after the food providers have left and leave garbage, trash, consume alcohol, urinate on public property, panhandle and make a nuisance of themselves.

The food handouts are provided by a number of out of town, primarily Christian-centered organizations including UCLA Food Not Bombs, Campus Crusade UCLA which hosts Santa Monica Homeless Outreach, Calabasas-based Turning Kindness On (TKO), Lighting the Way Worldwide and a campus ministry/student group from Loyola-Marymount University called Feed the Hungry, and others.

While members of these groups feel they are doing "God's work," the long-term effects of their so-called benevolence often has a serious downside for the very people they think they're helping.

A few years ago, a Hollywood-based church gave away meals in Palisades Park. The pre-packaged foods handed out were past their expiration dates. The possibility of hundreds of people eating and getting sick from spoiled food obtained from a church group on city (public) property raised serious liability issues.

Another issue is that free food handouts make it real easy for those in need to avoid services, put off medical help, psychological counseling, substance abuse treatment, vocational skills training, public assistance and housing. Why should they bother helping themselves when they can eat and then camp in a doorway or garage for free?

One city employee recently told me that with as many as a hundred or more people leaving behind uneaten food after a feeding there's an unsightly, smelly mess that stretches for blocks and attracts vermin. Unfortunately, clean-up efforts, if any, by these groups are ineffective.

For decades, City Hall has been honing and perfecting a multi-tiered program to help the indigent, mentally challenged and the unhoused — not just to exist from day to day but to change their lives for the better through a combination of support, services, counseling and eventually, housing.

A key component of those efforts is bringing most "homeless" programs and feeders under its human services umbrella, moving food give-aways inside and linking them with service providers such as OPCC and the St. Joseph Center.

The thinking is that by linking food handouts to services and their providers, the service resistant or service lazy will eventually seek help and change their self-destructive existence. It's a "carrot and stick" approach that's made Santa Monica's highly successful efforts a model for helping the homeless worldwide.

Unfortunately many of the groups that hand out free food have resisted "going inside" or working with City Hall or its service providers. The groups come here, hand out food, proselytize and go back to their campuses or churches and congratulate themselves for their charity.

I don't think they think about or care that they're throwing a monkey wrench into City Hall's successful homeless services continuum or that they're empowering those needing help to forestall assistance. They are, in essence, empowering individuals to exist on the streets until the next free sandwich.

In the meantime, we're all cleaning up the mess that's left. City Hall and public safety resources are spent on dealing with drunks, freeloaders and the mentally challenged drawn here from all around the region because, "in Santa Monica, they give away food on the streets."

Disgusted and besieged residents are now shopping and seeking entertainment where food handouts aren't permitted and anti-social persons aren't tolerated like at The Grove, Westside Pavillion or in Century City. Tourists complain and vow to never come back.

One social service provider told me that there is so much available in Santa Monica that nobody should ever go hungry or be living on the streets. In that light, I'm not to sure that Campus Crusade or any of these other outreach groups are needed here.

If the do-gooders must hand out food, there's a real need for their charity in Downtown Los Angeles on Skid Row where far fewer services are available. Problem is it's dirty and dangerous.

Better to come to Santa Monica, park in secure, well-lit garages and hand out sandwiches on the world famous Third Street Promenade in front of the Apple Store or in Palisades Park overlooking the ocean.

Even though it's the holiday season, wouldn't it be better to give a person in need the tools to escape pain and misery on the streets by supporting the professionals and services tha "teach a man to fish" rather than "keep 'em slaves to tomorrow's handout?"

Biggest polluters resist deep cuts

ARTHUR MAX
KARL RITTER
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa The hard-fought deal at a global climate conference in South Africa keeps talks alive but doesn't address the core problem: The world's biggest carbon polluters aren't willing to cut emissions of greenhouse gases enough to stave off dangerous levels of global warming.

With many scientists saying time is running out, a bigger part of the solution may have to come from the rise of climate-friendly technologies being developed outside the U.N. process.

"We avoided a train wreck and we got some useful incremental decisions," said Alden Meyer, of the Washington-based Union of Concerned Scientists. "The bad news is that we did very little here to affect the emissions curve which is accelerating, and the impacts of climate change which are climbing day by day."

