To keep up with our exceedingly fast-paced and demanding lifestyle today – many of us find ourselves reaching for quick-fix energy boosts that may be filled with empty kilojoules or potentially harmful ingredients. What our bodies actually crave is a natural boost that can provide a quick ‘pick-me-up’ while turning on our cellular energy generating systems and helping our bodies adapt to the demands of life. Boost Energy

- Green and black teas have been shown to support the body's natural metabolic activity. White tea has a high level of antioxidant compounds. The key bioactives in tea work together to promote energy and thermogenesis (fat burning) in the body.
- Food sourced caffeine has been shown to work safely and effectively in synergy with polyphenols from green tea, particularly epigallocatechin-3-gallate (EGCG) to promote fat-burning.
- Adaptogenic herbs may help to alleviate anxiety and physiological stress. Studies have shown adaptogenic herbs contribute to mental alertness, improved performance and promote overall health and well-being.
- Increasing intake of liquids helps to promote hydration, energy levels and curb appetite.
