NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

Controversial former chess champion Bobby Fischer, who fled to Japan to avoid U.S. visa-violation charges, and who is smarting from a recent Time magazine description of him as something less than a babe magnet, defended his virility to a Mainichi Daily News reporter in October by pointing out that he wears "size 14 wide shoes. Just keep that in mind when (they) say I'm not a dreamboat." After recounting an episode at a hot spring nude bath in Japan in which two fellow customers seemed in awe of his "size," Fischer then accused Americans of having persuaded Japanese authorities to lock him up in a facility close to a nuclear plant so that the U.S. government can "make me impotent."

City Hall keeps the light on Fridays

It will stay open on 'closed Fridays' to better serve Santa Monica merchants, builders and residents

BY JOHN WOOD

Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL — Starting next year, Santa Monica City Hall will be open when the rest of the working world is.

Part of City Hall, anyway.

Responding to complaints from residents and merchants, and heeding the advice of a private consultant, city officials announced last week they will keep the beleaguered planning department open even when the rest of City Hall is closed.

That means diverging from City Hall's "9/80" schedule, when workers take every other Friday off, but work longer hours during the other nine working days. The schedule is touted as an environmental consideration because it reduces the amount of car trips made to and from City Hall.

Under the new plan, a limited number of staff will provide building permit, plan check, public works and business license services. The city also will accept payment for parking tickets, and will issue permits for parking and filming. In separate offices on Fifth Street, City Hall will take payment for water bills.

"While our 9/80 work schedule has been very beneficial in terms of reducing vehicles on the road and cleaning up the air, City Hall's closure every other Friday has resulted in some inconvenience to those whose service needs don't match our schedule," Assistant City Manager Gordon Anderson said in a prepared statement.

"This pilot program will help us serve them better and still maintain our commitment to clean air."

The suggestion to keep City Hall open five days every week was put forward in a 262-page report delivered this past summer

Police capture armed robber after foot chase

By Daily Press staff

Police were busy last week looking for armed robbers who in two separate incidents held up a store on Montana Avenue and robbed a local resident of cash, Christmas presents and his car.

Santa Monica police arrested Donald Harris, 46, on Dec. 23 after he allegedly robbed Jenny Bec's boutique at 927 Montana Ave. shortly before 6:30 p.m. When officers arrived to the scene, they were met by a victim who said Harris was last seen on foot westbound on Montana Avenue. A preliminary investigation revealed that Harris allegedly entered the store, displayed a handgun and demanded money.

Officers were told that Harris was seen boarding a bus at Lincoln Boulevard and Montana Avenue. Another officer began

In her own birthright: Jew ready to make trek

BY PAM WIGHT

Special to the Daily Press

Santa Monica resident Laney Kapgan finally gets to go to Israel and just before age disqualifies her from getting that trip for free.

Founded and financed by several Jewish philanthropists, Taglit-birthright Israel is an organization that provides free 10-day trips to Israel for Jewish youth between the ages of 18 and 26 in order to acquaint young Jews with their heritage. Kapgan turns 26 in May.

Kapgan, a domestic violence educator, had tried for 10 years to go to Israel, beginning with the traditional 10th grade confirmation trip that many American Jewish youth take. But her 10th grade trip coincided with the Gulf War and had to be canceled due to security concerns.

Since that time, financial obstacles and college prevented her from realizing her dream of experiencing Israel.

"Growing up Jewish, your parents are always sending you to all of these Jewish cultural activities all the time," Kapgan said. "To this or that class through your temple, Sunday school and so on — and maybe you're not always fond of it, but the culmination is this great trip to Israel you take in 10th grade. And mine got cancelled. So this is my last chance to go for free through this program."

Kapgan was born in St. Petersburg, Russia in 1979 — the city then known as Leningrad. One year later, her parents

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS The stars show the kind of day you'll have:

★★★★★-Dynamic ★★★★★-Positive ★★★-Average ★★-So-so ★-Difficult

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 ★★★★★ Build on your public image. Your creativity soars because of a discussion. Your poise and intelligence pull others toward you. Establish your boundaries. You have more energy than many, but be careful about what you commit to. Tonight: Out late.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
 ★★★★★ Look at the meaning behind the words. Detach and see a situation from another's perspective. Do your own research, but tune in to your intuition as well. Facts mixed with feelings point you in the right direction. Tonight: Think "unusual." Think "different" when making plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 ★★★★★ Deal with others individually, and they will smile from ear to ear. You feel wonderful as doors open up and options become possible. Associates pitch in with ease. Follow your instincts concerning money and romance. Tonight: Continue with today's theme.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 ★★★★★ A soft touch goes a long way, especially when dealing with those in charge. Know that you are overly sensitive and could react more than usual. You can also tune in to others. Tonight: Out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 ★★★★★ Plunge into work. You might be doing a lot of thinking about a loved one or friendship. Curb the daydreaming and get started on what you need to do. Use your inventive mind to zero in on a task. You make a project easy. Tonight: Choose a favorite way to relax.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 ★★★★★ Your creativity spins out to your work as well as to your personal life. You might finally persuade another to go along with your ideas and plans. Others prove to be generous and caring. Deal with a loved one on a one-on-one level. Tonight: Express your frisky nature.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 ★★★★★ A lot might be tossed on your plate. Others look at your fiery energy and think you can do anything and everything. Diplomatically explain your boundaries to others. You might like the way a friend or loved one "imposes" on you. Tonight: Luxuriate at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 ★★★★★ A key person in your life assumes that you can read his or her mind, and maybe you can. Be smart and have a discussion rather than go on an assumption. Work, errands and getting ready for the next round of partying could be dragging you down. Tonight: Hook up with a friend; go to your hangout.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 ★★★★★ You present yourself in such a powerful and dynamic manner that others become like super glue. Your mind presents options, chooses words and sees others in such a caring way. Use your innate skills. Tonight: Someone lets you know how he or she feels.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 ★★★★★ Ask for help if you feel overwhelmed. It would delight a partner or friend to pitch in and help. He or she adds a special touch. Teamwork helps you complete a project and go on cruise control. Tonight: Your wish is another's pleasure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 ★★★★★ Much goes on between you and a special person that is unsaid. Warm feelings naturally emanate from this bond. Be careful not to put this person on a pedestal. Be realistic, please. Use words to communicate. Tonight: Catch up on e-mail, letters and thank-you notes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 ★★★★★ Aim for the pot of gold over the rainbow with the expectation of landing where you want. An innate talent could pay off if you charge it into your work. Be careful about diets, exercise and health. An offbeat concept might be appealing, but ultimately not good. Tonight: Exactly what you want.