Scientists say that if levels of greenhouse gases continue to rise, eventually the world's climate will reach a tipping point, with irreversible melting of some ice sheets and a several-foot rise in sea levels.

They cannot pinpoint exactly when that would happen, but the two-decade-long climate negotiations have been focused on preventing global temperatures from rising more than 2 degrees Fahrenheit (1.2 degrees Celsius) above current levels by the end of this century.

A report released before the Durban talks by the U.N. Environment Programme said greenhouse gas emissions need to peak before 2020 for the world to have a shot of reaching that target. It said that's doable only if nations raise their emissions pledges.

In Durban, they did not.

Sunday's deal extends by five years the Kyoto Protocol, the 1997 agreement that has binding emissions targets for some industrial countries but not the world's biggest carbon polluters, China and the United States.

The Durban agreement also envisions a new accord with binding targets for all countries to take effect in 2020. And it sets up the bodies that will collect, govern and distribute tens of billions of dollars to poor countries suffering the effects of climate change.

"But the core question of whether more than 190 nations can cooperate in order to peak and bring down emissions to the necessary level by 2020 remains open — it is a high-risk strategy for the planet and its people," UNEP chief Achim Steiner said.

Climate talks have been bogged down by rifts between rich and poor, between fully industrialized nations and emerging economies, about how to share the burden of reducing greenhouse emissions.

Held back by a skeptical Congress, the U.S. doesn't want to commit to any binding deal unless it also imposes strict emissions targets on China and India. The latter insist their targets should be more lenient because, historically, the West has a bigger share of the blame for man-made warming.

Meanwhile, the atmosphere keeps filling up with heat-trapping gases from the burning of fossil fuels.

Figures from the U.N. weather agency show the three most powerful greenhouse gases reached record levels last year and were increasing at an ever-faster rate.

And the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says the total heat-trapping force from major greenhouse gases has increased 29 percent since 1990, the benchmark year in the climate talks.

With that backdrop, some say the diplomatic effort to solve the climate issue has already failed, and that the answer lies in the development of green technologies outside the U.N. process.

"Handing the problem to diplomats was one of the first failures," Dan Sarewitz, professor of science policy at Arizona State University, said in an email.

The idea that the global energy system could be decarbonized by anything other technological developments, driven to a large extent by national polices and businesses, "was never more than a delusion," Sarewitz said.

Roger Pielke Jr. of the University of Colorado said treaties and timetables don't reduce emissions.

The Q Line

Purchasing power

The debate over the pace and scope of development in Santa Monica has often been contentious as neighborhood groups favoring slower growth squared off against planners and developers pushing for more height and density. The recent discussion about the Village Trailer Park and the City Council's decision to explore purchasing the park to save low-income housing is a perfect example.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
What do you think should happen to the Village Trailer Park? Should the council try to preserve it, or should the market dictate its future?

BAD NEWS FOR THE OCEANS: Once mercury gets into the marine food chain, mostly from human industrial sources such as coal-fired electricity generation, smelting and the incineration of waste, it 'bioaccumulates' in the larger ocean predators. That's why larger fish — like the bluefin tuna pictured here — are generally riskier to eat than smaller ones.

Mercury and the food chain

Dear EarthTalk:

I know that large fish contain a lot of mercury, but where does it come from? And what are we doing to prevent this contamination?

Alison Bronner
Atlanta, GA

MERCURY IN THE FISH WE LIKE TO EAT is a big problem in the United States and increasingly around the world. Mercury itself is a naturally occurring element that is present throughout the environment and in plants and animals. But human industrial activity (such as coal-fired electricity generation, smelting and the incineration of waste) ratchets up the amount of airborne mercury which eventually finds its way into lakes, rivers and the ocean, where it is gobbled up by unsuspecting fish and other marine life.

Once this mercury gets into the marine food chain, it "bioaccumulates" in the larger predators. That's why larger fish are generally riskier to eat than smaller ones. Those of us who eat too much mercury-laden fish can suffer from a range of health maladies including reproductive troubles and nervous system disorders. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reports that human fetuses exposed to mercury before birth "may be at an increased risk of poor performance on neurobehavioral tasks, such as those measuring attention, fine motor function, language skills, visual-spatial abilities and verbal memory." Up to 10 percent of American women of childbearing age carry enough mercury in their bloodstreams to put their developing children at increased risk for developmental problems.