Star power hits St. Joseph's Center

By Daily Press staff

A star recently shined on a local organization dedicated to helping those less fortunate.

Thirty-two preschoolers, age 1 to 5, and their families received turkey dinners with all the trimmings at St. Joseph Center's Early Learning Center (ELC) in Santa Monica last week, donated and served by Ted Danson; his daughter, Kate Danson; wife, Mary Steenburg; her daughter, Lilly McDowell; and friend, Ethan Hale. For the past five years, the family has been providing holiday food and gifts to ELC children, whose parents are working toward self-sufficiency.

"Abundance like this is very rare," said Leticia Garcia-Greenman, the center's director of family services. "We are very grateful to Ted and Mary and their family for all that they do for our families at St. Joseph Center."

Learning toys and gifts were distributed to all of the children and families, and photos were taken with Santa Claus.

This year's holiday party also included keyboard music by Cindy Mendenhall of Music Rhapsody, an organization that leads singing and music activities for the ELC children throughout the year.

"It's a heartwarming experience to bring the holiday spirit here in the form of music," said Mendenhall.

St. Joseph Center has 11 programs on eight sites in Venice, Santa Monica, and West Los Angeles, providing case management, child care, job training, and senior services to more than 7,000 homeless and low-income men, women, and children each year who are striving to break the cycle of poverty.

Toy drive makes Christmas special for hundreds

By Daily Press staff

For the 12th straight year, the American Red Cross of Santa Monica distributed toys to local needy families on Dec. 23, just in time for the holidays. Partnering with the Santa Monica Fire Department, the Red Cross assisted those who have been hard-hit financially and might not otherwise receive any gifts. This year's "Share the Holidays" toy drive reached more than 150 families and 450 kids.

SURF REPORT

On Monday the old WNW (280-300) ground swell weakens through the day. Meanwhile, a moderate-size, low-centered right off the coast of Central California will be sending in stiff S/SE winds and steady rain. Those winds will set up some short period wind swell out of the SE, which is not a good direction for most areas. End result will be mainly knee- to waist-high waves for most beaches with OK side shore/off shore conditions. Beaches with a good south view will see more size but they'll also have more onshore conditions then. Everybody looks like they'll get a good shot of rain. Expect fair to poor conditions.

Today the water is:

The Q Line

With Christmas behind us, it's time to gear up for a new year. Many of us have New Year's resolutions, but how many of them do we really stick to? That goes double for city politicians who have prioritized what they think are the most important issues facing Santa Monica in 2005.

This week, Q-Line wants to know,

"What should your elected leaders' New Year's resolutions be for 2005?"

Call (310) 285-8106 before Thursday before 5 p.m. and we'll print your response in the weekend edition. Please limit your comments to a minute or less. It might help to think first about the wording of your response.

Torture and responsibilities as citizens

Editor:

The Los Angeles Times and the New York Times had front page stories about FBI memos detailing torture of prisoners by U.S. military personnel at Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba on Dec. 21. The torture included "detainees being beaten and choked and having lit cigarettes placed in their ears ..."

The torture of prisoners was "known to a wide circle of government officials." It was clearly known to Alberto Gonzales, nominated by Bush for Attorney General — the highest-ranking law enforcement official in the nation. The U.S. Senate will likely confirm him as Republicans toe the White House line. Will Democrats have the backbone to oppose this designee who supports the torture of prisoners?

Despite widespread knowledge of such torture, there's been little outrage here at home. Imagine the outcry had U.S. soldiers been systematically tortured by the Iraqi resistance? Media celebrities such as Fox's Bill O'Reilly would foam at the mouth and call for wars against the countries that condone such abuse. The Democrats, the so-called "opposition" party, would also advocate military responses against Islamic fundamentalists who dare mistreat our soldiers. The Christian "values" gang would join the call for violent retribution and tell us that the use of torture against our troops only proves the barbaric nature of Arabs and Muslims.

U.S. torture of Afghani and Iraqi prisoners of war — a violation of the Geneva Convention and other articles pertaining to the treatment of detainees — continues. Unless we make our moral revulsion over this war and ongoing torture known publicly, one can only conclude that both have our blessing and support. Those who silently or actively support U.S. terror have lost any moral ground upon which to stand and condemn the violence of others. No more sermons from gay-hating, misogynist and racist Christians about "values." No more claims from Democrats that they offer a real choice to Bush and Cheney — especially from candidate John Kerry, who has not condemned the war and torture, and who advocates more troops for the assault upon the Iraqi people.

Law-abiding U.S. citizens have no moral obligation to support U.S. troops who have tortured prisoners of war — or their superiors up to the Oval Office that should be impeached and removed from office. We cannot and must not support officials or soldiers who execute policies condemned by the Nuremberg Tribunal in language that clearly places individual responsibility above merely following immoral and illegal orders.