In partnership with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the EPA issues determinations periodically in regard to how much mercury is safe for consumers to ingest from eating fish. State and tribal environmental authorities and/or health departments issue fish consumption advisories for water bodies in their respective jurisdictions based on federal guidelines. The EPA consolidates these local and regional advisories on its website, where concerned consumers and fisher folk can click on a map of the states to find out which advisories may be in effect in their area.

As for which fish to avoid, the non-profit Environmental Defense Fund (EDF), which runs the handy Seafood Selector website, reports that people with mercury concerns should steer clear of bluefin tuna, walleye, king mackerel and marlin. Bluefish, shark, swordfish, wild sturgeon, opah and bigeye tuna carry a proportionately large mercury burden as well. Also of concern, but to a slightly lesser extent, are orange roughy, Chilean sea bass, blue crab, lingcod, Spanish mackerel, spotted seatrout, wahoo, grouper, snapper, halibut, tile fish, rock fish and sable fish, as well as blackfin, albacore and yellowfin tuna.

Beyond what individuals can do to avoid mercury, the U.S. government and states have begun working together to reduce mercury emissions from power plants. Earlier this year the EPA proposed new "Mercury and Air Toxics Standards" regulating mercury emissions from utilities across the country, with the goal of reducing the amount of mercury emitted by coal burning by 91 percent by 2016. Elsewhere, representatives from 140 countries signed on to reduce global mercury pollution at a 2009 United Nations Environment Program's Governing Council meeting in Nairobi, Kenya. The agreement commits signatory countries-including the U.S.-to cutting back on the use and emission of mercury. A legally binding treaty mandating just how much each country will have to cut back mercury emissions takes hold in 2013.

The project begins in December 2011 and ends December 2012. Construction will take place Monday to Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., on Ocean Park Boulevard, between Neilson Way and Lincoln Boulevard. The project will improve the character and functionality of Ocean Park Boulevard for all users and reduce storm water runoff. The project will provide wider sidewalks and parkways for storm water biofilter swales and infiltration, new landscape medians, new marked crosswalks with enhanced overhead flashing beacons, new painted bike lanes and traffic striping, pedestrian level lighting, new trees and landscaping, street furniture, bike racks and traffic signal modification. Traffic control will be in place during construction and will maintain one lane of traffic in each direction. Please use alternate routes whenever possible.

The alleys in the 1500 block of Stanford Court will be resurfaced Dec. 5-16. Daily work start time is 7 a.m. and end time is 4:30 p.m. Please be advised that resurfacing operations will generate noise and dust. There will be certain times when the alley will not be accessible during construction, but the city will minimize these times of closure during the day. Questions should be directed to the Public Works Street Maintenance Division at (310) 458-4991. For more info on the Alley Renewal Program, go to: www.smgov.net/streets/alleyprogram.

well," Jacobs said. "There's a quote in my room from Berthold Brecht: 'Everybody needs help from everyone.' It's one of the reasons I'm a teacher."

Last year, Jacobs rallied his classes to help an orphanage in Guadalajara, Mexico. Another round hit closer to home — a halfway house and battered women's shelter in Ventura County.

He'd been searching for a project for the new school year when Watkin offered up her trip to Fiji as an opportunity for engagement.

Jacobs created a reward system called "boxes." For every five articles of clothing or single pair of shoes seventh graders brought in, their class would receive one "box." The class with the most "boxes" at the end of the collection period would win some kind of prize.

The competition lit a fire underneath his students, Jacobs said.

"They ate it up. They brought in hundreds of pounds worth of clothing and shoes," Jacobs said. "It really really surprised me how motivated they got."

At some point, it stopped being about the prize at the end of the semester. Students began focusing on Watkin's trip, and the promise of pictures and video that would show them the impact their donations had made.

That became more poignant as Jacobs explained that the cast off pair of shoes or outgrown toy could be the new recipient's prized possession.

Donovan got a shock when she began coordinating the delivery of the classes' donations.

"I thought we were going to have a few boxes," she said. "We have a 1969 pickup truck that I bought to pick up the supplies, and I couldn't fit everything in it."