We cannot support the Marine Corporal, one of a group of US snipers that killed hundreds of Iraqis in Falluga, who coldly stated: "Sometimes a guy will go down, and I'll let him scream a bit to destroy the morale of his buddies ... then I'll use a second shot." With 24 "confirmed kills" to his credit, this Marine concluded: "I couldn't have asked to be in a better place. I just got lucky: To be here at the right time and with the right training" (Los Angeles Times, April 19, 2004). "Supporting the troops" is not some abstract slogan but a belief that must confront the actions of the Marine quoted above and others who stated: "We had a great day today. We killed a lot of people." "The Iraqis are sick people and we are the chemotherapy."

The entire enterprise against Iraq, from invasion to torture, must be condemned — absolutely and unconditionally. In the words of writer Arundhati Roy, this mission "will surely go down in history as one of the most cowardly wars ... in which a band of rich nations, armed with enough nuclear weapons to destroy the world several times over, rounded on a poor nation, falsely accused it of having nuclear weapons, used the United Nations to force it to disarm, then invaded it, occupied it and are now in the process of selling it," (Sydney Morning Herald, Nov. 4, 2004).

Conscience and law obligate us to oppose both the war, and the architects and warriors who embrace it — to see the conflict for what it is: A crime against humanity.

The spiral jetty reveals the horizon of life's end

HIP TO BE SQUARE

BY CAROLINE BODKIN

Late in the dry Utah December, two months after her wedding, and the day after Christmas, Katherine called wondering if I had time to take a drive with her. I said of course, hoping I would have agreed as quickly even if I hadn't known that her father was dying in the hospital.

She asked if I'd ever seen the Spiral Jetty. I'd heard of the 30-year-old earth-art installation off a northern shore of the Great Salt Lake, but "no," I said, I haven't seen it. She nodded, turned on the engine, and we headed north.

We covered two and a half hours of land. The towns off the highway decreased in size as we went, shedding their strip malls and same-house developments, revealing bare clusters of remote homes and churches. Katherine spoke at will, and I was her witness. She was happy with her new husband, she said. Law school was still difficult, she said.

Soon the people's houses were no longer in clusters but stood alone, each of them, pushed or set away from each other, letting farm land and pasture space them as, inside the car, Katherine and I let there be space between the things we said. And eventually there were no houses, just land and the silver shimmer of the lake ahead, and we too were quiet.

Finally, she sighed and said that her father's cancer was terminal and his days on land were finite. As though finite was something manageable.

We parked our car where the road ended and the water began. Katherine looked out at this before turning to find what we'd come to see, the jetty, which lay submerged 100 feet west, along shore. There were no plaques or signs to explain the artist who had made it, so if I hadn't read about it in an art text, I might have believed it was a naturally-occurring phenomenon. It was a simple sculpture — piled rocks and earth that emerged from the water to form a shallow path that extended straight out from the shore 50 or so feet into the water before circling back into itself, forming the spiral.

The Great Salt Lake is the remaining puddle of an ocean, and the surrounding land is that dried ocean's bed: treeless, barren, a faint fade of brown and gold and green. The water's saline content is so condensed now that the shoreline is all crusted salt and looks like snow. There are small salt islands that stand like rocks in the still water, which, on that day, extended out into what would be the horizon.

But there was no horizon. The water spread out to meet the sky in a seamless way that made looking feel like fortune telling because you were seeing something infinite. Looking out felt infinite because you could not see the end. The jetty seemed in place within the lake and the otherworldly remnant landscape.

It was as though the jetty had learned something there.

We'd been quiet for a while, until Katherine lifted her arm and picked a spot out in the silvery white of water and sky.

She said no one could live out there.

She said perhaps the artist wanted to, and his jetty was to be his path to that home. Perhaps he built out into this place because of its missing horizon, to live in something endless and thus live endlessly. But as he built, he saw that he couldn't, no one could, and so he circled in on himself and his pathway followed, coiling back in towards the shore.

The distance out there, the infinite thing, she said, you can see only when you're prepared to leave land forever.

No one could live out there, she said.

The afternoon was going. We turned from the lake and sky, and the artist's uncompleted attempt at finding their meeting point. We walked back to the car.

As we drove, the land rose behind us, blocking the late sun and separating us from the water. I guess the sun was setting somewhere because the sky which we'd known at the shore as a silver continuation of still water turned bright pink and orange around, behind and over the land where we lived and to which we were returning.

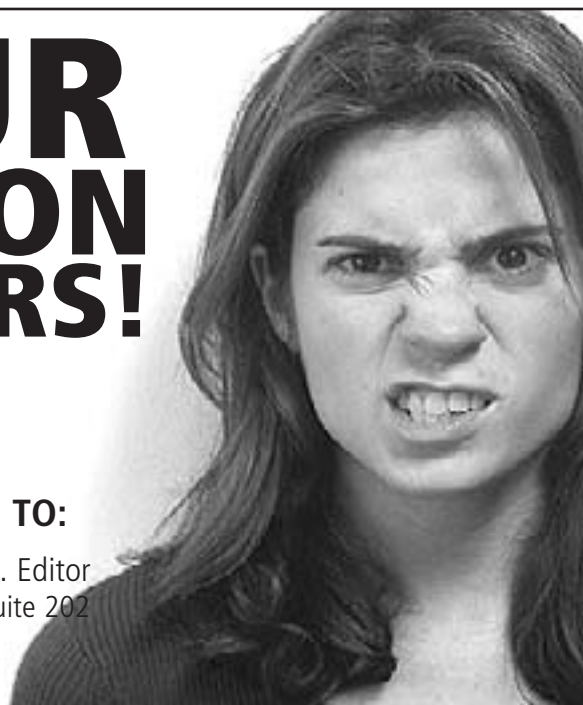

I wondered if in that color, the water behind us had found its horizon, or if it's possible that some things do not end.

by the Matrix Consulting Group. Matrix was paid more than $70,000 to evaluate the often criticized planning department.

Matrix had a host of suggestions to reduce bureaucracy at City Hall and improve customer service. Acting on the suggestions is expected to cost an additional $500,000 a year.

The pilot program for limited services on what City Hall calls "closed Fridays" begins Jan. 7, the first Friday of 2005. Shortly after announcing its new hours, City Hall closed its doors at noon on Dec. 23 and remained closed through Christmas Eve Day. It was scheduled to reopen today.

City Councilman Bobby Shriver lauded the move to extend hours at City Hall and said he was looking forward to other planned improvements, like making the city's Web site a better resource for planners and architects who use it regularly. He recalled a time he visited City Hall on a closed Friday and encountered several disgruntled people who hadn't realized it would be closed.

"It's tough for people to sort of manage their lives," said Shriver, who during his campaign criticized City Hall's relationship with its users. "Some people just need access to the city, so it's good that people have access."

Local architect David Hibbert, who frequently uses the planning department for the last 30 years, said he was encouraged to see City Hall act on recommendations from the Matrix report.

delays in this city that anything that can help a contractor is a good thing," he said. "They have so much turnover, we used to joke if you went three different days and got three different people, you'd get three different answers ... It's a very complicated place."

While the efforts to make City Hall more accessible, along with ongoing efforts to have more knowledgeable, helpful staff interact with the public, have led to significant improvements, merchants said plenty of work is left to be done.

Syrna Glasser, who was delayed some 20 months in opening Schmerty's Gourmet Cookies on Pico Boulevard partly because of complications at City Hall, said she hoped officials would focus next on simplifying the approval process.

"It's a matter of them being able to actually get the work done if they're staying open," she said. "I don't know if it's going to help with the process, but let's hope and pray, and keep our fingers crossed. That's all you can do."

officers, police said. Harris was eventually taken into custody with the aid of Police K-9 Rex. While officers were struggling with Harris, he attempted to pull a handgun from his waistband, police said. After Harris was taken into custody, officers recovered the handgun and an undisclosed amount of U.S. currency taken in the armed robbery.

Harris was recently paroled on Nov. 5, after serving 16 years of a 32-year prison sentence for armed robbery, police said. Harris was booked at the Santa Monica Jail and charged with armed robbery and parole violation, no bail.

Police are still looking for two suspects who robbed a residence in the 2900 block of 11th Street just a few hours prior to the Montana Avenue robbery.

At 3:01 p.m., SMPD officers responded to a call of a residential robbery. Preliminary investigation revealed that the suspects entered the residence through an unlocked door. While inside, they took several items and fired a shot into the floor of the residence. No one was injured. The suspects fled in the victim's vehicle.

The first suspect is described as a black male, in his 20's, 6 feet, one inch tall, thin, having a goatee, wearing blue jeans, and a blue and white sweater. He was armed with a handgun. The second suspect is described as a black male, in his 20's, 5 feet, 10 inches tall, having a shaved head, a dark complexion, wearing a dark, hooded denim jacket and baggy jeans. He also was armed with a handgun. The loss is an unknown amount of U.S. Currency, several Christmas gifts and the victim's vehicle. The vehicle taken is described as a green 2001, Daewoo, Lanos sedan with California license plate 4PBE878.

Anyone with information regarding the incidents is encouraged to call the SMPD at (310) 458-8491. immigrated to the United States as part of a Russian Jewry movement in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Immigration rules weren't as strict as they are today and many people qualified because they either had family living in the U.S. or they possessed professional skills.

The Kapgans had both those qualifications but still they arrived in America as refugees from what was the former communist Soviet Union.

"My mom was a doctor and my dad an engineer," Kapgan said. "But when they came they had nothing. It's much more strict now, but back then they were able to access a lot of different social services and educational opportunities for them and for me. They had food stamps, subsidized housing, health care and day care."

And because all of that happened under President Ronald Reagan, Kapgan believes that is what shaped her parents' conservative world view.

"Within 10 years my mom had repeated medical school, my dad was succeeding as an engineer, they had a house, two cars, and were sending their daughter to private school," Kapgan said.

When Kapgan was 6 years old, the family moved to San Francisco where, as an only child, she grew to adulthood — and became a liberal.

"My parents are very, very conservative," Kapgan said. "My mom was wondering how I turned out so liberal and she thought maybe it was the leadership conferences she sent me to. But I said, 'Mom, I grew up in the Bay area, you sent me to all of these private super-liberal Jewish schools and everything. There's no way I could turn out conservative.'"

And there was no way she could avoid a very Jewish identity.

Characterized by tight proud communities, united across cultural borders, the Jewish Diaspora has only one homeland that unites Jewish identity — Israel.

And that is why, regardless of the fact that she comes from Russia and has never set foot in Israel, Kapgan yearns to immerse herself in the origins of her experience — that of growing up a Russian Jew in America. She also is planning her first trip back to Russia in May.

At her office at Break the Cycle, a domestic violence prevention organization in Century City, Kapgan spoke to the Daily Press about what's behind her upcoming trip."

Do you see Israel as your birthright even though you're from Russia?

"Yeah, it's interesting. I don't have a lot of connection to my Russian heritage. As a matter of fact I know a lot more about myself as a Jew than as a Russian. Much more. My family has very strong roots in Judaism. My grandfather was born in Poland and escaped to Russia during WWII. All of his family was killed by the Nazis and he was able to escape — somehow he knew they were coming. But his family didn't want to leave, saying it was their home. So he left alone and when he came back, there was no one left, no village, nothing left. So he went to Russia and met my grandmother and he developed more of a grounding in Jewish tradition.