On Nov. 1, Watkin and Donovan traveled to Fiji. While Donovan provided treatment to Fijians, Watkin spent her time distributing the supplies, helping in a "mommy and me" class and making presentations to the students about seventh grade in America.

It wasn't all work and no play. Watkin managed to find time to dive with hammerhead sharks and barracudas — cage free.

"It's so beautiful. Also, the people are so nice. Probably the nicest people I've ever met," Watkin said.

Watkin keeps in touch with some of the people that she met in Savusavu, and was touched by the sense of community and togetherness that she found there. She knows that it was the community forged in her seventh grade class that made her journey a success.

"I couldn't have done it without all of the help from Malibu High," Watkin said.

The project gave Malibu students, who often live in a bubble of privilege, a way to step out of their comfort zone and see the way others live. Doing so empowers them to make a difference in the world, and should be an important piece of what school is about, Jacobs said.

"For me, self worth and social consciousness are two of the biggest things that schools are about. Of course they're about standards and curriculum, and there are skills that you have to build in each class, but in my view of education, curriculum is one-third of the tier, and self wroth and social consciousness are the other two-thirds," Jacobs said.

PÉTANQUE

"No two games are ever the same and each time I play it makes me want to get better. It's a lot of fun and the best part is, anybody can play, from the novice to the professional.

"I've had an 8 year old beat me and a 91 year old beat me," Greenberg says as he looks out onto the Santa Monica Bay, the sun reflecting off the Pacific Ocean.

The accessibility of the game is one of the main reasons why the Community & Cultural Services Department chose pétanque when it came to replacing shuffleboard, a game that seems to have fallen out of favor.

"Shuffleboard has to be played on a very level surface and because the courts were located on the edge of the bluffs they settle a bit, constantly creating a problem with keeping them level," said Julie Silliman, a senior administrative analyst with City Hall who specializes in building and maintaining Santa Monica's parks.

That and a lack of interest by the senior community led to the courts not being used.

"And, my God, isn't it such a beautiful spot? It should be used," she said.

It was shortly after City Hall renamed the Joslyn Park dog area after Katz, a man who loved his dogs, that Silliman got the idea for pétanque courts. She had seen Greenberg in the park practicing and after the dedication he approached her and planted the seed. He also admits to reaching out to other City Council members and the city manager.

Greenberg envisions more than just a few courts. He would like to have Santa Monica become the pétanque capital of the U.S., hosting tournaments in the parking lot just north of the pier that would attract players from all over the world.

"It could bring in millions of dollars," he said.

The International Pétanque Tournament in November at Amelia Island, Fla. attracted players representing over 100 teams from 25 states, Canada and Europe.

"There's plenty of interest here and it's growing," Greenberg said.

City Hall spent a little over $5,000 fixing up the space and creating the pétanque courts, Silliman said, and there should be fairly little maintenance required. The courts are essentially just raised dirt framed in concrete.

"A great thing about the game is that it is very casual, you don't need to be dressed all in white or have an outfit to play," Silliman said. "And the equipment is pretty inexpensive."

The game originated in the South of France in the early 1900s and is gaining in popularity in the U.S. with an estimated 30,000 Americans playing on a regular basis, according to Petanque America.

But other than Santa Monica, there are only a handful of other places to play. There are courts at Rancho Park Golf Course and at the Cheviot Hills Recreation Center, according to the Los Angeles Pétanque Club, of which Greenberg is a member.

"I'm still in awe," said Greenberg of the picturesque location of the city's pétanque courts.

The game is fairly simple. There's a target, or cochonnet (French for piglet), and the objective is to stand inside a circle and toss or roll weighted balls at it, hoping they land as close as possible to it. Players can choose to "point" and get their boule closest to the target for a score, or they can "shoot" and knock an opponents ball away from the target, an aggressive but often necessary move. Points are scored equal to the number of boules the scoring team has that are closer to the target than the closest boule of the other team. The first team to 13 wins.

It may seem easy, but pick up a boule and try to make it rest in the same point twice. It's challenging. Not only does a player have to apply the same power and lift, they also have to factor in the changing landscape. A ball can hit a dimple in the dirt or a twig and roll a totally different direction.

And just when the game seems to be at hand, an opponent can knock the cochonnet, or target, causing it to move closer to their boules and change the final score.