But in Russia they differentiate — you're either Russian or you're Jewish.

Jews are Jews. When I say I'm Russian, my family says you're not Russian, you're Jewish. Because to be Russian in Russia is to be a part of the Russian Orthodox Church. There was no separation of church and state in Russia. The definition of a Russian is synonymous with both the geographical location and the cultural and religious tradition.

"And I think that because Judaism was an ethnic designation in Russia and because of the state-sponsored religion, there wasn't really the opportunity for my family to have a bat mitzvah or to practice their faith. So it's more of a cultural faith more than a faith in practice. My family doesn't eat pork or shellfish, they have a mezuzah on the door (a scroll to protect your home that contains a seminal blessing in text) and everything, but no one in my family really knows any Jewish prayers or blessings. That's why I was bat mitzvahed. Both my parents are very Jewish but have no Jewish knowledge. They have a cultural identification but they don't have a religious practice. So it was important to them to do things like enroll me in a Jewish preschool, in Sunday school, in Hebrew school, in confirmation classes, in BBYO (B'Nai Brith Youth Organization, an international Jewish youth organization). It was important to them to give me a strong Jewish tradition."

Did you learn any Russian culture alongside the Jewish culture as you grew up?

"Because of the divide in Russia between being a Jew or Russian, I don't think even my parents identified with being Russian. In terms of Russian culture, my family does nothing. We don't go to any of the Russian cultural community centers around here, they don't cook Russian food, and they don't eat Russian food. But they do cook Jewish food.

They've gone to Israel several times. They enrolled me in Jewish education so I identify much more with Israel as far as returning to my cultural roots than with Russia, although I have no roots in Israel. That Jewish identity was so central to their lives and it's what differentiated them growing up — it had a lot to do with what propelled them to come to America."

If you're not that religious, what is it about going to Israel that is so compelling?

"Yeah, I'm not that religious but with Judaism it's both a religion and a culture. The cultural part is overwhelming while the religious part is not that strong. So maybe it is about going back to your cultural roots. I'm hypothesizing, but maybe it's like an African-American going to Africa or maybe not. A lot of African-Americans probably don't identify with Africa at all. But for me maybe that's it. There's some kind of identity to being Jewish and Israel being the place of the Jews. Despite the fact that any number of religions have a claim to Jerusalem in terms of post 1945 geographic dispersion, that's the land of the Jews. It seems to pervade life there. I imagine it's the same feeling like in the temple during high holidays where you're all standing and singing and the Torah is out and they're holding it aloft and everyone's singing, and you feel really good. You feel like you're among friends. Even though I only go a couple of times a year, like some Christians who only go to church on Hobbies: I love the band Phish. They're similar to the Grateful Dead — it's a jam band.

Education: B.S. in legal studies from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, Mass. Family: Only child and the only girl in the whole family among all of the cousins.

Age: 25

Residence: Santa Monica

Job: Community and Media Relations Development Associate for "Break the Cycle," a non-profit organization that educates youth on domestic violence prevention.

Christmas and Easter. I think that's what Israel is going to be like."

What are you looking for on this trip?

"I think I'm looking for an opportunity to reconnect with Judaism and my cultural roots. I think in the Jewish American community there are a lot of opportunities for youth to be involved but not much once you're out of college, not much to keep youth invested in the community. I think going to Israel and seeing it firsthand will be really a momentous thing.

During our orientation they told us what we'd see, like going to Masada — a historical site of a famous Jewish military defeat by the Romans in 72 C.E., which is still hugely symbolic in Israel. It's a major attraction, a part of Jewish history. You can see a lot of Israel from the top of it. That's part of the significance of it. So we'll get up at like three o'clock in the morning and go to Masada, climb up to the top and see the sun rise. In Israel all youth must serve in the Israeli army — men for three years, women for two. The soldiers take their oaths in front of Masada and so you can see them there everyday, since there are always soldiers enrolling since everyone has to do it. So part of the Masada oath is 'Masada will never fall again.'

"I'm really excited about reconnecting with feeling Jewish. Growing up in San Francisco and Los Angeles, I've never been oppressed. I'm among friends. There's such a large Jewish community it doesn't stand out anymore. It's like, whatever. And because I'm not involved in any other way in the Jewish community right now, it's kind of taken a back seat in my life to some extent. It's not as relevant."

Are you worried about your safety with all of the fighting between Palestinians and Israelis going on?

"No, I'm actually not. About the safety issue, it's not in birthright's interest to risk us, so I'm confident that they know about safe areas and dangerous areas. You probably have a statistically higher chance of being violently attacked in the streets in New York than you do in the state of Israel. It's just that ours are guns and not explosions. All of those things are happening in very specific locations because no one can get anywhere else. It's really only Gaza, the Old City, Jerusalem, and maybe Tel Aviv — the big urban centers. But everywhere else is fine, it's not just exploding right and left over there. Birthright went through everything so carefully, from guards on the bus to a GPS system that tells the Israeli government where we are at all times and every morning they clear our whole day's itinerary with the consulate and that way they know if something happens in an area we are supposed to go, then they can re-route us immediately somewhere else. It's very clear that they have taken precautions enough to make sure the trip is safe."

What sites and activities will you experience on your trip?

"I'm so excited. We're going to Jerusalem, the Old City, the Jewish Quarter, the Western Wall, Galilee, Golan Heights, and we're going to see the nomadic tribe called 'Bedouins.' We're going to have the opportunity to ride camels, we'll visit a kibbutz, climb Masada, float on the Dead Sea, and finally to a beach resort and then Tel Aviv.