Greenberg, who was introduced to the game by a friend a little over a year ago, said he has become obsessed with pétanque, mainly because it requires players to use a variety of skills critical to success in other sports. The game calls for the same accuracy and control found in golf, the patience and strategy found in chess, as well as the ability to reading angles that one uses when shooting pool.

"There really are a lot of skills involved," he said.

And that's why Greenberg practices daily. With the new courts, chances are he'll be at Palisades Park more than in his backyard, and he might even find time to replant that grass he tore up.

"I'm so grateful and appreciative and want to thank the city for making this a reality," Greenberg said before turning back toward a woman who was leaning on the short fence surrounding the courts. In his hand was the sheet containing the rules to the game.

SHOOTER

In amateur video taken at the shooting scene, the gunman appeared to have short hair and wore jeans and a white tank top. He paced back and forth near the busy intersection with Vine Street, firing close to 20 rounds from what appeared to be a .40 caliber handgun, police said. Several witnesses reported seeing him reload at least once.

"He was screaming he was going to die and that he wanted to die," Gregory Bojorquez, a photographer who captured images of the shooting's aftermath, told the Los Angeles Times.

He continued shooting at vehicles and in the air when he was confronted by the officers.

They ordered the suspect to stop and drop his weapon. He was shot when he pointed his weapon at the officers. The gunman was pronounced dead at the scene, Los Angeles police Officer Cleon Joseph said. No officers were hurt.

The 40-year-old male driver of a Mercedes-Benz was wounded in the face and upper torso and taken to a hospital in "guarded and critical condition," police said in a statement.

The man, John Atterberry, was at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center and remained in critical condition Saturday night, hospital spokeswoman Simi Singer told The Associated Press.

Atterberry is a music industry executive who has worked with artists like Brandy, The Spice Girls and Jessica Simpson, according to the trade paper The Hollywood Reporter and other media outlets.

A truck and another car were struck by bullets.

Two people were treated at the scene for minor injuries. One man suffered a grazing wound to his left thigh when a bullet passed through his car door. Another man had minor cuts from broken glass after a bullet struck the driver door where it met the window.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

NBA

Kobe upset by Odom's trade to Mavericks

GREG BEACHAM
AP Sports Writer

EL SEGUNDO The Lakers traded forward Lamar Odom and a second-round draft pick to the Dallas Mavericks on Sunday night for a first-round pick and an $8.9 million trade exception, capping Los Angeles' stunning 72-hour breakup with last season's Sixth Man of the Year.

The Lakers and Mavericks reached a swift deal after Odom learned Thursday that Los Angeles was attempting to trade him in a megadeal for New Orleans superstar Chris Paul.

After the NBA blocked that trade, Odom declined to report to the Lakers' opening day of training camp on Friday. Odom then requested a trade in a meeting with general manager Mitch Kupchak, and the Lakers improbably swung a deal with the rival Mavericks, who swept Los Angeles out of the second round of last season's playoffs.

"Lamar was a fine player for us in his seven years with the Lakers and was a key to helping us win two championships," Kupchak said in a statement. "In addition, he always conducted himself with class and professionalism, and we wish him well in the remainder of his career."

Neither team formally acknowledged the deal until Sunday night, but both teams knew all about the surprising transaction when they reported for training camp practices that morning.

"To be honest with you, I don't like it," Kobe Bryant said. "It's tough to lose Lamar. Pau (Gasol) is still here, and we're all thankful for that. It's hard when you've been through so many battles with players to just see them go somewhere else. It's tough."

Dallas coach Rick Carlisle and star Dirk Nowitzki spoke eagerly about adding Odom to the defending NBA champions' roster without losing a player in return. Odom will aid the Mavs' recovery from Tyson Chandler's departure, and Carlisle said Odom's partnership with Nowitzki and Shawn Marion would form the NBA's best frontcourt.

The Lakers used to have what was considered the NBA's best frontcourt — until they broke it up for reasons that are unclear to their players. Odom, a veteran team leader and a popular Hollywood celebrity, averaged 14.4 points, 8.7 rebounds and 3 assists while playing in all 82 games last season with his smooth, well-rounded game.

Bryant and Derek Fisher led a chorus of confused anger from the Lakers, who have no idea what their front office is planning just two weeks before the season opener. Los Angeles is thought to be working on a deal for Orlando center Dwight Howard, but the trade exception obtained from Dallas could be only a minor part of any potential deal.

"As a basketball player, it confuses you as to what your focus should be," Fisher said.

Bryant said he hated seeing Odom leave Los Angeles: "Especially to them. We were supposed to come back and get them back. It's tough. ... Do I think we got too little? Who did we get? I don't think Mark Cuban is protesting this trade."

Although Odom was excited about the Lakers' prospects as recently as Wednesday, he never practiced with the Lakers in their first three workouts under new coach Mike Brown while the club attempted to move him to New Orleans. After that three-team deal fell through, the Lakers apparently changed their focus to Howard, who loves Los Angeles and has requested a trade from the Magic.

Happy at home tonight, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You are direct about what must be done, no matter what your immediate circle's concerns are. Once a situation mellows out, you seem to be ready to lie back. Your thoughts could be a bit indulgent. Use care when shopping. Tonight: Happily head home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Reach out for someone at a distance. You might be confused about a situation. Be proactive in order to gain clarity. The holiday season is taking its toll on others. Tonight: Chatting up a storm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ There is a tendency to go to extremes -- whether it is with spending or an emotional situation. Honor a change and examine what is happening with someone at a distance. You will tend to go overboard with spending and caring. Tonight: Your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You are full of energy. If you don't get a call or someone doesn't behave as you think he or she should, don't stand on ceremony. Pick up the phone. Know what you want. You might want to indulge a friend or your sweetie. Tonight: Out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Note what is going on behind the scenes. Others could be overly sensitive -- you might be as well. Listen to your inner dialogue. If it is a repeat inner talk, you might want to really delve into the issue. Tonight: Either alone or with someone you trust.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Your interest unites with others to make a goal more plausible. Just finding like-minded people seems like a reason for celebration. You experience a unique sense of friendship that you rarely feel. Walk toward a new opportunity. Tonight: Surround yourself with people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Take a stand if need be. You have a way of knowing the exact words to say to make the right impression. Don't sell yourself short. Investigate an offer that might be too good to be true. Some of you might feel manipulated. Tonight: A force to behold.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Reach out for an adviser or someone you respect. The feedback you get could be more important than you think. Someone knows how to flatter you by showing you a great deal of respect. Be willing to demonstrate more of what others see that is so special in you. Tonight: Choose something different.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ A partner has an interest in working with you. At first you might try to avoid this connection. Once you decide to listen and brainstorm together, you could discover how much you like the interaction. Tonight: Continue the theme over dinner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Others might act as if they know it all. Who are you to tell them otherwise? You could have difficulty being heard. Know when you are better off heading in another direction. You might be surprised by how fast someone taps on your shoulder. Tonight: Go along with another person's ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Stay on topic in your head, as well as with others. You easily could be triggered by others. Follow-through counts, or else a close associate could push. Avoid an argument at all costs. Rather than criticize, praise. Tonight: Make it easy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Tap into your ingenuity in order to make what appears to be a boulder in your path but a mere pebble. Someone could be wildly hostile, and you can talk this person down. Tonight: Ever playful.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Chinese Education Values: To get to their school, 80 children (aged 6 to 17) in the mountaintop village of Pili, China, near the borders with Tajikistan and Afghanistan, make a 120-mile journey that includes 50 miles on foot or by camel. The most dangerous parts of the route are an inches-wide path cut into a cliff (over a 1,000-foot drop), a 600-foot-long zip-line drop and crossings of four freezing rivers (easier in winter when they are frozen solid). The kids must make the chaperoned treks four times a year -- coming and going for each of two long sessions. According to one teacher, Ms. Su, the kids generally enjoy the adventure. The government is building a road to the village, but it will not be finished until 2013.

■ Globally (except in Japan), family-run businesses underperform those run by professional managers. Japanese corporations often seem to have a talented son to take over for his father. The main reason for that, according to an August Freakonomics radio report, is that the family scions usually first recruit an ideal "son" and then adopt him, often also encouraging their daughters to marry the men. (Japanese adage: "You can't choose your sons, but you can choose your sons-in-law.") If the man is already married, sometimes he and his wife will both get adopted. In fact, while 98 percent of U.S. adoptions are of children, 98 percent of Japan's are of adults.