About 40 people are going on the trip which is for a total of 12 days. And under this birthright program there are number of trips that subcontract so you can pick from different kinds of trips like there's a photography-based one, a religious trip — it's to suit your different interests. So mine is an outdoor trip. We're going rock climbing, hiking, zip lining, repelling, white water rafting, and stuff like that."

How did you get involved working on the domestic violence issue?

"I love my job. The organization is called 'Break the Cycle' and I've been here for two years. I was a legal studies major but always wanted to do something in the non-profit sector, specifically working with youth and their legal rights. Our mission is to engage, educate and empower youth to end domestic violence. We provide youth who are abused in their relationships and homes with free legal services and information. We also go into the classrooms everyday and teach youth about healthy relationships and abuse, and their legal rights and then we provide peer leadership opportunities. We train young people to go and teach their peers about healthy relationships and domestic violence. It is fantastic and amazing.

"Our proactive, preventive approach changes the way that young people view relationships and violence. For me, addressing the root of issues such as dating and domestic violence and helping youth transition from victim to survivor is incredibly important and rewarding.

"We reach 14,000 youth a year in Los Angeles. We just opened three additional offices around the country, too. We started with one office, nine staff members and a $750,000 budget. Now we have 19 staff members in four offices and a $1.7 million budget. We have offices in San Francisco, New York and Washington, D.C.

I am the community and media relations development associate. So I oversee all of our government and community outreach projects, our public relations efforts, and I manage our relationship with our national spokeswoman, Missy Elliott. She's a hip hop artist. And she has an Adidas line called 'respect M.E.,' meaning "respect Missy Elliott." She is Adidas's first music spokesperson since Run DMC. And the Adidas 'Respect M.E.' line benefits 'Break the Cycle.' So I manage that."

Do you like living in Santa Monica?

"Yes, I've lived here since I moved to Los Angeles in 2000, after I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, Mass., so about four and half years. I love the diversity and sense of community that comes with living here."

Cassini launches European probe on course to Titan

BY JOHN ANTCHAK

Associated Press Writer

PASADENA — The international Cassini spacecraft launched a probe Friday on a three-week free-fall toward Saturn's mysterious moon Titan, where it will plunge into the hazy atmosphere and descend by parachute while its science instruments and cameras make observations.

The European Space Agency's Huygens probe is equipped with instruments to sample the chemistry of the planet-size moon's thick atmosphere, and may reveal whether it actually has lakes or seas of liquid methane and ethane that have been theorized by scientists.

A signal confirming release of the probe was received at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory at 7:24 p.m. PST. The actual event occurred earlier, but it took more than an hour for radio signals to cross the hundreds of millions of miles between Saturn and Earth.

Smiles broke out in the JPL control room where many members of the mission staff wore red and white Santa hats.

The aim had to be good because Huygens has no maneuvering system to adjust its own course, and it was designed to remain dormant until just before hitting Titan's atmosphere on Jan. 14.

"This was an amicable separation after seven years of living together," ESA science program director David Southwood said in a statement.

"Each spacecraft will now continue on its own, but we expect they'll keep in touch to complete this amazing mission."

Cassini was equipped with springs to gently push the 705-pound probe away at a rate of one foot per second and impart a stabilizing spin of seven revolutions per minute. Next week Cassini will make a course change to avoid following Huygens into Titan's atmosphere.

Huygens was designed for only a brief mission. After entering the atmosphere it will deploy a huge parachute that will allow it to make a 2 1/2-hour descent while radioing findings back to Cassini.

After touching down at 15 mph, it may continue sending data for up to 30 minutes, when either its battery fails or Cassini vanishes over Titan's horizon.

Cassini will later turn its antenna toward Earth and send the data back to NASA's Deep Space Network and on to an ESA operations center in Darmstadt, Germany.

Titan is a key target of Cassini's $3.3 billion mission to study the Saturn system, which includes its spectacular rings and numerous moons. Scientists believe Titan may have organic — meaning carbon-based — compounds similar those that existed on the early Earth.

Bigger than the planets Mercury and Pluto, Titan is the only moon in the solar system known to have a significant atmosphere. Rich with nitrogen and containing about 6 percent methane, the atmosphere is 1 1/2 times thicker than Earth's.

With the Saturn system averaging about 890 million miles from the sun, Titan has a surface temperature of minus 290 degrees Fahrenheit.

That surface continues to puzzle scientists despite close flybys in which Cassini's cameras have tried to peer through Titan's smog-like haze.

Imaging scientists have discerned distinct dark and light-colored areas, sometimes toying with such words as "islands" to describe features, but conceding they have yet to find a specific type of reflection that would indicate areas of liquid.

The Cassini mission is a joint project of NASA, ESA and the Italian space agency. Cassini was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Oct. 15, 1997, and arrived at Saturn in June.

Bush faces fights with GOP on guest-worker bill

BY TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush faces a major rebellion within his own party if he follows through on a promise to push legislation that would offer millions of illegal immigrants a path to U.S. citizenship.

Almost no issue divides Republicans as deeply.

To get the guest-worker initiative through Congress, Bush will need to go against the wishes of many Republicans and forge bipartisan alliances. That's what President Clinton did in 1993 to win approval for a free trade agreement with Mexico and Canada, over the objections of a large bloc of congressional Democrats.

The chance seems slim for finding common ground between those in favor of liberalized immigration laws — Bush, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger for example — and those who want fewer immigrants, tougher border controls and harsher penalties.

Opposition is strongest among House Republicans.

"In our party, this is a deep division that is growing deeper every minute," says Rep. Tom Tancredo, R-Colo. He heads a group of 70 lawmakers who are against easing immigration laws.

Tancredo said Bush's guest-worker proposal is "a pig with lipstick" and will not pass.

Bush asserts that he won valuable "political capital" in the election and intends to spend it. It is not clear how much of that he is willing to spend on the immigration measure.

Higher on his list of priorities is overhauling the Social Security system, rewriting the tax laws, limiting lawsuit judgments and making his first-term tax cuts permanent.

An estimated 10 million immigrants live in the United States illegally; the vast majority are from Mexico, with an additional million arriving every year.

A hint of the trouble ahead for Bush on immigration came this month when proposals to tighten — not ease — border restrictions nearly undermined a bill to restructure U.S. intelligence agencies.

The chairman of the House Judiciary Committee wanted the measure to bar states from giving a driver's license to illegal immigrants. Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., said some of the Sept. 11 hijackers gained access to U.S. aircraft by using a driver's license as identification.

Sensenbrenner ultimately backed down, but only after House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill, promised that the chairman's proposal would be considered in separate legislation in 2005.

"In our party, this is a deep division that is growing deeper every minute."

REP. TOM TANCREDO
R-Colo

Hastert also indicated he would not move ahead on major legislation unless it was supported by a majority of Republicans in the GOP-controlled House — and that he would not rely on Democratic support to pass a bill.

Immigration overhaul is "an issue that splits both parties, and given the new Hastert rule, may never go anywhere," said William A. Niskanen, chairman of the libertarian Cato Institute. Niskanen was a member of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers.

The president's plan would grant temporary-worker status, for three years to six years, to millions of undocumented workers. It also would it easier for those workers to get permanent U.S. citizenship.

As governor of Texas, Bush was committed to immigration changes. As president, he came close to making a deal with Mexican President Vicente Fox in the days before the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Those plans were put on hold as tighter borders took on a higher priority for the United States.

As a presidential candidate, both in 2000 and 2004, Bush eagerly courted Hispanics, the fastest-growing ethnic group in the electorate.

"We will keep working to make this nation a welcoming place for Hispanic people, a land of opportunity para todos (for all) who live here in America," Bush told the League of United Latin American Citizens last summer.

Bush claimed 35 percent of Hispanic voters in 2000 and at least 40 percent last Nov. 2, according to exit polls. That compares with the 21 percent won by Bob Dole in 1996 and the 25 percent that Bush's father got in 1992.

Republican consultants suggest Bush will not make a big push for his immigration bill until he has achieved his goals on Social Security and the tax laws. They also say the president may jettison the immigration bill if it would jeopardize other parts of his agenda.

Inside the administration, nobody is suggesting that passing the immigration plan would be anything other than extremely difficult.

"We don't want to overpromise," Secretary of State Colin Powell said during a visit last month to Mexico City.

Lobster exports up to meet demand for holidays

BY CLARKE CANFIELD

Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine — Retailers aren't the only busy ones this holiday season. Lobster exporters are bustling as well, shipping millions of dollars worth of lobsters overseas to Europe.

For many lobster companies, December is the busiest time of year outside of the summer. That's due in large part to the high demand for Maine's most famous seafood for holiday meals across Europe.

By month's end, an estimated $20 million or more of lobster will be shipped to Europe's three biggest customers: Italy, Spain and France.

"They eat lobster like we eat turkey," said Jay Burke, president of Inland Lobster in Cape Elizabeth.

Europe has long been a big export market for American lobster. With the 2003 harvest reaching 70.7 million pounds — 54 million pounds of which was caught in Maine — all that lobster has to go somewhere. Italy, Spain and France bought a combined $109.5

million worth of U.S. lobster last year, which was up 83 percent from five years ago, according to the Foreign Agricultural Service.

And December is the busiest month for shipping those lobsters, accounting for 22 percent of lobster exports to other countries, excluding Canada, during the year, according to the Maine Lobster Promotion Council.

Selling and shipping to customers a continent away presents its own set of challenges.

First, there's the difficulty of finding space for lobster on international flights. Because lobster is a nonessential item, it takes a back seat to mail, packages and other cargo.

Second, the lobster catch was down this year, resulting in a tight supply and higher prices. Kinney said wholesale prices are about $1 a pound higher than a year ago. Tight supplies have kept prices high for Europeans despite the weak dollar.

Although prices are up, there is still demand for Maine lobster, Italian seafood dealers say.

"Despite an increase in the price of lobster from the states of about 40 percent, everybody still thinks having a big lobster on the dinner table looks beautiful," said Salvatore Cavallo, director of Cavalluccio Marino, a fishery import-export business in Crotona, in southern Italy.

Some restaurateurs, however, aren't happy about the high prices.

"The best lobsters now cost around 100 euros ($133.84), which is far too much," said Alberto Ciarla, owner of the upscale Alberto Ciarla restaurant in Rome, who cooks a special lobster dish with lentils only during the Christmas holidays.

Goffredo Iandolo, from the Ostrica restaurant in Rome, said demand for lobster generally rises about 20 percent around Christmas.

"During the holidays, people get carried away, even if they have to pay more for a lobster dish," he said. "Everything is affordable at Christmas."

Politicians criticized for appearing in state- funded advertisements

BY LIZ SIDOTI

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — New York Gov. George Pataki implores businesses to relocate to lower Manhattan in a taxpayer-funded ad campaign. In Maryland, Gov. Robert Ehrlich pitches tourism, energy-efficient homes and the state motor vehicle administration.

Across the country, governors and other elected officials often double as pitchmen: They appear in publicly funded commercials meant to promote their states, their agencies or a particular initiative they are spearheading.

But each time their faces show up in such ads, critics — usually from the opposing political party — question whether these "goodwill" commercials aren't also meant to feed their political ambitions by boosting their name recognition.

In their defense, the politicians claim they are just doing their jobs because they're considered the public face of the state or an agency and, therefore, are the best spokesmen for an ad campaign.

"It's a slippery slope between promoting a service and promoting the brand that is them," said Martin Kaplan, who studies political ads at the University of Southern California's Annenberg School for Communication.

In New York, Pataki has been accused of abusing a $5 million, national ad campaign to sell himself for a future run for public office.

The campaign shows scenes of rebirth in New York City's financial district in lower Manhattan, where the World Trade Center stood before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Pataki speaks about "the heart of commerce, culture and community."

After the ad started running in the country's largest media markets and on national cable news networks, Democrats and other critics charged it was a campaign spot for Pataki. It was launched a month after the Nov. 2 elections, and around the time Pataki's name surfaced as a possible Republican presidential candidate in 2008.

The ad's final seconds show Pataki before the Manhattan skyline, saying: "Discover your very own American success story. Build your business right here, right now, in lower Manhattan, where the only thing greater than today's success is our vision for tomorrow."

Todd Alhart, a Pataki spokesman, dismissed the notion that the ads are politically motivated. "The ads are meant to highlight the tremendous progress we have made in revitalizing and rebuilding lower Manhattan," he said, adding that the goal is to encourage businesses to create jobs in New York.

The same debate has raged over the past few months in Maryland, where another Republican running another historically Democratic state has appeared in radio and TV ads paid for with taxpayer dollars.

Ehrlich's appearances prompted a legislative committee to review how state laws regulate such appearances by government officials. His Democratic predecessor, Parris N. Glendening, also appeared in state-sponsored ads.

Still, Democrats assail Ehrlich.

"It's a shallow attempt to boost his name recognition and visibility because if you look at the ads, they're not about the state of Maryland, they're about Bob Ehrlich," said Terry Lierman, chairman of the Maryland Democratic Party.

Ehrlich's aides maintain the ads are non-partisan, public service announcements.

Governor's aren't the only ones popping up in state-funded ads.

In West Virginia, Attorney General Darrell McGraw, a Democrat who this year narrowly defeated a Republican attorney, ran an ad this month urging cancer patients who use drugs like Taxol to call the office's consumer hot line to determine whether they are eligible for refunds stemming from lawsuit settlements.

"The attorney general's office wants patients to have every chance at life," an announcer says as the screen shows a toll-free telephone number and then a graphic that says: "Attorney General Darrell McGraw. Law Enforcement That Works for You!" McGraw then appears and says, "We enforce the law to protect you."

Evan Tracey, president of TNS Media Intelligence/Campaign Media Analysis Group, an ad tracking company in Arlington, Va., said advertising right now makes sense for public officials with political aspirations.

"They have a sort of forum that's all to themselves," he said. "They're not competing with a lot of political ads. There's no downside to getting out there right now."

That is except, of course, the onslaught of criticism that doing so invites.

Web site shows footage of attack on U.S. base

BY RAWYA RAGEH

Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A video posted by an Iraqi insurgent group Sunday purported to show last week's suicide attack at a U.S. base in Mosul, with a fireball rising from a white tent. The group claimed that the bomber slipped into the base through a hole in the fence during a guard change.

The footage showed a black-garbed gunman wearing an explosives belt around his body — apparently the suicide bomber, identified in the tape as Abu Omar al-Mosuli — bidding farewell to his comrades. The video gives no further details about the bomber beyond his name.

The Ansar al-Sunnah Army had earlier said it would release a video of last Tuesday's attack, which killed 22 people, including 18 U.S. service members and civilian contractors.

The bombing — the deadliest attack on a U.S. base in Iraq — has prompted a U.S. military investigation into how the bomber got onto the heavily guarded site and how security at bases can be improved. Three Iraqi National Guardsmen and a fourth "non-U.S. person" were also killed. The military has not said whether that fourth man was the bomber.

The U.S. military has said the attacker probably was wearing an Iraqi military uniform, and one general said the Iraqi security forces may have been infiltrated. The Iraqi chief of staff, Gen. Babaker B. Shawkat Zebari, said in an interview with The Associated Press that the bomber may have bought a uniform from the market but was not a member of the Iraqi security forces.

In the first section of the video — with a time signature of Dec. 20, a day before the attack — three gunmen wearing black masks and clothes and holding automatic rifles are shown sitting in front of a black banner with the group's name on it. One of them, apparently al-Mosuli, sits on the left, wearing an explosives belt.

The gunman in the center reads a statement describes how the attack will be carried out. No mention is made of wearing a uniform. The authenticity of the video could not be independently verified.

"One of the lions from our martyrdom-seeking brothers will infiltrate the defenses of the enemy at the Morez base in Mosul. He will slip through a hole in the camp's wire, exploiting the changing of the guard," the gunman said. "We have been observing their schedule for a long time."

"This lion will then proceed to his target, and he will take advantage of lunch time, when the dining hall is crowded with the crusaders and their (Iraqi) allies," he said. "The operation will then be carried out."

"Let Bush, Blair and Allawi know that we are coming and that we will chase them all away, God willing," he said, referring to President Bush and prime ministers Tony Blair of Britain and Ayad Allawi of Iraq.

The two men then embrace the one wearing the explosives belt.

An image then shows a map of the base, as one of the gunmen points out locations using a military knife. One location is marked "the dining hall" in Arabic.

A later outdoor video image — shot on Tuesday, when the attack occurred — shows a fireball rising from the distance with the accompanying sound of the explosion. A final image — shot from a vehicle driving past the base — shows the torn white tent that served as the base mess hall.
